CLERK'S COPY.

Vol. I

TRANSCRIPT OF RECORD

(Pages 1 to 800)

Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1948

No. 279

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA AND STANDARD STATIONS, INC., APPELLANTS,

vs.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

FILED SEPTEMBER 16, 1948.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

OCTOBER TERM, 1948

No. 279

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA AND STANDARD STATIONS, INC., APPELLANTS,

vs.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

VOL. I

INDEX

	Original	Print
Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California	1	1
Names and addresses of attorneys, (omitted in printing)	1	1
Complaint	82	1
Notice of hearing of motions for a stay of proceedings (and in the alternative) to dismiss (and in the alternative) to strike from complaint, for a more definite statement or bill of particulars, and for inspection, together with said motions, and affidavits and points and authorities supporting the same	97	13
Motion No. 1 (for a stay of proceedings)	99	14
Motion No. 2 (to dismiss)	100	14
Motion No. 3 (to dismiss)	101	15
Motion No. 4 (to strike from complaint)	102	15
Motion No. 5 (for a more definite statement, or bill of particulars)	103	16
Motion No. 6 (for inspection)	107	19
Affidavit "A"—John M. Hall	110	20
Affidavit "B"—John M. Hall	175	72
Affidavit "C"—G. M. Foster	178	74
Points and authorities	179	75

JUDD & DETWEILER (INC.) PRINTERS, WASHINGTON, D. C., NOV. 23, 1948.

—9523

	Original	Print
Decision on motions of the defendants, Yankwich, J.	482	81
Order on motions	502	87
Answer of defendants, Standard Oil Company of California and Standard Stations, Inc.	204	88
Stipulation and order for amendment of answer	217	98
Opinion dated June 7, 1948, Yankwich, J.	219	99
Decision and Order dated June 7, 1948	280	138
Notice of motion for reopening, reargument and reconsideration and for a decision in favor of defendants	284	141
Motion for reargument and reconsideration and a decision in favor of defendants	286	142
Points and authorities	287	142
Memorandum showing that the decision of the Supreme Court in United States v. Columbia Steel Co. requires a decision in favor of defendants	289	142
Receipt of notice of motion for reopening, reargument and reconsideration and for a decision in favor of defendants and accompanying memorandum	309	157
Supplemental opinion dated June 28, 1948, Yankwich, J.	310	158
Order denying motion for reopening, etc., June 28, 1948	325	168
Findings of fact and conclusions of law	326	168
Final judgment	347	188
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings	355	194
Caption and appearances	355	194
Statement by the Court	357	195
Opening statement on behalf of plaintiff	367	201
Offers in evidence	379	208
Testimony on behalf of Plaintiff:
Akerberg, Henry C.
Direct examination	555	311
Cross-examination	561	315
Redirect examination	577	325
Baldry, Clarence Burt
Direct examination	979	560
Cross-examination	989	565
Barmby, Irving G.
Direct examination	602	339
Cross-examination	619	350
Redirect examination	622	352
Recross-examination	623	352
Further redirect examination	625	353
Beaman, Robert A.
Direct examination	850	483
Cross-examination	861	490

Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings Continued
Testimony on behalf of Plaintiff Continued

	Original	Print
Beman, John B.
Direct examination	654	370
Cross-examination	662	374
Redirect examination	675	381
Recross-examination	678	383
Blasker, Samuel N.
Direct examination	1379	789
Cross-examination	1389	800
Redirect examination	1391	802
Bradley, J. E.
Direct examination	775	441
Cross-examination	796	454
Redirect examination	800	455
Bretthauer, Walter V.
Direct examination	1311	754
Cross-examination	1320	759
Redirect examination	1324	761
Bryan, Ralph A.
Direct examination	1325	762
Cross-examination	1350	777
Redirect examination	1362	784
Recross-examination	1368	788
Callicoatt, James C.
Direct examination	1271	730
Cross-examination	1280	735
Redirect examination	1285	738
Recross-examination	1289	741
Carey, Augustus O.
Direct examination	1409	812
Chamberlin, Lester A.
Direct examination	1104	633
Cross-examination	1115	640
Clapp, Robert F.
Direct examination	1265	726
Cross-examination	1271	730
Daley, James E.
Direct examination	1422	819
Donigan, Joseph L.
Direct examination	907	518
Cross-examination	952	544

Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California
Continued
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings Continued
Testimony on behalf of Plaintiff Continued

	Original	Print
Ellis, Harry R.
Direct examination	690	388
Cross-examination	730	413
Redirect examination	741	422
Emerson, Warren E.
Direct examination	1289	741
Cross-examination	1309	753
Estes, C. J.
Direct examination	821	466
Cross-examination	842	478
Redirect examination	845	480
Recross-examination	846	481
Further redirect examination	848	482
Further recross-examination	849	483
Ferrari, Paul S.
Direct examination	1215	697
Cross-examination	1231	707
Redirect examination	1237	711
Gill, Leon B.
Direct examination	1147	657
Hall, Hugh
Direct examination	1065	609
Haven, Arthur A.
Direct examination	1010	577
Cross-examination	1017	581
Hinton, Robert W.
Direct examination	1156	662
Cross-examination	1171	671
Redirect examination	1172	672
Recross examination	1173	673
Hofto, Floyd
Direct examination	625	353
Cross-examination	642	363
Redirect examination	644	364
Johnson, George W. F.
Direct examination	646	366
Katzev, Nathan
Direct examination	1034	591
Cross-examination	1040	595
Redirect examination	1041	595

Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California—Continued
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Testimony on behalf of Plaintiff—Continued

McClanahan, Ellis J.
Direct examination	395	218
Cross-examination	463	256
Redirect examination	481	267
Recross-examination	499	277
Further redirect examination	501	278
McDonald, Henry G.
Direct examination	549	307
Cross-examination	554	310
Mortimer, Verne
Direct examination	746	423
Cross-examination	754	428
Redirect examination	757	430
Recross-examination	759	431
Musser, Orville C.
Direct examination	1239	712
Cross-examination	1249	718
Redirect examination	1254	721
Recross-examination	1257	723
Further redirect	1259	724
Paridy, Eugene V.
Direct examination	1392	802
Cross-examination	1401	807
Redirect examination	1402	808
Peck, Edward W.
Direct examination	965	551
Cross-examination	968	554
Redirect examination	969	554
Plecher, Ralph W.
Direct examination	1018	582
Cross-examination	1032	590
Polsky, Phil L.
Direct examination	899	513
Read, Raymond E.
Direct examination	991	567
Cross-examination	1004	575
Shaffer, Alfred H.
Direct examination	1121	642
Cross-examination	1140	653
Redirect examination	1145	655
Recross-examination	1146	656

Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California—Continued
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Testimony on behalf of Plaintiff—Continued

	Original	Print
Shearer, Irvine H.
Direct examination	585	328
Cross-examination	590	331
Redirect examination	598	336
Shidemantle, Andrew J.
Direct examination	801	456
Cross-examination	809	461
Redirect examination	815	464
Shirk, Dwight W.
Direct examination	761	432
Smith, Kenneth Senior
Direct examination	1076	616
Cross-examination	1090	626
Redirect examination	1095	628
Smith William E.
Direct examination	954	545
Cross-examination	958	548
Redirect examination	962	550
Recross-examination	963	550
Snow, Willard H.
Direct examination	970	554
Cross-examination	978	559
Redirect examination	979	560
Stephens, Russell Garett
Direct examination	869	495
Cross-examination	884	504
Redirect examination	893	510
Recross-examination	895	511
Stevens, Elmo E.
Direct examination	1193	684
Cross-examination	1205	691
Redirect examination	1210	694
Recross-examination	1211	695
Further redirect examination	1213	696
Stimpson, Irvin G.
Direct examination	1175	673
Cross-examination	1184	679
Redirect examination	1190	682
Recross-examination	1192	683
Strong, Roy L.
Direct examination	1403	808

Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California—Continued

Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued

	Original	Print
Testimony on behalf of Defendants—Continued
Tanner, Hal K.
Direct examination	1097	629
Cross-examination	1101	632
Redirect examination	1103	633
Thompson, Erskin D.
Direct examination	510	284
Van Sinden, Alan E.
Direct examination	536	299
Winchester, Ralph A.
Direct examination	1042	596
Cross-examination	1055	604
Redirect examination	1061	608
Opening statement on behalf of defendants	1432	825
Testimony on behalf of defendants:
Bussert, L. M.
Direct examination	1752	1010
Cross-examination	1779	1027
Redirect examination	1781	1028
Christy, Ronald A.
Direct examination	1511	871
Cross-examination	1517	874
Fern, John P.
Direct examination	1605	925
Cross-examination	1631	939
Redirect examination	1642	946
Garrett, Robert W.
Direct examination	1963	1135
Hays, Harry T.
Direct examination	1786	1031
Cross-examination	1817	1051
Hillback, Elliott D.
Direct examination	1979	1145
Cross-examination	1986	1149
Hodge, Arthur
Direct examination	1657	954
Cross-examination	1665	959
Hugill, Elbert A., Jr.
Direct examination	1499	864
Cross-examination	1506	867

	Original	Print
Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California—Continued
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Testimony on behalf of Defendants—Continued
McCall, Edward P.
Direct examination	1433	826
Cross-examination	1493	860
Direct examination	1498	863
Mortensen, Hjalmar
Direct examination	1643	946
Cross-examination	1654	952
Olaine, Francis S.
Direct examination	1700	978
Cross-examination	1748	1008
Rogers, Elmer C.
Direct examination	1533	884
Cross-examination	1534	885
Seeley, Harold D.
Direct examination	1525	880
Cross-examination	1530	882
Thompson, Erskine D.
Direct examination	1830	1057
Cross-examination	1925	1114
Travis, Ward E.
Direct examination	1545	890
Cross-examination	1581	911
Redirect examination	1595	919
Recross-examination	1596	920
Further redirect examination	1600	923
Turner, Clesse M.
Direct examination	1673	964
Cross-examination	1681	969
Redirect examination	1686	972
Wharton, Clinton S.
Direct examination	1519	876
Cross-examination	1524	879
Will, David
Direct examination	1535	885
Cross-examination	1539	888
Colloquy at close of defendants' case	1993	1153
Opening argument on behalf of plaintiff	2060	1157
Argument on behalf of defendants	2070	1197
Closing argument on behalf of plaintiff	2184	1261

Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California—Continued

	Original	Print
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Statement by the Court on submission of case	2204	1273
Reporter's certificate (omitted in printing)	2210-a
Colloquy re objections and amendments to decree	2213	1278
Colloquy re objections to findings	2250	1299
Reporter's certificate (omitted in printing)	2251
Plaintiff's exhibits:
1—Dealer Agreement Form S-452	2252	1301
2—Distributor Agreement Form SS-130-E	2254	1304
3—Petroleum Products and Equipment Agreement Form S-475	2256	1305
4—Dealer Agreement TBA Form S-452-TBA	2258	1308
5—Sublease Form S-456	2260	1311
6—Tabulations labeled "Item A—Number of Documents Outstanding as of 3-12-47"; "Item B—Use of the Distributor Agreement . . ." etc.; "Item C—The Total Number of Dealer Retail Outlets . . ." etc.; "Item D—Number of retail Outlets as of March 12, 1947 . . ." etc.	2262	1313
7—Tabulation of Total Gross Quantities of Gasoline Shipped from Standard Oil Company of California's Refineries	2267	1316
8—Tabulation of Total Gross Quantities of Gasoline Purchased or Acquired by Standard Oil Company of California (Other Than From its Own California Refineries)	2268	1317
9—Tabulation of Total Gross Quantities of Gasoline Sold by Standard Oil Company of California to Retail Dealers	2269	1317
10—Tabulation of Total Number of Tires, Tubes, Batteries and Other Automotive Accessories Shipped by Companies Manufacturing or Supplying the Same to Standard Oil Company of California and/or Standard Stations, Inc., or to Others on the Order of Standard Oil Company of California and/or Standard Stations, Inc., From States Outside of California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, Idaho and Utah	2271	1319
11—Tabulation of Tires, Tubes, Batteries and Other Automotive Accessories Shipped by Companies Manufactur-

	Original	Print
Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California—Continued
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Plaintiff's exhibits—Continued
ing or supplying the Same to Standard Oil Company of California and/or Standard Stations, Inc., or to Others on the Order of Standard Oil Company of California and/or Standard Stations, Inc.	2272	1319
12—Tabulation of Total Number of Tires, Tubes, Batteries and Other Automotive Accessories Shipped by Companies Manufacturing or Supplying the Same Located in California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, Idaho and Utah to Standard Oil Company of California and/or Standard Stations, Inc., or to Others on the Order of Standard Oil Company of California and/or Standard Stations, Inc.	2277	1324
16—Memorandum from E. D. Thompson to Mr. E. J. McClanahan dated June 13, 1945 re: Lease Site and Lessor Built Station Loan of $4,000.00, Kamas, Utah	2278	1325
16-A—Lease dated April 10, 1945 from Harold W. Butler et ux. to Standard Oil Company of California	2280	1327
16-B—Sublease dated April 10, 1945 from Standard Oil Company of California to Harold W. Butler et ux.	2284	1332
16-C—Dealer Agreement dated April 10, 1945 between Standard Oil Company of California and Harold W. Butler	2286	1334
16-D—Real Estate Mortgage from Harold W. Butler et ux. to Standard Oil Company of California	2288	1337
16-E—Promissory Note dated April 10, 1945 in favor of Standard Oil Company of California executed by Harold W. Butler et ux.	2291	1339
16-F—Letter dated April 10, 1945 from Standard Oil Company of California to Mr. Harold W. Butler et ux.	2292	1340
17—Memorandum dated March 12, 1945 from E. D. Thompson to Mr. E. J. McClanahan	2294	1341
17-A—Agreement dated May 6, 1947 between Standard Oil Company of California and Mildred C. Ransom	2296	1343

d from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California tinued
eporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Plaintiff's exhibits—Continued

	Original	Print
17-B—Dealer Agreement T3A dated March 19, 1945 between Standard Oil Company of California and Mildred C. Ransom	2297	1344
17-C—Sublease dated March 19, 1945 from Standard Oil Company of California to Mildred C. Ransom	2324	1371
17-D—Letter dated April 16, 1945 from Standard Oil Company of California to Mrs. Mildred C. Ransom	2326	1373
17-E—Letter dated March 19, 1945 from Standard Oil Company of California to Mrs. Mildred C. Ransom	2327	1374
17-F—Lease dated March 19, 1945 from Mildred C. Ransom to Standard Oil Company of California	2328	1375
17-G—Lease dated March 19, 1945 from Mildred C. Ransom to Standard Oil Company of California	2332	1379
17-H—Note dated March 23, 1945 in favor of Standard Oil Company of California executed by Mildred C. Ransom	2333	1381
17-I—Real and Chattel Mortgage from Mildred C. Ransom to Standard Oil Company of California dated March 23, 1945	2334	1381
18—Memorandum dated July 10, 1946 from E. D. Thompson to Mr. E. J. McClanahan re: Gross Brothers, Maywood, California	2340	1385
18-C—Letter dated July 9, 1946 from Standard Oil Company of California to Mr. A. M. Gross	2341	1387
19—Memorandum dated February 15, 1945 from E. D. Thompson to Mr. E. J. McClanahan re: Burnie Hyland, Spokane, Washington	2343	1389
19-D—Dealer Agreement dated January 5, 1945 between Standard Oil Company of California and Burnie Hyland	2345	1391
19-E—Letter dated December 3, 1946 from Standard Oil Company of California to Mr. Burnie Hyland	2347	1394
19-F—Bill of Sale dated January 16, 1947 from Standard Oil Company of California to Burnie Hyland	2348	1394

Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California — Continued

Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings — Continued

Plaintiff's Exhibits — Continued

	Original	Print
20—Memorandum dated June 22, 1945 from E. D. Thompson to Mr. E. J. McClanahan re: Wright and Roberts, Parma, Idaho	2349	1394
20-A—Agreement dated September 17, 1945 between Standard Oil Company of California and Ray A. Wright	2351	1395
20-B—Indenture dated May 3, 1945 between Elmer C. Roberts et ux., et al. and Standard Oil Company of California	2353	1400
20-C—Promissory Note dated May 3, 1945 in favor of Standard Oil Company of California executed by Elmer C. Roberts et ux., et al.	2358	1404
21—Memorandum dated January 10, 1945 from E. D. Thompson to Mr. E. J. McClanahan re: Chitwood and Study, San Pedro, California	2359	1405
21-A—Lease dated January 19, 1945 from Dean B. Chitwood et ux., et al. to Standard Oil Company of California	2363	1409
21-B—Lease and Option to Purchase, dated January 19, 1945, between Dean B. Chitwood et ux., et al. and Standard Oil Company of California	2366	1412
21-C—Sublease dated January 19, 1945 from Standard Oil Company of California to Dean B. Chitwood et ux., et al.	2367	1413
21-D—Dealer Agreement dated January 19, 1945 between Standard Oil Company of California and Dean B. Chitwood et al.	2369	1415
21-E—Letter dated March 2, 1946 from Dean B Chitwood et ux., et al. to Standard Oil Company of California	2371	1417
21-F—Note Secured by Deed of Trust in favor of Standard Oil Company of California executed by Dean B. Chitwood et ux., et al.	2372	1417
21-G—Deed of Trust With Assignment of Rents, dated January 20, 1945, between Dean B. Chitwood et ux., et al., Trustors, Security First National Bank of Los Angeles, Trustee, and Standard Oil Company of California, Beneficiary	2373	1418
22—Letter dated September 4, 1947 from W. A. Frazer to Mr. W. H. Haines,

	Original	Print
Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California—Continued
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Plaintiff's exhibits—Continued
re Competitive Oil-Chevron Truck Stations	2379	1421
22-D—Agreement dated March 11, 1948 between Standard Oil Company of California and H. A. Holyfield et ux., et al.	2380	1422
22-E—Assignment dated October 15, 1946 from W. S. Darnell et ux. to W. S. Darnell et ux., et al.	2381	1422
22-I—Letter dated September 18, 1946 from Standard Oil Company of California to W. S. Darnell	2382	1423
23—Letter dated September 22, 1947 from C. T. Furrer to W. A. Frazer, re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2383	1424
23-D—Letter dated June 28, 1943 from Standard Oil Company of California to Ransome Company	2384	1425
23-E—Letter dated November 15, 1941 from Standard Oil Company of California to Ransome Company	2385	1426
23-F—Sublease dated November 15, 1941 from Standard Oil Company of California to Ransome Company	2386	1426
23-K—Lease dated June 4, 1943 from W. L. Kissinger et ux. to Standard Oil Company of California	2388	1430
23-N—Letter dated March 4, 1948 from Standard Oil Company of California to Mr. Walter F. Hannah	2389	1431
23-O—Agreement dated March 4, 1948 between Standard Oil Company of California and Mr. Verne Mortimer	2390	1432
23-Q—Letter dated September 26, 1947 from E. D. Thompson to Mr. H. R. Cuyler re Competitive Lubrication Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2391	1432
23-R—Letter dated October 27, 1947 from C. T. Furrer to Mr. J. L. Burke re SS-7333-CDA, Ontario California	2392	1433
23-S—Memorandum dated December 15, 1947 from S. J. Coull to Mr. C. T. Furrer re Ransome Co.	2393	1434
23-T—Letter dated December 31, 1947 from C. T. Furrer to W. A. Frazer re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2395	1435

	Original	Print
Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California—Continued
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Plaintiff's exhibits—Continued
23-U—Letter dated January 5, 1948 from W. A. Frazer to C. T. Furrer re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Gas Stations	2396	1436
23-V—Letter dated January 19, 1948 from C. T. Furrer to J. L. Burke re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Gas Stations	2397	1437
23-W—Letter dated January 22, 1948 from C. T. Furrer to G. C. Calden re Santa Maria Truck Station	2398	1437
23-X—Memorandum dated January 22, 1948 from J. L. Burke to C. T. Furrer	2400	1438
24—Letter dated May 8, 1947 from E. D. Thompson to H. R. Cuyler re Truck Registration and Fuel Requirements—Pacific Coast States	2401	1438
24-A—Letter dated May 19, 1947 from H. R. Cuyler to E. D. Thompson re Truck Registration and Fuel Requirements—Pacific Coast States	2402	1438
24-B—Letter dated August 14, 1947 from W. A. Frazer to F. C. Eastman et al. re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2403	1439
24-C—Letter dated August 14, 1947 from W. A. Frazer to G. C. Briggs et al. re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2404	1440
24-D—Letter dated August 14, 1947 from W. A. Frazer to E. V. Burns re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2405	1441
24-E—Letter dated August 14, 1947 from W. A. Frazer to C. S. Lincoln et al. re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2406	1442
24-F—Letter dated October 27, 1947 from G. C. Briggs to R. W. Goodale re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2407	1443
24-G—Letter dated February 17, 1948 from E. D. Thompson to H. R. Cuyler re Competitive Lubricating Oil—Chevron Truck Stations	2408	1444
24-H—Letter dated February 5, 1948 from E. D. Thompson to H. R. Cuyler re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2409	1445

	Original	Print
Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California—Continued
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Plaintiff's exhibits—Continued
24-I—Letter dated February 3, 1948 from W. A. Frazer to C. T. Furrer re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2410	1446
53—Letter dated August 29, 1947 from Standard Oil Company of California to Union Square Garage Corporation, etc.	2411	1447
53-A—Amendment to Garage Management and Occupancy Agreement, dated July 1, 1945, between Union Square Garage Corporation and Union Square Garage, Inc., etc.	2422	1459
85—Notice dated January 3, 1946, by Bernice Duffin to Standard Oil Company of California, of the appointment of Darwin G. Duffin as operator of service station, etc.	2472	1498
99—Answer of Standard Oil Company of California to Interrogatory #4, Part II, re Total Gross Quantities of Gasoline Sold to Dealers	2475	1499
100—Answer of Standard Oil Company of California to Interrogatory #4, Part III, re Total Gross Quantities of Automotive Lubricating Oils Sold to Dealers	2476	1499
101—Lease Form S-450	2477	1500
102—Lease Form S-450-1	2481	1504
103—Lease Form S-450-2	2485	1508
104—Certificate of Secretary of State of the State of Oregon	2489	1514
105—Merchandise Inspection Report	2490	1514
Defendants' exhibits:
B—Questionnaire re Retailing Agents and Amount of Business	2491	1515
C—Tide Water Associated Oil Company Sales Statistics—Year 1941	2492	1516
D—Tide Water Associated Oil Company Sales Statistics—Year 1946	2493	1517
E—Service Station Lease—Tide Water Associated Oil Company form 4580-D	2494	1518
F—Merchandise Agreement for Federal Tires and Tubes, Aero Batteries, Auto Supplies of Tide Water Associated Oil Company	2496	1524
G—Questionnaire and Answers of Shell Oil Company	2499	1534

Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued

Defendants' exhibits—Continued	Original	Print
H—Application form for Shellubrication—Dealers' License, etc.	2505	1538
I—Service Station Lease Form of Shell Oil Company, etc.	2517	1554
J—Tabulations re Sales of General Petroleum Corporation	2521	1566
K—Service Station Lease (L) form of General Petroleum Corporation, etc	2527	1569
L—Dealer Gasoline Contract (L)—Form of General Petroleum Corporation, etc.	2532	1578
M—Tabulations re Sales of The Texas Co.	2536	1589
N—Agreement of Sale form of The Texas Company, etc.	2538	1590
O—Lease form of The Texas Company	2542	1603
P—Tabulations of Sales of Tires, Tubes, Batteries and other Accessories Through Employee-Operated Service Stations of Union Oil Company of California	2546	1609
Q—Service Station Lease form of Union Oil Company of California (form No. 909)	2550	1611
R—Retail Dealer Gasoline Contract form of Union Oil Company of California (form No. 896-F)	2552	1615
S—Tabulations re Sales of Union Oil Company of California	2554	1618
T—Tabulations re Number of Retail Service Station Outlets, etc., of Richfield Oil Corporation	2558	1619
U—Sales Contract form of Richfield Oil Corporation, etc.	2561	1621
V—Tabulation of Los Angeles Basin Competitive Service Station Report	2575	1649
W—Los Angeles Sales District Map dated October 23, 1942—revised September 1, 1943	2576	1650
X—Long Beach Sales District Map dated October 23, 1942—revised February 14, 1947	2577	1651
Y—Tabulation of San Francisco Bay Area Competitive Service Station Report	2578	1652
Z—Tabulation of Gasoline Sales—Retail Sales by Standard Stations, Inc. and Dealers versus State Total Taxable Motor Fuel Sales	2579	1653
AA—Tabulation of Automotive Lubricating Oil Sales, etc.	2587	1657

Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California
Continued
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Defendants' exhibits—Continued

	Original	Print
BB—Tabulations of Tire Replacement Shipments, etc.	2591	1661
CC—Tabulations of Replacement Battery Sales—Retail Sales by Standard Stations, Inc. and Dealers versus Total Replacement Manufacturers	2599	1665
DD—Graphs Showing Retail Sales by Standard's Dealers as % of State Taxable Motor Fuel Sales	2607	1669
EE—Graphs Showing Retail Sales by Standard's Dealers as % of API'S Estimated Use of Automotive Lubricating Oils	2608	1670
FF—Graphs Showing Retail Sales by Standard's Dealers as % of Estimated State Total Tire Replacement Shipments Based Upon Rubber Manufacturers Association's Data	2609	1671
GG—Graphs Showing Retail Sales by Standard's Dealers as % of Estimated State Total Battery Replacements Based Upon Data from Assn. of American Battery Mfgrs., Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.	2610	1672
HH—Graphs Showing Retail Sales by Standard's Dealers as Percents of Estimated State Totals (Seven Western States)	2611	1673
H—Tabulations of Companies Marketing Over 1,000,000 Taxable Gallons of Gasoline in Seven Western States, 1946, etc.	2612	1675
JJ—Depositions of Francis S. Olaine, L. M. Bussert and Harry T. Hays	2615	1677
KK—Map of Western States with Numbered Subdivisions	2726	1754
LL—Bulk Distribution Data (Exhibit "A" to Deposition)	2727	1755
MM—Map of Western States with Lettered Subdivisions	2731	1758
NN—Package Goods Distribution Data (Exhibit "B" to Deposition)	2732	1759
OO—Location of Accessory Warehouse (Exhibit "C" to Deposition)	2735	1760
QQ—Photograph of Standard Station	2739	1761
RR—Photograph of Chevron Gas Station	2740	1762
SS—Telegrams	2741	1763
TT—Trademarks	2756	1778

	Original	Print
Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California—Continued
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Defendants' exhibits—Continued
UU—List of Competitive Service Station Construction Activity	2763	1783
VV—Dealer Agreement form of Standard Oil Company of California, etc.	2766	1788
WW—Lubrication Chart	2782	1822
XX—Specifications re Fan Belts, etc	2784	1824
YY—Chevron Merchandiser	2787	1827
ZZ—Booklet "Round Table," etc.	2808	1848
AAA—Form of Daily Report	2818	1858
BBB—Two Photographs of Garage	2819	1859
CCC—Tabulation of Automotive Oils—Year 1947	2821	1861
DDD—Tabulation of Average Installation Cost	2822	1862
EEE—Graph Showing Average Delivery Cost to Dealer Stations, etc.	2823	1862
FFF—Tabulation of Competitive TBA at Chevron Dealers Signed on TBA Agreements	2824	1863
GGG—Tabulation of Companies Marketing Their Own Brand of Lubricating Oil, etc.	2825	1864
Petition for Appeal	2828	1866
Assignment of Errors and Prayer for Reversal	2830	1867
Order Allowing Appeal	2842	1876
Bond on Appeal (omitted in printing)	2844
Stipulation Designating Portions of the Record to be Included in the Transcript on Appeal (Pursuant to Supreme Court Rule 10)	2851	1876
Praecipe Indicating the Portions of the Record to be Incorporated in the Transcript on Appeal	2959	1943
Designation of Additional Portions of the Record Desired by Plaintiff to be Included in Transcript on Appeal	2955	1945
Clerk's certificate (omitted in printing)	2957
Statement of points to be relied upon and designation of parts of record to be printed	2960	1946
Order noting probable jurisdiction	2962	1947

[fols. 1-81] [Names and addresses of attorneys omitted]

[fol. 82] [File endorsement omitted]

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, CENTRAL DIVISION

Civil Action No. 6159-H

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff,

v.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA AND STANDARD STATIONS, INC., Defendants

COMPLAINT—Filed January 2, 1947

The United States of America, seeking equitable relief, by its attorneys, acting under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States, brings this action against the defendants, Standard Oil Company of California and Standard Stations, Inc., and complains and alleges as follows:

Jurisdiction and Venue

1. This Complaint is filed and these proceedings are instituted under Section 4 of the Act of Congress of July 2, 1890, as amended (26 Stat. 209, 15 U. S. C., §4) entitled "An Act to Protect Trade and Commerce against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies," commonly known as the Sherman Act, and under Section 15 of the Act of Congress of [fol. 83] October 15, 1914, as amended (38 Stat. 736, 15 U. S. C. §25) commonly known as the Clayton Act, in order to prevent and restrain continuing violations, as hereinafter alleged, of Section 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, and of Section 3 of the Clayton Act.

2. Defendants Standard Oil Company of California and Standard Stations, Inc. have offices, transact business, and are found within the Central Division of the Southern District of California. The alleged violations of law hereinafter described have been and are being carried out in part within the said Division and District, and the interstate commerce in petroleum products and automotive accessories herein involved, as hereinafter described, is carried on in part within the said Division and District.

Defendants

3. Standard Oil Company of California, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, with offices and principal place of business in San Francisco, California, is hereby made a defendant herein. Standard Oil Company of California is engaged in the business of producing, transporting, refining, and marketing petroleum and petroleum products principally in the States of California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico, Idaho and Utah. It is sometimes hereinafter referred to as "defendant Standard."

4. Standard Stations, Inc., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, with offices and principal place of business in San Francisco, California, is made a defendant herein. Standard Stations, Inc. is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Standard Oil Company of California and is engaged in the business of managing service stations in California, Washington, Oregon, Arizona, Idaho, Nevada and Utah.

Definitions

5. The term "petroleum products," as used herein, refers to those products obtained or manufactured from crude oil [fol. 84] by various processes and sold or used as a fuel or lubricant for automotive vehicles, together with miscellaneous oils and compounds derived from petroleum and designated for various special uses.

6. The term "automotive accessories," as used herein, refers to replacement parts and articles other than petroleum products used in servicing or repairing automotive vehicles and includes tires, tubes, batteries, spark plugs, oil filters, oil filter cartridges, fan belts, battery cables, auto lamp bulbs, fuses, windshield wipers and blades, tire repair and vulcanizing kits, anti-freeze preparations, tire chains, waxes and polishes, spot lights and other like items.

7. The term "automobile" or "automotive," as used herein, includes trucks, tractors, buses, farm and manufacturing implements and motors.

8. The term "service station," as used herein, refers to a retail outlet dealing in and dispensing petroleum products and/or automotive accessories and operated by an Independent Service Station Operator or by a Company Employee-Operator.

9. The term "Independent Service Station Operator," as used herein, refers to the operator of a service station which is not operated by a producer-wholesaler of petroleum products as an adjunct of its ordinary course of business. It includes the operator of a service station with which a producer-wholesaler may be the owner or senior interest holder of the property leased by such operator.

10. The term "Company Service Station," as used herein, refers to a service station operated or managed directly by defendant Standard or by its wholly-owned subsidiary Standard Stations, Inc., through a Company Employee-Operator.

11. The term "Garage Operator," as used herein, refers to the operator of a place of sale for automobiles or to the [fol. 85] operator of a place of repair for automobiles, in connection with which the retailing of petroleum products and/or automotive accessories is carried on.

12. The term "retail outlet," as used herein, refers to a service station or garage in connection with which the retailing of petroleum products and/or automotive accessories is carried on, and which is operated either by an Independent Service Station Operator, a Company Employee-Operator or a Garage Operator.

13. The term "sponsored products," as used herein, refers to those petroleum products and/or automotive accessories not manufactured or produced by defendant Standard, but sold and distributed by defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. or contracted or arranged for sale by said defendants to and through retail outlets.

14. The term "Western area," as used herein, refers to all of the territory within the States of California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico, Idaho and Utah.

Nature of Trade and Commerce

15. Defendant Standard has large petroleum holdings throughout fields located in California, and important holdings and interests in the oil-producing fields of Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Mississippi and Louisiana. Approximately 85 percent of the crude oil currently produced or bought for marketing by defendant Standard is produced from wells located in California and approximately 15 percent is produced in the other designated states. The crude oil so obtained is transported, by defendant Standard, to approximately twenty natural gasoline plants located in several states, to three major refineries located at Richmond, El Segundo and Segura, California, and to two smaller refineries in Texas. Petroleum products produced [fol. 86] or processed thereat are sold and distributed in interstate commerce principally to retail outlets for resale to consumers and, to a lesser extent, by direct sale to consumers in the Western area.

16. Defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. distribute and sell or arrange for the distribution and sale to retail outlets of a number of petroleum products and automotive accessories not produced or manufactued by defendant Standard. These said products, known as sponsored products, are manufactured and produced by various concerns and are generally shipped in interstate commerce from factories and processing points located in states other than those in which defendant Standard operates to Western area retail outlets designated by it or to warehouses maintained by it within the Western area from which and through which they are distributed to retail outlets. The said sponsored products are then sold at retail to consumers within the Western area by retail outlets under brand names owned, controlled or sponsored by defendant Standard.

17. Service stations are customarily located at important highway intersections and at other readily accessible roadside locations on streets and arteries which carry extensive automotive traffic. The selection of a service station site is normally made only after thorough analysis of its suitability for supplying the needs of motorists. Since the number of service station sites which will return reasonable profits to their operators in any given area is limited, it is recognized that established operators of favorably situated service stations occupy positions of substantial impregnability against competitive invasion of their respective areas by other operators.

18. Defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. sought for many years, within the Western area, to lease, take title to and/or to enter into contractual relationships with operators of such favorably located service station sites.

[fol. 87] 19. Prior to 1926, in the initial competition in the securing of such sites, defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. acquired title to many such properties. In or about 1926, defendants began to acquire retail outlets by obtaining leases of such properties. The properties so leased were subleased to Independent Service Station Operators who were then licensed to sell defendant Standard's petroleum products and sponsored products exclusively. This method of acquiring retail outlets was termed the "lease and license" system.

20. Beginning in or about 1931, another method of acquiring retail outlets, known as the "lease and agency" system, was developed. Under this method, operators were constituted as agents of defendant Standard for the exclusive distribution of its petroleum products and sponsored products.

21. Beginning in or about 1936, defendant Standard adopted an additional method of acquiring or operating retail outlets known as the "Iowa plan." Under this plan defendant Standard sought to eliminate expenses incident to chain store tax laws, social security laws and increasing unionization trends by expressly avoiding an agency relationship with its operators. In substance, under the Iowa plan, operators were constituted ostensibly as independent entrepreneurs and given leases conditioned on their exclusive handling of defendant Standard's petroleum products and sponsored products. This plan supplanted the "lease and agency" system described in Paragraph 20.

22. As a result of the several said methods of acquiring and maintaining control of retail outlets, defendant Standard now owns or leases from the owners thereof approximately 4668 service stations in the Western area. Of this number, approximately 1112 are directly operated as Company Service Stations, and deal exclusively in defendant Standard's petroleum products and sponsored products, and approximately 3556 of said service stations are leased [fol. 88] to independent operators on the condition that said operators shall deal exclusively in defendant Standard's petroleum products and sponsored products.

23. In addition to the 4668 service stations referred to in Paragraph 22 hereof, defendant Standard has entered into contractual relationships with the operators of approximately 3332 service stations and garages in the Western area, under which said operators are required to deal exclusively, in defendant Standard's petroleum products and sponsored products. By reason of said acquisitions, leases and contractual relationships, defendant Standard has acquired the exclusive right to supply approximately 8000 service stations and garages in the Western area.

24. Defendant Standard Stations, Inc. has negotiated many of said agreements and arrangements for and on behalf of defendant Standard, and has executed many of said agreements in the name and on behalf of defendant Standard.

25. The said retail outlets so acquired and controlled by defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. constitute a substantial portion of all of the favorably situated retail outlets for petroleum products and automotive accessories available to motorists within the Western area. Notwithstanding the fact that many motorists who prefer defendant Standard's brands of gasoline over those of other producer-wholesalers have brand preferences for lubricants and automotive accessories other than those manufactured or sponsored by defendant Standard, the said retail outlets, as aforesaid, are permitted to offer and sell at retail only such petroleum products and automotive accessories as are manufactured or sponsored by defendant Standard.

26. Numerous manufacturers and producers of petroleum products and automotive accessories located in states outside the Western area, other than those producers and manufacturers whose products are sponsored by defendant Stand-
[fol. 89] ard, are prepared to and have attempted to sell their respective brands of petroleum products, tires, tubes, batteries, spark plugs, waxes, polishes and other automotive accessories, to retail outlets acquired and controlled by said defendants within the Western area. The said retail outlets, however, by reason of the obligations of their contractual and other relationships with said defendants, have not been permitted to purchase such products and the said other producers and manufacturers have accordingly been deprived of the patronage of a substantial portion of all of the retail outlets for petroleum products and automotive accessories within the Western area.

Offenses Charged

27. Defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. continuously, for at least fifteen years prior to the date of the filing of this Complaint, have violated and are now violating Section 1 of the Act of Congress of July 2, 1890, as amended, 26 Stat. 209, 15 U. S. C. 1, commonly known as the Sherman Act, and Section 3 of the Act of Congress of October 15, 1914, as amended, 38 Stat. 731, 15 U. S. C. 14, commonly known as the Clayton Act, in that they have executed and entered into certain written exclusive supply contracts entitled "Dealer Agreements," "Dealer Agreements TBA," "Petroleum Products and Equipment Agreements," "Distributor Agreements" and "Subleases," and into oral exclusive supply agreements, by and between themselves and approximately 6,900 Independent Service Station Operators and numerous additional Garage Operators in the Western area, which said written contracts and oral agreements are in unreasonable restraint of, and substantially lessen competition in, the herein described interstate trade and commerce in petroleum products and automotive accessories. The said written contracts and oral agreements will [fol. 90] continue in effect unless the relief hereinafter prayed for is granted.

28. The said "Dealer Agreements," which are now in full force and effect, provide that the operators party thereto shall purchase exclusively from defendant Standard all of their respective requirements of petroleum products used and sold and bought to be used and sold on the premises described in such Agreements. Such Agreements further provide, among other things, that the petroleum products referred to therein shall be those brands of gasoline, lubricating oils and other petroleum products currently sold at service stations operated by defendants in the vicinity of operator's station. Operator further agrees not to store, handle, distribute or sell any other brand or brands of petroleum products at or from his said station.

29. The said "Dealer Agreement TBA" and the said "Distributor Agreements," which are now in full force and effect, provide, among other things, that the operators party thereto shall purchase exclusively from defendant Standard or Standard Stations, Inc. all of the said operators' respective requirements of petroleum products, tires, tubes, batteries and other lines of automotive accessories distributed by or through defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc., used and sold, or bought to be used and sold by the said operators on the premises described in such Agreements.

30. The said "Petroleum Products and Equipment Agreements," which are now in full force and effect, provide that the operators party thereto shall purchase exclusively from defendant Standard or Standard Stations, Inc. all of their respective requirements of petroleum products used and sold, and bought to be used and sold on the premises described in such Agreements. The said contracts further provide that in consideration therefor, defendant Standard or Standard Stations, Inc. shall, without charge, install and retain title to certain specified equipment and facilities to [fol. 91] be used on the premises occupied by the said operators. Some of the said contracts further provide that upon expiration, said defendants shall tender Bills of Sale for the said installed equipment and facilities to the operators party thereto, if the said operators have complied with all of the terms of the said contracts and have not terminated such contracts prior thereto.

31. The said "Subleases" which are now in full force and effect, provide that the operators party thereto shall lease certain premises from defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. and on such leased premises the said operators shall deal in and sell only such petroleum products as have been purchased from defendant Standard or Standard Stations, Inc. Some of the said Subleases provide that the operators party thereto shall have the right to occupy the premises leased only for the sale and distribution of such petroleum products and other merchandise as shall have been purchased from said defendants and that the said operators shall not store, handle, sell or distribute any petroleum products or merchandise of any description other than that sold or distributed by said defendants.

32. The said oral agreements entered into by and between defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. and the said Independent Service Station Operators and Garage Operators have consisted and now consist in agreements that said defendants shall sell and fix prices, discounts and rebates on sales of petroleum products and automotive accessories on the condition, agreement and understanding that the said operators who purchase such products shall agree to use, handle and resell only those petroleum products and automotive accessories sold or sponsored by defendant Standard.

33. Defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. have persuaded, induced and influenced the said Independ- [fol. 92] ent Service Station Operato-s and Garage Operators to enter into the aforesaid written contracts and oral agreements by divers means and methods, including among others, the following:

(a) by lending money to the said Independent Service Station Operators and Garage Operators at rates of interest below current rates and without interest charges;

(b) by giving money to and by forgiving portions of loans receivable from the said Independent Service Station Operators and Garage Operators;

(c) by buying equipment from the said Independent Service Station Operators and Garage Operators and reselling the same said equipment to the same said parties at prices less than the purchase prices;

(d) by selling new equipment to the said Independent Service Station Operators and Garage Operators at prices below cost to defendant Standard;

(e) by furnishing new equipment to Independent Service Station Operators and Garage Operators without charge, all on the condition that the said Independent Service Station Operators and Garage Operators shall agree to deal exclusively in petroleum products sold by defendant Standard and, in many instances, exclusively in automotive accessories sponsored or distributed by defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc.

Effects of the Contracts

34. The aforesaid contracts have had the effects, as intended by defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc., of

(a) eliminating competition between defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. and other producers and manufacturers of petroleum products of like utility and quality for the patronage of a substantial [fol. 93] portion of the retail outlets for such products in the Western area,

(b) eliminating competition between manufacturers and producers of defendants Standard's and Standard Stations, Inc.'s sponsored products and other manufacturers and producers of products of like utility and quality for the patronage of a substantial portion of the retail outlets for such products in the Western area,

(c) depriving a substantial portion of the retail outlets for petroleum products and automotive accessories within the Western area of the opportunity of purchasing such products from producers and manufacturers of their own selection,

(d) depriving a substantial portion of the retail outlets for petroleum products and automotive accessories within the Western area of the opportunity of purchasing petroleum products and automotive accessories at prices determined by free and open competition among the producers and manufacturrers of such products,

(e) securing to defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. a monopoly of the petroleum products and automotive accessories patronage in a substantial portion of the retail outlets for such products within the Western area, and have had the effect thereby of restraining and substantially lessening competition in the interstate trade and commerce in petroleum products and automotive accessories hereinabove described.

[fol. 94] Prayer

Wherefore the plaintiff prays:

1. That the Court adjudge and decree that defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc., have entered into contracts which unreasonably restrain interstate trade and commerce in petroleum products and automotive accessories, in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

2. That the Court adjudge and decree that defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. have substantially lessened and restrained competition in petroleum products and automotive accessories, in violation of Section 3 of the Clayton Act.

3. That the exclusive supply provisions in the written contracts and oral agreements between defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. and Independent Service Station Operators and Garage Operators, more particularly described hereinabove, be declared void and of no effect, and in unreasonable restraint of and as substantially lessening competition in interstate commerce in petroleum products and automotive accessories and in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act and Section 3 of the Clayton Act.

4. That defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. and their officers, directors, agents, representatives, and all persons and corporations acting or claiming to act on their behalf, be perpetually enjoined from entering into or enforcing any contract, agreement, or understanding, express or implied, with any Independent Service Station Operator, or Garage Operator, or from inducing or compelling, or attempting to induce or compel, by any means whatever, any Independent Service Station Operator, or Garage Operator, to enter into any contract, agreement, or understanding which provides:

(a) That the Independent Service Station Operator or Garage Operator shall secure all of his requirements [fol. 95] of petroleum products from defendant Standard, or shall not handle the petroleum products of any other company;

(b) That the Independent Service Station Operator, or Garage Operator shall secure all of his requirements of any one or more types of automotive accessories from or through defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc., or will not handle accessories competitive with those distributed or sponsored by defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc.;

(c) That the sale of any petroleum product or automotive accessory to any Independent Service Station Operator, or Garage Operator shall be conditional on the sale of other petroleum products or automotive accessories.

5. That plaintiff have such other and further relief as the nature of the case may require and the Court may deem proper in the premises, and that plaintiff recover the costs of this suit.

6. That pursuant to Section 5 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, an order be made and entered herein requiring the defendants named herein to be brought before the Court in this proceeding as parties defendant, and directing the Marshal of the Southern District of California to serve a summons upon them, and demanding that they appear herein and answer the allegations contained in this Complaint and thereafter abide by and perform such orders and decrees as the Court may make and enter.

[fol. 96] Dated Jan. 2, 1948.

William C. Dixon, Special Assistant to the Attorney General. W. Alan Thody, Special Assistant to the Attorney General. Tom C. Clark, Attorney General. Wendell Berge, Assistant Attorney General. Holmes Baldridge, Special Assistant to the Attorney General. Richard B. O'Donnell, Special Assistant to the Attorney General. James M. Carter, United States Attorney.

[fol. 97] IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

[File endorsement omitted]

[Title omitted]

NOTICE OF HEARING OF MOTIONS FOR A STAY OF PROCEEDINGS, (AND IN THE ALTERNATIVE) TO DISMISS, (AND IN THE ALTERNATIVE) TO STRIKE FROM COMPLAINT, FOR A MORE DEFINITE STATEMENT OR BILL OF PARTICULARS, AND FOR INSPECTION, TOGETHER WITH SAID MOTIONS, AND AFFIDAVITS AND POINTS AND AUTHORITIES SUPPORTING THE SAME—Filed April 3, 1947

To Plaintiff and Its Attorneys:

Please take notice that on June 2, 1947, at the hour of 10:00 A. M., or as soon thereafter as defendants' counsel [fol. 98] may be heard, defendants will move the above entitled Court in the courtroom of the Honorable Campbell E. Beaumont, Judge of said Court, in the United States Post Office and Court House Building at Los Angeles, California, as follows:

Defendants will present and move in accordance with Motion No. 1 annexed hereto.

If Motion No. 1 be granted, defendants will move for an order permitting defendants to defer making the remaining motions annexed hereto until such time as proceedings herein shall be no longer stayed.

If Motion No. 1 be denied, defendants will present and move in accordance with Motions Nos. 2 and 3 annexed hereto.

If Motions Nos. 2 and 3 be denied, defendants will present and move in accordance with Motions Nos. 4, 5 and 6, Motion No. 6 being presented only in the event that Motion No. 5 is denied with respect to particulars L, M, N, O and P therein.

The making of any of said Motions shall be without prejudice to the making of any other Motion and without prejudice to rights which defendants would otherwise have by reason of a denial of any Motion.

Following the presentation of said motion or motions, defendants severally may move for such order with respect to an extension of the time within which defendants are required to answer as may then appear necessary and appropriate for the protection of defendants.

April 3, 1947.

Lawler, Felix & Hall, John M. Hall. By John M. Hall, Attorneys for defendants.

[fol. 99] MOTION No. 1

(for a stay of proceedings)

Defendants severally move the Court to stay further proceedings in this cause until a final termination of or a final determination of the issues in that certain civil action pending now and at the time of the commencement of this action in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, being No. 8524 and entitled "United States of America, Plaintiff, vs. American Petroleum Institute, et al., Defendants," wherein this plaintiff is plaintiff, and these defendants are defendants.

This motion is made on the Ground that the charges made and the relief sought by the complaint herein are substantially the same as certain of the charges made and certain of the relief sought by the complaint against the defendants herein in said action No. 8524, as will more fully appear from the affidavit annexed hereto, marked Affidavit A.

This motion is supported by Affidavit A, and by Points and Authorities, annexed hereto.

[fol. 100] MOTION No. 2

(to dismiss)

Defendants severally move the Court to dismiss this action upon the ground that upon the principle of forum non conveniens jurisdiction of this action should not be assumed by this Court because the witnesses, papers and documents to which resort must be had for the proof required herein are all permanently located at the headquarters offices of defendants at 225 Bush Street, in the City and County of San Francisco, within the Northern District of California, and that by reason thereof substantial burden and hardship will be imposed upon defendants if jurisdiction of this cause is assumed by this Court.

This motion is supported by Affidavit B and is made upon the authority of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Gulf Oil Corp. v. Gilbert, — U. S. —; No. 93—October Term, 1946, decided March 10, 1947.

[fol. 101] MOTION No. 3

(to dismiss)

Defendants severally move the Court to dismiss this action upon the following grounds:

(A) Because the complaint herein fails to state a claim against either of the defendants upon which relief can be granted in that no facts are alleged therein showing that there was any unreasonable restraint of or substantial lessening of competition or tendency to create a monopoly in interstate trade or commerce or that the contracts, agreements and subleases referred to were made in the course of interstate trade or commerce.

(B) Because the complaint herein shows that the Court lacks jurisdiction over the subject matter alleged in said complaint in that such jurisdiction is made to depend upon violations of section 1 of the Sherman Act (15 U. S. C. A. 1) and section 3 of the Clayton Act (15 U. S. C. A. 14), and no facts are alleged in the complaint showing that there was any unreasonable restraint of or substantial lessenting of competition or tendency to create a monopoly in the interstate trade or commerce or that the contracts, agreements and subleases referred to were made in the course of interstate trade or commerce.

This motion is made under Rule 12(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

This motion is supported by Points and Authorities, annexed hereto.

[fol. 102] MOTION No. 4

(to strike from complaint)

Defendants severally move the Court to strike from the complaint:

(A) All of paragraph 33 of the complaint.

(B) The words "and other relationships" appearing in the last sentence of paragraph 26 of the complaint, which sentence reads:

> "The said retail outlets, however, by reason of the obligations of their contractural and other relationships with said defendants, have not been permitted to purchase such products and the said other producers and manufacturers have accordingly been deprived of the patronage of a substantial portion of all of the retail outlets for petroleum products and automotive accessories within the Western area."

This motion is made under Rule 12(f) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure on the ground that the matters sought to be stricken are redundant or immaterial or impertinent.

This motion is supported by Points and Authorities, annexed hereto.

[fol. 103] MOTION NO. 5

(for a more definite statement, or bill of particulars)

Defendants severally move the Court that plaintiff be ordered to furnish a more definite statement, or, in the alternative, a bill of particulars, as to the following matters stated in the complaint:

(A) State what is meant by the "Iowa plan," referred to in the first sentence of par. 21, and what that "plan" was.

(B) State whatis meant by the allegation in the third sentence of paragraph 21 that under the "Iowa plan, operators were constituted ostensibly as independent entrepreneurs," and the facts which it is alleged produced that result.

(C) State what is meant by the terms "favorably situated service stations" and "favorably situated retail outlets," as alleged in the third sentence of paragraph 17 and the first sentence of paragraph 25 respectively, and the facts which differentiate a "favorably situated" station or outlet from one not so situated.

(D) State what is meant by "controlled" in the first sentence of paragraph 25, and the facts upon which the pleader bases this conclusion.

(E) State what is meant by and what in fact comprises a "substantial portion" of all favorably situated retail outlets, as alleged in the first sentence of paragraph 25, and the facts upon which the pleader bases this conclusion.

(F) State what is meant by "permitted to offer and sell at retail" in the second sentence of paragraph 25 and the facts upon which the pleader bases this conclusion.

(G) State what is meant by "controlled" in the first [fol. 104] sentence of paragraph 26, and the facts upon which the pleader bases this conclusion.

(H) State what is meant by "and other relationships" and what in fact is comprised by this allegation in the second sentence of paragraph 26 (Definite statement or particulars as to this is sought only in the event the motion to strike this language is denied.)

(I) State what is meant by "permitted to purchase" in the second sentence of paragraph 26, and the facts upon which the pleader bases this conclusion.

(J) State what is meant by and what in fact comprises a "substantial portion" of all of the retail outlets, as alleged in the second sentence of paragraph 26, and the facts upon which the pleader bases this conclusion.

(K) State how and in what manner "said written contracts and oral agreements are in unreasonable restraint of, and substantially lessen competition" as alleged in paragraph 27, and the facts upon which the pleader bases this conclusion.

(L) Set forth in full the contents of the form of "Dealer Agreement" which is referred to in paragraph 28 and which paragraph 27 alleges was executed and entered into in violation of the Sherman and Clayton Acts.

(M) Set forth in full the contents of the form of "Dealer Agreement TBA" which is referred to in paragraph 29 and which paragraph 27 alleges was executed and entered into in violation of the Sherman and Clayton Acts.

(N) Set forth in full the contents of the form of "Distributor Agreement" which is referred to in paragraph 29 and which paragraph 27 alleges was executed and entered into in violation of the Sherman and Clayton Acts.

[fol. 105] (O) Set forth in full the contents of the form of "Petroleum Products and Equipment Agreement" which is referred to in paragraph 30 and which paragraph 27 alleges was executed and entered into in violation of the Sherman and Clayton Acts.

(P) Set forth in full the contents of the form of "Sub-lease" which is referred to in paragraph 31 and which paragraph 27 alleges was executed and entered into in violation of the Sherman and Clayton Acts.

(Q) State the names of the Operators with whom the "oral agreements" referred to in paragraph 32 were made and the dates of such agreements, or other specific facts with reference thereto which will enable defendants to identify the particular agreements which paragraph 27 alleges were entered into in violation of the Sherman and Clayton Acts.

(R) State what is meant by and what in fact comprises the "substantial portion" of the retail outlets referred to in sub-paragraphs (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) of paragraph 34, and the facts upon which the pleader bases these conclusions.

(S) State how and in what manner the "contracts" referred to in paragraph 34 have had the effect of "restraining and substantially lessening competition in the interstate trade and commerce in petroleum products and automotive accessories," and the facts upon which the pleader bases this conclusion.

(T) State the names of the "manufacturers and producers of petroleum products and automotive accessories" who, it is alleged in paragraph 26, "are prepared to and have attempted to sell" their products to retail outlets "acquired and controlled by said defendants within the Western area," and the time or times when such attempt or attempts were made.

[fol. 106] This motion is made under Rule 12 (e) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure on the grounds that the matters hereinbefore stated are not alleged with sufficient definiteness or particularity to enable defendants properly to prepare their responsive pleading or to prepare for trial, and that by reason of uncertainty with respect to plaintiff's allegation of such matters defendants are unable to admit or deny the same or formulate or state their defenses thereto.

This motion is supported by Points and Authorities, annexed hereto.

[fol. 107] MOTION NO. 6

(for inspection)

Defendants severally move the Court for an order requiring plaintiff to produce and to permit defendants to inspect and to copy each of the following documents:

(A) The "Dealer Agreement" form of contract which is referred to in paragraph 28 of the complaint and which paragraph 27 of the complaint alleges was executed and entered into in violation of the Sherman and Clayton Acts;

(B) The "Dealer Agreement TBA" form of contract which is referred to in paragraph 29 of the complaint and which paragraph 27 of the complaint alleges was executed and entered into in violation of the Sherman and Clayton Acts;

(C) The "Distributor Agreement" form of contract which is referred to in paragraph 29 of the complaint and which paragraph 27 of the complaint alleges was executed and entered into in violation of the Sherman and Clayton Acts;

(D) The "Petroleum Products and Equipment Agreement" form of contract which is referred to in paragraph 30 of the complaint and which paragraph 27 of the complaint alleges was executed and entered into in violation of the Sherman and Clayton Acts;

(E) The "Sublease" form which is referred to in paragraph 31 of the complaint and which paragraph 27 of the complaint alleges was executed and entered into in violation of the Sherman and Clayton Acts;

This motion is made under Rule 34 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure on the grounds that plaintiff has the possession or custody of each of the foregoing documents and that each contains evidence relevant and material to [fol. 108] the matters involved in this action, and that defendants cannot determine from the complaint herein which of the several forms of contracts and subleases which may have been used heretofore by defendants are charged to be in violation of the anti-trust Acts, and that until defendants are informed as to the contents of the contracts and subleases which are referred to in the complaint and alleged to be unlawful defendants are unable to determine the nature of the charges of unlawful conduct made against them or to state or formulate their responsive pleading or defenses with respect thereto.

This motion is supported by Affidavit C and by Points and Authorities, annexed hereto.

[fol. 109]

Affidavits "A," "B" and "C"

[fol. 110] AFFIDAVIT "A"

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of California,
County of Los Angeles. ss.

JOHN M. HALL, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

That he is a member of the bar of this Honorable Court and one of the attorneys of record for defendants herein;

That on or about September 30, 1940 plaintiff herein caused to be filed in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia a civil action, No. 8524, entitled "United States of America, Plaintiff, v. American Petroleum Institute, et al, Defendants," wherein and whereby plaintiff herein sought injunctive and other relief against numerous defendants, including defendants herein, Standard Oil Company of California and Standard Stations, Inc., under the Sherman Act and the Clayton Act; that a true copy of the complaint in said action No. 8524 is annexed hereto and made a part hereof;

That as will more fully appear by a comparison of said complaint in said action No. 8524 and the complaint in the action at bar, the charges made and the relief sought by the complaint in the action at bar are substantially the same as certain of the charges made and certain of the relief sought against defendants herein by the complaint in said action No. 8524;

That affiant is informed and verily believes and upon such ground avers that said complaint in said action No. 8524 has never been amended, that said action No. 8524 has never been dismissed as to defendants in the action at bar, and that said action No. 8524 is now pending and undetermined.

John M. Hall.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 2nd day of April, 1947. Harriet S. Elder, Notary Public in and for the County of Los Angeles, State of California. My Commission Expires June 16, 1949.

[fol. 111] Civil Action No. 8524

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff,

v.

AMERICAN PETROLEUM INSTITUTE, ET AL, Defendants

COMPLAINT

Mac Asbill, W. B. Watson Snyder, Special Assistants to the Attorney General. H. Douglas Weaver, Special Attorney.

Robert H. Jackson, Attorney General. Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General. Edward M. Curran, United States Attorney.

Filed September 30, 1940.

[fol. 112] IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Civil Action No. 8524

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff

v.

AMERICAN PETROLEUM INSTITUTE; THE ATLANTIC REFINING COMPANY; Barnsdall Oil Company; Cities Service Company; Consolidated Oil Corporation; Continental Oil Company; Gulf Oil Corporation; Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation; The Ohio Oil Company; Phillips Petroleum Company; The Pure Oil Company; Shell Union Oil Corporation; Skelly Oil Company; Socony-Vacuum Oil Company, Incorporated; Standard Oil Company of California; Standard Oil Company (Indiana); Standard Oil Company (Kentucky); Standard Oil Company (New Jersey); The Standard Oil Company (Ohio); Sun Oil Company; The Texas Corporation; Tide Water Associated Oil Company; Union Oil Company of California; Abbott Gasoline Company; Ajax Pipe Line Corporation; Alco Royalty Corporation; Allen Petroleum Corporation; American Bituminus Company; American Mineral Spirits Company; The American Oil Company; The American Oil Company (Md.); Arkana Transit Corporation; Arkansas Fuel Oil Company; Arkansas Natural Gas Corp.; Arkansas Pipeline Corp.; Asiatic Petroleum Corporation; Associated Oil Company of Wyoming; Atlantic Oil Shipping Company; Atlantic Petroleum Purchasing Corporation; Atlantic Pipe Line Company; Atlas Gas & Oil Co., Inc.; Atlas Supply Company; Baker Oil Company; Bareco Oil Company; Barnsdall Pipe Line Company; Barnsdall Products Corporation; Baron-Huot Oil Company; Bartron Petroleum Corporation; Beacon Sun Company; Bell General Transit Corporation; Berea Engineering Company; Big Lake Oil Company; The Boston-Wyoming Oil Company; Bradford Transit Company; The Buck Creek Oil Company; Buffalo Pipe Line Corporation; California Coast Oil Company; The California Company; California Petroleum Corporation (Utah); California Pipe Line Company; California Standard Oil Company, Ltd.; Cape Fear [fol. 113] Terminal Company; The Carter Oil Company; Central Oil Company, Inc.; Central States Pipe Line Company; Certified Auto Service, Inc.; Chappell Oil Company; Cherokee Oil Company, Inc.; Cities Service Oil Company (Del.); Cities Service Oil Company (Pa.); Claremont Oil Company; Colonial Beacon Oil Company; Colonial Oil Company; Colonial Oil Company, Inc.; Col-Tex Refining Company; Commercial Oil Company; Commonwealth Petroleum Holding Company; Conewango Refining Company; Conoco Oil Company (Minn.); The Consolidated Gasoline Company; Consolidated Oil Company of Houston, Texas; Consolidated Pipe Line Company; Continental Mexican Petroleum

Company; Continental Oil Company (Texas); Continental Pipe Line Company; Continental Steamship Company; Cosden Pipe Line Company; Crew-Levick Company; Crowley Oil and Mineral Company; Crude Oil Marketing and Trading Company; Crude Oil Pipe Line Company; Crude Oil Terminal Company; Davis Gasoline Company; Defiance Hi-Speed Oil Company; Delaware Consolidated Oil Company; Detroit Southern Pipe Line Company; Diamond Oil Company; Diamond Osborne Oil Company; Downtown Auto Parking Company; Doyle Gasoline & Oil Co., Inc.; Eagleroc Oil Company; Eastern Terminal Corporation; East Texas Refining Company; Empire Gas & Fuel Company; Empire Pipeline Company; Enalpac Oil and Gas Company; Esso, Incorporated; Ethyl Gasoline Corporation; Exchange Oil Company; Finance Company of the Carolinas, Inc.; Fleet-Wing Corporation; Fordsville Gathering Line, Inc.; Foreign Tankship Corporation; Fort Collins Producing Corporation; Frank Harris Floyd, Inc.; Franklin Railway Oil Corporation; Frontenac Pipe Line Company; Fuel Oil Corporation; General Petroleum Company, Inc.; General Petroleum Corporation of California; General Petroleum Corporation of Nevada; General Pipeline Company of California; General Terminal Company; Genessee-Diamond Oil Company; Gilbert & Barker Manufacturing Company; Gilco, Inc.; Gilmore Development Company; Gilmore Oil Company; Gilmore-Snyder Company; Goodyear-Wende Oil Corporation; Great Lakes Pipe Line Company; Great Lakes Transport Corporation; Great Southern Oil Company; Group No. 1 Oil Corporation; Group No. 2 Oil Corporation; Gulf Refining [fol. 114] Company; Gulf Research & Development Company; Hardrock Oil Company; Hickok Oil Corporation, Hickok Oil Corporation (Michigan); Hickok Pipe Line Company; The Hickok Producing and Development Company; Highland Oil Corporation; Hi-Speed Oil Corporation; Hi-Speed Tire & Accessory Company; Hope Construction and Refining Company; Hope Natural Gas Company; Hope Producing Company; Hudson Oil Company; Hughes Oil Company; Humble Oil & Refining Company; Humble Pipe Line Company; Huntington Beach Company; Hygrade Petroleum Corporation; The Illinois Pipe Line Company; Independent Natural Gas Company; Independent Oil Company, Inc. of Pennsylvania; Indian

Refining Company; Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Company; International Pipe Line Company; International Refining Company; Jacox Oil Corporation; Johnson Oil Company; Kalamazoo Diamond Oil Company; Kaw Pipe Line Company; Kay & Kiowa Oil Company; Kesbec, Inc.; Kettleman & Inglewood Corporation; Kettleman North Dome Association; Kettleman Oil Corporation, Ltd.; Keystone Pipe Line Company; K. & Q. Service Stations, Inc.; Lake View Oil Company; Lansing Oil Company; Laramie Oil Company; Latonia Refining Corporation; Lima Hi-Speed Company; Lisbon Gasoline Company, Inc.; Lord Baltimore Filling Stations, Inc.; Los Angeles Midway Pipe Line Company; Los Angeles Oil Company; Magnolia Petroleum Company; Magnolia Pipe Line Company; Magnolia Pipe Line Company of Illinois; Main Oil Company; Martin & Schwartz, Inc.; Merrico Royalties Company; Merritt Oil Corporation; Mexican Petroleum Corporation; Mexican Petroleum Corporation of Georgia; Michigan-Toledo Pipe Line Company; Middlesex Pipe Line Company; Mid-South Oil Company; Midwest Oil Company; Mission Corporation; Moreland Oil Corporation of Delaware; Motor Tankship Corporation; Mountain Producers Corporation; Mountain State Gas Company; Mount Clemens Oil Company; Murphy Oil Company; Murphy-Miles Oil Company; New Mexico Pipe Line Company; North West Oil Company; The Ohio Independent Oil Company; The Ohio Producing and Refining Company; Ohio River Pipe Line Company; Oklahoma Pipe Line Company; Olympic Oil Corporation; Orange State Oil Company; Owensboro-Ashland Company; Pacific Western Oil Corporation; Pan [fol. 115] American Petroleum Company; Pan American Petroleum Corporation; Pan American Petroleum & Transport Company; Pan American Pipe Line Company; Pan American Production Company; Pan American Refining Corporation; Pan American Southern Corporation; Pantheon Oil Company; Paramount-Pingree Oil Company; Paso-Tex Pipe Line Company; Peconic Oil Corporation; Peninsula Oil Company, Peninsula Oil & Refining Company; Pennsylvania Oil Marketers, Inc.; Penola, Inc.; Petroleum Advisors, Inc.; Petroleum Corporation of America; Petroleum Heat & Power Company; Petroleum Terminals, Inc.; Petroleum Transit Corporation; Phillips Pipe Line Company; Pioneer Midway Oil Company, Consolidated; Pittsburgh Oil & Gas Company; The Pocahontas Oil Corporation; Pontiac Oil & Gas Company; Producers Oil Corporation; Pure Oil Company of the Carolinas, Inc.; Pure Oil Company of Tennessee; Pure Oil Distributing Company; Pure Oil Pipe Line Company (Pennsylvania); Pure Oil Products Company; Pure Transportation Company; Puritan Petroleum Corporation; Puritan Stations, Inc.; Reagan County Purchasing Company, Inc.; Red "C" Oil Company; Red Indian Oil Company; Refiners Oil Corporation; Repollo Oil Company; Reserve Gas Company; Reservoir Hill Gasoline Company; Reward Oil Company; Richardson Lubricating Company; Richfield Oil Company; Richfield Oil Corporation; Richfield Oil Corporation of New York; Richfield Realty Corporation; Ridge Oil Corporation; Rio Grande Oil Company, Inc.; Rock River Petroleum Company; Rocky Mountain Pipe Line Company; Sabine Transportation Company, Inc.; Saxet Heights Pipe Line Company; Seaboard Oil Company of Delaware; Seaboard Oil Company, Inc.; Seaside Oil Company; Shaw Bros. Oil Company; Shell American Petroleum Company; Shell Oil Company, Inc.; Shell Pipe Line Corporation; Sherrill Oil Company; Sherrill Terminal Company; Sherwood Brothers, Incorporated; Signal Hill Gasoline Company; Simrall Corporation; Sinclair Navigation Company; Sinclair Prairie Oil Company; Sinclair Prairie Oil Company of Louisiana, Inc.; Sinclair Prairie Oil Marketing Company; Sinclair Refining Company; Sinclair Wyoming Oil Company; Skelco Products Company; Skelly Refining Company, Inc.; Sobol Bros. Service Stations, Inc.; Socony-Vacuum Oil Corporation; Sohio Corporation; Sohio Pipe Line Company; Sohio Producing Company; Sommers Home Oil Company; Southeastern Pipe Line Com-

[fol. 116] pany; Southern Phillips Corporation; South Penn Oil Company; Southwestern Wharf Company; Spanish Peak Oil Company; Stanavo Specifications Board, Inc.; Standard Gas Company; Standard Oil Company of Louisiana; Standard Oil Company of Nebraska; Standard Oil Company of New Jersey; Standard Oil Company of New York; Standard Oil Company of Pennsylvania; Standard Oil Company of Texas; Standard Oil Company (Washington); Standard Oil Export Corporation; The Standard Shale Products Company; Standard Stations, Inc.; Standish Pipe Line Company; Stanolind Oil & Gas Company; Stanolind Oil Purchasing Company; Stanolind Pipe Line Company; Sterling Oil & Development Company; Summerfield Oil Company; The Sun Oil Line Company; Sun Oil Line Company of Michigan; Sun Pipe Line Company; Sun Pipe Line, Inc.; Susquehanna Pipe Line Company; Superior Pacific Oil Co, Inc.; Sweetwater Oil Company; Sylvestre Oil Company, Inc.; Sylvestre Oil Terminal Company, Inc.; Sylvestre Utilities Company, Inc.; Tabb's Bay Oil Company; The Texas Company (California); The Texas Company (Delaware); The Texas-Empire Pipe Line Company; The Texas-Empire Pipe Line Company of Texas; Texas-New Mexico Pipe Line Company; The Texas Pipe Line Company; The Texas Pipe Line Company of Oklahoma; Texas Production Company of Nebraska; Texon Oil & Land Company; Texon Oil & Land Company of Texas; Theisen-Clemens Company; Theisen-Clemens Investing Company; Tidal Pipe Line Company; The Tide-Water Pipe Company, Limited; Toledo Northern Pipe Line Company; Transit & Storage Company; Treasure State Pipe Line Company; Tri-Lakes Corporation; Tuscarora Oil Company, Ltd.; Union Oil Company of Nevada; Union Steamship Company; The United Oil Company; United States Pipe Line Company; Utah Oil Refining Company; Vacuum Oil Company (Delaware); Valley Pipe Line Company; Wabash Pipe Line Company; Wadhams Oil Company; Waggoner Service Stations, Inc.; Warner-Quinlan Company of Texas; Washington Refining Company; West Coast Oil Company; Westcott Oil Company; Western Gulf Oil Company; West-Harden Oil Company, Inc.; White Eagle Pipe Line Company, Inc.; White Star Northern Oil Company; Wilson Oil Corporation; Woco-Pep Company of Tuscaloosa; Wofford Oil Company (Alabama); Wofford Oil Company of Georgia; and Yount-Lee Pipe Line Company, Defendants.

[fol. 117] COMPLAINT

The United States of America, by Edward M. Curran, its attorney for the District of Columbia, acting under the direction of the Attorney General, brings this complaint against the above-named defendants and upon information and belief alleges:

I

Description of Defendants

1. The defendant American Petroleum Institute, hereinafter referred to as the "Institute", is a membership corporation organized under the laws of the District of Columbia and maintains an office at Room 930 in the Munsey Building, 1329 E Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

2. The following defendants, hereinafter referred to as the "Majors," are duly organized and existing under the laws of the respective States and have their principal places of business as indicated in the following table:

Name of corporation	Abbreviated name	State of incorporation	Location of principal place of business
The Atlantic Refining Company	Atlantic	Pennsylvania	Philadelphia, Pa.
Barnsdall Oil Company	Barnsdall	Delaware	Tulsa, Okla.
Cities Service Company	Cities Service	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Consolidated Oil Corporation	Consolidated	New York	New York, N. Y.
Continental Oil Company	Continental	Delaware	Ponca City, Okla.
Gulf Oil Corporation	Gulf	Pennsylvania	Pittsburgh, Pa.
Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation.	Mid-Continent	Delaware	Tulsa, Okla.
The Ohio Oil Company	Ohio	Ohio	Findlay, Ohio.
Phillips Petroleum Company	Phillips	Delaware	Bartlesville, Okla.
The Pure Oil Company	Pure	Ohio	Chicago, Ill.
Shell Union Oil Corporation	Shell	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Skelly Oil Company	Skelly	Delaware	Tulsa, Okla.
Socony-Vacuum Oil Company, Incorporated.	Socony	New York	New York, N. Y.
Standard Oil Company of California.	Socal	Delaware	San Francisco, Calif.
[fol. 118]
Standard Oil Company (Indiana)	Stanolind	Indiana	Chicago, Ill.
Standard Oil Company (Kentucky)	Soky	Kentucky	Louisville, Ky.
Standard Oil Company (New Jersey).	Esso	New Jersey	New York, N. Y.
The Standard Oil Company (Ohio)	Sohio	Ohio	Cleveland, Ohio.
Sun Oil Company	Sun	New Jersey	Philadelphia, Pa.
The Texas Corporation	Texas	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Tide Water Associated Oil Company.	Tide Water	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Union Oil Company of California	Union	California	Los Angeles, Calif.

3. The following defendants, subsidiaries and affiliates of defendant majors, hereinafter referred to as "Secondaries", are duly organized and existing under the laws of the respective States, have their principal places of business at and are affiliated with the defendant majors as indicated in the following table:

Name of corporation	Affiliation	State of incorporation	Location of principal place of business
Abbott Gasoline Company	Pure	Michigan	Ann Arbor, Mich.
Ajax Pipe Line Corporation	Sohio Pure Esso	Delaware	Tulsa, Okla.
Alco Royalty Corporation	Phillips	Delaware	Bartlesville, Okla.
Allen Petroleum Corporation	Pure	Delaware	Seaford, Del.
American Bitumuls Company	Socal	Delaware	San Francisco, Calif.
American Mineral Spirits Company	Pure	Illinois	Chicago, Ill.
The American Oil Company	Pure	Ohio	Hattiesburg, Miss.
The American Oil Company (Md.)	Stanolind	Maryland	Baltimore, Md.
Arkana Transit Corporation	Ohio Cities Service	Delaware	Shreveport, La.
Arkansas Fuel Oil Company	Cities Service	West Virginia	Shreveport, La.
Arkansas Natural Gas Corp.	Cities Service	Delaware	Shreveport, La.
Arkansas Pipeline Corp.	Cities Service	Delaware	Shreveport, La.
Asiatic Petroleum Corporation	Shell	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Associated Oil Company of Wyoming.	Tide Water	Wyoming	San Francisco, Calif.
Atlantic Oil Shipping Company	Atlantic	Delaware	Philadelphia, Pa.
Atlantic Petroleum Purchasing Corporation.	Atlantic	Maryland	Philadelphia, Pa.
Atlantic Pipe Line Company	Atlantic	Maine	Philadelphia, Pa.
Atlas Gas & Oil Co., Inc.	Mid-Continent	Minnesota	St. Paul, Minn.
Atlas Supply Company	Stanolind Sohio Esso	Delaware	Newark, N. J.
Baker Oil Company	Mid-Continent	Arkansas	North Little Rock, Ark.
Bareco Oil Company	Barnsdall	Delaware	Tulsa, Okla.

[fol. 119]

Barnsdall Pipe Line Company	Barnsdall	Delaware	Tulsa, Okla.
Barnsdall Products Corporation	Barnsdall	Delaware	Tulsa, Okla.
Baron-Huot Oil Company	Mid-Continent	Illinois	Kankakee, Ill.
Bartron Petroleum Corporation	Pure	New Jersey	Tennent, N. J.
Beacon Sun Company	Sun Esso	Delaware	Philadelphia, Pa.
Bell General Transit Corporation	Pure	Texas	Tulsa, Okla.
Berea Engineering Company	Sohio	Ohio	Cleveland, Ohio.
Big Lake Oil Company	Continental	Delaware	Pittsburgh, Pa.
The Boston-Wyoming Oil Company.	Continental	Arizona	Ponca City, Okla.
Bradford Transit Company	Tide Water	Pennsylvania	Bradford, Pa.
The Buck Creek Oil Company	Continental	Wyoming	Ponca City, Okla.
Buffalo Pipe Line Corporation	Atlantic	New York	Big Flats, N. Y.
California Coast Oil Company	Tide Water Union	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
The California Company	Socal	California	San Francisco, Calif.
California Petroleum Corporation (Utah).	Texas	Utah	Calpet, Wyo.
California Pipe Line Company	Socal	Nevada	San Francisco, Calif.
California Standard Oil Company, (Ltd.).	Socal	California	San Francisco, Calif.
Cape Fear Terminal Company	Pure Esso	No. Carolina	Wilmington, N. C.
The Carter Oil Company	Esso	West Virginia	Tulsa, Okla.
Central Oil Company, Inc.	Pure	Georgia	Augusta, Ga.
Central States Pipe Line Company	Texas	Illinois	Tulsa, Okla.
Certified Auto Service, Inc.	Tide Water	Nevada	San Francisco, Calif.
Chappell Oil Company	Continental	Wyoming	Ponca City, Okla.
Cherokee Oil Company, Inc.	Pure	Tennessee	Knoxville, Tenn.

Name of corporation	Affiliation	State of incorporation	Location of principal place of business
Cities Service Oil Company (Del.)	Cities Service	Delaware	Bartlesville, Okla.
Cities Service Oil Company (Pa.)	Cities Service	Pennsylvania	New York, N. Y.
Claremont Oil Company	Union	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
Colonial Beacon Oil Company	Esso	Massachusetts	Boston, Mass.
Colonial Oil Company	Pure	Georgia	Savannah, Ga.
Colonial Oil Company, Inc.	Pure	Virginia	Norfolk, Va.
Col-Tex Refining Company	Socal	Delaware	Oklahoma City, Okla.
Commercial Oil Company	Sohio	Ohio	Cleveland, Ohio.
Commonwealth Petroleum Holding Company.	Consolidated	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Conewango Refining Company	Consolidated	Pennsylvania	Warren, Pa.
Conoco Oil Company (Minn.)	Continental	Minnesota	Ponca City, Okla.
The Consolidated Gasoline Company.	Pure	Ohio	Toledo, Ohio.
Consolidated Oil Company of Houston, Texas.	Cities Service	Texas	Houston, Tex.
Consolidated Pipe Line Company	Consolidated	Delaware	Independence, Kan.
Continental Mexican Petroleum Company.	Socony	Delaware	Los Angeles, Calif.
Continental Oil Company (Texas)	Continental	Texas	Houston, Tex.
Continental Pipe Line Company	Continental	Delaware	Ponca City, Okla.
Continental Steamship Company	Continental	Delaware	Baltimore, Md.
Cosden Pipe Line Company	Mid-Continent	Oklahoma	Tulsa, Okla.
Crew-Levick Company	Cities Service	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Crowley Oil and Mineral Company	Stanolind	Louisiana	Tulsa, Okla.
Crude Oil Marketing and Trading Company.	Continental	Texas	San Antonio, Tex.
Crude Oil Pipe Line Company	Continental	Texas	San Antonio, Tex.
Crude Oil Terminal Company	Continental	Texas	Corpus Christi, Tex.

[fol. 120]

Davis Gasoline Company	Pure	Michigan	Toledo, Ohio.
Defiance Hi-Speed Oil Company	Pure	Ohio	Defiance, Ohio.
Delaware Consolidated Oil Company.	Pure	Delaware	Tulsa, Okla.
Detroit Southern Pipe Line Company.	Pure Gulf Sun	Michigan	Chicago, Ill.
Diamond Oil Company	Mid-Continent	Wisconsin	Milwaukee, Wis.
Diamond Osborne Oil Company	Mid-Continent	Illinois	Rockford, Ill.
Downtown Auto Parking Company	Pure	Illinois	Chicago, Ill.
Doyle Gasoline & Oil Co., Inc.	Gulf	New York	Rochester, N. Y.
Eagleroc Oil Company	Sohio	Ohio	Youngstown, Ohio.
Eastern Terminal Corporation	Shell	Massachusetts	New York, N. Y.
East Texas Refining Company	Skelly	Texas	Dallas, Tex.
Empire Gas & Fuel Company	Cities Service	Delaware	Jersey City, N. J.
Empire Pipeline Company	Cities Service	Delaware	Bartlesville, Okla.
Enalpac Oil and Gas Company	Ohio	Wyoming	Casper, Wyo.
Esso, Incorporated	Esso	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Ethyl Gasoline Corporation	Esso	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Exchange Oil Company	Consolidated	Maine	Tulsa, Okla.
Finance Company of the Carolinas, Inc.	Pure	No. Carolina	Charlotte, N. C.
Fleet-Wing Corporation	Sohio	Ohio	Cleveland, Ohio.
Fordsville Gathering Line, Inc.	Sohio	Indiana	Owensboro, Ky.
Foreign Tankship Corporation	Socal	Panama	San Francisco, Calif.
Fort Collins Producing Corporation	Continental	Colorado	Ponca City, Okla.
Frank Harris Floyd, Inc.	Socony	Michigan	Detroit, Mich.
Franklin Railway Oil Corporation	Socony	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Frontenac Pipe Line Company	Texas	Texas	Tyler, Texas.

Name of corporation	Affiliation	State of incorporation	Location of principal place of business
Fuel Oil Corporation	Sohio Pure	Ohio	Detroit, Mich.
General Petroleum Company, Inc.	Socony	New York	New York, N. Y.
General Petroleum Corporation of California.	Socony	Delaware	Los Angeles, Calif.
General Petroleum Corporation of Nevada.	Socony	Nevada	Los Angeles, Calif.
General Pipeline Company of California.	Socony	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
General Terminal Company	Socony	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
Genessee-Diamond Oil Company	Mid-Continent	Michigan	Flint, Mich.
Gilbert & Barker Manufacturing Company.	Esso	Massachusetts	Springfield, Mass.
Gilco, Inc.	Socony	California	Long Beach, Calif.
Gilmore Development Company	Socony	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
Gilmore Oil Company	Socony	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
Gilmore-Snyder Company	Socony	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
Goodyear-Wende Oil Corporation	Texas	New York	Buffalo, N. Y.
Great Lakes Pipe Line Company	Texas Phillips Mid-Continent Consolidated Pure Skelly Continental Cities Service	Delaware	Kansas City, Mo.
Great Lakes Transport Corporation	Pure Sohio	Delaware	Detroit, Mich.
Great Southern Oil Company	Tide Water	Kansas	Kansas City, Kans.
Group No. 1 Oil Corporation	Continental	Delaware	Fort Worth, Tex.

[fol. 121]

Group No. 2 Oil Corporation	Continental	Delaware	Fort Worth, Tex.
Gulf Refining Company	Gulf	Delaware	Pittsburgh, Pa.
Gulf Research & Development Company.	Gulf	Delaware	Pittsburgh, Pa.
Hardrock Oil Company	Stanolind	Montana	Great Falls, Mont.
Hickok Oil Corporation	Pure	Ohio	Toledo, Ohio.
Hickok Oil Corporation (Michigan)	Pure	Michigan	Toledo, Ohio.
Hickok Pipe Line Company	Pure	Ohio	Toledo, Ohio.
The Hickok Producing and Development Company.	Pure	Ohio	Toledo, Ohio.
Highland Oil Corporation	Pure	Michigan	Detroit, Mich.
Hi-Speed Oil Corporation	Pure	Michigan	Imlay City, Mich.
Hi-Speed Tire & Accessory Company.	Pure	Ohio	Toledo, Ohio.
Hope Construction and Refining Company.	Esso	Delaware	Pittsburgh, Pa.
Hope Natural Gas Company	Esso	West Virginia	Pittsburgh, Pa.
Hope Producing Company	Esso	Delaware	Monroe, La.
Hudson Oil Company	Stanolind	Wyoming	Tulsa, Okla.
Hughes Oil Company	Consolidated	Delaware	Chicago, Ill.
Humble Oil & Refining Company	Esso	Texas	Houston, Tex.
Humble Pipe Line Company	Esso	Texas	Houston, Tex.
Huntington Beach Company	Socal	California	San Francisco, Calif.
Hy-grade Petroleum Corporation	Gulf	New York	New York, N. Y.
The Illinois Pipe Line Company	Ohio	Ohio	Findlay, Ohio.
Independent Natural Gas Company.	Phillips	Delaware	Bartlesville, Okla.

Name of corporation	Affiliation	State of incorporation	Location of principal place of business
Independent Oil Company, Inc. of Pennsylvania.	Socony	Delaware	Altoona, Pa.
Indian Refining Company	Texas	Maine	Lawrenceville, Ill.
Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Company.	Cities Service	New Jersey	Bartlesville, Okla.
International Pipe Line Company	Texas	Montana	Sunburst, Mont.
International Refining Company	Texas	Montana	Sunburst, Mont.
Jacox Oil Corporation	Pure	Michigan	Bellville, Mich.
Johnson Oil Company	Pure	Michigan	Bay City, Mich.
Kalamazoo-Diamond Oil Company	Mid-Continent	Michigan	Kalamazoo, Mich.
Kaw Pipe Line Company	Texas Cities Service Phillips	Delaware	Tulsa, Okla.
Kay & Kiowa Oil Company	Mid-Continent	Oklahoma	Tulsa, Okla.
Kesbec, Inc.	Esso	New York	New York, N. Y.
Kettleman & Inglewood Corporation.	Socal	Nevada	San Francisco, Calif.
Kettleman North Dome Association	Socony Continental Texas Tidewater Socal Union	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
Kettleman Oil Corporation, Ltd.	Socal	Delaware	San Francisco, Calif.
Keystone Pipe Line Company	Atlantic	Pennsylvania	Philadelphia, Pa.
K. & Q. Service Stations, Inc.	Socony	New York	New York, N. Y.
Lake View Oil Company	Union	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
Lansing Oil Company	Mid-Continent	Michigan	Lansing, Mich.
Laramie Oil Company	Stanolind	Wyoming	Laramie, Wyo.
Latonia Refining Corporation	Sohio	Ohio	Cleveland, Ohio.
Lima Hi-Speed Company	Pure	Ohio	Lima, Ohio.
Lisbon Gasoline Company, Inc.	Cities Service	Arkansas	Shreveport, La.
[fol. 122]
Lord Baltimore Filling Stations, Inc.	Stanolind	Maryland	New York, N. Y.
Los Angeles Midway Pipe Line Company.	Consolidated Cities Service	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
Los Angeles Oil Company	Union	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
Magnolia Petroleum Company	Socony	Texas	Dallas, Tex.
Magnolia Pipe Line Company	Socony	Texas	Dallas, Tex.
Magnolia Pipe Line Company of Illinois.	Socony	Illinois	Dallas, Tex.
Main Oil Company	Pure	Michigan	Holland, Mich.
Martin & Schwartz, Inc.	Sun Socony	New York	Buffalo, N. Y.
Merrico Royalties Company	Continental	Wyoming	Ponca City, Okla.
Merritt Oil Corporation	Continental	Maine	Ponca City, Okla.
Mexican Petroleum Corporation	Stanolind	Maine	New York, N. Y.
Mexican Petroleum Corporation of Georgia.	Stanolind	Georgia	New York, N. Y.
Michigan-Toledo Pipe Line Company.	Sohio	Delaware	Mt. Pleasant, Mich.
Middlesex Pipe Line Company	Sun	New Jersey	Philadelphia, Pa.
Mid-South Oil Company	Pure	Ohio	Memphis, Tenn.
Midwest Oil Company	Stanolind	Arizona	Denver, Colo.
Mission Corporation	Tide Water Skelly	Nevada	Reno, Nev.
Moreland Oil Corporation of Delaware.	Socony	Delaware	Adrian, Mich.
Motor Tankship Corporation	Sun	Delaware	Philadelphia, Pa.
Mountain Producers Corporation	Stanolind	Delaware	Denver, Colo.
Mountain State Gas Company	Pure	West Virginia	Chicago, Ill.
Mount Clemens Oil Company	Pure	Michigan	Mount Clemens, Mich.

Name of corporation	Affiliation	State of incorporation	Location of principal place of business
Murphy Oil Company	Socal	California	San Francisco, Calif.
Murphy-Miles Oil Company	Stanolind	Illinois	Chicago, Ill.
New Mexico Pipe Line Company	Continental	New Mexico	Ponca City, Okla.
North West Oil Company	Stanolind	Illinois	Chicago, Ill.
The Ohio Independent Oil Company.	Sohio	Ohio	Springfield, Ohio.
The Ohio Producing and Refining Company.	Esso	Delaware	Cleveland, Ohio.
Ohio River Pipe Line Company	Sohio	Delaware	Ashland, Ky.
Oklahoma Pipe Line Company	Esso	Oklahoma	Tulsa, Okla.
Olympic Oil Corporation	Pure	Ohio	Cleveland, Ohio.
Orange State Oil Company	Cities Service	Florida	Miami, Fla.
Owensboro-Ashland Company	Sohio	Kentucky	Owensboro, Ky.
Pacific Western Oil Corporation	Tide Water Skelly	Delaware	Jersey City, N. J.
Pan American Petroleum Company	Cities Service Consolidated	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
Pan American Petroleum Corporation.	Stanolind	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Pan American Petroleum & Transport Company.	Stanolind	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Pan American Pipe Line Company	Stanolind	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Pan American Production Company.	Stanolind	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Pan American Refining Corporation.	Stanolind	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Pan American Southern Corporation.	Stanolind	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Pantheon Oil Company	Tide Water	California	San Francisco, Calif.
Paramount-Pingree Oil Company	Continental	Utah	Salt Lake City, Utah.
[fol. 123]
Paso-Tex Pipe Line Company	Socal	Delaware	San Francisco, Calif.
Peconic Oil Corporation	Pure	New York	Riverhead, N. Y.
Peninsular Oil Company	Sohio	Michigan	Detroit, Mich.
Peninsular Oil & Refining Company	Esso	Florida	Tampa, Fla.
Pennsylvania Oil Marketers, Inc.	Tide Water	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Penola, Inc.	Esso	Delaware	Pittsburgh, Pa.
Petroleum Advisors, Inc.	Cities Service	New Jersey	New York, N. Y.
Petroleum Corporation of America	Consolidated Continental Gulf Esso Mid-Continent Ohio Cities Service Socony Socal Stanolind Texas Tide Water	Delaware	Jersey City, N. J.
Petroleum Heat & Power Company.	Stanolind	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Petroleum Terminals, Inc.	Pure	Michigan	Detroit, Mich.
Petroleum Transit Corporation	Socony Pure Shell Cities Service Stanolind Atlantic Sohio Esso	Ohio	Detroit, Mich.
Phillips Pipe Line Company	Phillips	Delaware	Bartlesville, Okla.

Name of corporation	Affiliation	State of incorporation	Location of principa place of business
Pioneer Midway Oil Company, Consolidated.	Tide Water	California	San Francisco, Calif.
Pittsburgh Oil & Gas Company	Barnsdall	Delaware	Pittsburgh, Pa.
The Pocahontas Oil Corporation	Pure	Ohio	Cleveland, Ohio.
Pontiac Oil & Gas Company	Pure	Michigan	Pontiac, Mich.
Producers Oil Corporation	Pure	Michigan	Owosso, Mich.
Pure Oil Company of the Carolinas, Inc.	Pure	No. Carolina	Charlotte, N. C.
Pure Oil Company of Tennessee	Pure	Tennessee	Atlanta, Ga.
Pure Oil Distributing Company	Pure	Delaware	Beaumont, Tex.
Pure Oil Pipe Line Company (Pennsylvania).	Pure	Pennsylvania	Chicago, Ill.
Pure Oil Products Company	Pure	Ohio	Chicago, Ill.
Pure Transportation Company	Pure	Ohio	Chicago, Ill.
Puritan Petroleum Corporation	Pure	Pennsylvania	Shenandoah, Pa.
Puritan Stations, Inc.	Pure	Michigan	Detroit, Mich.
Reagan County Purchasing Company, Inc.	Continental	Delaware	Fort Worth, Tex.
Red "C" Oil Company	Atlantic	Maryland	Baltimore, Md.
Red Indian Oil Company	Sohio	Michigan	Detroit, Mich.
Refiners Oil Corporation	Soky	Kentucky	Louisville, Ky.
Repollo Oil Company	Consolidated	Wyoming	Tulsa, Okla.
Reserve Gas Company	Esso	West Virginia	Pittsburgh, Pa.
Reservoir Hill Gasoline Company	Cities Service Consolidated	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
Reward Oil Company	Tide Water	California	San Francisco, Calif.
Richardson Lubricating Company	Continental	Illinois	Quincy, Ill.
Richfield Oil Company	Cities Service Consolidated	California	Los Angeles, Calif.

[fol. 124]

Richfield Oil Corporation	Cities Service Consolidated	Delaware	Los Angeles, Calif.
Richfield Oil Corporation of New York.	Consolidated	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Richfield Realty Corporation	Cities Service Consolidated	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
Ridge Oil Corporation	Sohio	Ohio	Madison, Ohio.
Rio Grande Oil Company, Inc.	Cities Service Consolidated	Nevada	Los Angeles, Calif.
Rock River Petroleum Company	Ohio	Delaware	Findlay, Ohio.
Rocky Mountain Pipe Line Company.	Continental	Delaware	Denver, Colo.
Sabine Transportation Company, Inc.	Pure	Delaware	Port Arthur, Tex.
Saxet Heights Pipe Line Company	Continental	Texas	San Antonio, Tex.
Seaboard Oil Company of Delaware	Texas Tide Water	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Seaboard Oil Company, Inc.	Pure	Ohio	Jacksonville, Fla.
Seaside Oil Company	Tide Water	California	Santa Barbara, Calif.
Shaw Bros. Oil Company	Pure	Florida	Miami, Fla.
Shell American Petroleum Company.	Shell	Delaware	Kokomo, Ind.
Shell Oil Company, Inc.	Shell	Virginia	New York, N. Y.
Shell Pipe Line Corporation	Shell	Maryland	St. Louis, Mo.
Sherrill Oil Company	Pure	Ohio	Pensacola, Fla.
Sherrill Terminal Company	Pure	Florida	Pensacola, Fla.
Sherwood Brothers, Incorporated	Consolidated	Maryland	Baltimore, Md.
Signal Hill Gasoline Company	Cities Service Consolidated	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
Simsall Corporation	Sohio	Delaware	Mt. Pleasant, Mich.
Sinclair Navigation Company	Consolidated	Delaware	New York, N. Y.

Name of corporation	Affiliation	State of incorporation	Location of principal place of business
Sinclair Prairie Oil Company	Consolidated	Maine	Tulsa, Okla.
Sinclair Prairie Oil Company of Louisiana, Inc.	Consolidated	Louisiana	Tulsa, Okla.
Sinclair Prairie Oil Marketing Company.	Consolidated	Delaware	Independence, Kans.
Sinclair Refining Company	Consolidated	Maine	New York, N. Y.
Sinclair Wyoming Oil Company	Consolidated	Delaware	Tulsa, Okla.
Skelco Products Company	Skelly	Missouri	Kansas City, Mo.
Skelly Refining Company, Inc.	Skelly	Texas	Bay City, Tex.
Sobol Bros. Service Stations, Inc.	Socony	New York	New York, N. Y.
Socony-Vacuum Oil Corporation	Socony	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Sohio Corporation	Sohio	Delaware	Cleveland, Ohio.
Sohio Pipe Line Company	Sohio	Delaware	Cleveland, Ohio.
Sohio Producing Company	Sohio	Ohio	Cleveland, Ohio.
Sommers Home Oil Company	Continental	Colorado	Denver, Colo.
Southeastern Pipe Line Company	Gulf Pure	Delaware	Atlanta, Ga.
Southern Phillips Corporation	Phillips	Delaware	Corpus Christi, Tex.
South Penn Oil Company	Tide Water	Pennsylvania	Pittsburgh, Pa.
Southwestern Wharf Company	Socony	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
Spanish Peak Oil Company	Esso	Oklahoma	Ardmore, Okla.
Stanavo Specifications Board, Inc.	Socal	Delaware	San Francisco, Calif.
Standard Gas Company	Socal	Idaho	San Francisco, Calif.
Standard Oil Company of Louisiana	Esso	Louisiana	Baton Rouge, La.
Standard Oil Company of Nebraska	Stanolind	Nebraska	Omaha, Nebr.
Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.	Esso	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Standard Oil Company of New York.	Socony	Delaware	New York, N. Y.

[fol. 125]

Standard Oil Company of Pennsylvania.	Esso	Delaware	Philadelphia, Pa.
Standard Oil Company of Texas	Socal	Delaware	San Francisco, Calif.
Standard Oil Company (Washington).	Socal	Washington	San Francisco, Calif.
Standard Oil Export Corporation	Esso	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
The Standard Shale Products Company.	Continental	Colorado	Ponca City, Okla.
Standard Stations, Inc.	Socal	Delaware	San Francisco, Calif.
Standish Pipe Line Company	Phillips	Delaware	Bartlesville, Okla.
Stanolind Oil & Gas Company	Stanolind	Delaware	Tulsa, Okla.
Stanolind Oil Purchasing Company	Stanolind	Delaware	Tulsa, Okla.
Stanolind Pipe Line Company	Stanolind	Maine	Tulsa, Okla.
Sterling Oil & Development Company.	Tide Water	California	San Francisco, Calif.
Summerfield Oil Company	Pure	Michigan	Flint, Mich.
The Sun Oil Line Company	Sun	Ohio	Philadelphia, Pa.
Sun Oil Line Company of Michigan	Sun	Michigan	Philadelphia, Pa.
Sun Pipe Line Company	Sun	Texas	Beaumont, Tex.
Sun Pipe Line, Inc.	Sun	New York	Philadelphia, Pa.
Susquehanna Pipe Line Company	Sun	Pennsylvania	Philadelphia, Pa.
Supreme Pacific Oil Co., Inc.	Socony	Pennsylvania	Scranton, Pa.
Sweetwater Oil Company	Stanolind	Wyoming	Rock Springs, Wyo.
Sylvestre Oil Company, Inc.	Esso	New York	Mt. Vernon, N. Y.
Sylvestre Oil Terminal Company, Inc.	Esso	Delaware	Mt. Vernon, N. Y.
Sylvestre Utilities Company, Inc.	Esso	Delaware	Mt. Vernon, N. Y.
Tabb's Bay Oil Company	Gulf	Arizona	Houston, Tex.
The Texas Company (California)	Texas	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
The Texas Company (Delaware)	Texas	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
The Texas-Empire Pipe Line Company.	Texas Cities Service	Delaware	Tulsa, Okla.

Name of corporation	Affiliation	State of incorporation	Location of principal place of business
The Texas-Empire Pipe Line Company of Texas.	Texas Tide Water Cities Service	Delaware	Tulsa, Okla.
Texas-New Mexico Pipe Line Company.	Texas Tide Water Cities Service Consolidated.	Delaware	Houston, Tex.
The Texas Pipe Line Company	Texas	Texas	Houston, Tex.
The Texas Pipe Line Company of Oklahoma.	Texas	Oklahoma	Tulsa, Okla.
Texas Production Company of Nebraska.	Texas	Nebraska	New York, N. Y.
Texon Oil & Land Company	Continental	Delaware	Fort Worth, Tex.
Texon Oil & Land Company of Texas.	Continental	Texas	Fort Worth, Tex.
Theisen-Clemens Company	Mid-Continent	Michigan	St. Joseph, Mich.
Theisen-Clemens Investing Company.	Mid-Continent	Michigan	St. Joseph, Mich.
The Tide-Water Pipe Company, Limited.	Tide Water	Pennsylvania	Bradford, Pa.
Tidal Pipe Line Company	Tide Water	Oklahoma	Tulsa, Okla.
Toledo Northern Pipe Line Company.	Pure Gulf	Ohio	Chicago, Ill.
Transit & Storage Company	Esso	Delaware	Port Huron, Mich.
Treasure State Pipe Line Company	Ohio	Montana	Sunburst, Mont.
Tri-Lakes Corporation	Sohio	Delaware	Mt. Pleasant, Mich.
Tuscarora Oil Company, Ltd.	Esso	Pennsylvania	Harrisburg, Pa.
Union Oil Company of Nevada	Union	Nevada	Los Angeles, Calif.

[fol. 126]

Union Steamship Company	Union	New Jersey	Los Angeles, Calif.
The United Oil Company	Cities Service Consolidated	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
United States Pipe Line Company	Pure	Pennsylvania	Chicago, Ill.
Utah Oil Refining Company	Stanolind	Utah	Salt Lake City, Utah.
Vacuum Oil Company (Delaware)	Socony	Delaware	New York, N. Y.
Valley Pipe Line Company	Texas	California	Los Angeles, Calif.
Wabash Pipe Line Company	Pure	Illinois	Chicago, Ill.
Wadhams Oil Company	Socony	Wisconsin	Milwaukee, Wis.
Waggoner Service Stations, Inc.	Socony	Illinois	Chicago, Ill.
Warner-Quinlan Company of Texas	Cities Service	Texas	Fort Worth, Tex.
Washington Refining Company	Shell	Washington	San Francisco, Calif.
West Coast Oil Company	Tide Water	California	San Francisco, Calif.
Westcott Oil Company	Continental	Idaho	Boise, Idaho.
Western Gulf Oil Company	Gulf	Delaware	Pittsburgh, Pa.
West-Harden Oil Company, Inc.	Pure	Virginia	Covington, Va.
White Eagle Pipe Line Company, Inc.	Socony	Kansas	Kansas City, Mo.
White Star Northern Oil Company	Socony	Michigan	Newberry, Mich.
Wilson Oil Corporation	Pure	Michigan	Detroit, Mich.
Woco-Pep Company of Tuscaloosa	Pure	Alabama	Tuscaloosa, Ala.
Wofford Oil Company (Alabama)	Pure	Alabama	Birmingham, Ala.
Wofford Oil Company of Georgia	Pure	Georgia	Atlanta, Ga.
Yount-Lee Pipe Line Company	Stanolind	Texas	Tulsa, Okla.

4. The following individuals, not made defendants herein, connected with the corporate defendants as indicated in the following table, have been active in the management of the Institute and have been actively engaged in the management, direction, and control of the affairs and policies of the respective defendant majors and secondaries, particularly those affairs, activities, and policies hereinafter described in this complaint:

Name of individual	Affiliation
K. S. Adams	Director—Institute. President & Director—Phillips. Vice President & Director—Alco Royalty Corp. Director—Southern Phillips Corp.
C. E. Arnott	Director—Institute. Vice President & Director—Socony.
Amos Ball	Member of Marketing Committee—Institute. Director and Vice President—Stanolind.

[fol. 127]

Charles J. Barkdull	Director—Institute. Executive Vice President & Director—Stanolind. Director—Stanolind Oil Purchasing Co. Director—Stanolind Pipe Line Co. Director—Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co. Director—Pan American Producing Co. Director—Pan American Refining Corp. Director—Mexican Petroleum Corporation of Georgia.
S. Belither	Director—Institute. Director—Shell. Director, Vice Chairman of Board & Executive Vice President—Shell Oil Co., Inc. Director & President—Washington Refining Co.
W. H. Berg	Member of Executive Committee—Institute. Director—Institute. Director & President—Socal. Director & President—The California Company (Calif.).
R. A. Broomfield	Director—Institute. Director & Executive Vice President—Barnsdall.
Edwy Rolfe Brown	Director—Institute. Director & Chairman of Board—Magnolia Petroleum Co. Director & Vice President—Socony. Director—Socony-Vacuum Oil Corp. Director & Chairman of Board—Magnolia Pipe Line Co.
John A. Brown	Member of Executive Committee—Institute. Director—Institute. Director, Chairman of Executive Committee & President—Socony.
Axtell J. Byles	President—Institute. Member of Executive Committee—Institute.
J. W. Carnes	Chairman of Board & Director—Richfield Oil Corporation of New York. Vice President & Director—Sinclair Refining Co. Member of Marketing Committee—Institute.
Sheldon Clark	Director & Vice President—Consolidated. Director & Vice President—Sinclair Refining Co.

Name of individual	Affiliation
Robert H. Colley	Member of Executive Committee—Institute. Director—Institute. President & Director—Atlantic. Vice President—Atlantic Pipe Line Co. Director & Vice President—Atlantic Oil Shipping Co. Vice President & Director—Buffalo Pipe Line Corp. Vice President & Director—Keystone Pipe Line Co.
H. D. Collier	Director—Institute. President & Director—Socal.
P. H. Curry	Director—Institute. President & Director—South Penn Oil Co.
[fol. 128]
Ralph K. Davies	Director—Institute. Vice President—The California Company (Calif.). Vice President & Director—Socal. Member of Marketing Committee—Institute.
Henry M. Dawes	Member of Executive Committee—Institute. Director—Institute. President & Director—Pure.
T. A. Dines	Director—Institute. Chairman of Board & President—Utah Oil Refining Co. Director—Midwest Oil Company.
Henry W. Dodge	Vice President—Texas. Director—Goodyear-Wende Oil Corp. Director & Vice President—Indian Refining Co. Vice President & General Sales Manager—The Texas Company (Del.). Member of Marketing Committee—Institute.
O. D. Donnell	Treasurer & Director—Institute. Member of Executive Committee—Institute. Director & President—Ohio. Member of Production Committee—Institute.
J. Frank Drake	Director—Institute. President & Director—Gulf. President & Director—Gulf Refining Co. Director & Chairman of Board—Western Gulf Oil Co. Director & Chairman of Board—Gulf Research & Development Co.
W. S. Farish	Director—Institute. Member of Executive Committee—Institute. President & Director—Esso. Director—Ethyl Gasoline Corp.

Name of individual	Affiliation
W. H. Ferguson	Director—Institute. Director & Executive Vice President—Continental. Director & President—Rocky Mountain Pipe Line Co. Director & Vice President—The Boston-Wyoming Oil Co. Director & Vice President—Chappell Oil Co. Vice President—Continental Pipe Line Co. Director & Vice President—Merritt Oil Corp. Director & Vice President—The Buck Creek Oil Co. Director & Vice President—Fort Collins Producing Corp. Director & President—Merrico Royalties Co. Director & President—New Mexico Pipe Line Co. Director & Vice President—The Standard Shale Products Co. Member of Marketing Committee—Institute.
Jacob France	Director—Institute. Director & President—Mid Continent. Director—Great Lakes Pipe Line Co. Director—Theisen-Clemens Co. President—Cosden Pipe Line Co.
Alexander Fraser	Director—Institute. Director & President—Shell Oil Co., Inc. Director—Shell. Director & President—Shell American Petroleum Co.
[fol. 129]
Harry D. Frueauff	Director—Institute. Director—Empire Gas & Fuel Co. Director & Vice President—Cities Service Oil Co. (Del.) Director & Vice President—Cities Service Oil Co. (Pa.). Director—Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Co. Member of Marketing Committee—Institute. Manager, Oil Departments—Cities Service.
Herbert R. Gallagher	Director—Institute. President & Director—Consolidated. Director—Richfield Oil Corp. Director & Chairman of Board—Sinclair Refining Co. Director, President & Chairman of Board—Commonwealth Petroleum Holding Co.
George J. Hanks	Director & President—Bradford Transit Co. Director & Vice President—Tide Water. Director & Vice President—Tidal Pipe Line Co.
D. W. Harris	Vice President & Director—Arkana Transit Corp. President & Director—Arkansas Pipeline Corp. Vice President, Director & General Manager—Arkansas Fuel Oil Co. President & Director—Orange State Oil Co. Vice President & Director—Lisbon Gasoline Co., Inc.
William V. Hartmann	Director—Institute. Director & Vice President—Gulf. Director & Vice President—Gulf Refining Co. Director & Vice President—Gulf Research & Development Co. Director—Detroit Southern Pipe Line Company. Member of Marketing Committee—Institute.
Edw. J. Henry	Director—Institute. Director & President—Atlantic Pipe Line Co. Director & Vice President—Atlantic. Director & President—Atlantic Petroleum Purchasing Co. Member of Refining Committee—Institute.

Name of individual	Affiliation
George A. Hill, Jr.	Director—Institute. Vice President for Production—Institute. Member of Executive Committee—Institute. Chairman of Production Committee—Institute. Chairman of Committee on Well Spacing—Institute.
W. T. Holliday	Director—Institute. President & Director—Sohio. President & Director—Latonia Refg. Corp. President & Director—Tri-Lakes Corp. President & Director—Fleet-Wing Corp. President & Director—Fordsville Gathering Line, Inc. President & Director—Sohio Producing Co. President & Director—Sohio Pipe Line Company. President & Director—Sohio Corp.
Wm. F. Humphrey	Director—Institute. Member of Executive Committee—Institute. President & Director—Tide Water. Director & President—Pantheon Oil Co. Director & President—Pioneer Midway Oil Co., Consolidated. Director & President—Reward Oil Co. Director & President—West Coast Oil Co. Director & President—Associated Oil Co. of Wyoming. Director—Sterling Oil & Development Co.
[fol. 130]
Allan Jackson	Director & Vice President—Stanolind. Member of Marketing Committee—Institute.
Charles S. Jones	Director—Institute. President & Director—Richfield Oil Corp. President & Director—Reservoir Hill Gasoline Co. President & Director—Rio Grande Oil Company, Inc.
W. Alton Jones	Member of Executive Committee—Institute. Director & President—Cities Service. Director & Vice President—Arkansas Pipeline Corp. Director—Arkansas Fuel Oil Co. Vice President and Director—Empire Gas & Fuel Co. Director & Chairman of Finance Committee—Richfield Oil Corp. Director & Vice President—Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Co. Director—Institute.
Harry T. Klein	Director—Institute. Director—Texas Production Co. of Nebraska. Director—Goodyear-Wende Oil Corp. Director, Vice President and Member of Executive Committee—Texas. Director & Vice President—The Texas Co. (Del.). Director—Indian Refining Co. Director—Seaboard Oil Co. of Delaware.
F. A. Leovy	Director—Institute. Member of Executive Committee—Institute. Director & Vice Chairman of the Board—Gulf. Director & Chairman of the Board—Gulf Refining Co. Director & President—Western Gulf Oil Co. Director & President—Gulf Research & Development Co.

Name of individual	Affiliation
M. E. Lombardi	Director & Vice President—Socal. Vice President—The California Co. (Calif.). President—California Pipe Line Co. Member of Production Committee—Institute.
John M. Lovejoy	Director—Institute. Member of Production Committee—Institute. President—Seaboard Oil Co. of Delaware.
George MacDonald	Director—Cities Service. Director—Consolidated. Director—Petroleum Corp. of America. Director—Richfield Oil Corp.
A. M. Maxwell	Director & Vice President—Sohio. Director—Fleet-Wing Corp. Director—Atlas Supply Co. Director & Vice President—Latonia Refining Co. Director—Simrall Corp. Director & Vice President—Sohio Producing Co. Director & Vice President—Sohio Corp. Director & Vice President—Sohio Pipe Line Co. Director & Vice President—Tri-Lakes Corp.
[fol. 131]
Wm. A. McAfee	President & Director—Ajax Pipe Line Corp. Director—Fuel Oil Corp. Director—Sohio. Director—Latonia Refining Corp. Director—Fleet-Wing Corp. Director—Simrall Corp. Director—Michigan-Toledo Pipe Line Co. Director—Sohio Producing Co.
R. W. McDowell	Director—Institute. Vice President in Charge of Sales—Mid-Continent. President & Director—Genessee-Diamond Oil Co. Vice President & Director—Baron-Huot Oil Co. Member of Marketing Committee—Institute.
Dan Moran	Director—Institute. Director & President—Continental. President & Director—Great Lakes Pipe Line Co. President & Director—The Boston-Wyoming Oil Co. President & Director—Chappell Oil Co. President & Director—Continental Oil Co. (Texas). President & Director—Continental Pipe Line Co. President & Director—Merritt Oil Corp. President & Director—The Busk Creek Oil Co. President & Director—Fort Collins Producing Co.
Harry Moreland	Director—Institute. Vice President & General Manager—Great Lakes Pipe Line Co.
J. Howard Pew	Director—Institute. Vice President for Refining—Institute. Member of Executive Committee—Institute. President & Director—Sun. Member of Production Committee—Institute. Chairman of Refining Committee—Institute. Director—Beacon Sun Company. President & Director—Motor Tankship Corp.

Name of individual	Affiliation
Frank Phillips	Director—Institute. Member of Executive Committee—Institute. Chairman of Board & Director—Phillips. President & Director—Alco Royalty Corp.
E. B. Reeser	Director—Institute. President & Director—Barnsdall. President & Director—Barnsdall Pipe Line Co. President & Director—Pittsburgh Oil & Gas Co. Member of Marketing Committee—Institute.
Torkild Rieber	Director—Institute. Chairman of Board, Director & Member of Executive Committee—Texas. Chairman of Board & Director—The Texas Co. (Del.). Director—Indian Refining Co. Director—Seaboard Oil Co. of Delaware. Director—Goodyear-Wende Oil Corp.
[fol. 132]
W. S. S. Rodgers	Director—Institute. Member of Executive Committee—Institute. Chairman of Public Relations Committee—Institute. President, Director & Member of Executive Committee—Texas. Director & President—The Texas Co. (Del.). Director—The Texas Co. (Cal.). Director—Indian Refining Co. Director—Goodyear-Wende Oil Corp. Director—Great Lakes Pipe Line Co.
L. P. St. Clair	Director—Institute. Director, Former President & Former Chairman of Board—Union. Former Director & President—California Coast Oil Co. Former Director—Claremont Oil Co.
E. H. Salrin	Director—Institute. Vice President & Director—Tide Water. Vice President & Director—Tidal Pipe Line Co. President & Director—Great Southern Oil Co. Member of Production Committee—Institute.
Edward G. Seubert	Director—Institute. Member of Executive Committee—Institute. President & Director—Stanolind. Director & Vice President—Mexican Petroleum Corporation of Georgia. Director & Vice President—Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co. Director & Vice President—Pan American Refining Corporation. Director & Vice President—Pan American Production Co. Director—Pan American Southern Corp. Director & Vice President—Stanolind Oil Purchasing Co. Director & Vice President—Stanolind Pipe Line Co. Director—Pan American Petroleum Corp.
E. W. Sinclair	Director—Institute. Director, Chairman of Finance Committee & Executive Vice President—Consolidated. President & Director—Sinclair Refining Co. Director & Treasurer—Petroleum Corp. of America. Director—Commonwealth Petroleum Holding Co. Director—Great Lakes Pipe Line Co.

Name of individual	Affiliation
Harry F. Sinclair	Director—Institute. Member of Executive Committee—Institute. Director & Chairman of Executive Committee—Consolidated. Chairman of the Board & Director—Richfield Oil Corp. Director—Petroleum Corp. of America.
Warren A. Sinsheimer	Director—Arkansas Pipeline Corp. Director—Arkansas Fuel Oil Co. Director—Empire Gas & Fuel Co. Vice President & Director—Empire Pipeline Co. Director—Cities Service Oil Co. Director—Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Co.
[fol. 133]
W. G. Skelly	Director—Institute. Member of Executive Committee—Institute. President & Director—Skelly. Director & President—Mission Corp. Director & President—Pacific Western Oil Corp. Director—Great Lakes Pipe Line Co. President & Director—Skelco Products Co. President & Director—East Texas Refining Co.
Wm. E. Smith	Director—Institute. President & Director—Soky. President & Director—Refiners Oil Corp.
W. L. Stewart, Jr.	Director—Institute. Vice President & Director—Union. Vice President & Director—Union Steamship Co. Director—Claremont Oil Co. Vice President & Director—Lake View Oil Co. Director—Los Angeles Oil Co. Member of Refining Committee—Institute.
Herbert R. Straight	Director—Institute. Director—Empire Gas & Fuel Co. President, Director & General Manager—Cities Service Oil Co. President, General Manager, & Director—Empire Pipeline Co. Director—Richfield Oil Corp. Director—Texas Empire Pipe Line Co. (Del.). Director—Cities Service. Director—Great Lakes Pipe Line Co.
Sidney A. Swensrud	Vice President—Sohio. Director—Fleet-Wing Corp. Director—Commercial Oil Co. Director—Eagleroc Oil Co. Director—Ohio Independent Oil Co. Director—Ridge Oil Corp. Director & Assistant Secretary—Fordsville Gathering Line, Inc. Director & Assistant Secretary—Simrall Corp. Director & Assistant Secretary—Michigan-Toledo Pipe Line Co. Assistant Secretary—Sohio Corp. Director—Berea Engineering Co. Vice President & Assistant Secretary—Sohio Pipe Line Company. Director & Vice President—Ohio River Pipe Line Co.
Reese H. Taylor	Director—Institute. Director & President—Union.
Walter C. Teagle	Director—Institute. Chairman of Board—Esso. Director—Ethyl Gasoline Corp.

Name of individual	Affiliation
Temple W. Tutwiler	President & Director—Arkansas Fuel Oil Co. Vice President & Director—Arkansas Pipeline Corp. Director & President—Cities Service Oil Co. (Pa.) Vice President & Director—Empire Gas & Fuel Co. Vice President & Director—Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Co. Director—Richfield Oil Corp. Director—Cities Service. Director—Orange State Oil Company.
[fol. 134]
R. G. A. van der Woude	Director—Institute. Member of Executive Committee—Institute. President & Director—Shell. Director & Chairman of Board—Shell Oil Co., Inc. Director—Asiatic Petroleum Corp.
W. G. Violette	Vice President & Director—Soky. Vice President & Director—Refiners Oil Corp. Member of Marketing Committee—Institute.
Cornelius B. Watson	Director & Vice President—Pure. Director—Great Lakes Pipe Line Co. Director—Hickok Oil Corp. President & Director—Detroit Southern Pipe Line Co. President & Director—Pure Transportation Company. Member of Refining Committee—Institute. Member of Marketing Committee—Institute.
Earle W. Webb	Director—Institute. Director & President—Ethyl Gasoline Corp.
A. L. Weil	Director & President—General Pipe Line Co. (Cal.). Director & President—General Petroleum Corp. of California. President—General Petroleum Corp. of Nevada.
H. C. Wiess	Director—Institute. Director & President—Humble Oil & Refining Co.
L. S. Wescoat	Director—Institute. Director, Vice President & Secretary—Pure. Director—Hickok Oil Corp.
Charles J. Yokum	President & Director—Petroleum Transit Corp. Member of Central Committee on Public Relations—Institute. Chairman of sub-committee on Contract & Bulk Hauling—Institute.

II

Jurisdiction and Venue

5. This complaint is filed and these proceedings are instituted under Section 4 of the Act of Congress of July 2, 1890, c. 647, 26 Stat. 209, as amended, entitled "An Act to Protect Trade and Commerce Against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies," said Act being commonly known as the "Sherman Antitrust Act," and under Section 15 of the Act of Congress of October 15, 1914, c. 323, 38 Stat. 730, as amended, said Act being commonly known as the "Clayton Act,"

[fol. 135] against the above-named defendants in order to prevent and restrain violations by them of Sections 1, 2 and 3 of the Sherman Act and Sections 2 and 3 of the Clayton Act.

6. The alleged unlawful acts and violations hereinafter described, including the unlawful monopoly, attempts to monopolize, combinations and conspiracies to monopolize, and contracts, combinations and conspiracies to restrain trade and commerce in petroleum and its products among the several States of the United States, with foreign nations and within the District of Columbia, have been and are conceived, carried out, and made effective in part within the District of Columbia, and many of the unlawful acts done in pursuance thereof have been performed by the defendants or some of them and their respective representatives within said District. The following defendants transact business or may be found within the District of Columbia: American Petroleum Institute; Phillips Petroleum Company; The Texas Company (Delaware); Lord Baltimore Filling Stations, Inc.; Sun Oil Company; Gulf Oil Corporation; Standard Oil Company of New Jersey; Sherwood Brothers, Incorporated; Petroleum Heat & Power Company; Shell Oil Company, Inc.; The American Oil Company (Md.); The Atlantic Refining Company; Cities Service Oil Company (Pa.); Continental Oil Company; Sinclair Refining Company; Gulf Refining Company; Richfield Oil Corporation of New York; and Tide Water Associated Oil Company. The interstate trade and commerce involved in the petroleum industry is carried on in part within the District of Columbia.

[fol. 136]

III

Interstate Commerce Involved

7. Crude oil moves in interstate commerce from centers in producing states to refineries located in other states. Such interstate movement is carried on mainly through the trunk pipelines operating in 21 states and transporting approximately one billion barrels of crude oil per year. The trunk pipelines also carry crude oil from producing states to water terminals from which it is moved by tanker to refineries located in other states and to foreign nations. Crude oil also moves in interstate commerce between points of production and refineries by means of barges, lake tankers, railroad tank cars, and trucks. The principal petroleum products move in interstate and foreign commerce from the refineries to distribution and consuming points throughout the United States and to foreign nations by means of gasoline pipelines, railroad tank cars, trucks and trailers, tankers, barges, and tank wagons. There is a continuous flow of petroleum products in interstate commerce from the refinery to the tank of the consumer. Gasoline pipelines, tankers, barges, tank cars, bulk plants, tank wagons, and service stations are merely facilities in this flow. The transfer from one facility to the other is merely a convenience in handling petroleum products and does not interrupt the continuous interstate flow which begins at the refinery and ends at the consumer's container. Practically all the defendant majors and producing secondaries are engaged in the production and purchase of crude oil in the producing states and move and transport crude oil in interstate commerce through defendant controlled pipelines from [fol. 137] states where produced or purchased to refineries located in other states. Defendant majors and marketing secondaries engage in the movement of the principal petroleum products in interstate commerce from refineries to consumers' containers throughout the United States.

IV

Description of the Industry

8. The petroleum industry is divided into four branches —production, transportation, refining and marketing. Crude oil is produced from subsurface deposits known as crude oil reserves. While the known reserves cannot be inventoried with any degree of certainty, the total recoverable reserves estimated by geologists as of January 1, 1940, amounted to over eighteen billion barrels. Fear of the exhaustion of these reserves has prompted the adoption of conservation programs, rationing the production of crude oil by the various fields, pools, and wells, which are administered by designated agencies of the state and federal government.

9. Crude oil is produced from more than 375,000 oil wells producing approximately 1,250,000,000 barrels per year. The producing wells are located in 23 states, but 84 percent of the total production is contributed by wells located in the states of Texas, Oklahoma, California, Illinois and Louisiana.

10. Crude oil moves usually through gathering pipelines which take the crude oil at the well and transport it directly to a refinery located in the field or to a trunk pipeline which transports the crude oil either to the refinery or to a water terminal from which it is in turn shipped to the refinery by [fol. 138] tanker or barge. There are 52,000 miles of gathering lines, of which 75% are common carriers by statute. While there may be several gathering systems in one field, each one reaching hundreds of wells, no well is connected with more than one system. A very small quantity of crude oil moves overland by truck and railroad but the cost of these forms of transportation is greater than the cost of transportation through pipelines.

11. There are 60,000 miles of crude oil trunk lines 87% of which are common carriers subject to the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

12. Where feasible the cheapest method of transporting crude oil is by tanker or barge and large quantities of crude oil are shipped by this method.

13. There are 547 refineries located in 35 states. These refineries are located, for the most part, at places to which adequate supplies of crude oil may be economically transported.

14. The refineries themselves are of two general types; those utilizing simple distillation processes, and those utilizing the more recently developed patented "cracking" processes which are not only more economical but have made it possible over the last twenty years to increase the average recovery of gasoline from crude oil from 26 to 45 per cent.

15. The total daily capacity of these refineries is 4,625,000 barrels. Refineries located in Texas, California, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Indiana, Oklahoma, New Jersey, and Louisiana have over 81 per cent of the capacity. The total daily runs to stills is approximately 3,400,000 barrels, and the principal products produced are gasoline fuel oils, kerosene, and lubricants.

[fol. 139] 16. Petroleum products are transported from refineries to the consuming areas usually by pipelines, tankers and tank cars when the refinery is located near the oil fields and away from the consuming area, and by tank car, tank truck and trailer, and tank wagon when the refinery is near the area of consumption. The gasoline pipeline, which is the most economical method of transporting petroleum products overland, has been developed almost wholly since 1930 and today there are about 8,000 miles of such lines connecting refineries and tanker terminals with the consuming areas. Approximately 66% of gasoline pipelines are common carriers subject to the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

17. Upon reaching the consuming areas the petroleum products are stored in 27,000 local terminals and bulk plants for distribution to 200,000 service stations, to approximately the same number of other establishments selling petroleum products, and to commercial consumers.

18. Thousands of individuals and hundreds of corporations engage in the petroleum industry which represents an investment of approximately fifteen billion dollars and is exceeded in size only by agriculture, the railroad industry, and the combined divisions of the utility fields. This investment is distributed among the four principal divisions as follows: production—43%, transportation—17%, refining—27%, and marketing—13%. In the producing branch of the industry, thousands of small landowners and others own or operate oil wells or collect royalties on oil produced. [fol. 140] There are approximately 100 companies engaged in transportation of petroleum products as a sole function. Approximately 200 companies operate the refineries. The marketing of petroleum products is carried on by approximately 25 large companies and their subsidiaries, 8,000 individual and incorporated brokers, jobbers and distributors, 200,000 service station operators, and 200,000 merchants who sell petroleum products in conjunction with other merchandise.

19. The key characteristic of the industry today is complete integration, the culmination of a twenty-five year trend. Today the 22 fully integrated oil companies, called majors, control the 344 secondary companies which are engaged in one or more of the functions of production, transportation, refining and marketing. With their secondary companies the majors form 22 completely integrated units, each unit thus operating in all four branches of the industry. Joint ownership of some of the secondary companies is part of the pattern of the industry. These companies have total assets on a consolidated basis of approximately nine billion dollars. Their individual assets are as follows:

Name of Company:	Total assets
The Atlantic Refining Company	$203,400,377
Barnsdall Oil Company	23,762,319
Cities Service Company	1,068,578,765
Consolidated Oil Corporation	357,848,818
Continental Oil Company	127,661,986
Gulf Oil Corporation	523,292,917
Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation	65,103,571
The Ohio Oil Company	133,748,393
Phillips Petroleum Company	223,280,318
The Pure Oil Company	178,567,387
Shell Union Oil Corporation	401,048,417
Skelly Oil Company	62,048,509
Socony-Vacuum Oil Company, Incorporated	929,066,796
Standard Oil Company of California	628,618,202
Standard Oil Company (Indiana)	723,079,697
Standard Oil Company (Kentucky)	42,697,777
[fol. 141]
Standard Oil Company (New Jersey)	$2,034,989,485
The Standard Oil Company (Ohio)	76,072,531
Sun Oil Company	146,431,484
The Texas Corporation	661,067,032
Tide Water Associated Oil Company	204,467,844
Union Oil Company of California	187,066,399

20. These 22 integrated companies occupy a position of great dominance in the industry. They own or control over sixty-five per cent of the known crude oil reserves, thirty-two percent of the oil wells (and the oil wells of the majors produce fifty per cent of the total production), ninety-two per cent of the stocks of crude oil, eighty per cent of the crude oil storage capacity, seventy-six per cent of the crude-oil refining capacity, eighty-eight per cent of the cracking capacity; produce eighty-five per cent of the gasoline refined; possess ninety per cent of the stocks of finished gasoline, ninety-two per cent of the stocks of fuel oil, ninety-one per cent of the stocks of kerosene, ninety-three per cent of the stocks of lubricants, and eighty-eight per cent of the stocks of gas oil and distillate fuel oils; and control seventy-five per cent of the bulk plants, and seventy-five per cent of the service stations. In the transportation branch of the industry the majors own or control fifty-seven per cent of the crude oil gathering lines, eighty-five per cent of the crude oil trunk pipelines, eighty-seven per cent of the deadweight tonnage of oil tankers and ninety-six per cent of the mileage of gasoline pipelines.

21. The position of the majors in this industry is indicated in the following chart:

[fol. 142]

Phases and functions	Number of majors	Percent of ownership or control
Investment	22	60.0
Crude Oil Reserves	21	68.0
Number of Producing Oil Wells	21	32.4
Crude Oil Production	21	50.0
Crude Oil Gathering Pipe Line Mileage	21	57.5
Ratio of Purchases of Crude Oil to Total U. S Production	20	56.8
Ratio of Crude Oil Transported in Gathering Lines to Total U. S. Production	[1] 20	62.5
Crude Oil Trunk Pipe Line Mileage	20	85.6
Barrel-Miles of Crude Oil Transported in Trunk Lines [2]	15	96.5
Investment in Crude Oil Pipe Lines [2]	15	89.3
Income of Crude Oil Pipe Lines [2]	15	97.7
Stocks of Crude Oil	21	92.5
Crude Oil Storage Capacity	21	79.1
Imports of Crude Oil	6	90.6
Exports of Crude Oil	14	66.7
Crude Oil Refining Capacity	21	76.1
Crude Oil Runs to Stills	21	82.7
Cracking Capacity	21	87.6
Production of Gasoline	21	84.6
Stocks of Finished Gasoline	[1] 20	90.0
Exports of Gasoline	14	95.0
Ratio of Domestic Sales of Gasoline to Total U. S. Consumption	22	87.1
Gasoline Pipe Line Mileage	[1] 17	96.3
Barrel-Miles of Gasoline by Pipe Lines	15	96.5
Investment in Gasoline Pipe Lines [2]	12	100.0
Income of Gasoline Pipe Lines [2]	12	100.0
Deadweight Tonnage of Oil Tankers	15	87.2
Stocks of Lubricants	[1] 19	93.0
Stocks of Kerosene	[1] 19	91.2
Stocks of Gas Oil and Distillate Fuel Oils	[1] 19	88.1
Stocks of Residual Fuel Oils	[1] 20	92.0
Number of Domestic Bulk Plants	[1] 20	74.7
Number of Service Stations	22	75.0

[1] Data for all defendant majors not available.
[2] Coverage of the Interstate Commerce Commission only.

The dominance of the defendant majors has been steadily increasing while the position of all others in the industry, commonly known as "independent" producers, refiners, marketers, and service station operators, has been steadily decreasing.

22. In addition to the control by the majors over pipeline transportation hereinbefore described their control over transportation facilities is implemented by long term charter parties which they induce the owners of uncontrolled tankers and barges to enter into by paying rates in [fol. 143] excess of those economically feasible for the independent producers and refiners. Further, the majors reduce transportation costs for themselves by the use of so-called exchange accounts. Under this system one refiner will deliver gasoline or other products to the local storage facilities of another refiner in return for a similar accommodation by the latter refiner in some other area. Such exchange arrangements are rarely made with independent refiners.

23. The control by the majors over the marketing facilities for petroleum products is gained through their outright ownership of bulk plants and contracts with the owners of bulk plants requiring the owners to deal only in the products of the particular defendant, and through ownership, leases, exclusive dealing contracts, and offering inducements to other operators to enter into exclusive dealing arrangements in the case of service stations. Some of the service stations the majors own or lease and operate themselves; other stations they own or lease and sublease to operators under the "Iowa Plan." Under this plan which has been put into effect mainly in the states east of the Rocky Mountains, the majors lease or sublease service stations to operators who are given possession under uniform leases adopted by the majors which contain a short term cancellation provision. These leases do not provide for the exclusive handling of the lessor's petroleum products, but the majors have the power, through threatening to cancel the lease by exercising the short term cancellation clause, to force the operator to handle the lessor's petroleum products exclusively and to sell them at the prices dictated by the [fol. 144] lessor; the lessor also cancels leases when the operator fails to maintain or increase the predetermined gasoline gallonage which forms the basis for calculating rent, or when the operator refuses to purchase supplies of automotive equipment from the lessor or the persons designated by him. In addition, the majors have the power to force operators to maintain or increase the predetermined gasoline gallonage by dictating the reduction of sales prices without making a corresponding reduction in the price at which the operator purchases the gasoline.

24. Non-lessee service station operators are induced to enter into exclusive dealing contracts requiring the operators to buy all of their gasoline or other petroleum products from the particular major company by granting them a special discount which is not granted to those who buy from more than one supplier, by operating a nation-wide credit service in which the supplier guarantees the credit of those purchasing from the operators; by guaranteeing margins; by loaning money and equipment; and by threatening ruinous competition.

V

Offenses Charged

25. Each of the defendants and the defendants collectively have violated and are now violating Sections 1, 2 and 3 of the Sherman Act, by unlawfully attempting to monopolize, monopolizing and contracting, combining and conspiring to regulate, control, dominate, monopolize, and restrain trade and commerce among the several states of the United [fol. 145] States, with foreign nations, and within the District of Columbia and have violated and are now violating Sections 2 and 3 of the Clayton Act in the manner and by the means hereinafter described:

The Institute

26. The defendants have unlawfully combined to create, maintain, and utilize the Institute and its national, regional, state and local committees as instrumentalities for promoting, supervising and enforcing policies, programs, practices, and activities of the defendants designed to restrict the production of crude oil and petroleum products, to establish and maintain sales prices for petroleum and its products, to manipulate prices in order to restrict or eliminate competition among the defendants, to deprive others of a fair opportunity to compete freely and unrestrictedly with the defendants, and to enable the defendants to dominate, control and monopolize the petroleum industry in all its phases. The managing officials of the Institute and the members of the various committees are the officers and other representatives of the majors and secondaries made defendant herein.

Controlling and Restricting the Production of Crude Oil and Manufacture of Petroleum Products

27. Defendants are jointly and individually acquiring an increasingly dominant control over the known crude oil reserves of the United States through purchase and lease and on option.

28. The defendants have combined and conspired to restrict the production of crude oil and the manufacture of [fol. 146] petroleum products. The defendants report weekly to the Institute the amounts and locations of all stocks of petroleum products owned or held by each of them on the last day of each preceding week and cause the Institute to summarize such detailed information and disseminate it, together with the Institute's suggestions of the amounts of crude oil which should be produced and the Institute's suggestions of the amounts of petroleum products which should be manufactured and maintained in storage, to defendants and the public. The suggested amounts of crude oil to be produced are less than the amounts which would normally be produced even in states operating under conservation programs, and the suggested amounts of petroleum products to be manufactured and maintained in storage are less than the amounts which would normally be manufactured and maintained in storage. The defendants adopt the suggestions of the Institute, thereby curtailing the amounts of crude oil produced and the amount of petroleum products manufactured. The defendants, the Institute, and its production and refining committees and sub-committees, also promote individual and point agreements, among defendants and independent producers and refiners, and associations of producers and refiners, to restrict production of crude oil and to restrict the manufacture of petroleum products to the amounts suggested by the Institute.

29. Defendants have combined and agreed to follow the practice of receiving, in their crude oil gathering lines, from independent producers who have only one market because [fol. 147] there exists no other practical means of transportation, less crude oil than the amounts which they would normally produce and, in states operating under conservation programs, less than the prorated allowables fixed by state proration authorities, thereby reducing the amount of crude oil produced by the independent producers.

The Pricing of Crude Oil

30. Defendants have combined and conspired to fix and maintain uniform non-competitive prices to be paid by them for the crude oil purchased from independent producers. In order to maintain uniform prices, the defendants agree that one of them will post, in each crude oil field or pool, the agreed upon prices. The defendants also agree that each of them will post and follow the prices posted by the designated defendant in each of the pools and fields in which they purchase crude oil. In fields where independent refiners compete with defendants in purchasing crude oil, defendants fix higher prices for crude oil, without reference to its specific gravity, than they fix in fields where defendants control production and gathering lines. Since the net cost of crude oil to defendants is lower than the prices posted in those fields where the defendants fix the higher prices, due to low cost production and purchases elsewhere, the independent refiners, who are forced to rely solely upon purchases in those fields, cannot obtain crude oil supplies on a competitive cost basis with defendants and as a result are driven out of business.

31. The defendants also have combined and conspired to fix and maintain uniform non-competitive prices to be charged by them in sales of crude oil to independent refin- [fol. 148] ers. Through their activities, defendants control practically all of the supply of crude oil available for refining, and independent refiners, most of whom do not have independent sources of crude oil, are compelled to purchase all or a large part of their requirements from defendants. Defendants follow the practice of selling crude oil to independent refiners at fixed prices which are arrived at by adding to the fixed price for crude oil the agreed upon published tariff rates for pipeline transportation and arbitrarily adopted rates for gathering and storing of such oil, thereby placing independent refiners at a substantial price disadvantage over the defendants in procuring crude oil supplies, and, in addition, independent refiners directly pay tribute to the defendants on purchases of crude oil to the extent of the excessive amounts charged them for gathering transportation and storage.

Transportation

32. Defendants, controlling pipeline gathering systems leading from producing wells to the defendants' crude oil trunk pipelines, are jointly and individually following the practice of compelling independent producers, who have no other practical means of transportation to competitive markets, to sell crude oil to the defendants at the well rather than permitting them to use such lines on a common carrier basis and reach those markets in which they might sell their production. Defendants thereby gain control of the crude oil produced by such independent producers.

33. Defendants are concertedly causing those defendants, who individually and jointly own and operate interstate crude oil trunk pipelines and interstate gasoline pipelines, to adopt and file with the Interstate Commerce Commission, tariffs, rules and regulations, covering the interstate transportation of crude oil, gasoline and other petroleum products, which require that shippers tender to such carriers unreasonably large quantities, commonly called "minimum tenders," of crude oil and petroleum products, to maintain and charge uniform non-competitive onerous and oppressive rates for the transportation of crude oil, and uniform non-competitive, onerous and oppressive rates at rail freight rate levels irrespective of the cost of service for the transportation of petroleum products and to fail to provide to shippers the ordinary common carrier terminal facilities at both ends of and along the pipelines. These tariff requirements are put into effect for the purpose and with the effect of reserving such pipelines as private carriers for the defendants who are large shippers advantageously located at existing terminals along the pipelines, despite the fact that these crude oil trunk pipelines have been common carriers by statute for many years and these gasoline pipelines have been common carriers by statute since installation. The result is that independent producers and refiners are precluded from using the crude oil trunk pipelines on a common carrier basis in violation of Section 1 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, and from locating their refineries at advantageous points along such pipelines or at their terminals in large consuming areas, to restrain the interstate transportation of crude oil, and to obtain for defendants a monopoly of crude oil. The result is also to preclude independent refiners and distributors [fol. 150] from using gasoline pipelines on a common carrier basis, in violation of Section 1 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, and from marketing their products in the consuming areas served by these pipelines, and to restrain the interstate transportation of petroleum products.

[fol. 149]

34. The defendants have combined and conspired to charge excessive rates for the use of crude oil and gasoline pipelines and to receive back as refunds and rebates on the rates charged to themselves a substantial part of the revenue from pipeline operations in violation of Sections 2 and 6 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, as amended, and Section 1 of the Elkins Act, as amended. These rebates result in crude oil and petroleum products being transported for defendants at less rates than those named in the tariffs published and filed by the pipelines and are used by defendant owners to subsidize operations in other branches of the industry thereby enabling them to enjoy an unfair competitive advantage over their independent competitors who are unable to use such pipelines under the terms, conditions, and regulations imposed by the defendants.

35. Defendants have combined and conspired to cause railroads to establish and maintain rates favorable to them and unfavorable to the independent refiner.

36. Defendants jointly and individually exert influence upon and connive with officials, traffic managers, and other employees of railroad companies, which haul petroleum products in interstate commerce throughout the United States, to cause these railroad companies to establish and maintain high rail freight rates on long hauls of petroleum products from areas where independent refiners are located [fol. 151] to consuming areas where defendants dominate, control, and monopolize the distribution and sale of petroleum products. These rates prevent independent refiners from competing with defendants in the distribution and sale of petroleum products and maintain the transportation factor used as part of the price-fixing program hereinafter described.

37. Defendants jointly and individually exert influence upon and connive with officials, traffic managers and other employees of railroad companies, which haul petroleum products in interstate commerce throughout the United States, to cause these railroad companies to establish and maintain agreed upon low rail freight rates on transportation of petroleum products in interstate commerce from the refineries, pipeline terminals and water terminals of defendants to points of distribution located in the consuming areas where defendants dominate, control and monopolize the distribution and sale of petroleum products. This enables defendants to obtain the advantages of low rail freight rates which discriminate against independent refiners who are attempting to market petroleum products in interstate commerce in competition with defendants.

38. In carrying out the program for the establishment and maintenance of rail freight rates as hereinabove described, defendants are jointly and individually resorting to the practice of threatening to build and utilize more gasoline pipelines, to increase the use of motor trucks, to increase the use of tanker and barge facilities and to refuse to use rail transportation facilities unless the railroads establish and maintain rates agreeable to defendants.

[fol. 152] 39. Defendants are jointly and individually acquiring and maintaining a dominating control over tankers, barges, tank cars, and other facilities for the interstate transportation of crude oil and petroleum products, by purchase, long term contracts and leases. Defendants have combined and conspired to maintain and establish and to induce others to maintain excessive rates for the use of such facilities, thereby preventing their use by independent competitors.

Marketing Policies and Price Differentials

40. Defendants have combined and conspired to distribute their petroleum products at wholesale only through facilities operated by persons, firms, or corporations whose buying, selling and operating policies defendants are able to control. They have obtained such control over practically all of the thousands of bulk plants, located throughout the United States, through which petroleum products pass in interstate commerce from refiners to service stations and consumers' containers. Control of these bulk plants is obtained through exclusive dealing contracts with jobbers and distributors and by forcing, through the use of unfair practices, independent refiners, jobbers and distributors to sell or lease them to defendants. These practices include threats of ruinous competition, promises of guaranteed margins, making of unwarranted and excessive loans of money on bulk plants, and the offering of free equipment and other valuable property and services to the service station customers of such refiners, jobbers and distributors. Defendants use these bulk plants for the exclusive distribution [fol. 153] of their petroleum products, either by direct operation or through distributors under exclusive contracts or exclusive commission agents to whom the plants are leased. By the means, methods and practices described defendants are denying the use of existing bulk plant facilities to independent refiners and jobbers and are monopolizing the essential facilities for the distribution of petroleum products and petroleum products themselves.

41. Defendants are combining and conspiring to distribute their petroleum products only through service stations operated by persons, firms and corporations whose buying, selling, and operating policies defendants are able to control. Such control is acquired through ownership, leases, subleases, exclusive dealer contracts, granting of differentials in price to exclusive operator-purchasers while denying them to competing non-exclusive operator-purchasers of petroleum products of like grade, quality and quantity, in violation of Section 3 of the Robinson-Patman Act; granting nation-wide credit card service to exclusive operators, offering inducements such as loans of money and guaranteed margins, loaning of equipment, and threats of ruinous competition, for the purpose of monopolizing service station outlets. The granting of differentials in price to exclusive service station operators is also a discrimination in violation of Section 2, as amended, of the Clayton Act.

42. Defendants marketing gasoline throughout the United States, and particularly throughout the 43 states east of the Rocky Mountains and in the District of Columbia, have unlawfully combined and conspired to put into effect and maintain the so-called "Iowa Plan." Under this plan [fol. 154] defendants lease service stations, which they control by ownership or lease, to lessee-operators and compel those operators to handle exclusively the particular lessor's brand of petroleum products. These lessee-operators are given possession of the service stations under uniform leases, adopted by defendants, which specify the term of occupancy, the rental and other lease provisions, including a short term cancellation clause. These leases do not provide for the exclusive handling of the defendants' petroleum products, but defendants are requiring each lessee-operator to handle the petroleum products of the lessor exclusively and compel him to refuse to distribute, display, or handle any petroleum products of a competitor. Defendants compel the lessee-operator to maintain or increase the predetermined gasoline gallonage which forms the basis for calculating the rental of the service station. Defendants fix and dictate the prices at which lessee-operators shall sell defendants' petroleum products. To effectuate the plan, defendants threaten to and do cancel the leases on service stations and dispossess lessee operators by exercising the short term cancellation clause of the lease when the lessee-operator refuses to handle lessor's petroleum products exclusively, or upon lessee-operator's refusal to sell the petroleum products at the prices dictated by defendant lessor. The defendants' operations under the Iowa Plan have eliminated competition among defendants and deprived independent refiners, jobbers and distributors of outlets for the marketing of their petroleum products in competition with defendants.

[fol. 155] 43. Defendants have combined and conspired to adopt uniform types of contracts for the sale of petroleum products in interstate commerce to jobbers, distributors, commission agents, non-lessee service station operators and commercial consumers. Each of these contracts contains non-competitive, oppressive and onerous terms and requires that the purchaser shall buy all of his requirements of petroleum products from the particular defendant with whom the contract is executed. Each major and secondary oil company defendant marketing petroleum products forces all their purchasers to execute and abide by the terms of the uniform contract applicable to them. The exclusive dealing provisions of these uniform contracts are also in violation of Section 3 of the Clayton Act.

44. Defendants have combined and conspired to sell petroleum products to operators and lessees of service stations under arrangements requiring them to handle exclusively the petroleum products of one of the defendants. This is accomplished by sales contracts which provide, and sales on oral condition, agreement and understanding, that such purchasers shall not deal in any petroleum products of a competitor or competitors of the particular defendant. The exclusive dealing provisions of the contracts for sale of petroleum products in interstate commerce and the sale of petroleum products in interstate commerce made under the oral arrangements are also in violation of Section 3 of the Clayton Act.

45. Defendants are concertedly following the practice of selling complete and full lines of petroleum products through service stations controlled by them and forcing [fol. 156] the operators of service stations to handle exclusively their full lines of petroleum products by threatening to invoke the clause of the leases providing for cancellation on short notice, cancellation of the leases, cancellation of supply contracts, and refusing to sell petroleum products on the exclusive price basis to operators who do not handle their full lines.

Price Fixing

46. Defendants have combined and conspired to adopt a price-fixing program, and defendants concertedly agree upon sales prices for petroleum products, marketing and price policies, and methods and practices for fixing and maintaining prices, for stabilizing price structures, for lowering prices wherever they wish to eliminate independent competitors, and for raising prices wherever the competition of independent competitors has been eliminated. These agreements are reached at frequent meetings held throughout the United States under the auspices of the defendant Institute, its marketing committee and subcommittees, and apart therefrom, attended by the officers and other representatives of the defendant majors and secondaries, and others unknown to plaintiff, acting for and on behalf of the defendants.

47. As part of the price-fixing program, defendants have agreed to utilize and are utilizing a pricing formula, of which the basic factor is the price for principal petroleum products at either spot markets or other base points arbitrarily selected by defendants. The spot market prices are the quotations selected by defendants for spot markets for which certain trade journals currently publish such quota-

[fol. 157] tions. The base prices at the other base points are prices arrived at by adding to the spot market quotations existing freight rates between spot market locations and the other base points. The prices at these base points are adopted irrespective of the cost of such petroleum products at the points from which shipments are actually made. To the prices at the base points are added all rail freight rates to final destinations as a factor in the pricing formula, irrespective of the actual point of origin of the product, and the transportation facility actually used. Prices for petroleum products at final destinations are arrived at by adding the margins allowed by defendants to distributors and retailers as another factor in the formula. In selling to jobbers, distributors and other large quantity purchasers of petroleum products for resale, defendants charge all rail freight rates from base points to purchasers' destinations in addition to the base prices, although such petroleum products actually move in interstate commerce from points of origin other than base points and at costs to defendants less than all rail freight rates. By carrying out this scheme, defendants are able to maintain the factors of their price-fixing formula and exact from purchasers and consumers amounts of money in excess of those actually expended by defendants for transportation from actual points of origin to purchasers' destinations.

48. In order to raise, fix, peg and stabilize spot market prices of gasoline and other petroleum products, defendants purchase, at agreed upon artificially high and non-competitive prices, quantities of those commodities from sellers, mainly independent refiners who sell in the spot markets and elsewhere at prices below those fixed by de-competitive prices at which gasoline and other petroleum products are being sold currently, thereby making effective and maintaining the fixed, high prices agreed upon by defendants. Such purchasing programs have been organized and utilized by defendants in refining areas throughout the United States and purchases have been made through them from sellers located in the states of California, Wyoming, Montana, Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Kansas, Arkansas, Kentucky, Illinois, Michigan, and Pennsylvania. To facilitate the operation of these purchasing activities, defendants have promoted and organized corporations and voluntary membership organizations among independent refiners. Such purchasing activities monopolize available supplies of those petroleum products; prevent those products from moving in interstate commerce to consuming areas for sale in competition with defendants' products at prices lower than those agreed upon by defendants; artificially raise, fix, peg and stabilize the prices of petroleum products in spot markets; increase, fix and maintain tank car prices of gasoline and petroleum products contracted to be sold and sold in interstate commerce; and increase wholesale and retail prices throughout the United States.
[fol. 158] fendants. Defendants cause such sellers to report to the trade journals the high, fixed prices paid by defendants rather than the lower spot market prices at which the sellers sell to purchasers other than the defendants. The reporting of the agreed upon high prices paid by defendants misleads the trade journals and causes them to publish the fixed spot market prices rather than the lower

[fol. 159] 49. Defendants concertedly fix and maintain uniform, excessive and exorbitant price differentials between the various grades of gasoline, that is, third, regular, and premium, thereby exacting unreasonably high prices from jobbers, distributors, service station operators and the consuming public.

50. As a further part of the price-fixing program, defendants concertedly cause a selected defendant to post and publish the agreed upon prices for the sale of petroleum products in tank car, tank wagon, barrel and gallon lots in designated areas of the United States. The following companies have been selected to post prices in the designated areas:

Selected Company:	States in designated area
Socony-Vacuum Oil Company, Incorporated.	Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, and New York.
The Atlantic Refining Company.	Pennsylvania and Delaware.
Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.	New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and the District of Columbia.

Selected Company:	States in designated area:
The Standard Oil Company (Ohio).	Ohio.
The Standard Oil Company (Kentucky).	Kentucky, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, and Florida.
Standard Oil Company (Indiana)	Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota and North Dakota.
Standard Oil Company of Louisiana.	Louisiana, Arkansas, and Tennessee.
Humble Oil & Refining Company	Texas.
Continental Oil Company	Oklahoma, New Mexico, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Idaho, and Montana.
Standard Oil Company of California.	California, Washington, Oregon, Nevada, and Arizona.

Defendants follow the prices so posted by the selected defendant in quoting, posting and publishing prices for pe- [fol. 160] troleum products and in selling and contracting to sell petroleum products in each of such areas.

51. Defendant Ethyl Gasoline Corporation is the sole manufacturer and distributor of tetra-ethyl lead fluid, a patented fluid, which removes the knocking characteristic of gasoline when mixed as a blending agent. Approximately seventy-five per cent of all motor fuel consumed in the United States contains tetra-ethyl lead fluid and all defendant majors, with the exception of Sun Oil Company, use it as a blending agent. Defendants, individually and collectively, agree with defendant Ethyl Gasoline Corporation to use this fluid on the basis of an agreed system of licenses which are granted by the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation in restrictive licensing contracts, which require uniform methods of blending tetra-ethyl lead fluid with gasoline. Defendants and Ethyl Gasoline Corporation also agree that the latter prohibit the blending, use or marketing of tetra-ethyl lead fluid by non-defendants, except with the approval of, and under terms and conditions dictated by and agreeable to defendants. Defendants do not approve applications of independent refiners who sell gasoline at prices below those fixed and maintained by the defendants.

52. Defendants concertedly fix and maintain the prices at which they require their jobbers, distributors and service station operators, purchasing petroleum products in interstate commerce for resale, to sell such products, and the difference between such agreed upon prices and those at which defendants sell their petroleum products are the margins allowed to such resellers. Defendants have adopted [fol. 161] uniform margin provisions as part of the uniform contracts used in selling petroleum products to distributors and through commission agents. These margins are progressively narrowing and at times are fixed and maintained at such low levels that jobbers, distributors, commission agents and service station operators are either barely able to meet their costs of operation and distribution or are compelled to sell at a loss. These uniform narrow margins prevent jobbers, distributors, commission agents, and service station operators, who purchase defendants' petroleum products and sell them to resellers and the consuming public, from competing with the defendants and with each other at prices lower than those fixed by defendants.

53. Defendants have agreed to make and are making periodic inspections and surveys of gasoline prices posted and charged by jobbers, distributors and trackside and other service station operators, for the purpose of ascertaining the identity of those who are selling at prices less than those posted and charged by the defendants. The information so obtained is transmitted to the suppliers of the price-cutting sellers who coerce and compel those sellers to sell at the prices fixed by the defendants by theatening to cut off and cutting off their supply of gasoline.

54. Defendants concertedly designate selected defendants in various localities throughout the United States to supply service stations with petroleum products for resale at prices below those fixed and maintained by defendants and below those at which independents sell, thereby eliminating independent competitors from business and "stabilizing" local [fol. 162] price situations without lowering fixed and maintained tank wagon prices. Some of these suppliers and service stations are operated under the guise of independent ownership when in truth and in fact they are owned, controlled or operated by designated defendant companies, individually or jointly. These stations are supplied with petroleum products at a loss to defendants.

55. Defendants are eliminating independent trackside service stations, which are enabled to sell below the prices fixed and maintained by the defendants through savings from direct distribution to the consumer, from business by concertedly forcing railroad companies to refuse new leases and cancel old leases for, and raise rentals on, sites on which trackside service stations are located.

56. Defendants sell petroleum products to so-called commercial consumers, such as transportation companies, industrial establishments, public utilities and others using large quantities of gasoline, fuel oils and lubricants, at fixed prices which are lower than those fixed and maintained by them in sales of identical petroleum products, in similar quantities, to jobbers, distributors, service station operators and the consuming public generally. This practice prevents independent refiners, jobbers, distributors, and service station operators from selling to commercial consumers and enables defendants to monopolize this trade and commerce in petroleum products.

57. When requested to bid on public or private contracts for petroleum products, defendants fix the prices to be submitted as bids and select the defendant who is to be the low bidder. By means of this collusive action defendants [fol. 163] refrain from bidding against each other except in a perfunctory manner and without good faith, submit agreed upon uniform prices in lieu of competitive bids, prevent independent refiners, jobbers and distributors from successfully competing with defendants and monopolize the sale of petroleum products to large public and private consumers.

Combinations

58. The twenty-two integrated major companies are engaged in the production, refining, transportation, and marketing of petroleum and its products, while a large number of non-integrated or independent companies engage in one or more but not all of those branches of the industry. Each of the integrated companies is a large combination of capital and individuals possessing great economic power, including the power to handicap or even stifle effective competition by the nonintegrated companies. Moreover, all of these integrated companies operate in effect as one unit under substantially identical business policies and practices. Through the control of oil reserves, wells, transportation and marketing facilities, the twenty-two companies have been able to restrict the production of independent producers, exclude independents from the use of transportation and marketing facilities and fix the price of petroleum and its products. In an attempt to prevent such restraints, the government has successfully prosecuted numerous actions against the majors. However, such piecemeal prosecutions have not resulted in the restoration of free competition or prevented the recurrence of such arrangements, [fol. 164] because the power inherent in the combinations continued to exist.

VI

Purpose and effect

59. Defendants have adopted and engaged in each of the means, methods, devices, practices and activities aforesaid with the purpose, intent and actual effect of unlawfully restraining, monopolizing, attempting to monopolize, controlling and otherwise unlawfully restricting the aforesaid trade and commerce in petroleum and its products.

60. Defendants, by concerted action, through the Institute, and independently of it, have actively and effectively restricted their own activities and dominated and restricted the activities and business policies of all others engaged in producing, transporting, refining and marketing petroleum and its products, particularly those activities and policies connected with and relating to the production, transportation, marketing and utilization of crude oil, the methods of transporting and marketing petroleum products and the price structures of crude oil and petroleum products throughout the industry.

61. Defendants by concertedly engaging in the unlawful activities herein described have monopolized the known crude oil reserves; have limited the amounts of crude oil produced by themselves and others for the purpose of reducing the amount available for the manufacture of petroleum products; have obtained control of practically all of the crude oil produced; have maintained the prices paid [fol. 165] to independent producers of crude oil at a low level in all fields except in those where defendants maintained high prices to eliminate independent competitors who had to rely upon purchases in those fields; have restrained the interstate transportation of crude oil; have limited the amounts of petroleum products manufactured by themselves and others; have obtained control of a substantial portion of the petroleum products produced by independent refiners; have monopolized the sale of petroleum products; have precluded independents from competing successfully with them by increasing the independents' cost of transporting petroleum products to market while decreasing their own and by obtaining control of virtually all of the facilities of distribution from refinery to consumer and preventing the operators of these facilities from handling products of independents; have restrained the interstate transportation of petroleum products; and have fixed and maintained high and arbitrary prices for the sale of their petroleum products and have driven out of business independents who attempted to sell below such prices.

62. The consumer has been deprived through the operation of the present structure of the oil industry of the natural advantages of geographical position. The present combination has caused high rates to be charged for the use of pipelines from oil wells to independent refineries and for the use of pipelines or railway haulage from independent refineries to markets. On the other hand the combination has caused the railroads to maintain low rates on the transportation of petroleum products from the refineries and terminals of the integrated companies to consuming [fol. 166] areas and has received rebates from pipelines. This has contributed to the maintenance of a fixed price through the reduction of competition; it has also denied to consumers the advantages of natural geographic position, and has resulted in the uneconomic and artificial allocation of the costs of transportation so far as the consumer is concerned.

63. The consumer has been deprived through the operation of the present structure of the oil industry of the ability to buy petroleum products from numerous competitors. The setting of a price, high or low, suitable to the integrated companies, the control of transportation, and the exchange of gasoline between the integrated companies, thus eliminating the cost of transportation while deceiving the public, has eliminated most of the competition and products of independent refineries. The control of bulk plants obtained through exclusive dealing contracts and by threats of ruinous competition, promises of guaranteed margins and excessive loans, and the control of distributors including service stations has eliminated most of the products of independent refiners from the market and has also made it impossible for the consumer to buy at the service station products other than those of the controlling integrated company.

64. The consumer has been deprived through the operation of the present structure of the oil industry of the benefits of technological improvements which should be reflected in lower costs to producers and refiners and lower prices to consumers. The maintenance of fixed prices and artificial transportation rates has restricted or eliminated competition which would force the integrated companies [fol. 167] to give to the consumer the benefits of lower costs arising from technological improvements. The price to the consumer does not reflect the lower costs and the greater recovery of gasoline through modern refining methods, and the increased value of by-products. Adoption of artificial transportation rates has also withheld from the consumer the benefits of the development of new types of transportation facilities, such as pipelines, trucks and barges, because of their use in the price formula which does not take into account either the origin of the product or the transportation facility actually used.

65. The operation of the present structure of the oil industry has fostered and preserved an uneconomic, duplicative and wasteful marketing system. The cost of transporting and marketing the refined product under the present system is greater than the cost of production. This uneconomic system has been preserved through the denial of pipelines to independent refiners and through the capture of marketing outlets by the integrated companies. The present marketing system is wasteful in that it operates through service stations which cannot sell more than one line of products because of agreements in sales contracts and the use of the cancellation clauses in the leases of service stations.

66. The power possessed by the integrated companies has deprived a substantial number of citizens of their justly due profit through the operation of the so-called "Iowa Plan". This plan, previously described, places the burden of competition in the sale of gasoline on the service station operator, who, in order to preserve his lease, is forced to forego the margin allowed for his profit. The advantages [fol. 168] that the consumer obtains through lower prices are thus placed at the expense of the service station operator, whose facilities are not used economically because of forced full line policies.

67. The operation of the present structure of the oil industry has resulted in the production of crude oil, necessary for the safety of the nation, not on true conservation principles, but on the principle of price maintenance.

68. Each of the four branches of the industry is dominated and controlled by the 22 defendant majors who transact more than eighty-five per cent of the total business of the industry. In all the four branches of the industry, where normal competition once flourished, the rapid development of the completely integrated defendants has substantially destroyed competition. The possession and use of facilities and supplies provided by integration enables defendants to render ineffective and stifle existing and potential competition which defendants have combined and conspired to eliminate through the aforesaid means, methods, devices, practices and activities and their control of crude oil production, their refusal to operate pipelines as common carriers, their acquisitions of bulk plants and service stations and the successful forcing of railroads to maintain preferential freight rates. Defendant majors operate their integrated organizations in all branches of the industry as a single unit and the profits of one branch are used to subsidize operations in branches in which competition exists, thus enabling the defendants to enjoy unfair competitive advantages over independent competitors. Operating on an integrated basis, the defendants have [fol. 169] purposely neglected and failed to compute investments in, incomes from, and costs of operations of, each of the various branches in order to conceal the results and effects of their illegal purposes and practices.

69. Unless enjoined by this Court the defendants will continue to violate the Acts of Congress in the manner heretofore alleged.

VII

Prayer

Wherefore, plaintiff prays:

(1) That summons issue directed to each defendant, including those residing or having offices outside of the District of Columbia, commanding each defendant to appear herein and answer the allegations contained in this complaint and to abide by and perform such acts and decrees as the Court may make in the premises;

(2) That the defendant Institute be forthwith dissolved;

(3) That the provisions of the contracts of sale of petroleum products, of agency and lease with jobbers, distributors, commission agents, service station operators and commercial consumers which provide for exclusive dealings with defendants, be adjudged and decreed to be monopolistic devices and also in violation of Section 3 of the Clayton Act and be cancelled forthwith, and that the defendants herein and each of them and their respective successors be permanently enjoined from executing or entering into any contracts or leases containing similar provisions, and from concertedly adopting contracts, for the sale of petroleum products, having uniform provisions agreed upon by the defendants;

[fol. 170] (4) That the defendant majors and secondaries and each of them be permanently enjoined and restrained from dominating or controlling or attempting to dominate or control, directly or indirectly, buying, selling, pricing and operating policies of the operators of facilities used in the marketing of petroleum products by the means herein described or by any other means whatsoever;

(5) That the discriminatory price provisions of the contracts entered into by defendants with, and the sale of products by defendants at discriminatory prices to, competing service station operators, be adjudged and decreed to be monopolistic devices and also in violation of Section 2 of the Clayton Act and that such provisions be cancelled forthwith, and that the defendants herein and each of them be permanently enjoined from entering into future contracts for the sale of, and from selling in the future, any petroleum products to competing service station operators under similar discriminatory provisions and prices;

(6) That the defendants and each of them and each and all of their representatives, officers, directors, agents, servants and employees be permanently enjoined and restrained from directly or indirectly entering into or carrying out any contract, combination or conspiracy to fix, raise, lower,

stabilize or peg prices at which the defendants purchase petroleum products, sell their petroleum products or require that others shall resell such petroleum products in the manner and by the means herein alleged or in other manner or means;

[fol. 17[illegible]] (7) That the defendants and each of them and each and all of their representatives, officers, directors, agents, servants and employees be permanently enjoined and restrained from directly or indirectly entering into or carrying out any contract, combination or conspiracy to maintain prices, margins and price differentials, concertedly fixed by defendants, in the manner herein described or in any other manner;

(8) That the defendant majors and secondaries and each of them be permanently enjoined and restrained from operating common carrier crude oil gathering pipelines as private carriers to monopolize gathering pipeline transportation of crude oil in violation of the Sherman Anti-trust Act;

(9) That the defendants and each of them and each and all of their representatives, officers, directors, agents, servants and employees be permanently enjoined and restrained from directly or indirectly combining or conspiring to eliminate actual or potential competitors by coercing, inducing and agreeing with railroad companies to establish and maintain rail freight rates which are disadvantageous to competitors, by inducing and coercing railroad companies to eliminate track-side service stations, and by using bogus independents as price cutters to eliminate those competitors who are selling below the prices fixed and maintained by the defendants, and by engaging in any other activities which are designed to or have the effect of impairing the ability of such competitors to compete with defendants.

(10) That the defendants and the officers, directors, members, representatives, agents and employees of the defend-[fol. 172] ant Institute be permanently enjoined and restrained from promoting, furthering, and maintaining, directly or indirectly, any combination, conspiracy and monopoly herein described, from organizing and maintaining in concert with the corporate defendants and their officers, agents or employees any organizations or committees thereof to supervise, enforce or make effective those illegal policies, programs, and practices adopted and agreed upon by the defendants as herein described, or any similar policies, programs and practices;

(11) That the combinations and conspiracies to restrain and monopolize the trade and commerce among the several states of the United States, with foreign nations and within the District of Columbia, together with the attempts to monopolize and the monopolization of said trade and commerce and contracts in restraint thereof, hereinbefore described, be declared illegal and in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act;

(12) That the defendants and each of them and each and all of their representatives, officers, directors, agents, servants and employees, and all persons acting or claiming to act on behalf of the defendants, or any of them, be permanently enjoined and restrained from continuing to carry out, directly or indirectly, expressly or impliedly, the contracts, combinations and conspiracies to restrain and monopolize, the attempts to monopolize and the monopolization of said trade and commerce in petroleum and its products, and from entering into and carrying out any contracts, restraints, attempts to monopolize and monopolies similar to those herein described;

[fol. 173] (13) That the defendants and each of them be permanently enjoined and restrained from directly or indirectly acquiring, pursuant to any agreement, arrangement or understanding, any part of the crude oil reserves of the United States when the purpose or effect of such acquisition is to restrain or monopolize any part of the above described interstate or foreign trade or commerce;

(14) That the defendant majors, their subsidiaries and affiliates, and each of them be permanently enjoined and restrained from concertedly engaging, with any other defendant major or its subsidiaries and affiliates or with any other person, firm or corporation in the petroleum industry, in any activities which are designed to or have the effect of reducing and restricting the amounts of crude oil produced or the amounts of petroleum products manufactured by defendants or others;

(15) That the defendants and each of them and each and all of their representatives, officers, directors, agents, servants and employees be permanently enjoined and restrained from directly or indirectly entering into or carrying out any contract, combination or conspiracy to fix, raise, lower, stabilize or maintain prices for the purchase or sale of crude oil in the manner herein alleged or in any other manner;

(16) That the plaintiff have such other and further relief with respect to the organization, functioning and operation of the defendants as the Court may deem proper; and [fol. 174] (17) That the plaintiff recover its costs herein.

United States of America, Edward M. Curran, United States Attorney for the District of Columbia. Robert H. Jackson, Attorney General. Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General. Mac Asbill, Special Assistant to the Attorney General. W. B. Watson Snyder, Special Assistant to the Attorney General. H. Douglas Weaver, Special Attorney.

[fol. 175] AFFIDAVIT "B"

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of California,
County of Los Angeles, ss:

JOHN M. HALL, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

That he is a member of the bar of this Honorable Court and one of the attorneys of record for defendants herein;

That the charges of the complaint herein involve alleged operations of defendants during past years within the States of California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico, Idaho and Utah in the sales of gasoline and other products;

That all of defendants' operations in connection with such sales were under the ultimate direction of defendants' employees whose offices are and have been permanently located at the headquarters offices of defendants in the Standard Oil Building at 225 Bush Street in the City and County of San Francisco, California, and at other locations in said City and County of San Francisco, all within the Northern District of California; that such permanent records as exist of such alleged operations are presently and for years past have been located at such headquarters offices, where many of them are being constantly used or consulted in connection with defendants' day to day operations;

That from investigation conducted by affiant since the time of the filing of the complaint herein it appears that the witnesses and the papers and records to which resort must be had by defendants upon any trial of this cause are all permanently located at such headquarters offices, and that there is a substantial number of said witnesses and that said papers and records are voluminous;

That affiant is informed and verily believes and upon that ground avers that defendants' business operations re- [fol: 176] quire the presence of said witnesses and said papers and records at said headquarters offices, and that a removal of the same therefrom to the Southern District of California would impose a substantial burden and hardship upon defendants and an embarrassment to their operations at said headquarters offices and a substantial expense to defendants in defraying transportation costs and necessary hotel expenses for said witnesses, and would also subject said witnesses and others whose presence might be required in connection with this litigation to great personal inconvenience as a result of being required to travel from the City and County of San Francisco to the City of Los Angeles and sojourn at the City of Los Angeles for extended periods, all of which would be avoided if this action were prosecuted in said Northern District;

That at San Francisco, California, within said Northern District where said headquarters offices are located there is a United States District Court available to plaintiff as well as a United States attorney and his staff, as well as an office of the Anti-Trust Division of the Department of Justice of the United States;

That a further burden and hardship will be imposed upon defendants and their counsel in connection with the preparation for a trial of this cause, if the same be tried in this Court instead of in said Northern District, in that it will be necessary in connection with such preparation for said counsel to consult with prospective witnesses and others whose duties necessarily require their continued presence at said headquarters offices in order that the business of defendants may be carried on, and to examine papers and records at said headquarters offices, both in connection with such consultation and otherwise, all of which will impose additional substantial expense upon defendants, which [fol. 177] would be avoided if this action were prosecuted in said Northern District.

Wherefore, affiant prays that this cause be dismissed upon the principle of forum non conveniens.

(Signed) John M. Hall.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 2nd day of April, 1947. (Signed) Harriet S. Elder, Notary Public in and for the County of Los Angeles, State of California. My commission expires June 16, 1949.

[fol. 178] AFFIDAVIT "C"

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of California,
City and County of San Francisco, ss:

G. M. FOSTER, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

That he is now and for many years last past has been an assistant secretary of defendant, Standard Oil Company of California, and has personal knowledge of the facts herein averred;

That in years past said defendant has used forms of contracts and subleases in its dealings with dealers; that the content of the forms of said contracts and subleases, which have frequently been printed forms, has varied from time to time; that this has been true with respect to so-called "Dealer Agreements," "Dealer Agreements TBA," "Distributor Agreements," "Petroleum Products and Equipment Agreements" and "Subleases";

That affiant has read the complaint herein, but is unable to determine therefrom which of the forms heretofore used by said defendant were before the pleader or are attempted to be described in paragraphs 28 to 31 inclusive therein or are charged to be in violation of the anti-trust Acts.

(Signed) G. M. Foster.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 26th day of March, 1947. (Signed) Chalmer Munday, Notary Public in and for the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

[fol. 180] Supporting Motion No. 1 (for a stay of proceedings).

(1) This Court should stay further proceedings herein until a termination of proceedings in the earlier action filed in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia by plaintiff herein against the defendants herein and others.

Cresta Blanca Wine Co. v. Eastern Wine Corp., 143 Fed. (2d) 1012, 1014 (C.C.A. 2, 1944)
Green v. Gravatt, 35 F. Supp. 491, 492, 493 (Pa. 1940)
United States v. Anaconda Wire & Cable Co., 52 F. Supp. 824, 826 (Pa. 1943)
Crosley Corp. v. Hazeltine Corp., 122 Fed. (2d) 925, 929 (C.C.A. 3, 1941; cert. den. 315 U.S. 813)
Lockhart v. Mercer Tube & Mfg. Co., 53 F. Supp. 301, 305 (Del. 1943)
Schwartz v. Kaufman, 46 F. Supp. 318, 319 (N.Y. 1940)
Gulf Oil Corp. v. Gilbert, —— U.S. ——; —— L. ed. —— (March 10, 1947)

(2) A motion to stay proceedings is not governed by Rule 12(b) F.R.C.P.

Green v. Gravatt, 35 F. Supp. 491, 493 (Pa. 1940)

[fol. 181] Supporting Motion No. 2 (to dismiss).

This is a proper case for the application of the principle of forum non conveniens.

Gulf Oil Corp. v. Gilbert, —— U.S. ——, No. 93—October Term, 1946, decided March 10, 1947.

[fol. 182] Supporting Motion No. 3 (to dismiss).

(1) A motion to dismiss does not admit legal conclusions.

"It is familiar learning that allegations as to matters of law are not admitted on a motion to dismiss." [citing authorities]

Green v. Brophy, 110 Fed. (2d) 539, 544 (C.A. D.C. 1940)

> "The motion to dismiss conceded the truth of all well-pleaded facts, but did not concede the truth or accuracy of the legal conclusions pleaded."
>
> Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Ettman, 120 Fed. (2d) 837, 839 (C.C.A. 8, 1941)

> "A motion to dismiss . . . does not admit arguments, inferences or legal conclusions." [Per District Judge J. F. T. O'Connor granting motion to dismiss.]
>
> Flanigan v. Security-First Nat. Bank, 41 F. Supp. 77; 79 (S.D. Calif. 1941)

(2) The "Offenses Charged" alleged in par. 27 are that defendants have violated the anti-trust Acts by executing and entering into certain contracts and agreements with service station and garage operators in the states of California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico, Idaho and Utah. Then follows the allegation: ". . . which said written contracts and oral agreements are in unreasonable restraint of, and substantially lessen competition in, the herein described interstate trade and commerce in petroleum products and automotive accessories." Later on, in par. 34, it is alleged that these contracts had the effect of eliminating competition for the patronage of a "substantial portion" of the retail outlets, and depriving a "sub-
[fol. 183] stantial portion" of the retail outlets of the opportunity of purchasing such products, and "securing to defendants . . . a monopoly" of the patronage in a "substantial portion" of the retail outlets for such products, "and have had the effect thereby of restraining and substantially lessening competition in the interstate trade and commerce in petroleum products and automotive accessories hereinabove described."

The above passages which are underscored are legal conclusions, and accordingly must be disregarded.

In Newport News Co. v. Schauffler, 303 U.S. 54, 57 (1938), the Court, affirming a decree affirming the dismissal of a complaint said:

> "First. The Company insists that since the case was heard on motion to dismiss the bill which alleges that the Company is not engaged in interstate or foreign commerce and its relations to its employees do not affect such commerce, these allegations must be accepted as true. The motion admits as facts allegations describing the manner in which the business is carried on, but not legal conclusions from those facts. The allegations that interstate or foreign commerce is not involved are conclusions of law."

In United States v. Griffith Amusement Co., 1 F.R.D. 229, 231 (Okla. 1940), with reference to a complaint under secs. 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, the Court said:

"A conspiracy or combination cannot be alleged merely in the terms of the statute."

As said in United States v. French Bauer, Inc., 48 F. Supp. 260 (Ohio, 1942; appeal by United States dismissed on its motion 318 U.S. 795) quashing an indictment:

[fol. 184] ". . . it is necessary in an indictment or in a civil pleading seeking relief under the Sherman Act that not merely conclusions but factual allegations be made which are sufficient to show direct and substantial impact upon interstate commerce."

(3) The complaint fails to allege facts (as distinguished from these legal conclusions) showing:

(A) That there was any contract, combination or conspiracy in restraint of interstate commerce (sec. 1 of Sherman Act).

(B) That there was any restraint of interstate commerce which was unreasonable. (sec. 1 of Sherman Act)

(C) That there was any lessening of competition in interstate commerce. (sec. 3 of Clayton Act)

(D) That there was any lessening of competition which was substantial. (sec. 3 of Clayton Act)

(E) That there was any tendency to create a monopoly in interstate commerce. (sec. 3 of Clayton Act)

(F) That the agreements and contracts referred to were made "in the course of" interstate commerce. (sec. 3 of Clayton Act)

As said in Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U.S. 469, 500 (1940):

"In the cases considered by this Court since the Standard Oil case in 1911 some form of restraint of commercial competition has been the sine qua non to the condemnation of contracts, combinations or conspiracies under the Sherman Act, and in general restraints upon competition have been condemned only when their purpose or effect was to raise or fix the [fol. 185] market price. It is in this sense that it is said that the restraints, actual or intended, prohibited by the Sherman Act are only those which are so substantial as to affect market prices. Restraints on competition or on the course of trade in the merchandising of articles moving in interstate commerce is not enough, unless the restraint is shown to have or is intended to have an effect upon prices in the market or otherwise to deprive purchasers or consumers of the advantages which they derive from free competition."

In Standard Fashion Co. v. Magrane-Houston Co., 258 U.S. 346, 356 (1922) and in Corn Products Co. v. Comm'n., 324 U.S. 726, 738 (1945) it was pointed out that sec. 3 of the Clayton Act was "not intended to reach every remote lessening of competition" or to prohibit the mere "possibility" of the consequences referred to, i. e. that the lessening of competition must be "substantial."

[fol. 186] Supporting Motion No. 4 (to strike from complaint).

(1) Under Rule 12(f) F.R.C.P. redundant, immaterial, or impertinent matter may be stricken from a pleading.

Minnesota M. & M. Co. v. Carborundum Co., 1 F.R.D. 5, 7 (Del. 1943)

(2) Par. 33 of the complaint, sought to be stricken, alleges "means and methods" which are said to have induced the making of the contracts and agreements declared to be in violation of the Sherman and Clayton Acts. If these contracts and agreements violated these Acts, the means and methods by which they were induced are immaterial and redundant. If they did not violate these Acts, then the means and methods by which they were induced are likewise immaterial and redundant, for they could not make unlawful that which was lawful under the Acts.

(3) Obviously par. 33 would raise innumerable collateral issues. Since these issues are immaterial, defendants should not be required to assume the very considerable burden which would be imposed by preparing to meet them.

(4) The words "and other relationships" in par. 26 are too general and indefinite to require an answer.

United States v. General Motors Corp., 5 Fed. Rules Serv. 12e.2-1, Case 13 (Ill. 1942).

[fol. 187] Supporting Motion No. 5 (for a more definite statement, or bill of particulars).

(1) The province of this motion in a case arising under the anti-trust Acts is well stated in Loce v. Consolidated Edison Co., 1 F.R.D. 559, 562 (N.Y. 1940), as follows:

> "Under Rule 12(e), F.R.C.P., it is provided that a bill of particulars becomes a part of the pleading which it supplements. Accordingly, the particulars 'to enable a party to prepare a responsive pleading or to prepare for trial', are determined with that provision in mind. A contrary view would violate that purpose of the Rules which seeks to obtain short and concise statements of the facts upon which the pleader relies. This does not mean, however, that defendants will be forced to answer general allegations and conclusions, rather than facts, or that the courts will treat the pleadings in all types of actions in the same manner. In cases founded upon the Anti-Trust Act which are dependent for final relief upon the conformation of numerous facts to such flexible concepts as monopoly, interstate commerce, restraint of trade, etc., which are of serious and immediate concern to commercial enterprise, I think that the court should require from plaintiffs in their pleading a statement of facts sufficiently complete to mitigate the dangers that might result if these cases proceeded upon the shaky foundation of a vague and somewhat indefinite complaint. United States v. Griffith Amusement Co., D.C., 1 F.R.D. 229. I am, therefore, inclined to consider liberally defendants' requests for particu> [fol. 188] lars of plaintiff's claim. . ."

The foregoing is quoted with approval in Twin Ports Oil Co. v. Pure Oil Co., 46 F. Supp. 149, 154 (Minn. 1942).

(2) Where the allegations of the complaint, although legally sufficient, are so general and indefinite "that it would be difficult for each of the defendants to prepare a responsive pleading that would adequately meet not only the charges of the complaint but also the requirements of Rule 8," the plaintiff will be required to furnish the particulars demanded.

Camrel Co., Inc. v. Skouras Theatres Corp., 8 Fed. Rules Serv. 8a.25, Case No. 4 (N.J. 1944)

[fol. 189] Supporting Motion No. 6 (for inspection)

(1) Motion under Rule 34 F.R.C.P. may be made at any time after the commencement of the action and prior to answer.

Courteau v. Interlake S. S. Co., 1 F.R.D. 525, 526 (Mich. 1941)

C. F. Simonin's Sons Inc. v. American Can Co., 24 F. Supp. 765 (Pa. 1938)

"Thus, either party may make a motion under Rule 34, giving due notice to all other parties, at any time after jurisdiction has been obtained over the defendant or over property which is the subject of the action."

2 Moore's Federal Practice, p. 2637.

(2) There can be no question that the documents sought to be produced "constitute or contain evidence material to" the "matter involved" in this action, since these are the documents which are the basis for the "Offenses Charged."

Pars. 27 to 31 of the complaint.

(3) Since the charges of the complaint are founded upon these documents and the complaint purports to allege their legal effect (par. 31) and purports to allege (by way of conclusion) certain of their provisions, it may fairly be assumed that plaintiff has copies or forms of these documents in its possession.

(4) As shown by Affidavit "C" the content of the forms of documents of this general character heretofore used by defendant Standard Oil Company of California has varied from time to time.

(5) Defendants are entitled to be specifically informed with respect to the charges against which they are required to defend. Therefore, defendants are entitled to inspect and copy the particular forms of contract and sublease which are relied upon by plaintiff to support its charges [fol. 190] that the anti-trust Acts were violated.

(Italics throughout this memorandum of Points and Authorities have been added.)

[fol. 191] IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

IN AND FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, CENTRAL DIVISION

[Title omitted]

No. 6159-B

Civil

(Nature of Pleading)

NOTICE OF HEARING OF MOTIONS FOR A STAY OF PROCEEDINGS, (AND IN THE ALTERNATIVE) TO DISMISS, (AND IN THE ALTERNATIVE) TO STRIKE FROM COMPLAINT, FOR A MORE DEFENITE STATEMENT OR BILL OF PARTICULARS, AND FOR INSPECTION, TOGETHER WITH SAID MOTIONS, AND AFFIDAVITS AND POINTS AND AUTHORITIES SUPPORTING THE SAME

Received copy of the within Notice this 3rd day of April, 1947.

W. Alan Thody, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; William C. Dixon, Special Assistant to the Attorney General. By J. M. McGrath. Attorneys for Plaintiff.

[fol. 192] [File endorsement omitted]

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

[Title omitted]

APPEARANCES:

For the Plaintiff: Tom C. Clark, Attorney General; Wendell Berge, Assistant Attorney General; Holmes Baldridge, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, all of Washington D. C. Richard B. O'Donnell, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; William C. Dixon, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; W. Alan Thody, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; James M. Carter, United State Attorney, all of Los Angeles, California.

For the Defendants: Lawler, Felix & Hall, By John M. Hall, Los Angeles, California.

DECISION ON MOTIONS OF THE DEFENDANTS—Filed July 14, 1947

[fol. 193] YANKWICH, District Judge:—

In this action brought by the United States to enjoin certain practices of the defendant corporations, which the Complaint alleges to be in violation of the Sherman (15 U.S.C.A., Sec. 4) and the Clayton (15 U.S.C.A., Sec. 25) Anti-Trust Acts, several motions have been interposed by the defendants.

The Complaint, generally, charges certain practices in controlling 8000 stations in eight Western States,—California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico, Idaho, Utah,—and in controlling oil, gasoline, tires, and other products to be sold at these stations to the exclusion of competitors in the same fields.

The motions, heretofore argued and submitted, are now decided as follows:

MOTION No. I

(For a Stay of Proceedings)

This motion seeks to stay proceedings in this cause until the final termination or determination of an anti-trust action instituted by the United States, in the District of Columbia, against the American Petroleum Institute and many other defendants, including the defendant here. The action just mentioned was filed on September 30, 1940. We have had no indication as to its status, whether issue has been joined, whether any attempt has been made to set it for trial; and, if so, when it will be tried.

[fol. 194] A comparison of the Complaint in the case before us with the Complaint in the case just referred to, shows that while both of them charge violations of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act (15 U.S.C.A., Sec. 4) and the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C.A., Sec. 25) the issues are netirely different. The present action is against two defendants. The action in the District of Columbia is directed at practically the entire oil industry. It is true that some of the practices charged in this Complaint as violations of the anti-trust laws, are also charged in the other Complaint. But there, they are incidental to other charges directed at other companies. Here, the control of gasoline stations through the so-called "Iowa Plan" of leasing and like practices, are of the very essence of the charge, and are directed specifically at the two companies.

The Complaint in this case is strictly regional. It seeks judicial condemnation of certain practices in eight western states. The Complaint in the other case is of a national scope. The dissimilarity between the two actions, the present one which seeks to condemn only certain practices relating to the marketing of products through stations in a limited number of states, and the other, which attacks many practices indulged in by practically the entire oil industry, is so great as to forbid a stay of the present action pending the determination of the broader issues involved in the action pending in the District of Columbia.

The Motion is, therefore, denied.

[fol. 195] MOTION No. II

(To Dismiss)

While the motion was not pressed, it is apparent to me that the grounds alleged for dismissal, namely, the present location of witnesses and documents at the defendant's headquarters in the City and County of San Francisco, are insufficient to call for the application of the doctrine of forum non-conveniens, even if we assume that the principle applies to an action of this character, in which the statute permits the action to be brought not only in the "district whereof it is an inhabitant, but also in any district wherein it may be found to transact business". (15 U.S.C.A., Sec. 22) (And see, Eastman Co. v. Southern Photo Co., 1925, 273 U.S. 359; Baltimore & Ohio Ry. Co. v. Kepner, 1941, 314 U.S. 44; Miles v. Illinois Central, 1942, 315 U.S. 698. The teaching of the last two cases that the principle of forum non-conveniens does not apply to cases where special venue is fixed by a statute is approved in Gulf Oil Co. v. Gilbert, No. 93, October Term, decided on March 10, 1947 (See p. 4.

of Official slip decision), on which this motion is chiefly grounded)

The Complaint here alleges that the defendants transact business in this district.

The Motion, is therefore, denied.

[fol. 196] Motion No. III

(To Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim and for Lack of Jurisdiction)

The time which has elapsed since the presentation of these motions has permitted me to make a more detailed study of the complaint in this case than I had occasion to do before their presentation, and when they were being argued.

Such study leads me to the conclusion that the Complaint states a claim and states with sufficient certainty violation of both the Sherman and the Clayton Acts. It is to be borne in mind that this is a civil action. And while it is of a serious nature, it still conforms to the pattern which the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure put into effect and under which pleadings are, in effect, notice pleadings. This, of course, does not mean that a complaint cannot be dismissed for insufficiency of allegations. It does mean however, that if a complaint states a claim in the manner required by Rule 8, it is good against a motion to dismiss. Whether a complaint satisfies this requirement is a question to be determined, in each case, by reference to its allegations.

In the complaint before us, we have a detailed description of the business of the defendants and of the relations between the two. The trade terms to be referred to are defined. The nature of the interstate commerce is described in great detail. The restraint through various forms of agreements, the aim of which is to monopolize certain stations as outlets for petroleum and other products in interstate commerce to the exclusion of competitors are described [fol. 197] in great detail. So also is the effect of these agreements on interstate commerce.

These allegations satisfy the requirements of the statutes under which the action is brought and of accepted rules of pleading. They are of the type which the courts have held sufficient even in a criminal indictment. (See United States v. General Motors Corporation, 1941, 7 Cir., 121 F(2) 376; and see my opinion in United States v. Heating, Piping and Air Conditioning Contracts, etc. Association, 1940, D C Cal., 33 Fed Sup 978).

In fact, if we gauge this complaint by the standards sanctioned by our Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals for actions brought by private parties to recover damages resulting from violations of the anti-trust acts,—in which greater certainty is required in the allegations,—the complaint meets them. (See, Hicks v. Bekins Moving & Storage Co., 1939, 9 Cir., 97 F(2) 583; Lynch v. Magnavox Company, et al, 1938, 9 Cir., 94 F(2) 883; and see, Louisiana Farmers' Protective Unions; Inc., 1942, 8 Cir., 131 F(2) 419, 422-423, where the Court, in referring to the difficulties of pleading in anti-trust cases, uses this very language highly pertinent to this case:

> "To sustain the court below the appellees contend that the appellant has pleaded merely conclusions of law, setting forth in the words of the statute, a conspiracy among the appellees to establish a monopoly in interstate trade in strawberries, and that the complaint is barren of allegations concerning the acts of appellees [fol. 198] constituting the alleged violations of law. It is conceded that more than this is required of the pleader in a civil action under the statute in question, but the complaint here is not so deficient in its allegations of ultimate facts as to justify its dismissal without leave to amend. The courts have always recognized the difficulty in actions of the character here, inherent in the nature of the case, in setting forth in precise detail the acts constituting the alleged violations of the anti-trust laws. Loewe v. Lawlor, 208 U. S. 274, 28 S. Ct. 301, 52 L. Ed. 488, 13 Ann. Cas. 815; Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 395, 396; 25 S. Ct. 276, 279, 49 L. Ed. 518; Buckeye Power Co. v. E. I. DuPont de Nemours Co., D. C. 196 Fed. 514. And since the adoption of the Rules of Civil Procedure, the cases require of the pleader only a plain and simple statement of his case in conformity to Rule 8 (a), 28 U.S.C.A. following Section 723(c). It is not necessary to set out in detail the acts complained of nor the circumstances from which the pleader draws his conclusions that violations of the Acts of Congress have occurred and the pleader has been damaged." (Emphasis added)

The averments in the complaint show clearly the violations charged. So it is evident that the complaint is good against both attacks for failure to state a claim and for lack of jurisdiction.

[fol. 199] In ruling upon this matter, I am merely indicating in a general way the grounds of decision. Time does not permit the writing of an extended opinion. Such an opinion would add little to the elaborate discussions of the scope of the anti-trust statutes which are contained in my own opinion already cited, and in several other recent opinions which I have written on the subject, such as United States vs. Food and Grocery Bureau, 1941, D. C. Cal., 41 Fed. Sup. 884; United States vs. Food and Grocery Bureau, 1942, D. C. Cal., 43 Fed. Sup. 965; United States v. Food and Grocery Bureau, 1942, D. C. Cal., 43 Fed. Sup. 974; and United States v. San Francisco Electrical Contractors Associations, 1944, N. D. Cal., 55 Fed. Sup. 57.

The Motion is, therefore, denied.

MOTION NO. IV

(To Strike from Complaint)

The motion is denied. I believe that the portion of Paragraph 26, which it is sought to strike, and which refers to the contractual and other relationships is not too nebulous. It would allow the Government to prove the results of the relations between the companies and the stations and dealers as well as the actual stipulations in the contract. And Paragraph 33, which it is also sought to strike, refers to certain practices, loans, forgiving of loans, sale of equipment at loss, and the like, as inducements for the undertaking for the exclusive sale of the products of the defendants. Both state facts material to the claim which the Complaint sets forth.

[fol. 200] MOTION NO. V

(For a more Definite Statement or Bill of Particulars)

The Motion for a more definite statement is denied. The Motion for a Bill of Particulars is granted as to items L, M, N, O, and P. It is denied as to all other lettered requests as to which particulars are asked.

As the operations complained of have continued for a long period of years, and, as it appears that the agreements covered by specifications L, M, N, O and P have undergone changes through the years, I believe that the request of the defendants that the Government supply them with the full text of the particular distributor, dealership, equipment and other agreements, is reasonable. Ordinarily, such requests would be denied upon the ground that the agreements are in the possession of the defendants. But, in view of the existence of several editions of these agreements, as shown by the affidavit of the assistant Secretary of the defendant Standard Oil Company of California, it is quite evident that the Government must be relying upon a particular edition. If that be the case, the defendant is entitled to know the particular form on which the charges are based.

MOTION NO. VI

(For Inspection)

The motion is denied. Inspection is sought of the agreements as to which the Bill of Particulars have been granted. The need for inspection is, therefore, gone.

[fol. 201] The Government is allowed thirty days to furnish the Bill of Particulars granted under Motion V, and the defendants shall have thirty days, after being furnished with the Bill of Particulars, to answer to the Complaint.

Dated this 14th day of July, 1947.

(Signed) Leon R. Yankwich, Judge.

[fol. 202] [File endorsement omitted]

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

[Title omitted]

ORDER ON MOTIONS—Filed July 14, 1947

The motions in the above-entitled cause, heretofore argued and submitted, are now decided as follows:

Upon the grounds set forth in the Memorandum Decision filed this day,

Motion No I for a Stay of Proceedings is denied.

Motion No. II to Dismiss is denied.

Motion No. III to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim and for Lack of Jurisdiction is denied.

Motion No. IV to Strike from Complaint is denied.

Motion No. V for a more definite Statement or Bill of Particulars is granted as to Items L, M, N, O, and P, and denied as to all other lettered requests as to which particulars are asked.

[fol. 203] Motion No. VI is denied.

The Government is allowed thirty days to furnish the Bill of Particulars granted under Motion V, and the defendant shall have thirty days after being furnished with the Bill of Particulars, to answer to the Complaint.

Dated this 14th day of July, 1947.

[fol. 204] [File endorsement omitted]

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

[Title omitted]

ANSWER OF DEFENDANTS, STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA AND STANDARD STATIONS, INC.—Filed Nov. 14, 1947

Defendants, Standard Oil Company of California (herein called "defendant Standard"), and Standard Stations, Inc., answering the complaint herein, admit, deny and allege as follows:

First Defense

1. Answering paragraph 1, deny that either of these defendants has violated or is violating any part or parts of either said Sherman Act or said Clayton Act;

2. Answering paragraph 2, deny that any violation or violations of law have occurred or are occurring or have been or are being carried out; deny that interstate commerce in petroleum or other products or automotive or [fol. 205] other accessories was or is involved or was or is described in said complaint or was or is carried on within the Southern District of California or the Central Division thereof;

3. Answering paragraph 3, admit that defendant, Standard Oil Company of California, is and at and since the commencement of this action was a Delaware corporation with its principal office in California located at San Francisco, but deny that its principal place of business is or during that period was located at San Francisco; admit that defendant, Standard Oil Company of California, is and at and since the commencement of this action was engaged in the business of producing, transporting, refining and marketing petroleum and petroleum products, but deny that it does or did during that period produce or refine petroleum or petroleum products in Oregon or Washington or Arizona or Nevada or New Mexico or Idaho or Utah, or that it does or did during that period transport or market petroleum or petroleum products in New Mexico;

4. Answering paragraph 4, admit that Standard Stations, Inc. is and at and since the commencement of this action was a Delaware corporation with its principal office in California located at San Francisco, but deny that its principal place of business is or during that period was located at San Francisco; admit that Standard Stations, Inc. is and at and since the commencement of this action was a wholly-owned subsidiary of Standard Oil Company of California and engaged in the business of managing service stations in California, Washington, Oregon, Arizona, Idaho, Nevada and Utah;

5. Answering paragraphs 5 to 14 inclusive, defendants are without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations of said paragraphs;

6. Answering paragraph 15, admit that defendant, Stand- [fol. 206] ard has petroleum holdings in certain fields located in California; admit that defendant Standard has and at and since the commencement of this action had refineries located at Richmond, El Segundo and Seguro, California; admit that a part of the petroleum products processed at Standard's refineries located in California are and at and since the commencement of this action were ultimately sold and distributed to retail outlets and consumers in the Western Area, except New Mexico, but not in interstate commerce; save as herein expressly admitted, defendants deny the allegations of paragraph 15;

7. Answering paragraph 16, admit that defendants distribute and sell and arrange for the distribution and sale to retail outlets of automotive accessories not produced or manufactured by defendant Standard, and that said accessories are manufactured and produced by various concerns and are in some cases shipped from factories and processing points to warehouses maintained by defendant Standard within the Western Area, exclusive of New Mexico, and that said accessories are distributed to retail outlets from said warehouses; admit that some of said factories and processing points are located in states other than those in which defendant Standard operates; admit that defendant Standard's products and said accessories are sold at retail in competition with defendants' competitors to consumers purchasing the same from retail outlets; save as herein expressly admitted, defendants deny the allegations of paragraph 16;

8. Answering paragraph 17, deny the allegations of said paragraph;

9. Answering paragraph 18, admit that defendants in competition wit competitors of defendant Standard have sought, within the Western Area, exclusive of New Mexico, to lease, take title to, and/or enter into contractual relation- [fol. 207] ships with operators of, certain service station sites; save as herein expressly admitted, defendants deny the allegations of paragraph 18;

10. Answering paragraph 19, admit that prior to 1926 defendant Standard acquired title to certain service station sites and that in so doing it was in competition with its competitors; admit that about 1926 defendant Standard in competition with its competitors began to acquire retail outlets by obtaining leases of certain service station sites; admit that commencing on or about 1927 defendant Standard in competition with its competitors subleased certain service station sites, which it had leased, to independent service station operators upon terms by which the latter would sell at the subleased premises only the petroleum products of defendant Standard; save as herein expressly admitted, defendants deny the allegations of paragraph 19;

11. Answering paragraph 20, admit that beginning on or about 1931 use of the so-called "lease and agency" plan was begun, and that under this method certain operators were constituted agents of defendant Standard, and that the agreements with such agents in certain cases, but not every case, provided that the agent would handle only such gasoline, lubricating oils and other petroleum products as were manufactured or marketed by defendant Standard; save as herein expressly admitted, defendants deny the allegations of paragraph 20;

12. Answering paragraph 21, admit that subsequent to on or about 1937 defendant Standard ceased the use of the so-called "lease and agency" plan; admit that subsequent to on or about 1937 certain service station operators who were sublessees of defendant Standard were obligated by such subleases to handle and sell on the leased premises only such petroleum products as are sold them by defendant Standard; save as herein expressly admitted, defendants [fol. 208] deny the allegations of paragraph 21;

13. Answering paragraph 22, admit that defendant Standard owns or leases from owners or lessees approximately 4100 service stations in the Western Area, and that approximately 1100 are directly operated as company service stations and deal exclusively in defendant Standard's petroleum products and sponsored products; and that approximately 1800 of said service stations are leased to independent operators by leases which obligate the lessee to handle and sell on the leased premises only such petroleum products as are sold the lessee by defendant Standard; save as herein expressly admitted, defendants deny the allegations of paragraph 22;

14. Answering paragraph 23, admit that defendant Standard has contractual relationships with operators of approximately 1100 service stations and other retail outlets in the Western Area in addition to service stations owned by defendant Standard or leased by it from owners or lessees; save as herein or hereinafter expressly admitted, defendants deny the allegations of paragraph 23;

15. Answering paragraph 24, admit that defendant Standard Stations, Inc., has negotiated on behalf of defendant Standard certain of the leases and contracts herein referred to, and has executed some of such leases and contracts in the name and on behalf of defendant Standard; save as herein expressly admitted, defendants deny the allegations of paragraph 24; of gasoline over those of other producer-wholesalers have brand preferences for lubricants and automotive accessories other than those manufactured or sponsored by defendant Standard; admit that the retail outlets with which defendant Standard has leases and contractual relations are during [fol. 209] the existence thereof subject to the provisions of the respective leases and contracts; save as herein expressly admitted, defendants deny the allegations of paragraph 25;

16. Answering paragraph 25, defendants are without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to whether motorists who prefer defendant Standard's brands

17. Answering paragraph 26, defendants are without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to whether numerous or any manufacturers or producers of petroleum products or automotive accessories located in states outside the Western Area, other than those producers and manufacturers whose products are sponsored by defendant Standard, are or since the commencement of this action were prepared to or have attempted to sell their respective brands of petroleum products or tires or tubes or batteries or spark plugs or waxes or polishes or other automotive accessories, to retail outlets with which defendant Standard has leases or contractual relations within the Western Area; admit that the retail outlets with which defendant Standard has leases and contractual relations are during the existence thereof subject to the provisions of the respective leases and contracts; save as herein expressly admitted, defendants deny the allegations of paragraph 26;

18. Answering paragraph 27, deny the allegations of said paragraph;

19. Answering paragraph 28, admit that certain dealer agreements are in force and effect which provide among other things that the dealer agrees to buy from defendant Standard and defendant Standard agrees to sell all of such dealer's requirements of petroleum products used or sold or bought to be used or sold by such dealer at a stated place of business during a stated limited period, and that such agreements provide that the petroleum products to meet such dealer's requirements shall be those brands of gasoline, lubricating oils and other petroleum products sold by defendant Standard to dealers generally in such dealer's [fol. 210] vicinity; save as herein expressly admitted, defendants deny the allegations of paragraph 28;

20. Answering paragraph 29, admit that certain dealer agreements TBA are in force and effect which provide among other things that the dealer agrees to buy from defendant Standard and defendant Standard agrees to sell all of such dealer's requirements of petroleum products used, sold or bought to be used or sold by such dealer at a stated place of business during a stated limited period and that defendant Standard agrees to sell or consign to such dealer and the latter agrees to purchase or receive from defendant Standard and stock and offer for sale all of such dealer's requirements of tires, tubes, and batteries used or sold or bought to be used or sold by such dealer at such stated place of business during such limited period; save as herein expressly admitted, defendants deny the allegations of paragraph 29;

21. Answering paragraph 30, admit that certain petroleum products and equipment agreements are in force and effect which provide among other things that the dealer agrees to buy from defendant Standard and defendant Standard agrees to sell all of such dealer's requirements of petroleum products used or sold or bought to be used or sold by such dealer at a stated place of business during a stated limited period, and that such agreements provide that as additional consideration for the dealer's execution of the agreement, defendant Standard agrees to install certain stated equipment or facilities, title to such equipment or facilities to remain in defendant Standard, and that in certain cases said agreements provide that if, during the life of said agreement including all extension thereof the dealer shall comply with all of the terms and provisions thereof and of any other agreement between the dealer and defendant Standard, and if the dealer shall not exercise any rights the dealer may have to terminate such agree-
[fol. 211] ments, except for defendant Standard's default, and if there shall be no termination of such dealer's tenancy of the premises, then at the expiration of such extended term, or at the expiration of the term thereof, in the absence of such extension, defendant Standard shall give such dealer a bill of sale to all of the personal property and trade fixtures placed by defendant Standard in, under, or upon the premises, or purchased by defendant Standard from such dealer during the first year of the term of said agreement; save as herein expressly admitted, defendants deny the allegations of paragraph 30;

22. Answering paragraph 31, admit that certain subleases are in force and effect which provide among other things that a lessee leases certain premises from defendant Standard and that such lessee shall handle and sell on the leased premises only such petroleum products as are sold such lessee by defendant Standard and that such lessee agrees not to store, handle, sell or distribute on or from said premises any petroleum products of any description other than those petroleum products sold such lessee by defendant Standard, and that in certain cases subleases heretofore made but not now being made provide that the lessee shall have the right during the term thereof to occupy and use the leased premises for the sale and distribution of only such petroleum products and other merchandise as may be sold the lessee by defendant Standard and that the lessee agrees not to store, handle, sell or distribute on or from the leased premises any petroleum products or merchandise of any description other than that sold to the lessee by defendant Standard, except as otherwise authorized in writing by the latter; save as herein expressly admitted, defendants deny the allegations of paragraph 31;

23. Answering paragraph 32, deny the allegations of said paragraph;

24. Answering paragraph 33, admit defendants have in [fol. 212] the past in certain cases employed the methods referred to in sub-paragraphs (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) of said paragraph 33 in order to meet the competition of defendants' competitors who were employing the same methods and offering like or similar benefits to operators; deny that the method referred to in sub-paragraph (b) was employed by defendants subsequent to on or about May 1, 1946, or that it had been employed prior thereto save in rare instances; admit that in certain cases said benefits may have been one of the reasons why the operator entered into a contract, but that in many such cases and in other cases said benefit was accorded the operator for the purpose of promoting his sales, or for some other reason quite apart from the making of any contract or lease; save as herein expressly admitted, defendants deny the allegations of paragraph 33;

25. Answering paragraph 34, deny the allegations of said paragraph;

SECOND DEFENSE

26. That plaintiff has failed to join indispensable parties, in that plaintiff has failed to join as parties hereto the persons and parties with whom defendants are alleged to have made the written contract and leases and oral agreements now in force and effect which are referred to in paragraphs 27, 28, 29, 30, 31 and 32 of the complaint herein, which contracts and leases and oral agreements plaintiff prays be declared void and of no effect;

THIRD DEFENSE

27. That plaintiff has failed to join parties who ought to be parties hereto if complete relief is to be accorded between those already parties hereto, in that plaintiff has failed to join as parties hereto the persons and parties with whom defendants are alleged to have made the written contracts and leases and oral agreements now in force and effect [fol. 213] which are referred to in paragraphs 27, 28, 29, 30, 31 and 32 of the complaint herein, which contracts and leases and oral agreements plaintiff prays be declared void and of no effect;

FOURTH DEFENSE

28. That it is and long has been the practice of defendants and their competitors to make contracts and leases with independent buyers providing that the buyer shall, for a stated period, purchase from the seller and that the seller will sell to the buyer all or substantially all of the buyer's requirements of certain products at a certain location; that said practice arose and has been pursued for the reason that buyers of said products have required contracts and leases which by their terms would assure them over a definite period such supply of said products as would be requisite to satisfy their requirements; that the contracts and leases made by defendants, as well as numerous other contracts and leases, made by numerous competitors of defendants in the Western Area, of like or similar content, substance and purpose, were made because of said requirement of said buyers and because said buyers could not but for the security afforded by said contracts and leases carry on or conduct their retail businesses; that if defendants had failed to conform to said practice, defendants' numerous and aggressive competitors would have entered into contracts and leases with said buyers conforming to said practice and as a result thereof the competition of defendants for the business of said buyers and prospective buyers would have been eliminated;

FIFTH DEFENSE

29. The application and enforcement herein sought of section 1 of the Act of Congress of July 2, 1890, as amended, 26 Stat. 209, 15 U.S.C. 1, commonly known as the Sherman Act, and section 3 of the Act of Congress of October 15, [fol. 214] 1914, as amended, 38 Stat. 731, 15 U.S.C. 14, commonly known as the Clayton Act, was and is discriminatory and inequitable and in violation of the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States and deprives and will deprive defendants of property without due process of law, in that certain contracts and leases made by defendant Standard are alleged to be in violation of said Acts of Congress and are sought to be declared void and of no effect, while numerous other existing contracts and leases made by numerous aggressive competitors of defendants throughout said Western Area of like or similar content, substance and purpose, are not and have not been legally attacked or sought to be enjoined by plaintiff, and defendants are informed and believe and upon such ground allege that the latter contracts and leases will not be legally attacked or sought to be enjoined by plaintiff, by reason whereof a decree herein, as prayed by plaintiff, declaring said contracts and leases of defendant Standard void and of no effect or enjoining performance thereof would enable defendants' said competitors to contract with defendants' existing wholesale customers and prospective wholesale customers upon terms which would be denied defendants with the result that defendants would be unable to compete on equal terms with their competitors, whereby defendants would be deprived of the custom and patronage of their customers, and defendant Standard would lose its investment amounting to many millions of dollars, and defendants would be eliminated from competition for the business of said customers and numerous prospective customers, all to defendants' irreparable injury;

SIXTH DEFENSE

30. At the time of the commencement of this action there was and is now pending and undisposed of in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, another action brought by this plaintiff against these de- [fol. 215] fendants and others, the same being No. 8524 and entitled "United States of America, Plaintiff, vs. American Petroleum Institute, et al., Defendants," wherein the same charges were and are made and the same cause of action, if any, was and is alleged and asserted, and the same relief was and is sought by plaintiff as in this action.

Wherefore, defendants severally pray that proceedings herein be stayed pending a final determination of said action No. 8524, and that plaintiff take nothing at any time by reason of its complaint herein, and that this action be dismissed, and for such costs as may lawfully be awarded defendants, and for such other and further relief as may be meet and equitable.

Lawler, Felix & Hall, Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, Felix T. Smith, John M. Hall, by John M. Hall, Attorneys for defendants.

[fol. 216] IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

In and for the Southern District of California, Central Division

No. 6159-Y, Civil

(Nature of Pleading)

Answer—(of defendants, Standard Oil Company of California and Standard Stations, Inc.)

Received copy of the within Answer this 14th day of November 1947.

William C. Dixon, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, W. Alan Thody, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, by ——— ———, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

Received copy of the within Answer this 14th day of November 1947.

W. Alan Thody, Attorney for United States.

[fol. 217] [File endorsement omitted]

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

[Title omitted]

STIPULATION FOR AMENDMENT OF ANSWER AND ORDER THEREON.—Filed April 19, 1948

It is hereby stipulated by and between the parties, by their respective counsel, that defendants' answer herein may be amended in the following particular:

That the first clause of paragraph 13 of said answer, which now reads:

> "Answering paragraph 22, admit that defendant Standard owns or leases from owners or lessees approximately 4100 service stations in the Western area, . . ."

may be amended so as to read:

> "Answering paragraph 22, admit that defendant [fol. 218] Standard owns or leases from owners or lessees approximately 5100 service stations in the Western area, . . ."

Dated, April 6, 1948.

William C. Dixon, Special Assistant to the Attorney General. W. Alan Thody, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, by William B. Dixon, Attorneys for plaintiff.

Lawler, Felix & Hall, Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, John M. Hall, by John M. Hall, Attorneys for defendants.

It is so ordered.

Dated, April 19th, 1948.

Leon R. Yankwich, Judge.

[fol. 219] IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

Southern District of California
Central Division

No. 6159-Y Civil

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff,

vs.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA and STANDARD STATIONS, INC., Defendants.

[File endorsement omitted.]

[fol. 220] APPEARANCES:

For the Plaintiff: William C. Dixon, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; W. Alan Thody, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; Lawrence W. Somerville, Special Attorney Anti-Trust Division; Theodore Driscoll, Special Attorney Anti-Trust Division; Tom C. Clark, Attorney General; James M. Carter, United States Attorney.

For the Defendants: Lawler, Felix & Hall, by John M. Hall; Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, by Everett A. Mathews.

OPINION—Filed June 7, 1948

[fol. 221] By this suit in equity, the Government seeks a decree adjudging that certain practices engaged in by the defendants and certain contracts entered into by them, unreasonably restrain interstate trade and commerce in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Anti Trust Act (1), and substantially lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in a line of commerce, in violation of Section 3 of the Clayton Act. (2) The Government asks us to declare the exclusive supply provisions in the contracts and the practices flowing from them to be void and of no effect.

In addition, we are asked to enjoin the defendants, in perpetuity, from entering into or enforcing any contract, agreement, or understanding, express, or implied, with any independent service station operator or garage operator, or from inducing or compelling, or attempting to induce or compel, any such person from entering into any contract, agreement or understanding, which has any of the following requirements:

(a) That the Independent Service Station Operator or Garage Operator shall secure all his requirements of petroleum products from defendant Standard, or shall not handle the petroleum products of any other company;

(b) That the Independent Service Station Operator, or Garage Operator shall secure all his requirements of any one or more types of automobile accessories from or through defendants Standard and Standard Stations; [fol. 222] Inc., or will not handle accessories competitive with those distributed or sponsored by defendants, Standard and Standard Stations, Inc.

(c) That the sale of any petroleum product or automotive accessories to any Independent Service Station Operator, or Garage Operator shall be conditional on the sale of other petroleum products or automotive accessories.

The action was instituted on January 2, 1947. Many proceedings have taken place before the trial and an extensive file has been built up. However, as a case of this character must be determined on the basis of facts existing at the time of the trial, it is not necessary to give a detailed analysis of the pleadings in the case or the proceedings before the court.

What precedes is sufficient for the purpose of the discussion to follow.

YANKWICH, District Judge:

I

THE PROVED FACTS

Notwithstanding the lengthy trial and the large number of exhibits introduced, the issues in the case are rather narrow, as will appear further on in the opinion when we expound the legal principles which control the case. [fol. 223] There is, therefore, no need to review elaborately the facts, proved. A brief summary will suffice.

The defendant Standard Oil Company of California is a Delaware corporation with its principal place of business at San Francisco, California. It is engaged in the business of producing, transporting, refining and marketing petroleum and petroleum products, principally in the states of California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico, Idaho and Utah.

The defendant Standard Stations, Incorporated, is a corporation organized under the laws of Delaware with its principal place of business at San Francisco. It is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Standard Oil Company of California, and is engaged in the business of managing service stations in the seven states just mentioned. The number of these stations is 1063.

As the issues have narrowed themselves by the proof, no further reference need be made to these stations so operated which have been referred to in the evidence as "employe operated stations." The Government does not question (indeed, it could not) the right of the Standard Oil Company of California to operate its own stations and sell therein any product it manufactures or distributes. Hence when we refer to "Standard" in what follows, it will be understood that the reference is to Standard Oil Company of California, the parent company, actually engaged in what, for brevity, we shall call "the oil business".

The evidence in the cases shows that, as of March 12, 1947, Standard, in addition to the company operated serv- [fol. 224] ice stations, had contractual arrangements with 7145 stations in the area. The relationship of Standard to these stations was governed by the five types of agreements entered into with the operators of the stations. They were:

(1) "Dealer Agreements," of which there were 1656, containing the following clause:

"1. Standard Oil Company of California, a corporation hereinafter called 'Company' agrees to sell to —— hereinafter called 'Dealer', and Dealer agrees to buy from Company, all of Dealer's requirements of petroleum products used or sold or bought to be used or sold by Dealer at ——. The petroleum products to meet Dealer's requirements hereunder shall be those brands of gasoline, lubricating oils, and other petroleum products sold by Company to its dealers generally in Dealer's vicinity."

(2) "Distributor Agreements", of which there were 556, containing the following:

"Company agrees to sell to Distributor, and Distributor agrees to buy from Company and stock and offer for sale all of Distributor's requirements of petroleum products used or sold or bought to be used or sold by Distributor in the conduct of his business on the premises hereinafter described. The petroleum products to meet Distributor's requirements hereunder shall be those brands of gasoline, lubricating oils and other petroleum products currently sold at service stations operated by Standard Stations, Inc. in Distributor's vicinity, and Distributor agrees not to store, handle, distribute, or sell any other brand or brands of [fol. 225] petroleum products at or from the station."

(3) "PETROLEUM PRODUCTS AND EQUIPMENT AGREEMENTS", of which there were 912, containing this clause:

"1. Standard Oil Company of California, a corporation, hereinafter called 'Company', agrees to sell to —— hereinafter called 'Dealer', and Dealer agrees to buy from Company, all of Dealer's requirements of petroleum products used or sold or bought to be used or sold by Dealer at ——. The petroleum products to meet Dealer's requirements hereunder shall be those brands of gasoline, lubricating oils, and other petroleum products sold by Company to its dealers generally in Dealer's vicinity."

(4) "DEALER AGREEMENT TBA", of which there were 2221, having this clause:

"1. Standard Oil Company of California, hereinafter called 'Company', agrees to sell to —— hereinafter called 'Dealer', and Dealer agrees to buy from Company, all Dealer's requirements of petroleum products used, sold, or bought to be used or sold, by Dealer at ——, hereinafter called 'said premises'. The petroleum products to meet Dealer's requirements hereunder shall be those brands of such products generally sold by Company to its Dealers."

(5) "SUBLEASE AGREEMENTS", of which there were 1800, containing the following clause:

"Lessee shall handle and sell on the leased premises only such petroleum products as are sold Lessee by Lessor, and [fol. 226] Lessee agrees not to store, handle, sell, or distribute on or from said premises any petroleum products of any description other than those petroleum products sold to Lessee by Lessor. The price payable by Lessee to Lessor for said petroleum products shall be Lessor's posted price for the same or similar products to its Dealers generally in Lessee's vicinity at time and place of delivery."

The choice of the type of agreement was the dealer's. And the agreements were terminable by him on six months' notice. Each of these agreements contained provisions which, both by the language used and the limitations of liability, stressed the character of the agreement as seeking to establish the dealer as an independent contractor. Dealer Agreements (Class I) contained the most elaborate provisions. They are here given in full:

"6. Dealer acknowledges that he has thoroughly inspected the pumps, tankage, containers, pipes, and other facilities on the premises and that the same are in good condition, and while this agreement is in force Dealer agrees to so keep the same at Dealer's own cost and expense; provided, however, that Company may, at its discretion, maintain and repair said facilities. Dealer further agrees to protect, defend, and hold harmless the Company against all claims for damage to property (including Dealer's property), or injury to or death of persons, directly or indirectly resulting from any acts or omissions of Dealer or Dealer's employees in or about said premises, either in the mainte-
[fol. 227] nance or operation of the tanks, containers, pipes, pumps and other facilities thereon, or in the vending therefrom of the products and goods handled by Dealer hereunder.

"7. In the performance of this agreement Dealer is engaged in an independent business and nothing contained shall be construed as reserving to Company any right to control Dealer with respect to his conduct in the performance of this agreement. Company reserves no right to exercise any control over any of Dealer's employees and all employees of the Dealer shall be entirely under the control and direction of Dealer who shall be responsible for their actions and omissions. Dealer will, at his own expense, during the term hereof, maintain full insurance under any Workmen's Compensation Laws effective in said state covering all persons employed by and working for him in connection with the performance of this agreement, and upon request shall furnish Company with satisfactory evidence of the maintenance of such insurance. Dealer accepts exclusive liability for all contributions and payroll taxes required under Federal Social Security Laws and State Unemployment Compensation Laws as to all persons employed by and working for him in connection with the performance of this agreement.

"8. Any tax, or the amount thereof, now or hereafter imposed, levied, or assessed by any governmental authority upon, measured by, incident to, or as the result of the transaction herein provided for, or the transportation, production, or manufacture of the goods, the subject matter of this agreement, shall, if collectible or payable by the Company, [fol. 228] be paid by the Dealer on demand by the Company, as tax collectible or as an increase in the prices otherwise herein provided for."

The other types of agreement aimed to achieve the same result.

The history of the use of the various types of agreement shows that, beginning in 1938, the dealer agreements were begun to supersede the authorized distributor agreements which had obtained before that date, and that, beginning with the year 1944, Type 4 (TBA) came into almost exclusive use. There is duplication of agreements in that a single station may operate under several types of agreement. Hence the actual number of gas station outlets is 5197. The number of stations operating under Form 2 has since been reduced to 232. In addition to this, Standard had 742 open accounts and 1063 company-operated stations, or, as they have been called in this case, employe-operated stations.

The evidence in the record shows beyond cavil that the effect of these agreements was to limit the dealer operating under any of them to the handling of petroleum products of Standard and also to the marketing of tires, tubes, batteries and accessories controlled or handled by Standard. If they handled others, they did not do so openly. The agreements were so interpreted by those operating under them,—as various operators from various states testified. Indeed, witnesses of the defendant very forthrightly stated that the operators were expected to confine [fol. 229] themselves to Standard products and accessories, the exception being only those rare cases—especially during the War—when they were unable to supply the quantity asked, in which event, the supervising employes of Standard would "shut their eyes" to the infractions.

The record also shows that, as to tires, tubes, batteries and accessories, Standard reserved the right to determine the amounts it would furnish. As to the other accessories,—which included spark plugs, sun visors, fan belts, hub caps, and all small parts of automobiles, which can easily be replaced at a service station—the requirement was up to the dealer himself. Tires, tubes and batteries were not, as a rule, sold to operators of stations other than those under contract with Standard,—especially during the time of shortage. Its petroleum products and accessories were sold to other station operators, particularly after the war scarcity ended. The representatives of other companies manufacturing petroleum products, tires, tubes, batteries and other accessories, testified that they could not sell their products to stations under contract with Standard, except in rare instances, and that, surreptitiously. When a station was converted into a Standard station, whatever custom in non-Standard products they had before ceased. To maintain the goodwill of the operators of the stations, Standard assisted them financially, made loans which were later discounted, furnished many valuable services, and expended large sums of money in advertising, in educating the operators in the manner of handling the products, in building the stations, adding facilities to them, repairing and improving them,—all of which meant large expenditures of money. As a result, Standard has a sixteen and one-[fol. 230] half million dollar capital investment in the dealer stations.

When salesmen or supervisors of Standard found competitive products, they "urged",—as they testified—or, as the operators testified, showed their displeasure, and, practically "ordered" their discontinuance or substitution. Many of the competitive products so offered for sale and shut out of the stations under contract with Standard were produced outside of the States in which the stations were located, or were shipped in interstate commerce.

So there cannot be any question that, at least so far as these products are concerned, the practice of which the Government complains, affected the flow of goods and products in interstate commerce.(3) The character of the result and its legality, as well as the legality of the restrictive clauses themselves are questions of law.

To them we now direct our attention.

The Law Today

(A) Exclusive Supply Provisions:

The case does not require an extended review of the principles which courts have evolved in interpreting the Sherman Anti-Trust and Clayton Acts. I have had occasion to discuss the scope and nature of anti-trust legislation and its application both to activities which are local and to those which transcend state limits, in several opinions.(3) [fol. 231] There is another reason for confining ourselves to the more recent decisions of the Supreme Court: They have modified, to a great extent, some of the legal norms declared in prior cases.(4) And the problem in this case can be narrowed down to two rather simple inquiries. They are: (a) Are agreements of the type involved in this case,—as summarized briefly in the preceding portion of the opinion—violative of either or both the statutes. Which, in reality, comes down to this: Is an agreement by an oil company, engaged in the production and distribution of petroleum products, and the sponsoring and distribution of automobile parts and accessories, which obligates a gasoline station operator to supply his full requirements of petroleum products, tires, tubes, batteries, and other accessories, from the company, of itself, a violation of either of the Acts? If the answer to this question is in the affirmative, the inquiry is at an end. (b) If in the negative, we must determine whether the effect of the agreement as a restraint on commerce makes it invalid under either or both Acts.

Seeking an answer to these inquiries, I begin with the assumption that the General Motors exclusive supply case (5) is still the law. Which means that, at least under the Clayton Act, an agreement by a dealer, in consideration of being permitted to deal in a certain product, that he will not sell or offer to sell any products not manufactured or handled by the particular manufacturer, is not per se illegal. The opinion in the General Motors case states the question involved tersely. The Court had before it an agreement [fol. 232] which, not only indirectly forbade the handling of the products of other manufacturers, but prohibited specifically their use or sale in these words:

> "'Dealer agrees that he will not sell, offer for sale, or use in the repair of Chevrolet motor vehicles and chassis second-hand parts or used parts or any parts not manufactured by the Chevrolet Motor Company . . . .'" (6)

This eliminated not only parts not manufactured by them, but also second-hand and used parts. A complete monopoly was achieved. At the same time, the dealer was not granted exclusive selling rights in new parts and accessories. General Motors was, therefore, free to grant to other dealers in the same territory the same rights. The trial court dismissed the bill for want of equity. Affirming the decree, the Supreme Court said:

> "Upon the evidence adduced at the trial the District Court found that the effect of the clause had not been in any way substantially to lessen competition or to create a monopoly in any line of commerce." (7)

I take this language to mean that, even when we are confronted with a contract which shuts out competition, we must, under the Clayton Act, determine its effect on the line of commerce.

Under the Sherman Act, the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the restraint is,—since the first Standard Oil decision in 1911,—an element to be considered. (8) Both are questions of fact, the solution of which rests upon the [fol. 233] conditions obtaining in each particular case.

The Socony-Vacuum case (9) and other cases which followed it express the view that the economic wisdom or unwisdom, or the economic benefit or detriment, of a restriction on commerce is not material, especially when we are dealing with a practice, such as price-fixing, which is illegal per se. But, at the same time, economic effect becomes material if we are dealing with a restraint other than price-fixing, a restraint which is monopolistic. Because, when this is the situation, it must appear that there is substantial lessening of competition or monopoly under the Clayton Act, before we can place a judicial interdict on it. We find this language in the Socony-Vacuum case:

> "Secondly, the fact that sales on the spot markets were still governed by some competition is of no consequence. For it is indisputable that that competition was restricted through the removal by respondents of a part of the supply which but for the buying program would have been a factor in determining the going prices on those markets. But the vice of the conspiracy was not merely the restriction of supply of gasoline by removal of a surplus. As we have said, this was a well-organized program. The timing and strategic placement of the buying orders for distress gasoline played an important and significant role. Buying orders were carefully placed so as to remove the distress gasoline from weak hands. Purchases were timed. Sellers were assigned to the buyers so that regular [fol. 234] outlets for distress gasoline would be available. The whole scheme was carefully planned and executed to the end that the distress gasoline would not overhand the markets and depress them at any time. And as a result of the payment of fair going market prices a floor was placed and kept under the spot markets. Prices rose and jobbers and consumers in the mid-western area paid more for their gasoline than they would have paid but for the conspiracy.

"Competition was not eliminated from the markets; but it was clearly curtailed, since restriction of the supply of gasoline, the timing and placement of the purchases under the buying programs and the placing of a floor under the spot markets obviously reduced the play of the forces of supply and demand.

"The elimination of so-called competitive evils is of no legal justification for such buying programs. The elimination of such conditions was sought primarily for its effect on the price structures. Fairer competitive prices, it is claimed resulted when distress gasoline was removed from the market. But such defense is typical of the protestations usually made in price-fixing cases. Ruinous competition, financial disaster, evils of price-cutting and the like, appear [fol. 235] throughout our history as ostensible justifications for price-fixing. If the so-called competitive abuses were to be appraised here, the reasonableness of prices would necessarily become an issue in every price-fixing case. In that event, the Sherman Act would soon be emasculated; its philosophy would be supplanted by one which is wholly alien to a system of free competition; it would not be the charter of freedom which its framers intended."(10)

(B) Effect of Restriction:

What Mr. Justice Douglas says applies with greater force to a restrictive practice other than price-fixing. The fact that it may be beneficial is not material, if, in effect, it is an unreasonable restraint. (11)

Judge Learned Hand stressed these very points in the Fashion Originators' Guild case. (12) He applied the reasoning of the Socony-Vacuum case to a case not involving price-fixing. And, with that clarity of language so characteristic of his writing, he showed that economic benefits cannot be taken into consideration if, in fact, there be substantial restriction of commerce. The opinion says:

". . . Many trade combinations which affect competition are lawful, when they are designed to prevent trade 'abuses'; they are 'reasonable' though perhaps to say so is no more than to state the problem. Appalachian Coals, Inc. v. United States, 288 U. S. 344, 374, 53 S. Ct. 411, 77 L. Ed. 825; Sugar Institute v. United [fol. 236] States, 297 U. S. 553, 598, 56 S. Ct. 629, 80 L. Ed. 859. Certainly it is not true that the lawfulness of every combination depends upon whether it 'reasonably' corrects trade 'abuses'; there are some combinations that nothing will excuse. The accepted rubric for this is that when the means are unlawful per se, the purposes of the confederates will not justify them. Sugar Institute v. United States, supra, 297 U.S. 553, page 599, 56 S. Ct. 629, 80 L. Ed. 859." The most recent example of this is the Supreme Court's reaffirmation of the unconditional illegality of price-fixing in spite of the probability that the combination in fact benefited the industry. United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 210 U.S. 150, 60 S. Ct. 811, 84 L. Ed. 1129. However grave the industrial disorders, that remedy was not permissible; the industry may restore itself by many devices, but not by all. * * * Price-fixing is not, however, the only means unlawful per se: The interest of the consumer is not all that determines the 'reasonableness' of a contract 'in restraint of trade'. It is also unlawful to exclude from the market any of those who supply it—assuming that there is no independent reason by virtue of their conduct to justify their exclusion—and it is no excuse for doing so that their exclusion will result in benefits to consumers, or to the producers who remain. W. W. Montague & Co. v. [fol. 237] Lowry, 193 U.S. 38, 47, 24 S. Ct. 307, 48 L. Ed. 608; Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers Association v. United States, 234 U.S. 600, 611, 34 S. Ct. 951, 58 L. Ed. 1490, L.R.A. 1915A, 788; Binderup v. Pathe Exchange, 263 U.S. 291, 311, 312, 44 S. Ct. 96, 68 L. Ed. 308; Anderson v. Shipowners Association, 272 U.S. 359, 363, 47 S. Ct. 125, 71 L. Ed. 298; Bedford Cut Stone Co. v. Journeymen Stone Cutter's Association, 274 U.S. 37, 54, 47 S. Ct. 522, 71 L. Ed. 916, 54 A.L.R. 791; Paramount Famous Corp. v. United States, 282 U.S. 30, 43, 44, 51, S. Ct. 42, 75 L. Ed. 145; United States v. First National Pictures, Inc., 282 U.S. 44, 51 S. Ct. 45, 75 L. Ed. 151; National Harness Association v. Federal Tr. Comm. 6 Cir., 276 F. 705, 712; Wholesale Grocers Ass'n v. Federal Tr. Comm. 5 Cir., 277 F. 657, 663; Butterick Publishing Co. v. Federal Tr. Comm. 2 Cir., 85 F(2) 522. There is another reason supporting this conclusion. A successful combination among a part of the producers to exclude others, even when not accompanied by an agreement fixing prices, puts into their hands collectively the power to control the supply and with it the price. The fact that the power is not at the moment exercised is of no assurance that it may not be; if the effort succeeds and the combination is not disrupted, it may at any time be used, and there will then be no protection to the consumer.

"Finally, it is of no consequence that the Guild [fol. 238] does not supply the whole market for women's dresses; it aims at a monopoly however small its share of total sales. The reason is as follows: Although all dresses made after one design are fungibles, the different designs themselves are not fungibles. Each has its own attraction for buyers; each is unique however trifling the basis for preferring it may be. Hence to attempt to gather to oneself all possible reproductions of a given design is to attempt to create a monopoly, as at once appears from the fact that a copyright for it—and a fortiori a design patent upon it—would be ranked as a monopoly. It is true that the sanction of that monopoly may be very weak; it depends upon the design's attractions above other designs, often not a very important margin of advantage. But the same is true of nearly all monopolies, for there are substitutes for most goods. As to each design therefore the Guild is seeking to establish a monopoly; and it is unimportant whether its gross sales are large or small, as compared with those of all women's dresses. For these reasons the combination was unlawful per se; the commission was right in refusing to hear any evidence in its excuse, for it could have no excuse; the case is the same as Millinery Creators' Guild v. Federal Trade Commission, supra, 2 Cir., 109 F(2) 175." (13)

The teaching of these cases is this: When we are dealing with price-fixing, we are dealing with a contract which is [fol. 239] invalid per se and violative of the Act. However, when we consider any other restrictions, their legality must be determined by the nature of the contract in relation to the line of commerce which it may affect. A contract by a manufacturer of a product which binds an agent who is used as an outlet to the exclusive use of his product is not necessarily a violation of either the Sherman Act or the Clayton Act. But it may be so under the Sherman Act, if it result in an unreasonable restraint of trade, and under the Clayton Act, if it result in a monopoly in a line of commerce or lessens competition substantially. (14)

The more recent decisions of the Supreme Court reaffirm these principles. (15) To quote from Federal Trade Commission v. Morton Salt Company (16):

> "The statute requires no more than that the effect of the prohibited price discriminations 'may be substantially to lessen competition . . . or to injure, destroy or prevent competition.' After a careful consideration of this provision of the Robinson-Patman Act, we have said that 'the statute does not require that the discrimination must in fact have harmed competition, but only that there is a reasonable possibility that they "may" have such an effect.' Corn Products Co. v. Federal Trade Comm'n, 324 U.S. 726, 742. Hence the Commission found what would appear to be obvious, that the competitive opportunities of certain merchants were injured when they had to pay respondent substantially more for their goods than their competitors had to pay. The findings are adequate.
> [fol. 240] "Fourth. It is urged that the evidence is inadequate to support the Commission's findings of injury to competition. As we have pointed out, however, the Commission is authorized by the Act to bar discriminatory prices upon the 'reasonable possibility' that different prices for like goods to competing purchasers may have the defined effect on competition. That respondent's quantity discounts did result in price differentials between competing purchasers sufficient to influence their resale price of salt was shown by evidence."

The following quotation from the American Crystal Sugar case is also enlightening:

"The statute does not confine its protection to consumers, or to purchasers, or to competitors, or to sellers. Nor does it immunize the outlawed acts because they are done by any of these. Cf. United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 310 U. S. 150; American Tobacco Co. v. United States, 328 U. S. 781. The Act is comprehensive in its terms and coverage, protecting all who are made victims of the forbidden practices by whomever they may be perpetrated. Cf. United States v. South-Eastern Underwriters Assn. supra, at 553.

"Nor is the amount of the nation's sugar industry which the California refiners control relevant, so long as control is exercised effectively in the area concerned. Indiana Farmer's Guide v. Prairie Farmer, 293 U. S. 268, 279, United States v. Yellow Cab Co., 332 U. S. 218, 225, the conspiracy being shown to affect interstate [fol. 241] commerce adversely to Congress' policy, Congress' power to keep the interstate market free of goods produced under conditions inimical to the general welfare, United States v. Darby, 312 U. S. 100, 115, may be exercised in individual cases without showing any specific effect upon interstate commerce, United States v. Walsh, 331 U. S. 432, 437-438; it is enough that the individual activity when multiplied into a general practice is subject to federal control, Wickard v. Filburn, supra, or that it contains a threat to the interstate economy that requires preventive regulation."

(C) The Meaning of "Unreasonable" and "Substantial."

What precedes calls for a further inquiry into what is or what is not unreasonable restraint and what is or what is not a substantial lessening of competition.

The words "reasonable" or "unreasonable" do not occur in the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. (17) They were read into the Act by the decisions of the Supreme Court. (18)

The phrases which forbid practices which result in substantial lessening of competition or monopoly occur in the Clayton Act. (19)

All these terms have a pragmatic content. The Courts, in applying them, have sought to evolve concrete criteria by which the effect of a particular practice on competition should be gauged. Their scope and limit was stated by the [fol. 242] Court in Fashion Originators' Guild of America v. Federal Trade Commission:

> "If the purpose and practice of the combination of garment manufacturers and their affiliates runs counter to the public policy declared in the Sherman and Clayton Acts, the Federal Trade Commission has the power to suppress it as an unfair method of competition. From its findings, the Commission concluded that the petitioners, 'pursuant to understandings, arrangements, agreements, combinations and conspiracies entered into jointly and severally' had prevented sales in interstate commerce, had 'substantially lessened, hindered and suppressed' competition, and had tended 'to create in themselves a monopoly'. And paragraph 3 of the Clayton Act (15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 14) declares 'It shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, . . . to . . . make a sale or contract for sale of goods, . . . on the condition, agreement, or understanding that the . . . purchaser thereof shall not use or deal in the goods, . . . of a competitor or competitors of the . . . seller, where the effect of such . . . sale, or contract for sale . . . may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce.' The relevance of this section of the Clayton Act to petitioners' scheme is shown by the fact that the scheme is bottomed upon a system of sale under which (1) textiles shall be sold to garment manufacturers only upon the condition and understanding that the buyers will not use or deal in textiles which are copied from the [fol. 243] designs of textile manufacturing Guild members; (2) garment manufacturers shall sell to retailers only upon the condition and understanding that the retailers shall not use or deal in such copied designs. And the Federal Trade Commission concluded in the language of the Clayton Act that these understandings substantially lessened competition and tended to create a monopoly. We hold that the Commission, upon adequate and unchallenged findings, correctly concluded that this practice constituted an unfair method of competition.

"Not only does the plan in the respects above discussed thus conflict with the principles of the Clayton Act; the findings of the Commission bring petitioners' combination in its entirety well within the inhibition of the policies declared by the Sherman Act itself. Section 1 of that Act make illegal every contract, combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states; Sec. 2 makes illegal every combination or conspiracy which monopolizes or attempts to monopolize any part of that trade or commerce. Under the Sherman Act 'competition not combination should be the law of trade.' National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, 197 U. S. 115, 129. And among the many respects in which the Guild's plan runs contrary to the policy of the Sherman Act are these: it narrows the outlets to which garment and textile manufacturers can sell and the sources from retailers can buy. (Montague & Co. v. Lowry, 193 U. S. 38, 45; Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co. v. United States, 226 U. S. 20, 48-49); subjects all retailers and manufacturers who decline [fol. 244] to comply with the Guild's program to an organized boycott (Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers' Assn. v. United States, 234 U. S. 600, 609-611); takes away the freedom of action of members by requiring each to reveal to the Guild the intimate details of their individual affairs (United States v. American Linseed Oil Co., 262 U. S. 371, 389); and has both as its necessary tendency and as its purpose and effect the direct suppression of competition from the sale of unregistered textiles and copied designs (United States v. American Linseed Oil Co., supra, at 389). In addition to all this, the combination is in reality an extra-governmental agency, which prescribed rules for the regulation and restraint of interstate commerce, and provides extra-judicial tribunals for determination and punishment of violations, and thus 'trenches upon the power of the national legislature and violates the statute.' (Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 242.)

"Nor is it determinative in considering the policy of the Sherman Act that petitioners may not yet have achieved a complete monopoly. For 'it is sufficient if it really tends to that end and to deprive the public of the advantages which flow from free competition.' (United States v. E. C. Knight Co., 156 U. S. 1, 16; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 237." (20)

The approach to the problem has changed, as later cases indicate. (21) But the test of reasonableness is the same [fol. 245] which the court laid down in the first case (22). As there stated, while the Act defines the boundaries which could not be transgressed, it leaves the application of the standard laid down "to be determined by the light of reason, guided by the principles of law and the duty to apply and enforce the public policy embodied in the statute, in every given case whether any particular act or contract was within the contemplation of the statute." (23)

And the test under the Clayton Act is equally practical. The validity or invalidity of a contract or practice is determined by a consideration of the methods of restraint which the particular contract or practice impose and the effect which they may have (24). The more recent cases interpret the language of the statute to include not only probable effects but also possible effects. (25)

In summary, when we are asked to determine unreasonableness of restraint under the Sherman Act, or substantiality in lessening competition or tendency to create a monopoly in a line of commerce under the Clayton Act, we must envisage the entire situation affected by the practices, and relate it to the object of both statutes, which is to maintain freedom in interstate commerce and trade and to prevent all attempts to monopolize them. (26) At times, courts speak of the "detriment" to the public resulting from a practice. (27) But they do not intend to legalize restraints which may be beneficial to the public. As said by Judge Learned Hand:

> "Be that as it may, that was not the way that Congress chose; it did not condone 'good trusts' and condemn 'bad ones'; it forbade all. Moreover, in so doing [fol. 246] it was not necessarily actuated by economic motives alone. It is possible, because of its indirect social or moral effects, to prefer a system of small producers, each dependent for his success upon his own skill and character, to one in which the great mass of those engaged must accept the direction of a few. These considerations which we have suggested only as possible purposes of the Act, we think the decisions prove to have been in fact its purposes. It is settled, at least as to Sec. 1, that there are some contracts restricting competition which are unlawful, no matter how beneficient they may be; no industrial urgency will justify them; they are absolutely forbidden. Chief Justice Taft said as much of contracts dividing a territory among producers, in the often quoted passage of his opinion in the Circuit Court of Appeals in United States v. Addystone Pipe & Steel Co., 6 Cir., 85 Fed. 271, 46 L.R.A. 122." (28)

The harm to the public is gauged by the effect of the practices on the free flow of goods in interstate commerce and the maintenance of competition in that field. Consequently, practices which are likely to curtail or affect injuriously a measurable or sizable part of commerce are prohibited under both Acts. As I understand the pleadings, and the Government's position at the beginning of the trial, a judgment is sought decreeing that the clause in the contracts which, by its language and actual effect, as shown by the evidence, restricts the stations not employe-operated to the sale and use of petroleum products and accessories produced or supplied by Standard is illegal per se. We cannot agree. To the contrary, as we read the cases, exclusiveness of outlet is not, in itself, illegal. It becomes il- [fol. 247] legal only if it result in a substantial lessening of competition or the creation of monopoly in the line of commerce. (29) Indeed, the opinion of the Court in one of the latest cases on the subject indicates clearly that,—to use the language of Mr. Justice Douglas,—"the use of monopoly power, however lawfully acquired, to foreclose competition, to gain a competitive advantage, or to destroy a competitor, is unlawful.'" (30)

The phrase "line of commerce" in the Clayton Act is to be given a broad and not a narrow meaning. It should be interpreted, not with relation to a particular outlet, but with relation to the entire "picture",—if one may be permitted to use the best colloquial equivalent to the German word gestalt (configuration). So the determination of monopoly in any "line of commerce" cannot be made to rest solely on the fact that certain outlets are closed. For, without indulging in a reductio ad absurdum, if we say that interfering with any outlet is, in itself, a monopoly, we find ourselves in the position of contending that, assuming one controlled one station outlet, we have a monopoly as to it. To amplify: It is common knowledge that national merchandising firms like Sears, Roebuck & Company, or Montgomery Ward, own establishments the country over. It is also well known that they control the type of goods which are sold in the branches, which they use as outlets, and which they own. But, assume that they did not own the branches, and that they operated some of them, under one of these various contract arrangements used here,—say a TBA contract. To my mind, it would be unrealistic to contend that, under such circumstances, the control of one of several such outlets [fol. 248] would constitute a monopoly. For this reason, I take the words "in any line of commerce" to mean a complete line of activity, not a small segment. This interpretation finds support in the following language of the Supreme Court:

> "The exercise of Congressional power under the Sherman Act, the Clayton Act, the Federal Trade Commission Act, or the National Motor Theft Act, has never been thought to be constitutionally restricted because in any particular case the volume of the commerce affected may be small. The amount of the commerce regulated is of special significance only to the extent that Congress may be taken to have excluded commerce of small volume from the operation of its regulatory measure by express provision or fair implication." (31)

We must, therefore, ascertain the actual effect of the challenged clause on interstate commerce.

(D) Intra and Interstate Activities

Before doing so, we refer to the contention that the activities of Standard are local in character. Recent cases have obliterated the rigid distinction between intrastate and interstate activities. Activities purely local which interfere with interstate commerce comes under the interdiction of the anti-trust statutes. (32) The control of a commodity originating in interstate commerce, although exercised after it comes to rest in a state, does not take it out of the purview of the Sherman or Clayton Acts, if the flow is continuous, and if the restrictions affect it. (33) The latest decisions give effect to the broad definition of commerce contained in one of the older and leading cases on the subject:

[fol. 249] "The evidence shows that they and other defendants conspired to burden the free movement of live poultry into the metropolitan area. It may be assumed that some time after delivery of carload lots by interstate carriers to the receivers the movement of the poultry ceases to be interstate commerce. Public Utilities Comm'n v. Landon, 249 U. S. 237, 245; Missouri v. Kansas Gas Co., 265 U. S. 298, 309; East Ohio Gas Co. v. Tax Comm'n, 283 U. S. 465, 470-471. But we need not decide when interstate commerce ends and that which is intrastate begins. The control of the handling, the sales and the prices at the place of origin before the interstate journey begins or, at the State of destination where the interstate movement ends may operate directly to restrain and monopolize interstate commerce." (34)

Without detailing the distributive system used by Standard, it is evident that there is constant interstate flow of the products it produces and distributes. And the interstate origin of the many competitive products, automobile supplies and accessories is also established. (35)

This satisfies fully the requirement of the statutes. For, if the exclusive supply agreements complained of by the Government be unreasonable or monopolistic in effect, they would affect the flow of commerce in several ways: (1) by channeling the products of Standard, regardless of interstate or intrastate source, through an exclusive group of outlets; (2) by denying to dealers the right to buy them; and (3) by denying to manufacturers of competitive products the rights to sell to the controlled outlets.

Whether they actually have such effect is our final inquiry.

[fol. 250] III

The Consequences of the Exclusive Supply Provisions

(A) The "Appreciable Segment" Test.

In the Associated Press case (36), the Supreme Court has set out criteria for determining the forbidden character of restrictive outlets under the Sherman Act, which are pertinent to the facts in this case:

"The restraint on trade in news here were no less than those held to fall within the ban of the Sherman Act with reference to combinations to restrain trade outlets in the sale of tiles, Montague & Co. v. Lowry, 1932 U. S. 38; or enameled ironware, Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co. v. United States, 26 U. S. 20, 48-49; or lumber, Eastern States Lumber Dealers' Ass'n v. United States, 234 U. S. 600, 611; or women's clothes, Fashion Originators' Guild v. Federal Trade Commission, supra; or motion pictures, United States v. Crescent Amusement Co., 323 U. S. 173. Here as in the Fashion Originators' Guild case, supra, 465, 'the combination is in reality an extra-governmental agency, which prescribes rules for the regulation and restraint of interstate commerce, and provides extra-judicial tribunals for determination and punishment of violations, and thus 'trenches upon the power of the national legislature and violates the statute.' Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 242. By the restrictive By Laws each of the publishers in the combination has, in effect, 'sur-[fol. 251] rendered himself completely to the control of the association.', Anderson v. Shipowners' Assn., 272 U. S. 359, 362, in respect to the disposition of news in interstate commerce. Therefore this contractual restraint of interstate trade, 'designed in the interest of preventing competition', cannot be one of the 'normal and usual agreements in aid of trade and commerce which may be found not to be within the (Sherman) Act . . . .' Eastern States Lumber Dealers' Assn. v. United States, supra, 612, 613." (37)

This is anticipatory of the criterion of "appreciable segment" as a test of unreasonableness or monopolistic substantiality, established in later cases. (38)

Some writers have expressed the view that the more recent decisions, and especially the Yellow Cab decision, substitutes a new and uniform concept or standard of illegality for the older ones under the Sherman Act, which considers the effect on "an appreciable segment" of commerce the test. They see in this the abandonment of the older, "quantitative" postulate which related the amount of the commerce involved to the whole commerce in the nation. (40) But I find the nucleus of this norm not only in the Associated Press case (41), but in older cases. (42). Thus, in a case involving control of advertising media in a certain field as the basis for a damage action under the Sherman Anti-Trust law, the Supreme Court held that it was invalid, although it applied to a limited geographic area or to a part of the commerce only. The Court used this language:

> [fol. 252] "The record contains no suggestion by respondents or by either court that petitioner's allegations are not sufficient to charge a violation of Secs. 1 and 2. Its right to recover does not depend upon the proportion that respondents control of the total farm paper advertisements in the entire country, and it was not required to prove that respondents imposed a restraint or attempted monopolization that would affect all commercial advertisements in all farm papers wherever published or circulated. The provisions of Secs. 1 and 2 have both a geographical and distributive significance and apply to any part of the United States as distinguished from the whole and to any part of the classes of things forming a part of interstate commerce. Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 61." (43)

And there is one lower court, well considered decision which found an illegal restriction in a limitation to a particular large customer,—the United States Government. (44)

It was insisted at the oral argument that the late cases, especially the Yellow Cab case (45), having arisen under the Sherman Act, do not control here. Granted that these rulings interpret that Act, they are, nonetheless, applicable to the present case for the obvious reason that the violations which the Government in this case charges are violations of both the Sherman and Clayton Acts.

As a rule, language used in interpreting one statute is not conclusive of the meaning of other kindred statutes. However, the history of Anti Trust legislation shows that less is required to prove illegality under the Clayton Act [fol. 253] than under the Sherman Act. Rightly. For the object of the Clayton Act was to declare illegal, in their incipiency, acts which would only be illegal under the Sherman Act in their full fruition. Differently put, what, in its result, is an unreasonable restraint under the Sherman Act is, in its beginning, a substantial restraint under the Clayton Act, if it is of a nature likely to achieve such result.

It is argued that to apply this criterion would result in anomalous situations. If the operators of stations, instead of agreeing to buy their "requirements" of petroleum products, agreed to buy a definite quantity over a period of time, sufficient to satisfy their needs, this arrangement would, just as effectively, shut out competition. And yet, it is insisted that, although such arrangement would achieve the same result, it would not fall within any of the prohibitions of the anti-trust statutes.

But there is a distinction between the two situations. When a dealer agrees to take a specific amount of a product, there is a likelihood that he may, in case of failure of the supplier to comply with the agreement, or inexpected shortages or increased demands, or a desire to anticipate such shortages or demands, by overstocking,—seek competitive products. There is thus a possibility of access by competitors to the particular outlets.

Under the "requirements" contracts, the chance is completely cut off. Briefly stated, without a "requirements" contract, competitors may, in time, induce dealers to handle their products. With a contract, they never can. There is opportunity to deal with the competitors, and, hence, [fol. 254] possibility,—ay, probability, of freedom of action, when there is no restrictive contract. There is complete and final absence of freedom of dealing during the life of a contract, when it calls for exclusion. The shut-out is just as effective as an agreement to boycott products originating in interstate commerce. (46). Both "restrain or control the supply entering and moving in interstate commerce". (47)

(B) Restraint: Entire or Fractional:

(1) Comparative Figures:

The turn which our consideration of the case has taken calls for a statement of additional facts which, in fairness to the defendants, should be referred to, because they are the foundation for the contention that the practices here under attack do not violate either statute. They also serve to point to the fact that, in this case, the problem which confronts the court is to determine, in the light of the latest cases of the Supreme Court, which of the two methods of assaying specific facts which, in the main, are not in dispute, should control.

The facts to be alluded to present one facet of the problem. The practices which the Government seeks to prohibit are not of recent origin. To the contrary, they have been in effect for over 15 years. They are employed not only by Standard, but by its competitors in the Western Area, especially the "majors,"—Associated, Shell, General Petroleum, Texas Co., Union Oil Co., Richfield,—as their representatives have so forthrightly admitted. The following statistical data, culled from the record, show the comparative position of Standard in relation to its major competitors, omitting, for brevity the comparative number of stations:

[fol. 255]

State	Year	Gasoline Sales State Total	Retail Gallonage S. S. Inc.	Retail Gallonage Dealers	% of Total S. S. Inc.	% of Total Dealers
Calif.	1931	1,401,545	65,149	71,251	4.5	5.1
	1946	2,640,651	209,587	135,455	7.9	5.1
Oregon	1931	170,357	4,782	25,633	2.8	15.0
	1946	376,288	18,467	36,198	4.9	9.6
Wash.	1931	270,901	8,232	26,266	3.0	13.4
	1946	491,301	23,021	43,606	4.7	8.9
Ariz.	1931	99,564	1,210	11,994	1.2	12.0
	1946	170,075	11,973	16,526	7.0	9.7
Nev.	1931	22,549	303	3,576	1.3	15.9
	1946	55,079	3,785	8,287	6.9	15.0
Idaho	1931	59,293	150	5,396	0.3	9.1
	1946	143,304	2,417	14,576	1.7	10.2
Utah	1931	60,731		4,114		6.8
	1946	146,644	4,649	13,920	3.2	9.5
7 Western States	1931	2,084,940	79,825	158,299	3.8	7.6
	1946	4,023,342	273,899	268,568	6.8	6.7

[fol. 256]

Tire Replacement Shipments

State	Year	State Total	Retail Sales S. S. Inc.	Retail Sales Dealers	% of State Totals S. S. Inc.	% of State Totals Dealers
Calif.	1933	2,706,750	94,366	3,441	3.5	1
	1946	5,985,786	130,079	79,502	2.2	1.3
Oregon	1933	328,189	15,750	1,041	4.4	3
	1946	890,064	14,296	29,073	1.5	3.4
Wash.	1933	588,144	15,750	2,557	2.7	.4
	1946	1,244,310	14,296	30,688	1.1	2.5
Ariz.	1933	123,477	6,220	4,538	5.0	3.7
	1946	307,803	10,060	16,152	3.3	4.4
Nevada	1933	38,993	1,059	1,442	2.7	3.7
	1946	98,235	3,000	4,307	3.1	4.4
Idaho	1933	133,225	397	11	.3	2.4
	1946	327,450	2,294	9,511	.7	2.9
Utah	1933	136,475	132	21	.1	.0
	1946	327,450	3,530	10,229	1.1	3.1
Seven Western States	1933	4,055,250	132,350	10,523	3.3	.3
	1946	9,181,698	176,496	179,462	1.9	2.0

[fol. 257]

Replacement Battery Sales

State	Year	State Total	Retail Sales S. S. Inc.	Retail Sales Dealers	% of State Total S. S. Inc.	% of State Total Dealers
Calif.	1933	718,108	17,670	58	2.5	....
	1946	1,601,511	51,328	21,281	3.3	1.3
Oregon	1933	87,070	1,455	17	1.7	....
	1946	238,299	4,376	5,083	1.8	2.1
Wash.	1933	156,036	2,240	42	1.4	....
	1946	332,918	6,042	7,366	1.8	2.2
Ariz.	1933	32,759	806	33	2.5	0.1
	1946	82,353	3,542	3,877	4.3	4.7
Nevada	1933	10,345	134	24	1.3	0.2
	1946	26,383	1,459	1,120	5.6	4.3
Idaho	1933	35,345	68	....	0.2	....
	1946	87,610	1,042	2,369	1.2	2.7
Utah	1933	36,207	22	....	0.1	....
	1946	87,610	1,667	1,982	1.9	2.3
Seven Western States	1933	1,075,870	22,395	174	2.1	....
	1946	2,456,584	69,456	43,078	2.8	1.8

[fol. 258] Certain general inferences were drawn from these facts, at the argument. They are: The actual increase in the sale of petroleum products corresponds to the rise in the whole industry. The number of outlets over a period of ten years has been reduced from an average of 7650 to 6000. Between 1936 and 1946, Standard sales of gasoline increased 58.8 per cent. The industry increase for the same period was 64.7 per cent. For lubricating oil, Standard's increase was 62.9 per cent, the industry increase, 104.8 per cent. As to batteries, the increase in units for Standard was 46.5 per cent, for the industry, 41.8 per cent. The comparative figures, as to the increase for some of the other companies are: Gasoline: Union Oil Company, 99 per cent; General Petroleum, 165 per cent; and Tidewater Associated, 34 per cent. Lubricating Oil:

Union Oil Company, 98.2 per cent; General Petroleum, 174.9 per cent; and Tidewater Associated, 54.8 per cent.

Macmillan dispense their lubricating oil through some 10,000 accounts in the seven Western states. For Pennzoil oil Company, the outlets in 1916 were 2000, in 1946, 12,000. For Arthur Haven Company, the outlets were 3500 in 1946, in 1947, 7,000. During this period, the number of outlets for Standard was 5197. During the same period, the number of independent stations which handled gasoline of different companies, or, what has been referred to as "split pump" accounts, has increased, although they represent only 1.6 per cent of all the stations. Between 1931 and 1941, a ten-year period,—Standard constructed only 8 per cent of the newly constructed service stations upon vacant sites. Between 1942 and 1947, Standard's proportion of new construction was 8.7 per cent.

[fol. 259] (2) The Other Side of the Shield:

The other aspect of the problem must take into consideration the following facts: The gallonage of gasoline marketed has risen and the value of the commerce in petroleum and other products was $68,000,000.00 in 1947. The following statistical data bear on the extent of this commerce.

Total Gross Quantities of Gasoline Shipped from Standard Oil Company of California Refineries (Richmond, El Segundo and Bakersfield)

Year	Calif.	Ariz.	Nevada	Oregon	Wash.	Utah	Idaho
1946	15,371,753	698,933	391,715	3,279,260	3,827,403	45,351	2,258
1947	18,106,788	931,199	418,062	3,707,282	3,161,576	36,554	920

Note.—Gasoline shipped above is in general delivered to Company's storage. Requirements of all classes of trade are filled from such storage, and the Company has no records which would show what part of the above gasoline was received for distribution or sale to retail outlets.

Total Gross Quantities of Automobile Lubricating Oils Sold by Standard Oil Company of California and Standard Stations, Inc. Such Oils Were Shipped from Richmond and El Segundo Refineries (42 Gal. Barrels).

Year	Calif.	Ariz.	Nevada	Oregon	Wash.	Utah	Idaho
1946	492,226	27,012	9,569	63,525	79,982	17,016	14,177
1947	570,912	26,549	9,503	62,002	81,153	18,665	14,955

Note.—Company records are not kept showing shipments by state of destination. Above represents sales by States—export sales are not shown.

[fol. 260]

Total Gross Quantities of Gasoline Purchased or Acquired by Standard Oil Company of California (Other Than From Its Own California Refineries)

1946

	Calif.	Ariz.	Nev.	Ore.	Wash.	Utah	Idaho	N. M.	Texas
State from which shipped						639,458		4,032,233,570
State of destination		237,602				471,735	168,083

1947

State from which shipped						829,189		13,368,101,307
State of destination		114,675				680,146	199,043

NOTE.—Gasoline received above is in general delivered to Company Storage. Requirements of all classes of trade are filled from such storage, and the Company has no records which would show what part of the above gasoline was received for distribution or sale to retail outlets.

NOTE.—The above gasoline was acquired by purchase.

Total Gross Quantities of Gasoline Sold by Standard Oil Company of California to Retail Dealers (42 Gallon barrels)

Year	Calif.	Ariz.	Nev.	Oregon	Wash.	Utah	Idaho
1946	3,225,122	393,467	197,310	861,865	1,038,245	331,431	347,054
1947	2,937,558	431,385	223,973	1,040,264	1,233,551	365,244	393,200

Total Gross Quantities of Automotive Lubricating Oils Sold Retail Outlets Operated by Standard Oil Company of California (Standard Stations, Inc.) (42 Gal. barrels)

1946	72,928	8,871	4,450	19,475	23,448	7,469	7,830
1947	77,128	8,432	4,373	20,342	24,148	7,134	7,686

[fol. 261]

Total Gross Quantities of Gasoline Sold at Retail Outlets Operated by Standard Oil Company of California (Standard Stations, Inc.) (42 Gallon Barrels)

Year	Calif.	Arizona	Nevada	Oregon	Wash.	Utah	Idaho
1946	4,990,166	285,978	90,125	439,695	548,110	140,693	57,540
1947	5,343,288	293,355	112,179	502,070	604,133	121,109	67,208

Total Gross Quantities of Automotive Lubricating Oils Sold at Retail Outlets Operated by Standard Oil Company of California (Standard Stations, Inc.) (42 Gallon Barrels)

1946	80,064	5,836	1,796	8,213	10,458	2,317	1,272
1947	77,265	5,210	1,969	8,311	10,380	2,259	1,369

Total Number of Tires, Tubes, Batteries and Other Automotive Accessories Shipped by Companies Manufacturing or Supplying the Same to Standard Oil Company of California and or Standard Stations, Inc., or to Outlets on the Order of Standard Oil Company of California and or Standard Stations, Inc., From States Outside of California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, Idaho and Utah.

1946

State into which shipped	Tires	Tubes	Batteries
California		19,908	4,950
Oregon
Washington
Arizona
Nevada
Utah
Idaho
Total		19,908 (1)	4,950 (2)

[fol. 262]

1947

State into which shipped	Tires	Tubes	Batteries
California	31,158		1,692 (2) (3)
Oregon	8,459	5,004	800 (3)
Washington	10,226
Arizona	3,969		1,298 (4)
Nevada
Utah	3,509		879
Idaho
Total	57,321 (5)	5,004 (1)	4,639

NOTE.—Source: (1) Alabama; (2) Pennsylvania; (3) Texas; (4) Oklahoma; (5) Michigan.

(3) The Inconclusiveness of Comparative Figures:

Over the Government's objection, I allowed many comparative statistics, of which the foregoing are examples, to go into the record. This was consistent with the view that in resolving the issues of this case, the potential or actual effect of the agreements is important in determining reasonableness of restraint under the Sherman Act and substantiality of restraint or tendency to create monopoly under the Clayton Act.

But, while the comparative figures bear on the question, they are not determinate. Substantiality of restraint or tendency to create monopoly is established by (a) the market foreclosed,—here represented by the controlled units,—and (b) the volume of controlled business, totalling here in value $68,000,000.00.

Fractionally speaking, the business done by the competitors with their own outlets or with those under contract is [fol. 263] much greater than the business of Standard,—both in volume and in money value. Nevertheless, the business of Standard is considerable. In effect, it amounts to a substantial lessening of competition and a monopoly of a sizeable segment of a line of commerce in a definite area—the seven Western states. What has the tendency to achieve such result becomes, in actual effect, an unreasonable restraint. Even before adopting the "appreciable segment" test (48), the Supreme Court sought to avoid a rigid formula for finding reasonableness or unreasonableness. In the Trenton Potteries case, Mr. Justice Stone stated:

> "Reasonableness is not a concept of definite and unchanging content. Its meaning necessarily varies in the different fields of the law, because it is used as a convenient summary of the dominant considerations which control in the application of legal doctrines. Our view of what is a reasonable restraint of commerce is controlled by the recognized purpose of the Sherman Law itself. Whether this type of restraint is reasonable or not must be judged in part at least in the light of its effect on competition, for whatever difference of opinion there may be among economists, as to the social and economic desirability of an unrestrained competitive system, it cannot be doubted that the Sherman Law and the judicial decisions interpreting it are based upon the assumption that the public interest is best protected from the evils of monopoly * * * by the maintenance of competition." (49).

It follows that there is illegal restraint here under both Acts, whether the commerce be considered quantitatively or comparatively.

[fol. 264] (4) Application to Sub-leases and Open Accounts.

We need not dwell at length on the contention that the stations operated under a sub-lease or on open account must be omitted from consideration. It is true that the Clayton Act (50) speaks of leases of goods. And it may be conceded that the statute does not apply to leases on real property. And, generally speaking, a sub-lease is not a lease. But, as I stated at the oral argument, the designation which the parties have given to an instrument is not conclusive. We are dealing with an important governmental policy of long duration, established by a statute which became effective on July 2, 1890 (51), and implemented by a subsequent statute, which became effective on October 14, 1914 (52). Our duty is to give effect to it. If the practices involved in the case are contrary to the provisions of either statute, the character of the instrument in which they are contained is not important. The Sherman Act refers to contracts. (53) The Clayton Act refers to leases, sales or contracts. But, in setting the boundaries of illegality, it speaks of conditions, agreements, or understandings that the lessee or purchaser shall not use or deal in competitive goods, and which may result in the restraints condemned by the statute. (54) The Complaint is drawn under both statutes. Ordinarily, a lease deals with the term, the rent to be paid, and the type of business to be conducted on the premises. But, if, in addition, it says whose goods or products should be handled on the premises, we have a condition, agreement or understanding which has nothing to do with the lease proper, and which is within the scope of our inquiry. And if the exclusive supply undertaking, whether contained in a lease, or lurking behind an open account, has the effect condemned by the statute, it is within its prohibitions. (55)

[fol. 265] (5) Source of Products.

For the purpose of distributing the petroleum products, both in bulk and packaged, supplied by the California refineries of Standard, the territory is divided into twenty-three distributive areas. These areas are supplied bulk products by tank cars or tank trucks from various points, which, in turn, are supplied by tanker from the refineries.

Packaged goods are supplied by box cars and package trucks from the various refineries. For this purpose, the territory is divided into four areas. The accessories are supplied from eight accessory warehouses, their location and the dealers they serve being:

San Francisco—serves Central and Northern California; also dealers in Northwestern Nevada; also Lakeview District in Southern Oregon.

Salt Lake City—serves all Utah, Arizona, North of Grand Canyon, Eastern and Northern Nevada and Southeastern Idaho.

Phoenix—confined to the State of Arizona and Needles across the Colorado River in California.

Los Angeles—Southern California and Southern Nevada.

Fresno—within the State of California.

Portland—Oregon, Southern Washington and Southwestern Idaho.

Seattle—Washington only.

Spokane—Eastern Washington and Northern Idaho.

The point is pressed that some of the products, such as gasoline, are supplied to California stations exclusively from California refineries. And it is argued that, so far as [fol. 266] the California stations are concerned, their dealings in gasoline are beyond the purview of interstate commerce.

We are not dealing here with commerce in different articles. We are dealing with contracts and practices which are alleged to be illegal under the Anti-Trust Acts. These contracts, which have been epitomized in the first part of this opinion (56), cover specifically all petroleum products and tires, tubes and batteries. They also affect dealings in other accessories. We need not, therefore,—nay, we cannot—make a segregation, so as to exclude any item which may have both state provenance and destination in the Western area. The contract is an entirety and cannot be split. More, under the Clayton Act, if a contract has a tendency to lessen competition substantially, or to create a monopoly, the fact that it may also affect the movement of goods in intrastate commerce does not validate it, if its whole effect is likely to be a lessening of competition or monopoly in a sizeable and measurable segment of interstate commerce. In interpreting statutes of this character, and, generally, any legislation which aims to carry into effect the plenary power of the Congress to regulate commerce, it is accepted constitutional doctrine that the power to control is not destroyed by the mere fact that purely intrastate activities may also be reached by it. (57)

More, as already shown, there is a constant flow in interstate commerce of these products and supplies. (58) The contracts affect, and the transactions under them are in the course of interstate commerce. And the practice must also be considered from the effect on the dealers and the com- [fol. 267] petitive suppliers. If, as to them, it results in an effective lock-out of a considerable supply of goods of interstate source, the contracts which carry the practice into effect are invalid.

V

Conclusion and Findings

(1) Summary of Conclusions:

So we come to the end of our discussion. Grant that, on a comparative basis, and in relation to the entire trade in these products in the area, the restraint is not integral. Admit also that control of distribution results in lessening of costs and that its abandonment might increase costs. Despite all this, there confronts us the inescapable fact that such "balanced distribution"—as counsel for the defendants characterize it,—calls for concentration of representation, which, in turn, results in an unreasonable restriction of trade, and a substantial lessening of competition, so far as the 5197 outlets, their independent operators and those who seek to supply them, are concerned. As the restriction corners a market of the value of $68,000,000.00, it is illegal, even considered on a comparative basis. Concede further, that the arrangement was entered into in good faith, with the honest belief that control of distribution and consequent concentration of representation were economically beneficial (58) to the industry and to the public, that they have continued for over fifteen years openly, notoriously and unmolested by the Government, and have been practiced by other major oil companies competing with [fol. 268] Standard, that the number of Standard outlets so controlled may have decreased, and the quantity of products supplied to them may have declined, on a comparative basis. Nevertheless, as I read the latest cases of the Supreme Court, I am compelled to find the practices here involved to be violative of both statutes. For they affect injuriously a sizeable part of interstate commerce, or,—to use the current phrase—"an appreciable segment" of interstate commerce.

(2) Specific Findings:

So the facts proved and the legal principles applicable command the following findings:

1. The exclusive supply agreements relate to interstate commerce.

2. They affect, and the transactions under them are in the course of, interstate commerce.

3. The relation established by the agreements between the operators and Standard is not that of employer and employee, but that of independent contractor.

4. The agreements confine the operators of stations to which they apply to dealing in Standard products, and automotive accessories handled or sponsored by them.

5. They lock out dealers from sources of competitive products originating in interstate commerce.

6. They deny to dealers access to such competitive products.

7. They deny to manufacturers or suppliers of such products access to the outlets controlled by the independent contractors who operate the stations.

8. They affect a substantial number of outlets and a sub-
[fol. 269] stantial amount of products, whether considered comparatively or not.

9. They constitute an unreasonable restraint of trade and commerce among the States, under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. (59)

10. They result in a substantial lessening of competition and tend to create a monopoly in a line of commerce, in contravention of the Clayton Act. (60)

11. They are illegal in their effect and should be enjoined.

Judgment will, therefore, be for the plaintiff. The terms of the judgment are contained in an order filed simultaneously.

Dated this 7th day of June, 1948.

Leon R. Yankwich, United States District Judge.

[fol. 270] Notes to Text

1. 15 U. S. C. A., Sec. 1.

2. 15 U. S. C. A., Sec. 14.

3. Walling v. Jacksonville Paper Co., 1943, 317 U. S. 564; United States v. South-Eastern Underwriters Association, 1944, 322 U. S. 546-553; United States v. Frankfort Distilleries, Inc., 1945, 324 U. S. 293, 296-298; United States v. Yellow Cab Co., 1947, 332 U. S. 218, 224-226.

4. United States v. Heating & Piping & Air Conditioning Contractors Ass'n, 1940, D. C. Calif., 33 Fed. Sup. 978; United States v. Food & Grocery Bureau of So. Calif., 1942, D. C. Calif., 43 Fed. Sup. 966; United States v. Food & Grocery Bureau of So. Calif., 1942, D. C. Calif., 43 Fed. Sup. 974; United States v. San Francisco Electrical Contractors Ass'n, 1944, D. C. Calif., 57 Fed. Sup. 57.

5. Pick Manufacturing Co. v. General Motors Corp., 1936, 299 U. S. 3.

6. Pick Manufacturing Co. v. General Motors Corp., supra, at pp. 3-4.

7. Pick Manufacturing Co. v. General Motors Corp., supra, at p. 4. (Emphasis added)

8. Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 1911, 221 U. S. 1, 55-62.

9. United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 1940, 310 U. S. 150, 220-225; See, Fashion Originators' Guild v. Federal Trade Commission, 1941, 213 U. S. 457, 468.

10. United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., supra, at pp. 220-221. (Emphasis added.)

[fol. 271] 11. See, Mandeville Island Farms, Inc. v. American Crystal Sugar Co., 1948, slip decision No. 75, decided on May 10, 1948, pp. 22 et seq.

12. Fashion Originators' Guild v. Federal Trade Commission, 1940, 2 Cir., 114 F(2) 80.

13. Fashion Originators' Guild v. Federal Trade Commission, supra, at pp. 84-85. (Emphasis added)

14. See cases under Notes 8 to 12, inclusive. And see, Restatement of Contracts, Section 516; Wilder Mfg. Co. v. Corn Products Refining Co., 1915, 236 U. S. 165; Federal Trade Commission v. Sinclair Refining Co., 1923, 261 U. S. 463; Twin City Co. v. Harding Glass Co., 1931, 283 U. S. 353; Associated Oil Co. v. Myers, 1933, 217 Cal. 297; General Petroleum Corp. v. Longhead, 1933, 218 Cal. 554; B. S. Pearsall Butter Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 1933, 7 Cir., 292 Fed. 720; Excelsior Motor Mfg. & Supply Co. v. Sound Equipment, 1934, 7 Cir., 73 F(2) 725.

15. United States v. Yellow Cab Co., 1947, 332 U. S. 218; United States v. National Lead Co., 1947, 332 U. S.

319; International Salt Co., Inc., v. United States, 1947, 332 U. S. 392; United States v. National Lead Co., 1947, 332 U. S. 319; United States v. Line Material Co., 1947, 333 U. S. 287, 308-310; United States v. United States Gypsum Co., 1948, 333 U. S. 364, 388-393. And see, International Machines Corp. v. United States, 1936, 298 U. S. 130, 137-140; Oxford Varnish Corp. v. Ault & Wiborg Corp., 1936, 6 Cir., 83 F(2) 764; Signode Steel Strapping Co. v. Federal [fol. 272] Trade Commission, 1942, 4 Cir., 132 F(2) 48, 52-54.

16. Federal Trade Commission v. Morton Salt Company, 1948, slip decision, No. 464, pp. 7-8.

17. Mandeville Island Farms, Inc. et al., v. American Crystal Sugar Company, 1948, slip decision No. 75, p. 16.

18. Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 1911, 221 U. S. 5, 55-62.

19. 15 U. S. C. A., Sec. 14.

20. Fashion Originators' Guild of America v. Federal Trade Commission, 1941, 312 U. S. 457, 463-466 (Emphasis added); And see, Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers' Ass'n v. United States, 1914, 234 U. S. 600; Standard Fashion Co. v. Magrane-Houston Co., 1922, 258 U. S. 346, 357; Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 1940, 310 U. S. 469, 489-497.

21. Federal Trade Commission v. Morton Salt Co., supra, Mandeville Island Farms Co. v. American Crystal Sugar Co., supra.

22. Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 1911, 221 U. S. 5.

23. Standard Oil Co. v. United States, supra, at p. 64. And see, Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. Park & Sons Co., 1911, 220 U. S. 373, 406-407; Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 1940, 310 U. S. 469; Boro Hall Corp. v. General Motors, 1942, 2 Cir., 124 F(2) 822; United States v. Aluminum Co. of America, 1945, 2 Cir., 148 F(2) 416, 427-430; United States v. General Motors, 1941, 7 Cir., 121 F(2) 376.

24. Judson L. Thompson Mfg. Co. v. Federal Trade [fol. 273] Commission, 1945, 1 Cir., 150 F(2) 952, 955-958.

25. Wickard v. Filburn, 1942, 317 U. S. 111, 118-125; Federal Trade Commission v. Morton Salt Co., supra, at pp. 7-8; Mandeville Island Farms, Inc. v. American Crystal Sugar Co., supra, at pp. 14-19; compare Standard Fashion

Co. v. Magrane-Houston Co., 1922, 258 U. S. 346, 356-357; Corn Products Refining Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 1945, 324 U. S. 726, 738.

26. Parker v. Brown, 1943, 317 U. S. 338, 351; United States v. Heating, Piping & Air Conditioning Contractors, 1940, D. C. Calif., 33 Fed. Sup. 978, 979; United States v. San Francisco Electrical Contractors' Ass'n, 1944, 57 Fed. Sup. 57, 60.

27. Standard Oil Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 1922, 2 Cir., 282 Fed. 81; Federal Trade Commission v. Sinclair Refining Co., 1923, 261 U. S. 463, 474-475; International Shoe Company v. Federal Trade Commission, 1930, 280 U. S. 291, 297-298; United States v. Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, 1931, D. C. Mo., 47 Fed. (2) 288. United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 1940, 310 U. S. 150, 220-221.

28. United States v. Aluminum Company of America, 1945, 2 Cir., 148 F(2) 416, 427.

29. Donovan v. Pennsylvania Co., 1905, 199 U. S. 279, 296-302; (cited with approval in United States v. Yellow Cab Co., 1947, 332 U. S. 218, 229); Pick Mfg. Co. v. General [fol. 274] Motors Corp., 1936, 299 U. S. 3; Pick Mfg. Co. v. General Motors Corp., 1935, 7 Cir., 80 F(2) 641; Boro Hall Corp. v. General Motors Corp., 1942, 2 Cir., 124 F(2) 822; International Salt Co. v. United States, 1947, 330 U. S. 392; United States v. Griffith etc., slip decision No. 64, decided May 3, 1948, p. 7.

30. United States v. Griffith, supra, at page 7.

31. National Labor Relations Board v. Fainblatt, 1939, 306 U. S. 600, 606; and see. Signode Steel Strapping Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 1942, 4 Cir., 132 (F (2) 48, 54.

32. See cases cited in United States v. Heating, Piping & Air Conditioning Contractors' Ass'n, 1940, D. C. Calif., 33 Fed. Sup. 978, and United States v. San Francisco Electrical Contractors' Ass'n, 1944, D. C. Calif., 57 Fed. Sup. 57.

33. Mandeville Island Farms Co. v. American Crystal Sugar Co., 1948, slip decision, pages 14-15.

34. Local 167 National Brotherhood of Teamsters v. United States, 1934, 291 U. S. 286, 297 (Emphasis added); See, Allen Bradley v. Local Union No. 3, 1945, 325 U. S. 797, 810-811; United Brotherhood of Carpenters v. United States, 1947, 330 U. S. 395.

35. See end of Part I and cases cited in Note 3. See also, United States v. Yellow Cab Co., 1947, 332 U. S. 218, 224-228; McComb v. Herlihy, 1947, 4 Cir., 161 F(2) 568, 570-571; see my opinion in Devine v. Handy, 1948, D. C. Calif., 76 Fed. Sup. ——. And for a comprehensive survey of the recent broadening of the concept of commerce, see, Stern, [fol. 275] The Commerce Clause and The National Economy, 1933-1946, 59 Harvard Law Review, 1946, pp. 645, 883.

36. Associated Press v. United States, 1945, 326 U. S. 1.

37. Associated Press v. United States, supra, pp. 18-19.

38. United States v. Yellow Cab Co., 1947, 332 U. S. 218, 224-228.

39. United States v. Yellow Cab Co., supra, at p. 218.

40. See, Zlinkoff & Barnard: The Supreme Court and a Competitive Economy, 1947, 47 Columbia Law Review, pp. 914, 926-932.

41. Associated Press v. United States, 1945, 326 U. S. 1.

42. Indiana Farmer's Guide Co. v. Prairie Farmer Publishing Co., 1934, 293 U. S. 268.

43. Indiana Farmer's Guide Co. v. Prairie Farmer Publishing Co., supra, at p. 278. And see, United States v. Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., 1944, 321 U. S. 707, 720-724.

44. United States v. Clear Flax Linen Looms, Inc., 1945, D. C. Minn. 63 Fed. Sup. 32.

45. United States v. Yellow Cab Co., 1948, 332 U. S. 218.

[fol. 276] 46. See, Coronado Coal Co. v. United Mine Workers, 1925, 268 U. S. 295, 310; Bedford Cut Stone Co. v. Stone Cutter's Ass'n, 1927, 284 U. S. 37, 49; Local 167 v. United States, 1934, 291 U. S. 293, 297; United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 1940, 310 U. S. 150, 212-218; United Brotherhood of Carpenters v. United States, 1947, 330 U. S. 395; and see my opinion in United States v. Heating, Piping & Air Conditioning Contractors' Ass'n, 1940, D. C. Cal., 33 Fed. Sup. 395.

47. Coronado Coal Co. v. United Mine Workers, supra, at p. 310.

48. See Part III, (A) and cases cited in Footnotes 36 to 45.

49. United States v. Trenton Potteries, 1926, 273 U. S. 392, 397. (Emphasis added)

50. 15 U. S. C. A., Sec. 14; Curtis Publishing Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 1921, 3 Cir., 270 Fed. 881, 906; Associated Oil Co. v. Meyers, 1933, 217 Cal. 297, 304-306.

51. 15 U. S. C. A., Sec. 1.

52. 15 U. S. C. A, Sec. 14.

53. 15 U. S. C. A., Sec. 1.

54. 15 U. S. C. A., Sec. 14.

55. See, United Shoe Machinery So. v. United States, 1922, 258 U. S. 451, 457-458; Standard Fashion Co. v. Magrane-Houston Co., 1922, 258 U. S. 346, 354-355.

[fol. 277] 56. See Part I of Opinion.

57. See Part II-(D), and cases cited in Footnotes 32 to 35. And see, United States v. Wrightwood Dairy Co., 1942, 315 U. S. 110; Illinois Natural Gas Co. v. Central Illinois Public Service Co., 1942, 314 U. S. 498; and see my opinion in Holl v. Southern Pacific Co., 1947, D. C. Calif., 71 Fed. Sup. 21, 23-24.

58. United States v. Trenton Potteries, 1926, 273 U. S. 392, 397; and see cases cited in Footnotes 9 to 13. General statements on discontinuity as an element in fixing the intrastate character of a transaction, such as those quoted and relied on, from Jewel Tea Co. v. Williams, 1941, 10 Cir., 118 F(2) 203, 206-207, are not very helpful. They must be evaluated only in relation to the situation under review in the particular case, and in the light of the later Supreme Court decisions, which have modified greatly the concept they seek to perpetuate. The case in which they are found was decided in 1941. In Walling v. Jacksonville Paper Co., 317 U. S. 564, decided in 1944, the Supreme Court refused to apply rigidly the formula of pause or stoppage. The Court said:

> "The record reveals, however, that the goods in both of these two categories are ordered pursuant to a preexisting contract or understanding with the customer. It is not clear whether the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals includes these two types of transactions in the group of prior orders which it held [fol. 278] were covered by the Act. We think they must be included. Certainly they cannot be distinguished from the special orders which respondent receives from its customers. Here also, a break in their physical continuity of transit is not controlling. If there is a practical continuity of movement from the manufacturers or suppliers without the state, through respondent's warehouse and on to customers whose prior orders or contracts are being filled, the interstate journey is not ended by reason of a temporary holding of the goods at the warehouse. The fact that respondent may treat the goods as stock in trade or the circumstance that title to the goods passes to respondent on the intermediate delivery does not mean that the interstate journey ends at the warehouse. The contract or understanding pursuant to which goods are ordered, like a special order, indicates where it was intended that the interstate movement should terminate. Numerous authorities are pressed on us for the contrary view and for the conclusion that when the goods enter the warehouse, they are no longer 'in commerce.' But as we stated in Kirschbaum Co. v. Walling, 316 U. S. 517, 520-521, decisions dealing with various assertions of state or federal power in the commerce filed are not particularly helpful in determining the reach of this Act." (Walling v. Jacksonville Paper Co., supra, at pp. 568-569) (Emphasis added).

And see, Walling v. Mutual Wholesale Foods Supply Co, [fol. 279] 1944, 8 Cir., 141 F(2) 331, 338-340; compare, Clyde v. Broderick, 1944, 10 Cir., 144 F(2) 348, 351, decided after the Jacksonville Paper Co. case, and in which the same court which decided the Jewel Tea Company case applies a more flexible concept, which accords with the latest rulings of the Supreme Court.

59. See Part II-(D) of opinion, and cases cited in Footnotes 32 to 35.

60. 15 U. S. C. A., Sec. 1.

61. 15 U. S. C. A., Sec. 14.

[fol. 280] [File endorsement omitted]

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, CENTRAL DIVISION

Honorable Leon R. Yankwich, Judge

No. 6159-Y

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff,

vs.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA AND STANDARD STATIONS, INC., Defendants

DECISION AND ORDER—Filed June 7, 1948

The above-entitled cause, heretofore tried, argued and submitted, is now decided as follows:

I

Upon the grounds stated in the Opinion filed herewith, judgment will be for the plaintiff, as follows:

(1) That defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. have entered into contracts which unreasonably restrain interstate trade and commerce in petroleum products and automotive accessories in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

(2) That Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. have substantially lessened and restrained competition in petroleum products and automotive accessories, in violation of Section 3 of the Clayton Act.

[fol. 281] (3) That the exclusive supply provisions in the written contracts and oral agreements between defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. and Independent Service Station Operators and Garage Operators are in unreasonable restraint of, and substantially lessen competition in, interstate commerce in petroleum products and automotive accessories and in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act and Section 3 of the Clayton Act.

(4) That defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc. and their officers, directors, agents, representatives, and all persons and corporations acting or claiming to act on their behalf be and are hereby perpetually enjoined from entering into, or enforcing any contract, agreement, or understanding, express or implied, with any Independent Service Station Operator, or Garage Operator, or from inducing or compelling, or attempting to induce or compel, by any means whatever, any Independent Service Station Operator, or Garage Operator, to enter into any contract, agreement, or understanding, which provides:

(a) That the Independent Service Station Operator or Garage Operator shall secure all of his requirements of petroleum products from defendant Standard, or shall not handle the petroleum products of any other company;

(b) That the Independent Service Station Operator, or Garage Operator shall secure all of his requirements of any one or more types of automotive accessories from or through defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc., or will not handle accessories competitive with those distributed or sponsored by defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc;

(c) That the sale of any petroleum product or automotive accessory to any Independent Service Station [fol. 282] Operator, or Garage Operator shall be conditional on the sale of other petroleum products or automotive accessories.

(4) In order not to deprive the defendants of the benefit of any appeal in the case, the permanent injunction will be stayed until the expiration of six months after the Judgment shall have become final.

II

The Judgment shall be based upon the following findings:

(1) The exclusive supply agreements relate to interstate commerce.

(2) They affect, and the transactions under them are in the course of interstate commerce.

(3) The relation established by the agreements between the operators and Standard is not that of employer and employee, but that of independent contractor.

(4) The agreements confine the operators of stations to which they apply to dealing in Standard products, and automotive accessories handled or sponsored by them.

(5) They lock out dealers from sources of competitive products originating in interstate commerce.

(6) They deny to dealers access to such competitive products.

(7) They deny to manufacturers of suppliers of such products access to the outlets controlled by the independent contractors who operate the stations.

(8) They affect a substantial number of outlets and a substantial amount of products, whether considered comparatively or not.

(9) They constitute an unreasonable restraint of trade and commerce among the States under the Sherman Anti-[fol. 283] Trust Act.

(10) They result in a substantial lessening of competition and tend to create a monopoly in a line of commerce in contravention of the Clayton Act.

(11) They are illegal in their effect and should be enjoined.

Judgment will, therefore, be for the plaintiff.

Findings and Judgment to be prepared by counsel for the plaintiff under Local Rule 7, in accordance herewith.

Dated this 7th day of June, 1948.

(S.) Leon R. Yankwich, U. S. District Judge.

[fol. 284] [File endorsement omitted]

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

[Title omitted]

NOTICE OF MOTION FOR REOPENING, REARGUMENT AND RECONSIDERATION, AND FOR A DECISION IN FAVOR OF DEFENDANTS—Filed June 16, 1948

To Plaintiff and its Attorneys:

Please take notice that on June 28, 1947, at the hour of 10:00 A. M., or as soon thereafter as defendants' counsel may be heard, defendants will severally move the above entitled Court in the courtroom of the Honorable Leon R. Yankwich, Judge of said Court, in the United States Post Office and Court House Building at Los Angeles, California, to grant the motion which is annexed hereto.

Said motion will be made upon and reference will be made to the records, papers, pleadings and files herein including the reporter's transcript of proceedings at the trial, the exhibits received in evidence, the testimony offered and [fol. 285] rejected, and the opinion and order of the Court filed on June 7, 1948.

Said motion will be made upon the ground that the decision on June 7, 1948 of the United States Supreme Court in United States v. Columbia Steel Co. demonstrates that it would be error for this Honorable Court, upon the evidence in this case, to enter a judgment in favor of plaintiff, and that the law as now stated in said Columbia Steel decision, applied to the facts of this case, requires a judgment in favor of defendants.

In support of said motion there is served and filed herewith a printed memorandum entitled "Memorandum Showing that the Decision of the Supreme Court in United States v. Columbia Steel Co., Requires a Decision in Favor of Defendants."

Dated, June 16, 1948.

Lawler, Felix & Hall, Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, John M. Hall, by John M. Hall, Attorneys for defendants.

[fol. 286] MOTION FOR REARGUMENT AND RECONSIDERATION AND A DECISION IN FAVOR OF DEFENDANTS.

Now come Standard Oil Company of California and Standard Stations, Inc., defendants herein, and severally move the Court:

That the Court reopen this cause and hear further argument upon and reconsider its opinion upon the merits in view of the decision on June 7, 1948 of the United States Supreme Court in United States v. Columbia Steel Co. and that upon such further argument and reconsideration the Court revise its opinion and vacate its order of June 7, 1948 and direct that judgment be for defendants and that findings and judgment be prepared accordingly.

[fol. 287] POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

See printed memorandum entitled, "Memorandum Showing That the Decision of the Supreme Court in United States v. Columbia Steel Co. Requires a Decision in Favor of Defendants," served and filed herewith.

There has been no judgment in this case, for the opinion and order of June 7, 1948 do not constitute a judgment; hence the Court retains jurisdiction to reconsider and revise the conclusions heretofore stated.

Continental Nat. Bank v. National City Bank, 69 Fed. (2d) 312, 317 (C. C. A. 9, 1934; cert den. 293 U. S. 557)

G. Amsinck & Co. v. Springfield Grocer Co., 7 Fed. (2d) 855, 858 (C. C. A. 8, 1925)

Marconi Wireless Co. v. United States, 320 U. S. 1, 47 (1943)

[fol. 288] [File endorsement omitted]

[fol. 289] IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

[Title omitted]

MEMORANDUM SHOWING THAT THE DECISION OF THE SUPREME COURT IN UNITED STATES V. COLUMBIA STEEL CO. REQUIRES A DECISION IN FAVOR OF DEFENDANTS—Filed June 16, 1948

The opinion of the Honorable Leon R. Yankwich was filed herein on June 7, 1948. On the same day the United States Supreme Court handed down its decision in United States v. Columbia Steel Co., — U. S. —. This decision is of the utmost importance to our case.

It is respectfully urged that the majority opinion in the Columbia Steel case discloses fundamental error in Judge Yankwich's opinion, and requires a decision in favor of defendants herein.

This memorandum examines the opinion in the Columbia Steel case, and, by an application of the same to our case, [fol. 290] demonstrates the error which, it is respectfully contended, underlies Judge Yankwich's opinion.

This memorandum is filed in support of defendants' contention that there should be a reconsideration of Judge Yankwich's opinion and conclusions, and a decision in favor of defendants herein.

Our Case	Columbia Steel Case
Dealers in seven Western states contracted to buy from Standard their resale requirements of petroleum products, and (in some cases) of tires, tubes and batteries.	U. S. Steel Corporation contracted to purchase for $8,250,000 the assets of Consolidated Steel Corporation, the largest independent steel fabricator on the West Coast.
There were 5197 of these dealers and their annual purchases from the company are said to aggregate $68,000,000.	U. S. Steel was the country's largest producer of rolled steel products, producing during 1937 to 1941 something like one-third of the country's rolled steel with average annual sales of $1,000,000,000.
	From 1937 to 1946 Consolidated purchased over 2,000,000 tons of rolled steel products, and during 1937 to 1941 had average annual sales of $20,000,000 in eleven Western states.

[Vol. 291] Our Case

The charge was that the contracts violated sec. 1 of the Sherman Act (unreasonably restrained commerce) and sec. 3 of the Clayton Act had the effect of substantially lessening competition or tending to create a monopoly in a line of commerce). The government's specific contention was that the contracts were an illegal restraint because all suppliers, other than Standard, would be excluded from the business of supplying the requirements of these numerous (though scattered) dealers.

[Vol. 292]

The contracts complained of obligated the dealer to buy his requirements at a designated location from Standard and thus, at such locations, other suppliers would (during the life of the con-

Columbia Steel Case

The charge was that this contract violated sec. 1 of the Sherman Act (unreasonably restrained commerce) and sec. 2 of the Sherman Act (was an attempt to monopolize).

The government's specific contention was, as stated in the opinion (1796): "The theory of the United States . . . is that the acquisition of Consolidated constitutes an illegal restraint of interstate commerce because all manufacturers except United States Steel will be excluded from the business of supplying Consolidated's requirements of rolled steel products, . . ."

"Whatever amount of rolled steel products Consolidated uses in the future will be supplied insofar as possible from other subsidiaries of United States Steel, and other producers of rolled

*Page references are to the "U. S. Supreme Court Bulletin" print of the opinion published by Commerce Clearing House, Inc.

Additionally the government contended that existing competition between U. S. Steel and Consolidated would be eliminated, and that the acquisition constituted an attempt by U. S. Steel to monopolize the production and sale of fabricated steel products in the Consolidated market. (1796) tracts) lose the dealers as prospective customers.	steel products will lose Consolidated as a prospective customer." (1797).

Our Case—Cont.	Columbia Steel Case—Cont.
Thus:	Thus:
"Requirements" contracts are complained of because they "shut out" competitors, i. e., dealers having contracted with Standard for their "requirements," competitors of Standard can no longer deal with such dealers. (This is temporary, i. e., lasts for the life of the contracts.)	"Vertical integration" is complained of because it "shuts out" competitors, i. e., Consolidated having been acquired by U. S. Steel, competitors of U. S. Steel can no longer deal with Consolidated. (This is permanent.)
By its complaint, the government selected an area ("Western area," i. e., California, Arizona, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Utah) in which it was alleged that Standard had [fol. 293] violated the law by means of these contracts. However, at the trial, the government contended that the "area" from which competitors were excluded was solely the 5000 or more dealer stations which had "requirements" contracts.	The government contended that "the relevant market to be considered is the eleven-state area in which Consolidated sells its products. . . ." (1798), i.e., the states of Arizona, California, Idaho, Louisiana, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Texas, Utah and Washington. (1791) The Court adopted this contention. (1800)
Judge Yankwich's opinion concludes that judgment should be for the government.	This decision affirms a judgment (7 F. Supp. 671) against the government.

The following comparison between Judge Yankwich's opinion of June 7, 1948, in our case and the opinion of June 7, 1948, in the Columbia Steel case shows that the foundation for the ultimate conclusion stated in Judge Yankwich's opinion is untenable.

Judge Yankwich's Opinion

"Substantiality of restraint or tendency to create monopoly is established by (a) the market foreclosed,—here represented by the controlled units,—and (b) the volume of controlled business, totalling here in value $68,000,000.00.

[fol. 294] Fractionally speaking, the business done by the competitors with their own outlets or with those under contract is much greater than the business of Standard,—both in volume and in money value. Nevertheless, the business of Standard is considerable. In effect, it amounts to a substantial lessening of competition and a monopoly of a sizeable segment of a line of commerce in a definite area—the seven Western states." (43, 44)

Columbia Steel Opinion

"It is argued that without regard to the percentages of consumption of rolled steel products by Consolidated just considered, the acquisition by United States Steel of Consolidated violates the Sherman Act. Such an arrangement, it is claimed, excludes other producers of rolled steel products from the Consolidated market and constitutes an illegal restraint per se to which the rule of reason is inapplicable." (1808)

Thus, we see that the gist of Judge Yankwich's opinion in our case adopts the argument government counsel made in the Columbia Steel case. Judge Yankwich's opinion is based upon a "sizeable segment" theory, i. e., that exclusion of competitors from upwards of 5000 scattered dealers under contract, plus $68,000,000 annual sales to such dealers are enough without more to spell illegality. The government, in our case, as well as in the Columbia Steel case, relied upon the Yellow Cab decision (332 U. S. 218) to support its theory. The opinion in the Columbia Steel case definitely points out that the Yellow Cab decision does not support the government's theory:

". . . the government concludes that the case [Yellow Cab] stands for the proposition that it is illegal per se for a manufacturer to preempt any market for his goods through vertical integration provided that 'an appreciable' amount of interstate commerce is involved. [In a footnote the Court here quotes that part of the Yellow Cab decision quoted and principally relied upon by the government in the case at bar in urging its "segment" theory.]

We do not consider our holding in the Yellow Cab case to make illegal the acquisition by United States Steel of this outlet for its rolled steel without consideration of its effect on the opportunities of other competitor producers to market their rolled steel. (1810, 1811).

* * * * * *

[fol. 296] Nothing in the Yellow Cab case supports the theory that all exclusive dealing arrangements are illegal per se. (1812)

* * * * * *

Exclusive dealings for rolled steel between Consolidated and United States Steel, brought about by vertical integration or otherwise, are not illegal, at any rate until the effect of such control is to unreasonably restrict the opportunities of competitors to market their product. (1813)

In United States v. Paramount Pictures, — U. S. —, we were presented with a situation in which the government charged that vertical integration was illegal under the Sherman Act. We held that control by the major producer-distributors over nearly three-quarters of the first-run theatres in cities with popu- [fol. 297] lation over 100,000 was not of itself illegal, and we remanded the case to the district court for further findings.

In outlining the factors which we considered to be significant in determining the legality of vertical integration, we emphasized the importance of characterizing the nature of the market to be served, and the leverage on the market which the particular vertical integration creates or makes possible. A second test which we considered important in the Paramount case was the purpose or intent with which the combination was conceived." (1813, 1814)

Columbia Steel Opinion —Cont.

* * * * * *

"In determining what constitutes unreasonable restraint, we do not think the dollar volume is in itself of compelling significance; we look rather to the percentage of business controlled, [fol. 298] the strength of the remaining competition, whether the action springs from business requirements or purpose to monopolize, the probable development of the industry, consumer demands, and other characteristics of the market." (1816, 1817)

Thus, it is made clear that it is not enough to simply point to a large volume of trade from which competitors are alleged to be "shut away" (either by "requirements" contracts, as in our case, or by "vertical integration," as in the Columbia Steel cases). The competitive setting in which this occurs must be considered. The "effect on the opportunities of other competitive producers to market" their product must be considered and their "opportunities . . . to market their product" must be observed. The "nature of the market to be served, and the leverage on the market" created by the practices complained of must not be ignored. The "purpose or intent" back of such practices must be ascertained. The "percentage of business controlled, the strength of . . . . competition, whether the action springs from business requirements or purpose to monopolize, the probable development of the industry, consumer demands, and other characteristics of the market" must all be given effect.

[fol. 299] Our case cannot be decided by simply finding that the following factors exist:

(a) Contracts with "requirements" clauses.

(b) 5197 scattered dealers having such contracts.

(c) A yearly volume of $68,000,000 handled by such dealers.

Yet Judge Yankwich's opinion makes it perfectly clear that these factors being present all else is of no significance. True, some evidence of the competitive background in our case was admitted and some of it is referred to in Judge Yankwich's opinion. (35 to 39) But his opinion shows that this counts for nothing; that the three factors mentioned above are controlling. Thus, compare what Judge Yankwich says with the opinion in the Columbia Steel case:

Judge Yankwich's Opinion.	Columbia Steel Opinion.
"So we come to the end of our discussion. Grant that, on a comparative basis, and in relation to the entire trade in these products in the area, the restraint is not integral. Admit also that control of distribution results in lessening costs and that its abandonment might increase costs. Despite all this, there confronts us the inescapable [fol. 300] fact that such 'balanced distribution'—as counsel for the defendants characterizes it,—calls for concentration of representation, which, in turn, results in an unreasonable restriction of trade, and a substantial lessening of competition, so far as the 5197 outlets, their in-	"In determining what constitutes unreasonable restraint, we do not think the dollar volume is in itself of compelling significance; we look rather to the percentage of business controlled, the strength of the remaining competition, whether the action springs from business requirements or purpose to monopolize, the probable development of the industry, consumer demands, and other characteristics of the market. (1816, 1817) dependent operators and those who seek to supply them, are concerned. As the restriction corners a market of the value of $68,000,000.00, it is illegal, even considered on a comparative basis. Concede further, that the arrangement was entered into in good faith, with the honest belief that control of distribution and consequent concentration of representation were economically beneficial to the industry and to the public, that they have continued for over fifteen years openly, notoriously and unmolested by the Government, and [fol. 301] have been practiced by other major oil companies competing with Standard, that the number of Standard outlets so controlled may have decreased, and the quantity of products supplied to them may have declined, on a comparative basis. Nevertheless, as I read the latest cases of the Supreme Court, I am compelled to find the practices here involved to be violative of both statutes. For they affect injuriously a sizeable part of interstate commerce, or,—to use the current phrase,—'an appreciable segment' of interstate commerce." (48, 49)

If the theory announced in Judge Yankwich's opinion is correct, then the decision in the Columbia Steel case would have been impossible. In the Columbia Steel case, the U. S. Steel Corporation by acquiring Consolidated, permanently removed Consolidated as a prospective buyer of rolled steel products from U. S. Steel's competitors. Such competitors were permanently prevented from ever selling such products to Consolidated. Over a ten-year period (1937 to 1946) Consolidated had bought 2,000,000 [fol. 302] tons of these products (1798) for its fabricating operations in eleven Western states, amounting to $20,000,000 annually (1937 to 1941). (1790) Certainly this was a "sizeable segment," and much more than an "appreciable segment." Yet the transaction was held to be lawful. It was upheld upon a consideration of the "competitive setting" and other factors, which find their counterpart in our case. For example:

Our Case.	Columbia Steel Case.
In the seven Western states Standard's retail dealer sales of gasoline are 12% to 14% of the total [McClanahan, Tr. 50]; in the Los Angeles Basin area (the largest retail gasoline market in the world) in 1946 they were 2.43% of the total; and in the San Francisco Bay area in 1946 they were 5.52% of the total. [Exs. V and Y.]	In the eleven Western states Consolidated's sales (total bookings) of fabricated structural steel products was 5% of the total during 1937 to 1942, and 11% in 1946. (1801, 1802)
In the seven Western states Standard's dealer sales in 1946 of lubricating oil were 5% of the total; of tires, 2% of the total; and of batteries, 1.8% of the total. [Exs. AA, BB and CC.]	In such area purchases by Consolidated over a ten-year period represented 3% of the demand for rolled steel products. (1816)
There was much uncontradicted evidence showing [fol. 303] that the contracts in question were the outgrowth of the powerful and	The acquisition "seems to reflect a normal business purpose, rather than a scheme to circumvent the law." (1822) aggressive competition confronting Standard in the Western area. There was no evidence whatever of any purpose to restrain competition or monopolize or any intent on the part of Standard other than a "normal business purpose."

There is further error in Judge Yankwich's opinio closed by the opinion in the Columbia Steel case.

Judge Yankwich's Opinion.

"The Socony-Vacuum case and other cases which follow it express the view that the economic wisdom or unwisdom, or the economic benefit or detriment, of a restriction on commerce is not material, especially when we are dealing with a practice, such as price fixing, which is illegal per se." (13)

. . . . . .

[fol. 304]

"Judge Learned Hand stressed these very points in the Fashion Originators' Guild case. He applied the reasoning of the Socony-Vacuum case to a case not involving price-fixing." (15)

. . . . . .

"At times, courts speak of the 'detriment' to the public

Judge Yankwich's Opinion—Cont.

resulting from a practice. But they do not intend to legalize restraints which may be beneficial to the public." (25)

"The harm to the public is gauged by the effect of the practices on the free flow of goods in interstate commerce and the maintenance of competition in that field. Consequently, practices which are likely to curtail or affect injuriously a measurable or sizeable part of commerce are prohibited under both Acts." (26, 27)

[fol. 305] But this "sizeable part" rule applies only where there is a specific intent to accomplish a forbidden restraint of commerce, or where the practices complained of are restraints which are illegal per se.

Columbia Steel Opinion.

"A restraint may be unreasonable either because a restraint otherwise reasonable is accompanied with a specific intent to accomplish a forbidden restraint or because it falls within the class of restraints that are illegal per se.

For example, where a complaint charges that the defendants have engaged in price fixing,* or have con-

* Citing United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 310 U. S. 150.

certedly refused to deal with non-members of an association, or have licensed a patented device on condition that unpatented materials be employed in conjunction with [fol. 306] the patented device,* then the amount of commerce involved is immaterial because such restraints are illegal per se." (1811, 1812)

* * * * * * *

"In determining what constitutes unreasonable restraint, we do not think the dollar volume is in itself of compelling significance; we look rather to the percentage of business controlled, the strength of the remaining competition, whether the action springs from business requirements or purpose to monopolize, the probable development of the industry, consumer demands, and other characteristics of the market," (1816, 1817.)

Thus it is clear that the cases in which the amount of commerce restrained is immaterial (i. e., where restraint of only an "appreciable"  part of interstate commerce is [fol. 307] all that is necessary) are cases in which there was (a) a specific intent to restrain, or (b) in which the practice engaged in is illegal per se. Such illegal practice being shown, it is brought within the Act by showing that an "appreciable" amount of interstate commerce is affected. But in our case there was no evidence that Standard had any specific intent to restrain commerce, and the practices complained of (i. e., the contracts) were concededly not illegal per se. (See Judge Yankwich's opinion, pp. 26, 27, 28).

---

 Citing Associated Press v. United States, 326 U. S. 1; Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers' Association v. United States, 234 U. S. 600; W. W. Montague & Co. v. Lowry, 193 U. S. 38; and Fashion Originators' Guild v. Federal Trade Commission, 312 U. S. 457.

* Citing International Salt Co. v. United States, 332 U. S. 392.

The Columbia Steel case demonstrates the error of applying the "sizeable part" theory to our case. In the Columbia Steel case the practice involved ("vertical integration") was not illegal per se. In our case the practice complained of ("requirements contracts") is not illegal per se. This being true, and there being no showing of a "specific intent to accomplish a forbidden restraint," the Columbia Steel case points out (1811) that the Associated Press case, the Fashion Originators' Guild case, the International Salt case, and the Yellow Cab case do not warrant an injunction on the theory that the contracts affect a "sizeable part" of interstate commerce; that despite the fact that a "sizeable part" is involved, the case must be decided upon those factors which were so prominently exhibited by the defense in our case, and which have been herein referred to as the "competitive setting."

In our case such "competitive setting" makes an even stronger case for the defendants than in the Columbia Steel case. The uncontradicted evidence shows that Standard adopts the policy of contracting with the fewest possible number of dealer outlets consistent with service to the marketing area; that such outlets are not so concentrated [fol. 308] as to even suggest a monopoly of any part of such area; that the number of Standard's dealer outlets has decreased substantially over the last ten years; that such outlets represent a small fraction of the total outlets; that

---

 The word "appreciable" is the term used in the Yellow Cab decision: "Hence it is enough if some appreciable part of interstate commerce is the subject of a monopoly, a restraint or a conspiracy." (332 U. S. 218, 225)

(Italics in the foregoing memorandum have been added.)

Standard throughout the area has powerful, aggressive, and numerous competitors, a number of whom have dealers exclusively handling their products and have expanded their dealer sales to a far greater degree than Standard; that Standard's dealer sales have not increased in volume out of proportion to the general increase in volume enjoyed by the rest of the industry in the area in question and in certain instances have actually fallen behind industry sales as a whole; that competitors of Standard have suffered no financial detriment from the practices complained of but on the contrary have grown and presumably prospered; and that both the dealers and the motoring public have benefited substantially from the service maintained by Standard as a part of its marketing system which the government seeks to abolish.

Dated, June 16, 1948.

Respectfully submitted, Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, Lawler, Felix & Hall, Marshall P. Madison, Eugene M. Prince, John M. Hall, Attorneys for Defendants.

[fol. 309] [File endorsement omitted]

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

[Title omitted]

RECEIPT—Filed June 16, 1948

(Of Notice of Motion for Reopening, Reargument and Reconsideration and for a Decision in Favor of Defendants and accompanying Memorandum.)

Receipt of a copy of each of the following is hereby acknowledged:

Notice of Motion for Reopening, Reargument and Reconsideration and for a Decision in Favor of Defendants.

Memorandum Showing that the Decision of the Supreme Court in United States v. Columbia Steel

Co. Requires a Decision in Favor of Defendants (printed).

Dated, June 16, 1948.

William C. Dixon, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; W. Alan Thody, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; Lawrence W. Somerville, Special Attorney; Edwin U. Driscoll, Special Attorney. By W. Alan Thody, Attorneys for plaintiff.

[fol. 310] [File endorsement omitted]

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, CENTRAL DIVISION

No. 6159-Y Civil

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff,

vs.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA AND STANDARD STATIONS, INC., Defendants

SUPPLEMENTAL OPINION—Filed June 28, 1948

Appearances:

For the Plaintiff: William C. Dixon, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; W. Alan Thody, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; Lawrence W. Somerville, Special Attorney Anti-Trust Division; Tom C. Clark, Attorney General; James M. Carter, United States Attorney.

For the Defendants: Lawler, Felix & Hall, By John M. Hall. Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, By Everett A. Mathews.

[fol. 311] Yankwich, District Judge:

I

THE MOTION TO RECONSIDER

On the same day on which the opinion in this case was filed, June 7, 1948, the Supreme Court decided United States v. Columbia Steel Company, et al. (1) On June 16, 1948, the defendants in this case filed a notice of motion for "reopening, reargument and reconsideration". This was followed by the motion itself, which, originally noticed for June 28, 1948, was advanced to, and actually made, on June 24, 1948, and submitted. It seeks a decision, findings and judgment in favor of the defendants.

I doubt if a motion of this character, which is akin to the motion for "another and different judgment" under California practice (2), can be entertained in our court, either before or after formal findings and judgment are filed. However, neither in the case in which I expressed such doubt (3), nor in a more recent case in which a similar motion was made (4), did I allow this to stand in the way of determining the motion on the merits. Nor will I do so now. For I grant that a judge may, at any time before finality attaches to his decision, change his views on the law of a case or the conclusions to be reached as to a controversy or a specific phase of it (5). More, it would be the imperative duty of any judge of a lower court to give effect to a decision of the highest court of the land, announced subsequent to, or simultaneously with, his decision; [fol. 312] and which called for a modification of his views. And such action would be obligatory, whether the higher court spoke with unanimity or was divided, or even if the judge agreed with the minority opinion. When such a situation confronted me several years ago, I wrote:

> "I feel compelled by this decision to hold that the new enactment, Chapter 10, of the Bankruptcy Act, in so far as it applies to irrigation districts of the type of the petitioner, is constitutionally vulnerable, as was the old. As a student, exercising private judgment, I agree with the conclusion of the dissenters that immunity from interference through federal bankruptcy laws, even if applicable to states, should not be extended to state instrumentalities, whether they be municipal, quasi municipal or public corporations. However, as a judge of a lower court, I cannot exercise private judgment, but must follow the opinion of the majority, which, as I read it, extends the immunity to all governmental agencies created by a state for the performance of public functions." (6)

Counsel for the defendants who are, no doubt, familiar with our practice in this respect, have assumed that I would hear the motion on the merits. For, in addition to referring to cases which recognize the right of a court to reconsider its decision (7), they filed simultaneously a twenty-page printed memorandum, the aim of which is to show "that the decision of the Supreme Court in United States v. Columbia Steel Company, requires a decision in [fol. 313] favor of the defendants."

Hence the notice, the brief and the motion itself, which is now before me for decision, all call for a determination of the question propounded by the defendants whether the decision referred to commands a ruling in the present case in favor of the defendants.

II

The Scope of United States v. Columbia Steel Co.

I am of the view that it does not call for a different conclusion than that announced on June 7, 1948. At the outset, I advert to the fact that the range of the ruling I made is not to be determined by the arguments which the Government advanced, but by what was actually decided. The fact that in the Columbia Steel Company case the Government may have made arguments similar to those made in this case loses all significance, if, in fact, my ruling was contrary to the contention. To illustrate: The Government, in the present case, contended that the exclusive supply provision in the Standard contracts was illegal per se. I declined to so hold. On the contrary, I ruled that it was illegal only if it resulted in an unreasonable restraint under the Sherman Act or in substantial lessening of competition under the Clayton Act. (8) I wrote:

"As I understand the pleadings, and the Government's position at the beginning of the trial, a judgment is sought decreeing that the clause in the con-facts which, by its language and actual effect, as [fol. 314] shown by the evidence, restricts the stations not employe-operated to the sale and use of petroleum products and accessories produced or supplied by Standard is illegal per se. We cannot agree. To the contrary, as we read the cases, exclusiveness of outlet is not, in itself, illegal. It becomes illegal only if it result in a substantial lessening of competition or the creation of monopoly in the line of commerce." (9)

The Supreme Court in the Columbia Steel Co. case, interprets its own prior decisions, and especially the Yellow Cab decision (10), in the same manner. Mr. Justice Reed, after referring to the Government's contention that such contracts are illegal per se, says:

> "We do not construe our holding in the Yellow Cab case to make illegal the acquisition by United States Steel of this outlet for its rolled steel without consideration of its effect on the opportunities of other competitor producers to market their rilled steel. In discussing the charge in the Yellow Cab case, we said that the fact that the conspirators were integrated did not insulate them from the act, not that corporate integration violated the act. In the complaint the government charged that the defendants had combined and conspired to effect the restraints in question with the intent and purpose of monopolizing the cab business in certain cities, and on motion to dismiss that allegation was accepted as true. Where a complaint [fol. 315] charges such an unreasonable restraint as the facts of the Yellow Cab case show, the amount of interstate trade affected is immaterial in determining whether a violation of the Sherman Act has been charged." (11)

And even the adoption of the Government's contention by a lower court in one case and its rejection in another by a higher court does not, necessarily, mean that the facts in both cases call for the same decision.

III

The Grounds of the Columbia Steel Co. Decision.

Unlike the present case which charged violation of both the Sherman and Clayton Acts, the Columbia Steel Co.

case charged violation of Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act only. The narrow scope of the inquiry in that case appears from this brief statement of the issues with which the opinion begins:

> "The United States brings this suit under Sec. 4 of the Sherman Act to enjoin United States Steel Corporation and its subsidiaries from purchasing the assets of the largest independent steel fabricator on the West Coast on the ground that such acquisition would violate Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act. The Complaint, filed on February 24, 1947, charged that if the contract of sale between United States Steel and Consolidated Steel Corporation were carried out, competition in the sale of rolled steel products and in fabricated steel products would be restrained, and that [fol. 316] the contract indicated an effort on the part of United States Steel to attempt to monopolize the market in fabricated steel products. After a trial before a single judge in the district court, judgment was entered in favor of the defendants, and the government brought the case here by direct appeal. 32 Stat. 823, 15 U. S. C., Sec. 29." (12)

The position of the Government in the case was weakened by the fact that on June 17, 1946, the Attorney General of the United States had approved the sale by the War Assets Administration to the United States Steel Corporation, one of the defendants, of the plant which the Government had constructed, during the war, at Geneva, Utah. The negotiations for the sale of the Consolidated plant began prior to that sale. And the purpose of the Consolidated purchase was, as stated in the opinion, with evident approval:

> "to assure a market for plates and shapes produced at Geneva, and Roach testified that Consolidated's purpose was to withdraw the stockholders' equity from the fabrication business with it- cyclical fluctuations at a time when a favorable price could be realized." (13)

In effect, the court rules that Consolidated's acquisition would not have any great effect on the market, in view of the fact that its requirements are "an insignificant fraction of the total market,—less than ½ of 1%." (14)

The court was also unable to foresee the probability of the continuance of even that limited market if the sale is [fol. 317] not completed. Mr. Justice Reed said:

> "Whether we accept the government's or Consolidated's figures, however, they are of little value in determining the extent to which West Coast fabricators will purchase rolled steel products in the eastern market in the future since the construction of new plants at Geneva and Fontana and the creation of new basing points on the West Coast presumably give West Coast rolled steel producers a far larger share of the West Coast fabricating market than before the war." (15)

And, finally, the court stressed the fact that the future dealings between Consolidated and United States Steel would be mere incidents of ownership, not illegal per se, and would not transgress the provisions of the Sherman Act. As Mr. Justice Reed put it:

> "A subsidiary will in all probability deal only with its parent for goods the parent can furnish. That fact, however, does not make the acquisition invalid. When other elements of Sherman Act violations are present, the fact of corporate relationship is material and can be considered in the determination of whether restraint or attempt to restrain exists. That this is the teaching of the Yellow Cab case is indicated by the following quotation:
>
> 'And so in this case, the common ownership and control of the various corporate appellees are impotent to liberate the alleged combination and conspiracy [fol. 318] from the impact of the act. The complaint charges that the restraint of interstate trade was not only effected by the combination of the appellees but was the primary object of the combination. The theory of the complaint, to borrow language from United States v. Reading Co., 253 U. S. 26, 57, is that "dominating power" over the cab operating companies "was not obtained by normal expansion to meet the demands of a business growing as a result of superior and enterprising management, but by deliberate, calculated purchase for control". If that theory is borne out in this case by the evidence, coupled with proof of an undue restraint of interstate trade, a plain violation of the Act has occurred." That view is in accord with previous decisions of the Court.

"The legality of the acquisition by United States Steel of a market outlet for its rolled steel through the purchase of the manufacturing facilities of Consolidated depends not merely upon the fact of that acquired control but also upon many other factors. Exclusive dealings for rolled steel between Consolidated and United States Steel, brought about by vertical integration or otherwise, are not illegal at any rate until the effect of such control is to unreasonably restrict the opportunities of competitors to market their product." (16)

The position of the Court was summed up in this language:

"We conclude that the so-called vertical integration resulting from the acquisition of Consolidated does not [fol. 319] unreasonably restrict the opportunities of the competitor producers of rolled steel to market their product. We accept as the relevant competitive market the total demand for rolled steel products in the eleven-state area; over the past ten years Consolidated has accounted for only 3% of that demand, and if expectations as to the development of the western steel industry are realized, Consolidated's proportion may be expected to be lower than that figure in the future. Nor can we find a specific intent in the present case to accomplish an unreasonable restraint, for reasons which we discuss under heading III of this opinion." (17)

So, on the whole, it is evident that the decision in Columbia Steel Co. case cannot be given the broad scope which the defendants claim for it. It is canalized in the narrow channel which the facts in the case established. The court did not have before it any established facts from which to determine the effect which such acquisition might have on future dealings with the acquired company in certain steel products. And there being no probability of restraining effect on interstate commerce, the court found no violation of the Sherman Act.

The minority opinion lends support to this view of the case. The majority declined to see violation in size resulting from permissible concentration of ownership. They required deleterious effects on commerce, in addition, before refusing sanction to the purchase. These they could not find or foresee. The minority, on the contrary, would [fol. 320] have found violation in mere bigness. (18)

In the present case, as appears from the original opinion, we are dealing not with probabilities but with actualities. It was proved at the trial that the challenged practices have, in fact, already resulted in denying to the independent operators of stations which are not owned by the defendants, free dealing in certain commodities in interstate commerce and locking out Standard's competitors from these outlets. And, as there are no rights incident to ownership, of the type involved in the contemplated purchase of Consolidated Steel, the conclusions already announced must stand. The motion is denied.

Dated this 28th day of June, 1948.

Leon R. Yankwich, U. S. District Judge.

[fol. 321] Notes to Text

1. United States v. Columbia Steel Company, et al, No. 461, October Term.

2. California Code of Civil Procedure, Sec. 663.

3. Brooks Bros. v. Brooks Clothing Co. of California, 1945, D. C. Calif., 5 F. R. D. 14.

4. Blanchard v. Pinkerton, No. 7738, an opinion which was filed on May 13, 1948, but which has not yet been published.

5. See, G. Amsinck & Co., Inc. v. Springfield Grocer Co., 1925, 8 Cir., 7 F(2) 855, 857-858; Continental National Bank v. National City Bank, 1934, 9 Cir., 69 F(2) 312, 317-318. While the cases just cited arose prior to the effective date of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the right of a court to change its conclusions before final judgment is recognized in cases decided since the rules went into effect. See, Marconi Wireless Co. v. United States, 1943, 320 U. S. 47, 48.

6. In re Lindsay-Strathmore Irrigation District, 1937, D. C. Calif. 21 Fed. Supp. 129, 135. Emphasis added.

7. See cases in Footnote No. 5.

8. See Opinion pages 11-27.

9. See Opinion pages 27-28.

10. United States v. Yellow Cab Co., 1947, 332 U. S. 218.

11. United States v. Columbia Steel Co., et al, slip decision pp. 24-25. It is to be observed that Mr. Justice Reed in [fol. 322] Footnote No. 17 of the Opinion quoted a portion of the Yellow Cab opinion which laid great stress on the effect of a restraint on commerce in a given area, and which adopted the language in Indiana Farmers Guide Co. v. Prairie Farmer Co., 1934, 293 U. S. 268, 279, which I stressed in the opinion. (See pages 44-45 of my opinion)

12. Slip decision, United States v. Columbia Steel Co., page 1.

13. Slip decision, page 10.

14. Slip decision, page 11.

15. Slip decision, page 13.

16. Slip decision, pages 26-27. Emphasis added.

17. Slip decision, page 30. Emphasis added.

18. The gist of the dissent is contained in this forceful statement:

> "We have here the problem of bigness. Its lesson should by now have been burned into our memory by Brandeis. The Curse of Bigness shows how size can become a menace—both industrial and social. It can be an industrial menace because it creates gross inequalities against existing or putative competitors. It can be a social menace—because of its control of prices. Control of prices in the steel industry is powerful leverage on our economy. For the price of steel determines the price of hundreds of other articles. Our price level determines in large measure whether we [fol. 323] have prosperity or depression—an economy of abundance or scarcity. Size in steel should therefore be jealously watched. In final analysis, size in steel is the measure of the power of a handful of men over our economy. That power can be utilized with lightning speed. It can be benign or it can be dangerous. The philosophy of the Sherman Act is that it should not exist. For all power tends to develop into a government in itself. Power that controls the economy should be in the hands of elected representatives of the people, not in the hands of an industrial oligarchy. Industrial power should be decentralized. It should be scattered into many hands so that the fortunes of the people will not be dependent on the whim or caprice, the political prejudices, the emotional stability of a few self-appointed men. The fact that they are not vicious men but respectable and social minded is irrelevant. That is the philosophy and the command of the Sherman Act. It is founded on a theory of hostility to the concentration in private hands of power so great that only a government of the people should have it."

[fol. 324] Clearly, the minority, led by Mr. Justice Douglas, would stop large concentrations of ownership because they see in them the possibility of harm to the national economy through price-control and other harmful restrictions to freedom of commerce. The majority, led by Mr. Justice Reed, do not see in consolidation of economic power the unreasonable restraint condemned by the Sherman Act. (15 U.S.C.A., Secs. 1 and 2). To them, that Act does not denounce bigness per se, but only such control, large or small, as results, in fact, in the restrictive or monopolistic evils at which the anti trust law is aimed.

Here, as is obvious from this and the original opinion, the injurious effect on interstate commerce of the restrictions has been shown to exist. More, the present action charges also violation of the Clayton Act (15 U. S. C. A. 14) which aims to stop monopolistic practices in their inception. Under it, a violation can be found if the practices tend to achieve the harm condemned by the statute, although such result has not yet been attained.

[fol. 325] [File endorsement omitted]

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, CENTRAL DIVISION

Honorable Leon R. Yankwich, Judge.

No. 6159-Y

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff,

vs.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA AND STANDARD STATIONS, INC., Defendants

ORDER—Filed June 28, 1948

The motion of the defendants for reopening, reargument and reconsideration of the above cause and for a decision in favor of the defendants, heretofore made and submitted on June 24, 1948, pursuant to notice filed on June 16, 1948, is hereby decided as follows:

I

Upon the grounds stated in the supplemental opinion filed herewith, the said motion is hereby denied.

Dated this 28th day of June, 1948.

Leon R. Yankwich, U. S. District Judge.

Counsel notified.

[fol. 326] [File endorsement omitted]

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

[Title omitted]

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law—Filed June 30, 1948

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. This is a suit in equity by the United States to enjoin certain practices engaged in by the defendants alleged to be in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act (26 Stat. 209 (1890). 15 U. S. C., Sec. 1) and Section 3 of the Clayton Act (38 Stat. 731, 15 U. S. C. 14. The Court has jurisdiction of the subject matter and the parties. The defendants Standard Oil Company of California, hereinafter called "Standard," and Standard Stations, Inc., hereinafter called "Standard Stations," have offices, transact business, and are found within the Central Division of the Southern District of California.

2. Defendant Standard is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware. Standard is engaged in the business of producing and refining petroleum products in the State of California, and of transporting, marketing, and distributing such products in the States of [fol. 327] California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Nevada, Utah and Arizona. Said states will hereinafter be collectively referred to as the Western area.

3. Defendant Standard Stations is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware, and is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Standard. It is engaged in the business of managing and operating service stations throughout the Western area for Standard.

4. Defendants Standard and Standard Stations have for many years past and are at the present time leasing, taking title to, and entering into contractual relationships with operators of service station sites for retail outlets within the Western area.

5. Definitions of terms.

A. The term "retail outlet," as used herein, refers to a service station or garage at which petroleum products and/or "automotive accessories" manufactured or "sponsored by" defendants Standard and Standard Stations are sold or distributed to the motoring public by an "independent dealer."

B. The term "independent dealer," as used herein, refers to the operator of a "retail outlet" who operates said retail outlet as an independent business enterprise and not as an employee or agent of defendants Standard or Standard Stations.

C. The term "petroleum products," as used herein, refers to those products obtained or manufactured from natural gases or crude oil by various processes and sold or used as a fuel or lubricant for automotive vehicles, together with miscellaneous oils and compounds derived from natural gases or crude oil, and designated for various specific uses and includes such petroleum products as are manufactured or "sponsored by" defendants and sold by defendants "Standard" or "Standard Stations" at any retail outlet operated by said defendants or either of them.

D. The term "automotive accessories," as used herein, refers to replacement parts and articles other than "petroleum products" used on or in the servicing or [fol. 328] repairing of automotive vehicles and includes tires, tubes, batteries, spark plugs, oil filters, oil filter cartridges, fan belts, battery cables, auto lamp bulbs, fuses, windshield wipers and blades, tire repair and vulcanizing kits, anti-freeze preparations, tire chains, waxes and polishes and other like items and includes such "automotive accessories" as are manufactured or "sponsored by" defendants and sold by defendants "Standard" or "Standard Stations" at any retail outlet operated by said defendants or either of them.

E. The term "sponsored by," as used herein, refers to petroleum products and/or "automotive accessories" which are not manufactured or produced by defendants Standard and/or "Standard Stations."

6. In or about the year 1926 defendant Standard began to acquire service station sites or "retail outlets" by means of leases or subleases. In or about the year 1927 Standard commenced to sublease certain of said "retail outlets" to "independent dealers." The said subleases required the "independent dealer" to sell only the products of defendant Standard on the leased premises. This method of acquiring control of "retail outlets" for the purpose of distributing and selling its products to the motoring public was termed the "lease and license system." Approximately 1,800 to 2,000 retail outlets were selling Standard's products under this method of distribution by the late 1920's.

7. Beginning in or about 1931 and until approximately the year 1938, the "lease and agency" system was used as a means of distributing Standard's products. During this period lease and agency agreements were executed and agency agreements without leases were employed. In numerous instances said lease and agency agreements provided that the agent handle only such gasoline, lubricating oils and other petroleum products as were manufactured or sold by defendant Standard.

[fol. 329] 8. Beginning about the year 1934 a form of agreement entitled "Distributor's Agreement," substantially similar to Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 2, was used by defendants as an additional method of distributing Standard's products through "independent dealers." Under such agreement, the "independent dealer" was required to acquire or purchase his total requirements of "petroleum products" and tires, tubes and batteries, which he sold or acquired for sale at the retail outlet operated by such dealer, from or through defendant Standard. Said written agreement also provided for the acquisition by said dealer from Standard of miscellaneous "automotive accessories."

9. In or about the year 1938 Standard superseded the agency agreements by "Dealer Agreements" substantially similar in form and content to Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 1, hereinafter more fully described in Paragraph 11. In 1944 Standard instituted and put into use within the Western area a form of agreement entitled "Petroleum Products and Equipment Agreement" (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 3), hereinafter more fully described in Paragraph 13. At about the same time, Standard also instituted and put into use within the Western area a form of agreement entitled "Dealer Agreement TBA" (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 4). The "Dealer Agreements TBA" have gradually replaced and superseded the Distributor Agreements (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 2) being used when the latter form of agreement (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 2) expired. Both the Dealer Agreement TBA form and the Distributor Agreement form contain comparable provisions relating to the purchase from the defendants by an "independent dealer" of his requirements of "petroleum products," tires, tubes, batteries, and miscellaneous "automotive accessories."

10. The relationship between defendants Standard and Standard Stations to an "independent dealer" is governed by five types of written agreements (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 6) at the present time. Such agreements are designated (1) Dealer Agreements (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 1); (2)

Distributor Agreements (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 2); (3) Petroleum Products and Equipment Agreement (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 3); (4) Dealer Agreement TBA (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 4); (5) Sublease (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 5). [fol. 330] 11. The "Dealer Agreement" (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 1) contains the following clauses:

"1. Standard Oil Company of California, a corporation, hereinafter called 'Company,' agrees to sell to , hereinafter called 'Dealer,' and Dealer agrees to buy from Company, all of Dealer's requirements of petroleum products used or sold or bought to be used or sold by Dealers at . The petroleum products to meet Dealer's requirements hereunder shall be those brands of gasoline, lubricating oils, and other petroleum products sold by Company to its dealers generally in Dealer's vicinity."

* * *

"7. In the performance of this agreement Dealer is engaged in an independent business and nothing herein contained shall be construed as reserving to Company any right to control Dealer with respect to his conduct in the performance of this agreement. Company reserves no right to exercise any control over any of Dealer's employees and all employees of the Dealer shall be entirely under the control and direction of Dealer who shall be responsible for their actions and omissions. Dealer will, at his own expense, during the term hereof, maintain full insurance under any Workmen's Compensation Laws effective in said state covering all persons employed by and working for him in connection with the performance of this agreement, and upon request shall furnish Company with satisfactory evidence of the maintenance of such insurance. Dealer accepts exclusive liability for all contributions and payroll taxes required under Federal Social Security Laws and State Unemployment Compensation Laws as to all persons employed by and working for him in connection with the performance of this agreement."

* * *

"9. This agreement shall not be assignable without the prior written consent of the Company. The waiver by Company of any default by Dealer shall not be deemed to be a continuing waiver of such default or the waiver of the default of any other provision hereof. [fol. 331] This agreement shall, as of the commencement date hereof, terminate all prior Dealer Agreements and Agency Agreements between Dealer and Company respecting the premises covered by this agreement."

12. The "Distributor Agreement" (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 2) contains the following clauses:

Quantity

"Company agrees to sell to Distributor, and Distributor agrees to buy from Company and stock and offer for sale all of Distributor's requirements of petroleum products used or sold or bought to be used or sold by Distributor in the conduct of his business on the premises hereinafter described. The petroleum products to meet Distributor's requirements hereunder shall be those brands of gasoline, lubricating oils and other petroleum products currently sold at service stations operated by Standard Stations, Inc. in Distributor's vicinity, and Distributor agrees not to store, handle, distribute, or sell any other brand or brands of petroleum products at or from the station."

Other Merchandise

"Company agrees to sell or consign to Distributor and Distributor agrees to purchase or receive from Company, and stock and offer for sale, all of Distributor's requirements of tires, tubes, and batteries used or sold or bought to be used or sold by Distributor on the premises above described. The tires, tubes and batteries to be supplied Distributor hereunder shall be Company's regular line of Atlas Tires, Atlas Tubes, and Atlas Batteries currently sold at service stations operated by Company in Distributor's vicinity. Company will deliver to Distributor such other Atlas merchandise currently sold by Company at service stations [fol. 332] operated by Standard Stations, Inc., that Distributor wishes to handle hereunder, in quantities necessary in opinion of Company to meet the station's trade requirements. Whether tires, tubes, batteries and other non-petroleum merchandise which Distributor handles hereunder shall be consigned or sold to Distributor shall depend on Company's current policies, but Company will allow Distributor the commissions or the equivalent thereof in differentials below Company's selling price therefor, as set forth in the attached schedule marked schedule 'A' and hereby made a part hereof. This schedule may be modified from time to time by Company. All tires, tubes, and batteries sold or consigned to Distributor hereunder shall be sold by Distributor at not less than Company's authorized prices therefor. All expenses of the storage, handling, sale and distribution at or from the station of products and merchandise consigned or sold to Distributor under the terms of this or any other paragraph hereof shall be paid by Distributor. The proceeds of the sale of consigned merchandise shall be held by Distributor as Trustee for Company and paid over to Company on demand."

* * * *

Conduct of Distributor's Business

". . . It is understood and agreed that Distributor in the performance of this agreement is engaged in an independent business, and nothing herein contained shall be construed as reserving to Company any right to control Distributor with respect to his physical conduct in the performance of this agreement. It is further understood and agreed that Company reserves no right to exercise any control over any of Distributor's employees and that all employees of the Distributor shall be entirely under the control and direction of Distributor. Distributor undertakes and agrees that he will, at his own expense, during the term hereof, maintain full insurance under any Workmen's Com- [fol. 333] pensation Laws effective in said state covering all persons employed by and working for him in connection with the performance of this agreement, and upon request shall furnish Company with satisfactory evidence of the maintenance of such insurance. Distributor accepts exclusive liability for all contributions and payroll taxes required under the Federal Social Security Act and State Unemployment Compensation Laws as to all persons employed by and working for him in connection with the performance of this agreement."

Breach of Contract

"In the event Distributor shall fail to perform or fulfill any obligation imposed on Distributor hereiin, Company at its option may terminate this contract forthwith. The waiver by Company of any breach of any provision hereof by Distributor shall not be deemed to be a waiver of the breach of any other provision or provisions hereof, or of any subsequent or continuing breach of such provision or provisions."

13. The "Petroleum Products and Equipment Agreements," (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 3) contain the following clauses:

"1. Standard Oil Company of California, a corporation, hereinafter called 'Company,' agrees to sell to hereinafter called 'Dealer,' and Dealer agrees to buy from Company, all of Dealer's requirements of petroleum products used or sold or bought to be used or sold by Dealer at

The petroleum products to meet Dealer's requirements hereunder shall be those brands of gasoline, lubricating oils, and other petroleum products sold by Company to its dealers generally in Dealer's vicinity.

. . . .

[fol. 334] "7. In the performance of this agreement Dealer is engaged in an independent business and nothing herein contained shall be construed as reserving to Company any right to control Dealer with respect to his conduct in the performance of this agreement. Company reserves no right to exercise any control over any of Dealer's employees and all employees of the Dealer shall be entirely under the control and direction of Dealer who shall be responsible for their actions and omissions. Dealer will, at his own expense, during the term hereof, maintain full insurance under any Workmen's Compensation Laws effective in said state covering all persons employed by and working for him in connection with the performance of this agreement, and upon request shall furnish Company with satisfactory evidence of the maintenance of such insurance. Dealer accepts exclusive liability for all contributions and payroll taxes required under Federal Social Security Laws and State Unemployment Compensation Laws as to all persons employed by and working for him in connection with the performance of this agreement."

* * *

"9. This agreement shall not be assignable without the prior written consent of the Company. The waiver by Company of any default by Dealer shall not be deemed to be a continuing waiver of such default or the waiver of the default of any other provision hereof. This agreement shall, as of the commencement date hereof, terminate all prior Dealer Agreements between Dealer and Company or Subleases from Company to Dealer respecting the premises covered by this agreement."

14. The agreement entitled "Dealer Agreement TBA" (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 4) contains the following clauses:

"1. Standard Oil Company of California, hereinafter called 'Company' agrees to sell to hereinafter called 'Dealer,' and Dealer agrees to buy from Company, all Dealer's re- [Fol. 335] quirements of petroleum products used, sold, or bought to be used or sold, by Dealer at , hereinafter called 'said premises.' The petroleum products to meet Dealer's requirements hereunder shall be those brands of such products generally sold by Company to its Dealers.

"2. Company agrees to sell or consign to Dealer and Dealer agrees to purchase or receive from Company, and stock and offer for sale, all Dealer's requirements of tires, tubes, and batteries used or sold or bought to be used or sold by Dealer on said premises. The tires, tubes and batteries to be supplied Dealer hereunder shall be those lines supplied by Company from time to time to its dealers generally. Company will deliver to Dealer such other merchandise currently sold by Company that Dealer wishes to handle hereunder, in quantities necessary in opinion of Company to meet Dealer's requirements at said premises. Whether tires, tubes, batteries and other non-petroleum merchandise which Dealer handles hereunder shall be consigned or sold to Dealer shall depend on Company's current policies but Company will allow Dealer the commissions, or the equivalent thereof in differentials below Company's selling price therefor, as set forth in the attached Schedule 'A'. Company may modify this schedule from time to time. All tires, tubes, and batteries sold or consigned to Dealer hereunder shall be sold by Dealer at not less than Company's authorized retail prices therefor. The proceeds of the sale of consigned merchandise shall be held by Dealer as trustee for Company and paid over to Company upon demand. Dealer shall be responsible for all loss of, or damage to, consigned goods belonging to Company in Dealer's possession.

"3. All expenses of the storage, handling, sale and distribution at said premises of products and merchandise consigned or sold to Dealer under this agreement shall be paid by Dealer."

* * *

[fol. 336] "10. Dealer is engaged in an independent business and nothing herein shall be construed as reserving to Company any right to control Dealer's conduct in the performance of this agreement. Company reserves no right to control Dealer's employees, all of whom shall be entirely under Dealer's control and direction and he shall be responsible for their actions and omissions. Dealer shall, at his own expense, during the term hereof, maintain full insurance under applicable Workmen's Compensation Laws covering all persons employed by and working for him in connection with the performance of this agreement, and upon request shall furnish Company with satisfactory evidence of the maintenance of such insurance. Dealer shall pay and bear all contributions and payroll taxes required under Federal Social Security Laws and State Unemployment Compensation Laws as to all persons employed by and working for him in connection with the performance of this agreement.

"11. Dealer shall protect, defend, and hold Company harmless from and against all liability for damage to property (including Dealer's property) or injury to or death of persons, directly or indirectly resulting from any acts or omissions of Dealer or Dealer's employees on, or in connection with the operation of, said premises."

* * *

"13. This agreement shall not be assigned without the prior written consent of Company. The waiver by Company of any default by Dealer shall not be deemed to be a continuing waiver of such default or the waiver of any other default hereunder. This agreement shall, as of the commencement date hereof, terminate all prior Dealer Agreements, Distributor Agreements, and Agency Agreements between Dealer and Company respecting said premises."

15. The agreement entitled "Sublease" (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 5) contains the following clause:

[fol. 337] "4. Lessee shall handle and sell on the leased premises only such petroleum products as are sold Lessee by Lessor, and Lessee agrees not to store, handle, sell, or distribute on or from said premises any petroleum products of any description other than those petroleum products sold to Lessee by Lessor. The price payable by Lessee to Lessor for said petroleum products shall be Lessor's posted price for the same or similar products to it's Dealers generally in Lessee's vicinity at time and place of delivery."

16. As of March 12, 1947 there were 7,145 written agreements of the types described in paragraphs 11-15 herein, in full force and effect in the seven states of the Western area as follows:

Type of Agreement	Calif.	Ariz.	Nev.	Ore.	Wash.	Ida.	Utah	Total
Dealer Agreement	695	81	50	354	356	73	47	1656
Distributor Agreement	255	36	24	96	97	33	15	556
Petroleum Products and Equipment Agreement	495	195	12	92	147	31	30	912
Dealer Agreement TBA	943	160	37	293	474	166	148	2221
Sublease	678	82	42	322	435	116	125	1800*
							Total	7145

*1798 of such sublease agreements are used in conjunction with other types of the aforementioned agreements.

17. As of March 12, 1947, in addition to the aforesaid 7,145 written agreements, defendants Standard and Standard Stations had oral agreements with 742 "independent dealers" pursuant to which the dealer agreed to handle and sell only the gasoline acquired from or sold to him by defendant Standard. Such "independent dealers" are sold as "open accounts" by the defendants.

17(a) The 742 oral agreements of the type described in Paragraph 17 herein applied to 742 retail outlets located in the seven States of the Western area, as follows:

[fol. 338]

California	Arizona	Nevada	Oregon	Washington	Idaho	Utah	Total
429	50	22	77	124	19	21	742

18. As of March 12, 1947, in addition to the aforesaid 7,145 written agreements and the 742 oral agreements described in Paragraph 17, defendants had entered into various other oral agreements, the exact number of which is unknown, with some of the independent dealers with whom the defendants had executed "Dealer Agreements" TBA and "Distributor Agreements" (Plaintiff's Exhibits No. 4 and No. 2). Said oral agreements provided that "the independent dealer" should acquire such "automotive accessories," other than tires, tubes and batteries as he might require for use or sale at the "retail outlet" operated by him from the defendants Standard and Standard Stations provided and as long as said defendants were able to furnish said accessories.

19. As of March 12, 1947 there were 5,937 retail outlets operated by "independent dealers," located in the seven states of the Western area which were subject to either the written or oral agreements referred to in Paragraphs 11-15, and 17. The number of "retail outlets" operating under various written and oral agreements in seven Western tes as of March 12, 1947 was as follows:

Retail outlets operating under written agreements described in paragraphs 11-15 herein	5,195
Retail outlets operating under oral agreements described in paragraph 17	742
Total	5,937

20. The total quantity and approximate dollar volume of siness done between the defendants and the "independent alers" under the 7,887 written and oral agreements at 5,937 "retail outlets" referred to in Paragraphs 17 and herein for the years 1946 and 1947 was as follows:

1946—Approximate Dollar Volume:

Gasoline	$48,342,374.62
Lubricating Oils	3,246,263.83
Tires and tubes	2,692,094.00
Batteries	352,464.00
Miscellaneous Accessories	687,557.00
	$55,320,753.45

[fol. 339] 1946—Quantity Volume:

Gasoline	268,568,748 gals.
Lubricating oils	6,067,782 gals.
Tires	179,462 units
Tubes	138,174 units
Batteries	43,078 units
Miscellaneous Accessories	2,375,162 units

1947—Approximate Dollar Volume:

Gasoline	$57,646,323.00
Lubricating oils	3,353,490.21
Tires and tubes	3,188,361.00
Batteries	669,829.00
Miscellaneous Accessories	988,469.00
Total	$65,846,412.21

1947 – Quantity Volume:

Gasoline	320,257,350 gals.
Lubricating oils	6,268,206 gals.
Tires	213,304 units
Tubes	197,400 units
Batteries	63,126 units
Miscellaneous Accessories	2,526,114 units

21. The relationship established by the written and oral contracts and agreements described in Paragraphs 11-15, and 17 between the "independent dealers" and defendants is not that of employer and employee but that of independent contractor.

22. Defendants Standard and Standard Stations have persuaded, induced, and influenced "independent dealers" to enter into the various written and oral agreements described in Paragraphs 11-15, 17, and 18 herein by various means and methods, such as (a) lending money without interest or at rates below current interest rates; (b) by making loans, portions of which were later forgiven; (c) by making gifts of money; (d) by buying equipment from the independent dealer and thereafter furnishing new equipment to said dealer without charge, or by (e) selling equip-
[fol. 340] ment to said dealer at less than cost. In many instances such action was taken by the defendants for the purpose of displacing competitive products then being handled by said "independent dealer" at the retail outlet or for the purpose of precluding the acquisition of such outlet by a competitor of defendants. Standard Stations has negotiated and is a party to many of the agreements described in Paragraphs 11-15 for and on behalf of defendant Standard.

23. The written agreements described in Paragraphs 11 to 15 inclusive in effect as of March 12, 1947 in the seven states of the Western area were executed and approved in the offices of defendants at San Francisco, California. The written and oral agreements contemplate the movement and distribution of goods originating in interstate commerce. There is a constant flow in interstate commerce of the products produced and distributed by defendants. The transactions under the agreements are in the course of interstate commerce; directly affect the "independent dealer"; prevent him from dealing with competitive suppliers, and directly affect the shipment of competitive goods originating in interstate sources.

24. Defendants distribute and sell, or arrange for the distribution and sale, of "petroleum products" and "automotive accessories" to "retail outlets" in the seven states of the Western area. Standard owns and operates refineries located in the State of California at Richmond, El Segundo and Segura. "Petroleum products" produced or processed thereat are sold and or distributed to "retail outlets" throughout the seven states of the Western area. Gasoline is also purchased or otherwise acquired by Standard from the Utah Oil Refining Company located at Salt Lake City, Utah, for sale and distribution to "independent dealers" located in part of Utah and Southeastern Idaho. Quantities of gasoline are also purchased or acquired by defendants from the Standard Oil Company of Texas and shipped and distributed from said state by Standard to "independent dealers" located in the eastern part of the State of Arizona.

25. Defendant Standard sells between 12 and 14 per cent of all the gasoline sold or distributed through independent retail dealer outlets in the Western area. In the majority [fol. 341] of States of the Western area, Standard is the largest single marketer of gasoline through such outlets. Standard sold approximately 23 per cent of all the gasoline sold in the Western area during the year 1946.

26. The petroleum products sold and distributed throughout the Western area by defendants are known as both bulk products and as packaged goods. For the purposes of distribution of bulk products, the territory comprising the "Western area" is divided into 23 distributive divisions. Defendants supply such products to the "independent dealers" in such divisions by various transportation methods including tank cars, tank trucks, barge and tankers. In some instances defendants distribute the refined product directly from its refineries to the underground storage tanks of "independent dealers." In most instances defendants transport their products from their refineries to various bulk plants which are located throughout the seven states of the "Western area" from which plants such products are delivered by tank truck to the "independent dealer" at his "retail outlet." All the bulk plants used by defendants for distribution of petroleum products to "independent dealer" outlets throughout the Western area are owned by defendant Standard. The title, disposition and control of all "petroleum products" distributed by defendant Standard is retained by it until delivery is made to the independent dealer at his respective "retail outlet." Stocks of "petroleum products" in each of its bulk plants in the seven states of the Western area are constantly kept at an operating level by the defendant Standard.

27. Standard packages approximately all of the oils and greases sold by it to the "independent dealers" at its refineries located at Richmond, California and El Segundo, California. Some is packaged at Wilbridge, Oregon and Point Wells, Washington. Said oils and greases are distributed by Standard from these points to "independent dealers" in the "Western area." Defendants have divided the Western area into four distributive divisions for the purposes of the distribution of such packaged goods. In making such distribution Standard retains title to such packaged products until the "independent dealer" receives [fol. 342] such goods and signs the delivery slip at his retail outlet.

28. The automotive accessory products which are sold to and/or distributed by the defendants to the independent dealer are manufactured by various concerns other than defendants, and are shipped to defendants from factories located both within and outside the states of the Western area. The majority of such products bear the Atlas brand name. Shipments of such products are made by the manufacturers thereof to accessory warehouses maintained by Standard and thereafter distributed by defendants to independent dealers at the retail outlets. The eight accessory warehouses maintained by defendants, their location and the location by states of the independent dealers served by them, are as follows:

San Francisco—serves Central and Northern California; also dealers in Northwestern Nevada; also Lakeview District in Southern Oregon.

Salt Lake City—serves all Utah, Arizona, North of Grand Canyon, Eastern and Northern Nevada and Southeastern Idaho.

Phoenix—confined to the State of Arizona and Needles across the Colorado River in California.

Los Angeles—Southern California and Southern Nevada.

Fresno—within the State of California.

Portland—Oregon, Southern Washington and Southwestern Idaho.

Seattle—Washington only.

Spokane—Eastern Washington and Northern Idaho.

29. Numerous manufacturers and producers of "petroleum products" and "automotive accessories" located both inside and outside of the states of the "Western area" other than those producers and manufacturers whose products are marketed by defendants, are prepared to and have attempted to sell their respective brands of "petroleum products," tires, tubes, batteries and miscellaneous accessories to "independent dealers" within the Western area who have entered into the written or oral agreements described in Paragraphs 11 to 15, inclusive, 17 and 18 herein. [fol. 343] Many manufacturers and producers have factories or refineries located in states outside the Western area and are engaged in the business of marketing their petroleum products or automotive accessories within the Western area. Other manufacturers and producers located within the Western area make, sell and distribute "petroleum products" or "automotive accessories" in interstate commerce throughout the seven states of the Western area. In many instances direct sales representatives of manufacturers and producers have unsuccessfully attempted to sell "independent dealers" who were and still are parties to the written or oral agreements described in paragraphs 11 to 15, inclusive, 17 and 18 herein.

30. The manufacturers, producers, distributors and sellers of products competitive to those sold or distributed by Standard or Standard Stations to the independent dealers have been unable to sell their "petroleum products" and "automotive accessories," have been unable to increase their sales or compete for a part of the market represented by the retail outlets under contract to defendants. The agreements, written and oral referred to in Paragraphs 11 to 15, inclusive, 17 and 18 herein, have denied to manufacturers or suppliers of such competitive products access to the 5,937 retail outlets operated by the "independent dealers."

31. The intent, purpose and effect of the exclusive supply provisions of the written and oral agreements described in paragraphs 11 to 15, inclusive, 17 and 18 herein, have been to prevent the "independent dealer" operating under said agreements from handling any "petroleum products," tires, tubes, batteries and miscellaneous accessories other than those supplied or sponsored by defendants. When the "independent dealer" handled products competitive to those manufactured or sponsored by defendants, he did not do so openly. The agreements were interpreted by the independent dealers operating under them as precluding them from handling competitive products, except during the periods—especially during the war—when defendants were unable to supply the quantity demanded by the "independent dealers." The defendants reserved the right to determine the amount of tires, tubes, batteries and other accessories it would furnish the "independent dealers" operating under Distributor Agreements and Dealer Agreements TBA. Such dealers were denied access to [fol. 344] competitive products by the provisions of the foregoing agreements which were in effect. The independent dealers have been prevented from purchasing merchandise in an open competitive market of the quality which they desire and at prices determined by free and open competition. The written and oral agreements are intended to and in practice do confine the independent dealers to defendants' petroleum products and automotive accessories handled or sponsored by defendants.

32. The direct flow of interstate commerce has been affected by the written and oral agreements described in Paragraphs 11 to 15, inclusive, 17 and 18 herein (1) by channeling the products manufactured or sponsored by defendants regardless of their interstate or intrastate source, through an exclusive group of outlets; (2) by denying the independent dealers the right to buy competitive products and (3) by denying the manufacturers of competitive products the right to sell the "independent dealers" at the "retail outlets."

Conclusions of Law.

1. Defendants Standard and Standard Stations are engaged in the manufacture, sale and or distribution of petroleum products and automotive accessories in interstate commerce and in the course of such commerce have entered into contracts, written and oral, which provide for the sale and distribution of such petroleum products and automotive accessories to "independent dealers" in interstate commerce.

2. The written and oral agreements described in Paragraphs 11 to 15, inclusive, 17 and 18 herein, entered into between defendants and the "independent dealers" directly affect and unreasonably restrain the course of interstate commerce in petroleum products and automotive accessories in violation of Sec. 1 of the Sherman Act (26 Stat. 209; 15 U. S. C. 1).

3. The written and oral contracts and agreements described in Paragraphs 11 to 15, inclusive, 17 and 18 herein entered into between the defendants Standard or Standard Stations and the "independent dealers" substantially lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the sale and distribution of petroleum products and automotive accessories in violation of Section 3 of the Clayton Act. (38 Stat. 736; 15 U. S. C. 14)

[fol. 345] 4. The relationship established by the written and oral contracts and agreements entered into between defendants Standard or Standard Stations and the "independent dealers" as described in Paragraphs 11 to 15, inclusive, 17 and 18 herein is not that of employer and employee but is that of an independent contractor.

5. The written and oral contracts and agreements described in Paragraphs 11 to 15, inclusive, 17 and 18 herein have had the necessary and intended effect of foreclosing competition in the sale of petroleum products and automotive accessories from a substantial market for such products in seven states of the Western area.

6. The written and oral contracts and agreements described in Paragraphs 11 to 15, inclusive, 17 and 18 herein unreasonably restrain and substantially lessen competition in an appreciable segment of interstate commerce in the seven Western states of the Western area in the sale and distribution of petroleum products and automotive accessories.

7. The written and oral contracts and agreements described in Paragraphs 11 to 15, inclusive, 17 and 18 herein have had the necessary and intended effect of denying the independent dealers access to competitors' products and of locking out such dealers from the sources of products originating in interstate commerce. Such written and oral contracts and agreements also confine the independent dealers to the handling of and dealing in petroleum products and automotive accessories handled or sponsored by defendants.

8. The written and oral contracts and agreements described in Paragraphs 11 to 15, inclusive, 17 and 18 herein have had the necessary and intended effect of denying manufacturers and suppliers of petroleum and automotive accessories competitive to those manufactured or sponsored by defendants access to a substantial number of potential outlets for their products in the seven states of the Western area.

9. The number of outlets and the volume of business in petroleum products and automotive accessories foreclosed to competition by the written and oral contracts and agreements described in Paragraphs 11 to 15, inclusive, [fol. 346] 17 and 18 herein, and in effect in the seven states of the Western area is substantial whether considered comparatively or not.

10. The provisions of the written and oral contracts and agreements described in Paragraphs 11 to 15, inclusive, 17 and 18 herein are illegal in their effect and the plaintiff is entitled to an injunction and other equitable relief as prayed for.

Dated this 31st day of June, 1948.

(S.) Leon R. Yankwich, United States District Judge.

Approved as to form ——, Attorney for Defendants.

[fol. 347] [File endorsement omitted]

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, CENTRAL DIVISION

Honorable Leon R. Yankwich, Judge.

No. 6159-Y

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff

v.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA AND STANDARD STATIONS, INC., Defendants

FINAL JUDGMENT—Filed June 30, 1948

The court having rendered its opinion herein on June 7, 1948; having duly considered the proposals of the parties as to its judgment, and having filed its findings of fact and conclusions of law, wherein the defendants herein were found to have violated Section 1 of the Act of Congress of July 2, 1890, as amended, commonly known as the Sherman Act, and Section 3 of the Act of Congress of October 15, 1914, as amended, commonly known as the Clayton Act,

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed as follows:

I

As used herein, "Standard" refers to the defendant Standard Oil Company of California; "Standard Stations" refers to the defendant Standard Stations, Inc.

As used herein, the term "retail outlet" refers to any [fol. 348] service station or garage at which "petroleum products" and/or "automotive accessories" manufactured or "sponsored by" defendant Standard or Standard Stations are sold or distributed by an "independent dealer."

As used herein, the term "independent dealer" refers to the operator of any "retail outlet" who operates such retail outlet as an independent business enterprise and not as an employee or agent of defendant Standard or Standard Stations.

As used herein, the term "petroleum products" refers to products obtained or manufactured from natural gases or crude oil by any process and sold or used as a fuel or lubricant for automotive vehicles, together with miscellaneous oils and compounds derived from such natural gases or crude oils and designated for various specific uses and includes such petroleum products as are manufactured or "sponsored by" defendants and sold by defendants "Standard" or "Standard Stations" at any retail outlet operated by said defendants or either of them.

As used herein, the term "automotive accessories" refers to replacement parts and articles other than "petroleum products" used on or in the servicing or repairing of automotive vehicles and includes tires, tubes, batteries, spark plugs, oil filters, oil filter cartridges, fan belts, battery cables, auto lamp bulbs, fuses, windshield wipers and blades, tire repair and vulcanizing kits, anti-freeze preparations, tire chains, waxes and polishes and other like items and includes such "automotive accessories" as are manufactured or "sponsored by" defendants and sold by defendants "Standard" or "Standard Stations" at any retail outlet operated by said defendants or either of them.

The term "sponsored by," as used herein, refers to petroleum products and/or "automotive accessories" which are not manufactured or produced by defendants "Standard" and/or "Standard Stations."

II

Defendants Standard and Standard Stations have entered into contracts which unreasonably restrain interstate trade and commerce in petroleum products and automotive accessories in violation of Section 1 of the Act of Congress of July 2, 1890, as amended, 26 Stat. 209; 15 U. S. C. 1, [fol. 349] commonly known as the Sherman Act.

III

Defendants Standard and Standard Stations have entered into contracts which substantially lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the sale and distribution of petroleum products and automotive accessories in violation of Section 3 of the Act of Congress of October 15, 1914, as amended, 38 Stat. 731; 15 U. S. C. 14, commonly known as the Clayton Act.

IV

All of the provisions of any Dealer Agreement (Government's Exhibit No. 1), Distributor Agreement (Government's Exhibit No. 2), Petroleum Products and Equipment Agreement (Government's Exhibit No. 3), Dealer Agreement TBA (Government's Exhibit No. 4), Sublease Agreement (Government's Exhibit No. 5), and all provisions of like or similar import or effect either expressed or implied in any other agreement or instrument between defendants Standard and/or Standard Stations and any independent dealer which contain the condition, agreement or understanding that said independent dealer shall purchase or acquire for sale all his requirements of petroleum products and/or automotive accessories which are used or sold or bought to be used or sold by said independent dealer at a retail outlet from defendants or either of them, are hereby adjudged unlawful and declared illegal and void. This declaration of illegality does not extend to other and separable provisions of said agreements or subleases which do not contain any such or similar condition, agreement or understanding.

V

All of the provisions of any oral agreement, arrangement or understanding between defendants Standard and/or Standard Stations and any independent dealer which contain the condition, agreement, or understanding, expressed or implied, that said independent dealer shall purchase or acquire for sale all his requirements of petroleum products and/or automotive accessories which are used or sold, or bought to be used or sold by said independent dealer at a retail outlet from defendants, or either of them, [fol. 359] are hereby adjudged unlawful and declared illegal and void. This declaration of illegality does not extend to other and separable provisions of any agreements or subleases which do not contain any such or similar condition, agreement or understanding.

VI

The defendants Standard and Standard Stations, their successors or assigns and their officers, directors, agents, representatives, and all persons or corporations acting or claiming to act on their behalf be and they are hereby perpetually enjoined from entering into, or enforcing the provisions of any contract, agreement, or understanding, written or oral, expressed or implied, with any independent dealer or from inducing or compelling, or attempting to induce or compel, by any means whatever, any independent dealer to enter into any contract, agreement, or understanding, written or oral, expressed or implied, which requires:

(a) an independent dealer to secure all of his requirements of petroleum products from defendants or either of them or which prevents him from handling or acquiring for sale petroleum products from sources other than the defendants;

(b) an independent dealer to secure all of his requirements of any one or more automotive accessories from or through defendants or either of them, or which prevents him from handling or acquiring for sale any automotive accessories from sources other than defendants.

VII

Defendants Standard and Standard Stations, their successors or assigns, and their officers, directors, agents, representatives and all persons or corporations acting or claiming to act on their behalf be and they are hereby perpetually enjoined from selling or attempting to sell any petroleum products or any automotive accessories to any independent dealer on the condition

(a) that said independent dealer shall purchase other [fol. 351] petroleum products or automotive accessories from the defendants, or either of them;

(b) that said independent dealer shall not handle or sell at a retail outlet petroleum products and or automotive accessories other than those sold or sponsored by defendants.

VIII

Within sixty days after this judgment shall become operative and go into effect, defendants shall send written notice by registered mail to each independent dealer with whom a defendant then has existing written or oral contractual relations of the provisions of this decree in such form as is first approved by the attorneys for the plaintiff or by the court in the event the attorneys for the plaintiff and the defendants are unable to agree on the form of such written notice.

IX

Nothing contained in this judgment shall enjoin or restrain either defendant from selling or contracting to sell petroleum products and or automotive accessories including such products as are sponsored by defendants, to independent dealers on the condition that any pump or tank or other container or receptacle for such products, furnished by defendant and marked as such to an independent dealer, shall be used solely for the storing, handling or dispensing of defendant's petroleum products and to prescribe by agreement or regulations not inconsistent with the provisions of this decree for the storage, handling, or dispensing of such products.

X

Nothing contained in this judgment shall enjoin or restrain either defendant from freely selecting independent dealers to whom it will sell or contract to sell any petroleum products or automotive accessories including any such products sponsored by defendant or from declining or refusing to sell or contract to sell any petroleum products or automotive accessories including any such products sponsored by defendants, to any independent dealer provided such refusal to deal on the part of the defendants or either of them is not based on the refusal of the independent dealer [fol. 852] to accept conditions prohibited by this decree.

XI

The enforcement of this judgment is stayed until the expiration of six (6) months from the date of the entry of this judgment and, in the event an appeal is taken from this judgment or any part thereof, the enforcement of this judgment is stayed until the expiration of six (6) months from the date such appeal is finally determined.

XII

For the purpose of securing compliance with this judgment and for no other purpose, any duly authorized representative or representatives of the Department of Justice shall, upon written request of the Attorney General or the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Antitrust Division, and on notice reasonable as to time and subject matter, to either or both defendants, made to its principal office at San Francisco, California, and subject to any legally recognized privilege, be permitted (1) access in the presence of defendant's counsel or other representative during the office hours of said defendant to all books, ledgers, accounts, correspondence, memoranda and other records and documents in the possession or under the control of said defendant relating to any matters contained in this judgment; (2) subject to the reasonable convenience of said defendant and without restraint or interference from it, to interview officers or employees of such defendant, who may have counsel present, regarding such matters, provided, however, that no information obtained by the means provided in this paragraph shall be divulged by the Department of Justice to any person other than a duly authorized representative of such Department except in the course of legal proceedings to which the United States is a party for the purpose of securing compliance with this judgment or as otherwise required by law.

XIII

Jurisdiction of this cause is retained for the purpose of enabling any of the parties to this judgment to apply to the Court at any time for such further orders and directions [fols. 353-354] as may be necessary or appropriate for the construction or carrying out of this judgment, for the amendment, modifications or termination of any of the provisions thereof, for the enforcement of compliance herewith and for the punishment of violations thereof.

XIV

Judgment is entered against the defendants for all costs to be taxed in this proceeding.

(S.) Leon R. Yankwich, United States District Judge.

Dated: June 30, 1948.

Without waiving objections to any of the provisions of the within order, said order conforms to the additions to and changes in the order as submitted by the plaintiff and as made by the Court after hearing had in open court June 28, 1948.

William C. Dixon, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; W. Alan Thody, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; Lawrence W. Somerville, Special Attorney; Edwin U. Driscoll, Special Attorney. By William C. Dixon, Attorneys for plaintiff.

Lawler, Felix & Hall, Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, Marshall P. Madison, John M. Hall, by John M. Hall, Attorneys for defendants.

Judgment entered June 30, 1948.
Docketed July 1, 1948.
C. O. Book 51, Page 638.

Edmund L. Smith, Clerk, by (S.) John A. Clubbess, Deputy.

[fols. 355-356] In the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of California, Central Division

Honorable Leon R. Yankwich, Judge Presiding

No. 6159-Y Civil

United States of America, Plaintiff,

v.

Standard Oil Company of California and Standard Stations, Inc., Defendants

Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings. Filed July 26, 1948

Los Angeles, California, May 4, 1948

Appearances:

For the Plaintiff: William C. Dixon, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, W. Alan Thody, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, Lawrence W. Somerville, Special Attorney Antitrust Division, Theodore Driscoll, Esq.

For the Defendants: Lawler, Felix & Hall, By: John M. Hall, Esq., Everett A. Mathews, Esq.

[fol. 357] Los Angeles, California,

Tuesday, May 4, 1948, 10:00 A. M.

The Clerk: No. 6159 Civil. United States of America vs. Standard Oil Company of California and Standard Stations, Inc., for trial.

Mr. Hall: The defendants are ready.

Mr. Dixon: Ready for the Government, your Honor.

Mr. Hall: Might I move the association, for the purposes of this trial, of Mr. Everett A. Mathews, of San Francisco, for the defendants.

The Court: Mr. Mathews will be associated in the case.

STATEMENT BY THE COURT

Gentlemen, this case has been pending for some time, and during its pendency quite a large number of proceedings were had before me, so I am thoroughly familiar with the issues which are raised by the pleadings. I have also studied, since they were filed with me, the trial briefs in the case. The plaintiff has filed a very elaborate trial brief of some 78 pages, to which some exhibits are attached, and some forms of contracts to be introduced.

Mr. Hall: I think that was the defendant, your Honor.

The Court: The defendant, I meant. I mentioned them first, because it was filed first, and I had the benefit of it over last week end. I studied it very thoroughly. Many of the cases which are cited I am familiar with, as is evidenced by the opinions I myself have written on the [fol. 358] subject, both in cases tried here, and in the last antitrust case which I tried in the Northern District of California, the Electrical Contractors case.

I have also had the benefit of the Government's original memorandum. The reply memorandum was only filed yesterday. I have gone through it. I think the memorandum of the Government is chiefly a comment on the cases cited by the defendant, and no new cases with which I am familiar are cited in it.

I will say, however, that I have not had the opportunity to read it as carefully as I did the others, because of the time I received it. As a matter of fact, it was filed after hours. It was 5:30 when a copy was put in front of me right here on the bench. In order to clear my calendar for this case, I had to finish the trial of a case yesterday afternoon.

I think counsel are also familiar, although no reference is made to it, with the Cement Institute case, which the Supreme Court decided on April 26th. I have what is called the slip decision, part of the white decision, which is sent out officially to all the District Judges. Those are also available to the attorneys who ask for them, because, as I understand, I think one of the agencies, like the Commerce Clearing, makes photostatic copies of them, and sends them out. I may say one of the judges in San Fran- [fol. 359] cisco, Judge Goodman, does not wait for the official slips to reach him, because the others are airmailed, and can be placed in the hands of the judge within three or four days.

There were some decisions reached yesterday, about which we know something from the press today, but I doubt if they are of any special significance in the case. In the event they should develop to be we will have them before many days have elapsed, because they will probably reach me by the end of the week.

Another reason I call your attention to the Cement case is that the court there makes a point which is going to be very important in this case, and that is, that the Supreme Court's attitude differs in cases where the question of restraint arises, in actions, civil or criminal, brought directly to enforce the Sherman Antitrust Act, or the Clayton Antitrust Act, from its attitude in merely reviewing the unfair practice which the Federal Trade Commission has found in a particular case. Much of the argument in the briefs relates to a great extent to what the courts may have said in cases arising from orders of the Federal Trade Commission.

[fol. 360] I have expressed repeatedly the view, and I expressed it again the other day in an opinion I filed last Friday in a portal to portal case, that when you consider the problem of commerce or restraints upon commerce of what is commerce the only way of reconciling the apparent inconsistency which exists in decisions is to bear in mind that there is no abstract concept of what commerce is, but that the Supreme Court, from its entire history, has contented itself with determining what commerce means in a particular kind of legislation.

To illustrate, for instance, that troublesome problem of "stoppage", of coming to rest, which is very important and which will arise in this case under the pleadings, it is one thing when the court is dealing with a stoppage, for the purpose of reviewing the power of the state to regulate goods during stoppage, and it is another thing when the court is considering the doctrine of stoppage as it arises under the Anti Trust Laws in a case involving the alleged violation of the law.

To illustrate, we have the famous Gallagher cases and the Telephone cases, with which counsel for the defendants are familiar, because I think they appeared in the case, they being also attorneys for the telephone company, where the court found that certain equipment was being shipped into the State of California, not to be used here [fol. 361] but merely to be temporarily stored here for use on the system elsewhere, such as, for instance, the Southern Pacific case. We have railroad ties and other equipment for use in Arizona. In the case of the Telephone Company the equipment to be used all over its system and in the Pacific southwest.

Now, in those cases the court held that the flow of commerce came to an end and that during the time it was at rest in the State of California, the State of California could, under the use tax statute; tax them even though they were intended for interstate commerce afterwards. There is one line of decisions.

Now, when you come, however, to the question of what interstate commerce is and when there is a stoppage so far as it relates to antitrust violations, we have a different theory. We have what is known as the theory of continuous flow—a theory which I myself applied in the Food and Grocery case, with which you are both familiar and which you both cite in your opinions, and even though it holds the goods in interstate commerce come to rest in that case on the shelves of the groceries, where there is a continuous flow of such goods and agreements which relate to them and affect the price structure are made locally, nevertheless, because of the continuous flow of these goods such as canned milk and baking powders and the like from interstate commerce, into the interstate commerce, that notwithstanding distribution of them locally, notwith- [fol. 362] standing the fact that there is a period of rest on the shelves of the grocer, that any restriction which applies to them violates the law, notwithstanding the temporary stoppage.

Perhaps in that particular case, as an instance, I can point to an illustration showing how the judges themselves may need time to grasp merely that point. Because if you compare the Food and Grocery case with the short memorandum I wrote of what is known as the Smith Case, E. F. Smith v. Atlantic and Pacific case, a memorandum which I did not intend for publication but which found its way years after I wrote it, you will see that there is language in the Smith case which is at variance with what I said seven years afterwards in the Food and Grocery Case.

In other words, in the Smith case I applied absolutely the doctrine of stoppage. Although the Smith case was an Anti-Trust case, it was a private suit for treble damages alleged to have been caused by a group. And, of course, my only justification, perhaps, is that I was passing merely on a complaint and did not pass upon a factual situation which called for the difference.

But I admit that there is an apparent inconsistency between the two, which, of course, can be explained in only one way, and that is that in the meantime I had seen the light. I had been in the position of the little boy who [fol. 363] tried to sell a Methodist minister a litter of kittens in the morning, who told him they were Methodist kittens, and in the afternoon he saw the Presbyterian minister who had heard the story, and he told him that they were Presbyterian kittens. And then when the Presbyterian minister asked him if it is not a fact he offered them to the Methodist minister and told him they were Methodist kittens, he said, "Yes, but since that time they have opened their eyes."

So I thought I would make the statement, gentlemen, to indicate to you that I have a general idea of the principles of law that are involved; and then, with that premise, I will ask you if you desire to make a statement, a general statement, of the issues. You may do so despite what I said.

In other words, I do not want you to take my statement that I know the issues and am fairly familiar with the law to prevent you from making such statement as you desire, giving me a broader elucidation of the issues in the light of the facts that you may prove, for my idea of the issues is derived strictly from the pleadings and such information as was disclosed to me during various hearings I have had on the various matters which have come before me.

All right, Mr. Dixon.

Mr. Dixon: May it please the court——

The Court: I may add this, gentlemen: That you will not be interrupted at all during the course of this trial. [fol. 364] I have cleared my calendar, as I told you I would, and whatever time is necessary for the balance of this month to hear the case is available. And, as your know, I never look at the clock and I do not hesitate to work more than the proverbial hours, which are mostly proverbial, because we do not observe them. Even in San Francisco, while their courts are supposed to adjourn earlier, for some reason or other whenever I sit there—and I am expected to sit there in the month of July again, having been asked to go up there and try another case—we do not observe the quitting rules, but have to conform the time to the needs of the case and also to the particular matter that is before the court.

It is not my custom to interrupt an examination that should be completed or can be completed in a few minutes, merely because the clock strikes 12:00 or the clock strikes 5:00, and you are all familiar with that. So I give you the assurance that all the time is available for the reasonable time, for the reasonable limits for the proper presentation of both the law and the facts in this case.

With that, I yield to you and sit back and listen.

Mr. Dixon: Thank you, your Honor. We appreciate your remarks. And before going into the case, I would like to inquire whether it is your Honor's intention at the present time to hold half a day session on Monday or to adjourn.

The Court: No; at the present time it is not. I will [fol. 365] not hold any session at all until I see if we are crowded for time.

For one thing, that is all the time I have to do the study that is required in the meantime, and if tried cases on Monday it means that the only day I have left, except week-ends, for study, is gone, and there are matters which arise that require study.

I do have one case under submission in which the briefs have not come in yet, a case I tried. Otherwise there are other matters which come up on law and motion matters, many a time on Monday. You have been present here, when a matter took five or 10 minutes to argue, and it may have taken me two weeks to work out. Many times in tax matters and reviews of referee cases the matter is submitted on briefs or argued very briefly, and it is a matter that requires a lot of study to study the long record and, in many instances, the writing of an opinion is a matter of such importance that it calls for a statement of a view of it which can be followed by the referees in future cases.

[fol. 366] So, at the present time we will hold court from Tuesday to Friday, inclusive. Next Monday I will be free. What will happen one week from next Monday I can't tell. ~~It all depends on how far~~ we have advanced with the case.

Mr. Dixon: We appreciate that advice, your Honor. It will enable us to schedule our witnesses.

The Court: So far as I am concerned, gentlemen, so long as the continuity is not broken, or if I am not stopped in the middle of the afternoon for the absence of witnesses, you can stagger your witnesses. There is one thing, in a case of this character, it may well be that any hiatus that arises can be filled by reading the particular portion of exhibits. As you know, in a case without a jury, it is not my custom to stop an interrogation to have a portion of an exhibit read, where you want to direct attention to a particular matter, but I prefer, when the witness is off the stand, that the portion of the documentary evidence to which you desire especially to call my attention, be read to me. Otherwise, as the document is received, I will just order it transcribed into the record, and I can read it later on.

So, in these cases, when we have a lull in the proceedings, or one of the lawyers gets tired, somebody gets up and reads. We have done that before, in long cases. We did that in an antitrust case in San Francisco, a criminal case against the Electrical Contractors. When one of the [fol. 367] men got tired examining witnesses, we gave him a respite by having some of the others read a portion of the documents to the jury. That was a jury case. In other words, I am going to accommodate myself, so far as the evidence is concerned with your presentation of it, and if you work hard, I work along with you, so I don't put any greater burden on you than I do myself.

OPENING STATEMENT ON BEHALF OF PLAINTIFF

Mr. DIXON: Thank you, your Honor. We appreciate your Honor's views on the subject. It will be very helpful during the conduct of the trial, I am sure, to enable us to get in the evidence as quickly and efficiently as possible, so the time of the trial will not be unduly extended.

In making an opening statement in this case, it will perhaps be superfluous, in some respects, to comment upon the issues,—whether or not the products involved here are or are not in interstate commerce, at this stage of the proceedings, because your Honor has amply stated, both from previous decisions you have written, and the law generally, the fact that you are fully acquainted with the theories in a case of this kind, the in commerce and the effect on commerce theories that are both involved in an antitrust suit.

However, I wish to make a few brief comments about the case itself, which we hope may be of some assistance to your Honor in sharpening or bringing into focus the issues which govern the matters which are involved in this lawsuit.

[fol. 368] In the opening statement it perhaps might be well to incorporate all the allegations contained in our complaint, but we do not intend to dwell long on all the allegations, because they are in the record, and speak for themselves.

This is a case, however, which involves approximately five different types of written agreements which are in use by the defendants in seven western states, in the course and conduct of their business of refining and selling petroleum products. Also, in distributing, for sale, at retail dealer outlets, certain other products which they acquire from other sources, that is, manufactured from other sources, not by the defendants themselves, which are distributed and sold through these retail outlets which are involved in this case.

The State of New Mexico is not involved in this proceeding, so that in any reference to the western area, as it is described in the complaint, we can keep in mind that the State of New Mexico is not involved, since our information implies that the defendants do not operate in that state in the manner and under the contracts involved in this suit.

As indicated in the complaint, there are five different types of agreements that the Government challenges as being in violation of the Sherman and Clayton Acts. The Government contends that these agreements impose and are an unreasonable restraint of trade under the Sherman Act, Section 1 of that Act, and also a violation of Section [fol. 369] 3 of the Clayton Act, as tending substantially to lessen competition in the sale of these products, and tending to promote a monopoly in the area in which these agreements are used by the defendant companies.

I do not need to go into the background or nature of the type of business the defendants are engaged in in this case. It is not only set forth in the pleadings, but also is a matter of common knowledge. But I do believe it is important, perhaps, to know that the agreements involved here have a background of some 20 years in use in the industry, in various forms, by these defendants.

Starting in the late 20's they adopted what is known as the lease; sublease and license system of distributing their products through retail outlets, and the agreements used at that time,—the lease and sublease arrangement,—required the dealer operating the retail outlet to secure all of his petroleum requirements and products from the defendant companies, and further restricted him from using or selling or storing or handling any products of that character made by any other manufacturer competitive with the defendant companies.

In the early '30's the system was modified somewhat by what is called the lease and agency system, whereby these dealers, who were independent business men, were denominated as agents of the defendants for the purpose of [fol. 370] selling products of the company, and similar restrictions were imposed upon them, and upon the use to which they could be put at which the service station outlet was located, which was involved in the agreement.

With the advent of certain new forms of taxation in the early '30's,—social security, unemployment compensation,—and, as agents of the defendant companies, these dealers were at first subject to, or at least would be in a position under that arrangement whereby the defendant companies would be subject to additional taxation, so the agency arrangement was dispensed with, and what was called, in the memorandum, perhaps for a better term, the Iowa plan, in which the same independent business men who operated these retail outlets, were subject to the same restrictions they had been subject to under the lease and agency arrangement, namely, he was prevented from handling any petroleum products competitive with those manufactured and handled by the defendant companies.

Also, in the '30's, a new phase of the business was developed, since it became recognized that these retail outlets, at which the motorist stopped and purchased his gasoline and oil and greases, were also the source of the distribution and sale of automotive accessories. So we find, in the early '30's, a new type of agreement is coming into effect, called the distributors agreement, which obligated [fol. 371] the man directly, and did obligate them to handle only such automotive accessories, principally confined to tires, tubes, and batteries, as the defendant companies handled. And the result was that under these two types of agreements, which restricted the independent operator of these various retail service station outlets in the seven states involved in this case, in which the defendants do business, that there was ultimately a veritable wall that was thrown up around all of these outlets which totally excluded the independent business men subject to these agreements, from acquiring any petroleum products or any automotive accessories, when he was subject to that type of agreement, from any source other than these defendants. In other words these agreements operated to completely eliminate any and all competition for that type of business at these outlets.

Now, the Government expects the evidence will show that the number of these agreements in effect at the present time, the number of outlets involved, are substantial. In other words, we expect the evidence will show that there are in excess of 7,000 retail outlets that are subject to one or more of these various types of agreements. That number includes 1063, I believe the evidence will show, which are company operated stations or outlets. In other words, these stations are operated by the defendant Standard Stations, Inc., and are wholly what we call company [fol. 372] operated stations as distinguished from a station which is operated by what the agreements refer to as an independent business man. So that the total non company operating outlets involved in this case in the seven States are in excess of 5900.

The Court: Is it your contention at the present time, regardless of what may have been in the past, that they operate under the contract which specifically forbids them handling products of other companies, or do you interpret the provisions which are set forth in the dealers' agreement, page 3 of the supplement to the defendants' memorandum, the clause whereby the dealer agrees to buy all of his requirements from the company, as implying a prohibition against them? I think my question is plain enough.

Mr. Dixon: Yes, your Honor. It is the contention of the Government that the type of provision existing in these contracts does operate to definitely impose a restraint, and eliminates any competition by reason of the language of the provisions I have referred to.

The Court: Let me ask you this: I notice in your memorandum you claim the agreement is per se, without anything else, a violation of the Antitrust Statutes,—both of them, or at least of the Clayton Act. Do you intend to rely upon the wording of the agreement, or do you intend, in addition thereto, to have testimony showing that that was the effect, that is, as a fact it has prohibited persons [fol. 373] from actually soliciting or getting that business?

Mr. Dixon: Both, your Honor.

The Court: Or is that a fair question?

Mr. Dixon: It is a very fair question, your Honor. I think also that the agreements, when taken in their context, and the volume in which they are in use and in effect in the States,—the agreements, perhaps would tend to speak for themselves, because the effect of the language is to exclude dealers subject to the restriction from acquiring or attempting to acquire, legally speaking, under the contracts, any petroleum products or automotive accessories described in the agreement, from any other source.

The Court: The reason I am asking this question is because the Supreme Court, in several cases, including the General Motors case,—Pick Mfg. Co., v. General Motors, 299 U. S., 3, intimates that in itself a provision whereby a person agrees to supply his needs from certain sources, is not in itself violative of the acts. That the Court must, in addition thereto, find that the effect of that was a violation of commerce activity, but when we are dealing with an agreement which involves no price fixing, you must remember that while it was an opinion in which three judges did not participate—I do not know why; I presume Mr. Justice Stone did not, because he was Attorney General when the matter was instituted, although this was a [fol. 374] private lawsuit, but I do not know about the others. At any rate there is no dissent, but three justices did not participate, which left six. In that case the lower court had dismissed the complaint because it was satisfied that, notwithstanding the exclusiveness of the agency agreement, which in this case was specific, because the dealer agreed he would not sell, offer for sale, or use in the repair of Chevrolet motor vehicles and chassis second hand or used parts or any part or parts not manufactured by or authorized by the Chevrolet Motor Company. Notwithstanding that the Supreme Court sustained the trial court in finding, despite this exclusiveness, it did not result in a restriction on interstate commerce. The plaintiff in that case could not recover damages or challenge the validity of these contracts.

While I have said the Court approaches the problem, where there is a restriction, of course from different angles, depending upon the legislation to be interpreted, I think you will agree with me on one thing, and that is, when it comes to antitrust legislation, the citeria are the same, no matter which of the three actions are involved. There are only three types of proceedings that can be instituted under the Antitrust Acts, two by the Government, and one by a private person. The two by the Government are a criminal prosecution or a civil action in equity, such as the present one. The other is a suit by a private indi- [fol. 375] vidual who has been harmed by these restrictions, or monopolistic practice, and brings suit for treble damages under the Act.

My impression of the law is this, that the Supreme Court has consistently applied the same criteria in all three types of cases. In other words, they don't say what is a restriction when you have a criminal action, is not a restriction when you have a civil action, whether brought by the Government or a private party. Do you agree with me on that?

Mr. Dixon: I think in a lot of the cases, particularly where they involve private suits, that you have described, frequently go off on a different angle.

The Court: There is no question about that. But I am talking about interpreting the law. The Court does not say what is a restriction in a private suit. You might not be able to prove it, or satisfy a jury, because the quantum of proof is different, and what warrants damages in one case might not warrant the issuing of an injunction. When we are dealing with restrictions we are dealing with a type of interference in interstate commerce, which are violative of the law, regardless of the type of action in which the question arose.

Mr. Dixon: I see your point, your Honor. I think it is certainly possible, in a civil case, assuming that the same facts are pleaded as are pleaded in this case, the same [fol. 376] tests would be applicable.

We expect the evidence will show, your Honor, that there were over 7,000 of these various types of agreements, the five of those described in the complaint, that are in use by the defendants in the course of their business in the seven-State area involved in this complaint. That a total number in excess of 5900 retail outlets are affected by this type of restriction in the seven States. By that, I mean 5900 non-company operated outlets as distinguished from company operated outlets, which we mentioned a moment ago. In other words, the total outlets involved here are some 7,000, in which an excess of 5900 are subject to written and oral agreements between the defendants and these dealers who are referred to in the contracts as independent business men operating these outlets.

We expect the evidence will show that in excess of 5100 of these outlets are subject to a written agreement, and that the balance, a little in excess of 700, are subject to all restrictions charged in the complaint.

I believe the evidence will show this latter type of outlets will be referred to as an open account outlet, during the course of the trial and the introduction of the evidence.

Now, to break down the total number of agreements that I have suggested here, which the evidence will show are involved in this case. We expect the evidence will show that [fol. 377] in excess of 1600 of these agreements are dealer agreements. In excess of 22 are dealer TBA agreements; in excess of 900 are petroleum products and equipment agreements. In excess of 500, distributor agreements. Approximately 1800, following the category of leases, but all of these agreements contain restrictive provisions described and referred to in the complaint.

Quite frequently, where a lease of the type involved in this case is used, it is used in connection with one of the other types of agreements that I have mentioned, so that that accounts for in excess of 7100 of the agreements that are involved, and the total of about 5200 stations that are actually subject to the written type of restrictions.

I believe the complaint sets forth in detail what the Government contends the effects of these agreements to be. As suggested by your Honor, and as your Honor has already indicated, you desire to know the position of the Government with reference to these agreements, and it is on the basis of the context and facts in this case that these agreements are illegal per se, and a violation of the Sherman and Clayton Acts.

We expect, however, that in addition to the agreements themselves, and the evidence that will be submitted with relation to a number of these agreements that are in effect, that some additional testimony will be submitted to your [fol. 378] Honor which will indicate what we submit is obvious from the language of these agreements themselves, namely, that they do operate in fact to exclude the sale of competitive petroleum products to outlets subject to that restriction, and to the sale of automotive accessories of the kind and type handled by the dealer under the agreements involved in this case.

In a few words, to summarize the contention of the Government, it is simply this: That these agreements, the context, and the use and the number in which they are used in this case by the defendant company, have operated, and do operate, to impose a wall around all of these outlets that are involved in the seven States covered by these agreements, in which the defendants do business, so that no other company in automotive automobiles, or whether it be in the sale of tires, tubes, and automotive batteries; and other types of accessories, that these agreements have operated in fact and legally, to exclude all competition, and on that basis we submit the agreements, under the cases referred to in the brief we have filed with your Honor, are illegal per se under the Sherman and Clayton Acts.

The Court: We will take a short recess, and then I will hear from other counsel.

(Short recess.)

[fol. 379] Mr. Hall: With your Honor's permission, defendants will reserve any statement of factual matters that they expect to prove.

On the legal issues we have, as your Honor has pointed out, filed a printed memorandum which, to the best of our ability, outlines the legal issues and our position upon each issue; and I do not feel that I could add anything to that at this time which would be helpful to the court.

The Court: All right. The defense may reserve the right to present any opening statement to the conclusion of the Government case if they so desire.

Mr. Dixon, proceed with the presentation of your testimony.

OFFERS IN EVIDENCE

Mr. Dixon: We will call for return of the two subpoenas served on the Standard Oil Company to produce certain documentary evidence called for in the subpoenas. We will first call for return on item 1 of the first subpoena served on the Standard Oil Company and Standard Stations, Inc.

Mr. Hall: Now you are referring to the subpoena which is dated April 16?

Mr. Dixon: That is right, Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall: The first nine items on that subpoena, your Honor, are covered by tabulations which I have already discussed with counsel and submitted to him in the form of a stipulation.

[fol. 380] You have those, I believe, Mr. Dixon, stipulation No. 1?

Mr. Dixon: Yes; I have the form of stipulation, Mr. Hall, but I thought it would be better for the record to have the record show, as these matters are called for, what the compilation would show that is referred to in the subpoena on each item. In other words, the return on the first item would merely call for the forms of various types of agreement, the various types of agreement described in the complaint.

Mr. Hall: Mr. Dixon, if you will pardon me?

Mr. Dixon: Certainly.

Mr. Hall: Why, in order to save time, do we not offer items A to D in that subpoena, inclusive, as a compliance with the calls of the subpoena you refer to, which are 1 to 9, inclusive?

Now, if there is further matter that you desire, under those calls, if you will specify what it is in the record, I will tell you why it is not practicable to encumber these records to obtain them.

Mr. Dixon: I would rather handle it this way, Mr. Hall, if it is agreeable. And I think the record would be in better shape if we would just put in the particular documents, for example, called for in No. 1, and we will ask the clerk to mark them for identification as Government's exhibits numbered as we get them and put them in that way, [fol. 381] if it can be done. And then other items 2 through 9, as they are called for, and that the compilation—I mean the data that is contained in the suggested stipulation can be given and go into the record as a compliance with that part of the subpoena. If that is satisfactory to you, it is agreeable with the Government to handle it that way.

Mr. Hall: Well, I have indicated it is not satisfactory to me, but you are putting in your case, counsel, and if that is the way you want to do it, we will try to comply with what you want.

The Court: I think, Mr. Dixon, the best method to pursue is merely to ask for the production of the document and then use your own judgment as to the order in which you desire to present it.

Mr. Dixon: That was my thought, your Honor, to call for the documents. For example, under No. 1, and have them marked for identification by the clerk.

The Court: I see. All right, Mr. Hall, will you hand such documents as you have and state for the record whether it is in response to that subpoena?

Mr. Hall: All right. Responsive to—what shall we call this subpoena, No. 1, Mr. Dixon?

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

Mr. Hall: Responsive to subpoena No. 1, item 1, I hand Mr. Dixon a form of Dealer Agreement, a form of Dealer Agreement TBA, a form of Petroleum Products and Equip- [fol. 382] ment Agreement, a form of Distributor Agreement, and a form of Sublease.

The Court: Mr. Hall, for my own information——

Mr. Hall: Those are exactly the forms, your Honor, which are annexed to the memorandum.

The Court: Which are annexed to the 27 pages of your memorandum?

Mr. Hall: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: Printed memorandum?

Mr. Hall: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: I see. All right.

Mr. Dixon: We ask that they be marked for identification as follows:——

The Court: Now, you will have to give them to me so I will identify them. Hand them to the clerk and he will give them to me. Give them to me in the order in which you have them and I will give them a number and identify them for the record.

Mr. Dixon: Dealer Agreement form.

The Clerk: Do you want them all in one number, your Honor?

The Court: Separate. Let us have them.

Mr. Dixon: All of them, your Honor?

The Court: The agreement which is entitled Dealer Agreement and which at the end bears the legend "S-452 [fol. 383] (2-46)", also this legend at the end, "Dealer Agreement. For Use in California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, and Arizona" will be marked for identification Government's 1.

The Clerk: Government's 1 for identification.

The Court: It consists of two pages.

The agreement entitled Distributor Agreement which at the end bears the legend "SS-130-E(1-42)" and also the legend "For Use in California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada and Arizona" marked for identification as the Government's 2.

Agreement entitled Petroleum Products and Equipment Agreement which bears at the end the legend "S-475 (5-44)" and also the legend on the second page, left-hand corner, "Petroleum Products and Equipment Agreement For Use in California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada and Arizona" will be marked Government's 3 for identification.

Agreement entitled Dealer Agreement TBA which at the end bears the legend "S-452-TBA. (4-46)", and also the legend, left-hand corner of second page, "Dealer Agreement TBA For Use in California, Oregon, Nevada, Washington, and Arizona" will be marked Government's 4 for identification.

Agreement entitled Sublease which at the end has the legend "S-456 (3-45)", and on the left hand corner the mark "Sublease" will be marked for identification Government's 5.

[fol. 384] Mr. Dixon: Government's Exhibits for identification 1 through 5, inclusive, are offered into evidence, your Honor.

The Clerk: Are they admitted, your Honor?

The Court: They may be received.

The Clerk: 1 to 5, inclusive, in evidence.

Mr. Dixon: Return under item 2 of the first subpoena is called for.

Mr. Hall: With reference to items 2 to 9, inclusive, of the first subpoena I hand counsel sheets entitled Item A, Item B, Item C, and Item D containing statistics with reference to the number of documents outstanding and with respect to the number and location of the dealer outlets.

Counsel is familiar with these sheets, and by letter received from counsel before the trial, he states that "It is therefore agreeable to me that the data contained in the stipulation is used by whoever makes return of the subpoena for your clients on the trial."

I think that those items in the subpoena, with one exception that I will now call attention to, with that one exception, all of these items are covered by the data contained in the sheets that I have just handed counsel.

Now, that exception is this: That in certain of these calls of the subpoena, 2 to 9, counsel asks for the location of [fol. 385] service stations not only by state, but located by city or county. That would be an extremely burdensome task, and in my preliminary discussions with Mr. Dixon he has indicated that it would not be necessary for us at this time to comply with that part of the demand.

Mr. Dixon: That is correct, your Honor; and we will be satisfied with the return made in the form suggested.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Dixon: I have not had a chance to go over the return but I am sure that, subject to examination—Mr. Hall, with your permission.

Mr. Hall: Oh, certainly.

Mr. Dixon: —we will ask that those be marked for identification as the Government's Exhibit 6.

The Court: I think these can be received as one exhibit.

Mr. Dixon: That was my suggestion, your Honor. If it could be, I think it would simplify the matter.

The Court: Each sheet is marked, respectively, by letters; so we have A, B, C, and D, and there will be no difficulty in referring to the computations or compilations on any of the sheets.

The five sheets just handed to the court—I notice page 1 is missing, Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall: Yes. This is incorporated in the stipulation.

The Court: This begins at page 2.

Mr. Hall: That is the reason page 2 should be the [fol. 386] first page. I thought at one time that counsel would consent to stipulate to this.

The Court: All right. They are marked A, B, C, and D; so that is sufficient. They may be received as Government's Exhibit 6.

The Clerk: Do they go into evidence, your Honor?

Mr. Dixon: Yes; we offer it in evidence.

The Court: All right; they may be received into evidence.

The Clerk: 6 in evidence.

Mr. Dixon: I now will call for return of item 10 of subpoena No. 1.

Mr. Hall: Item 10 of the subpoena calls for:

> "The records or a compilation prepared therefrom showing the dollar volume by product by cities (or counties if not within a city) and states for the years 1946 and 1947 of automotive accessories sold or consigned to any retail outlets referred to in Paragraph 9."

And paragraph 9 refers to the so-called open accounts, your Honor; so that the answer to paragraph 10 is that there are no such sales or consignments.

Mr. Dixon: The return on No. 11 of the subpoena is called for.

Mr. Hall: I hand counsel a paper in response to that particular call of the subpoena, bearing in the upper left-[fol. 387] hand corner the numeral 11, and call counsel's attention to the notes that are given on that sheet.

Mr. Dixon: Perhaps to expedite the return of the subpoena, your Honor, I might ask the court for leave to examine these records outside of the time the court is actually in session, but accept them for the time being and have them marked for identification so that we can proceed.

The Court: All right. It may be received as Government's 7 for identification.

The Clerk: Plaintiff's 7 for identification.

Mr. Dixon: Item No. 12 is called for.

Mr. Hall: Responsive to items 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, and 17 I hand counsel five sheets bearing in the upper left-hand corner the numerals, respectively, 12, 13, 14, and on one sheet 15 and 17, and on the fifth sheet 16.

Mr. Dixon: We ask that these be marked for identification, your Honor, as Government's Exhibits next in order.

The Clerk: Nos. 8 for identification, 9 for identification, 10 for identification, 11 for identification, and 12 for identification.

Mr. Dixon: No. 18, Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall: No. 18, if the court please, calls for:

> "Any records or other data in your possession or under your control showing the total number of all retail outlets for petroleum products in the [fol. 388] States of California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, Idaho and Utah, by states or any other geographical units for the years 1939 to 1946 inclusive."

We have data as to the number of service stations in those seven western states. It consists of an inquiry made from the home office of the Standard Oil Company of California on March 24, 1948 to its various district managers, requiring from them a computation based upon certain forms which are prepared in the branches and in the districts known as "Form S-502" and "S-503".

I hand counsel now a copy of this inquiry which went out from the company, and also the replies that came in from the several districts to that inquiry; and attached to these sheets, also, is a final page showing a computation of the number of retail petroleum product outlets in those seven states other than the retail petroleum product outlets of Standard Oil Company of California.

If counsel wants to go into the matter further, these Forms S-502 and S-503 are forms which have been prepared and maintained for years by the company in the regular course of business. Those forms have been gath-efed in from the various districts and are now at the home office of the company. Those forms run to about 3800 pages. If counsel insists, of course, we will bring down the 3800 pages.

[fol. 389] Mr. Dixon: That is not necessary, Mr. Hall, I am sure.

Mr. Hall: This gives a compilation based upon those original records prepared in the ordinary course of business.

Mr. Dixon: Thank you very much, Mr. Hall. That will be accepted as compliance with the request under the subpoena.

We ask that this be marked for identification, perhaps, as one exhibit, your Honor. It consists of several telegrams that have been clipped together. I would suggest it would be easier to have them marked as one exhibit. It relates to one particular type of information.

The Court: All right.

The Clerk: This will be Government's 13 for identification.

Mr. Dixon: Referring now to what we will call subpoena No. 2, Mr. Hall, we would ask that the documents referred to in said subpoena as Nos. 1 to 85, inclusive, in said subpoena, be produced.

Mr. Hall: Well, you mean 1 to 85 of Paragraph I, is that right?

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

Mr. Hall: Well, let us be complete about this. After this subpoena was served Mr. Somerville came to my office and amended it by a further call which, consistent with the usual amenities that prevail, I accepted; and, in addition to the 85, that called for 36 more.

[fol. 390] Pardon me, your Honor. This item 1 that we are talking about asks for:

> "The originals of any and all contracts and/or leases between the STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA and/or STANDARD STATIONS, INC. and the PERSONS AND CORPORATIONS HEREINAFTER NAMED and covering the property situated at the location hereinafter specified, which leases and/or contracts relate to the purchase and sale of petroleum products and/or automotive accessories:"

And then it names——

The Court: May I ask, those are the suppliers? Are those the persons called the "suppliers" in the complaint?

Mr. Hall: No. These are the stations, your Honor. These are the service stations.

The Court: Oh, the service stations.

Mr. Hall: I hand you, then, two packages of photostats, Mr. Dixon; one is marked "Paragraph 1" and there are tickets on the various items in this package which indicate the number opposite the name of the given dealer.

Then I hand you another package marked "Supplement to No. 1" which contains the documents you requested in the supplement to the subpoena informally served on me. In going through that, Mr. Dixon, you will find that there are certain omissions with respect to names. There are [fol. 391] certain of these individuals named who are no longer dealers of Standard, or others in certain cases, and insufficient identification of the location of the dealer to enable us to supply the documents requested.

Mr. Dixon: Thank you, Mr. Hall. I am wondering, rather than to have all of these documents marked for identification at this time, whether it would be agreeable to counsel that the Government accept these for examination for the time being, subject to the privilege of having them subsequently marked. And I assume there would be no disagreement but what they are company records; so if they are subsequently used or introduced into evidence, they would be required at that time to be put in evidence.

Mr. Hall: I think that that would speed it up if you will carry that out.

Mr. Dixon: Thank you.

The Court: The record will merely show that he has handed these to you for such use as you desire to make of them, to satisfy the requirement of the subpoena.

Mr. Dixon: Item 2 of subpoena No. 2 is called for.

Mr. Hall: This item calls for certain original documents, numbers 1 to 9, and then the same paragraph says:

> "together with any and all contracts and/or leases relating to the sale of petroleum products and automotive accessories entered into between STANDARD [fol. 392] OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA and/or STANDARD STATIONS, INC., and any of the parties therein named, where said agreements relate to any of the aforesaid properties."

Now, the contracts and leases relating to the properties referred to in sub-items 1 to 9 of Paragraph II are now handed to you. Some of those, Mr. Dixon, may be in the first package that I gave you a few moments ago.

As to the documents themselves covered in this paragraph in the sub-items 1 to 9, those documents or photostats of those agreements are already in the possession of the Government as a result of inspection under Rule 34. They inspected various documents, your Honor, under Rule 34 and made copies of those and those copies are already in the possession of the Government.

Mr. Dixon: That is correct, your Honor. And I assume it is agreeable with counsel that photostats of these documents themselves be used rather than the originals?

Mr. Hall: It is my understanding that throughout this trial either side may use photostats in lieu of the original documents.

Mr. Dixon: That is correct.

Mr. Hall: Subject to all other objections and subject to correction if the photostat be found inaccurate.

Mr. Dixon: That is right.

[fol. 393] Mr. Dixon: Item 3 of the subpoena.

Mr. Hall: In compliance with Item 3 referred to, I hand counsel a three-page schedule entitled: Notes Receivable, Status as of April 23, 1948.

Mr. Dixon: I ask that these be marked for identification.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 14 for identification.

Mr. Dixon: Item No. 4, containing documents 1 to 24, inclusive, of the second subpoena.

Mr. Hall: Of the 24 documents referred to, photostats of them are already in the possession of the Government, as a result of their inspection under Rule 34. The last part of this Paragraph IV asks for the contracts and leases pertaining to the station. In compliance with the last part of the paragraph I hand counsel another package of photostats.

Mr. Dixon: Item No. 5 of the second subpoena.

Mr. Hall: Items 1 to 8, in Paragraph V, the Government already has photostats of those documents as a result of the inspection under Rule 34. The latter part of that paragraph refers, together with contracts and leases, Mr. Dixon, but the only one that is identified there you have already received in response to a previous call of the subpoena; I think call No. 1.

Mr. Dixon: Thank you, Mr. Hall. Item No. 6.

Mr. Hall: You have already received this from my [fol. 394] office, but I am happy to give you another photostat of it, since you have demanded it. It is a photostatic copy of the agreement of October 7, 1930, between Atlas Supply Company and the Standard Oil Company of California, together with letters dated October 1, 1937, October 16, 1944, and October 24, 1944,—photostats in each case.

Mr. Dixon: I ask that these be marked for identification.

The Clerk: Government's 15 for identification.

Mr. Dixon: If the Court please, that completes the call of the Government for the subpoenaed material. I suggest that, since there is a lot of the material subpoenaed that the Government has not seen before, we would appreciate a short recess. I think it would be in the interests of expediting the trial of the case.

The Court: It is 12:00 o'clock anyway. If you were in the midst of the examination of a witness I would not break in, but this is a good time to take the usual recess. Then you will have two hours to look at the material, and see what you want to introduce, and determine whether you want any oral testimony before you do that. So we will take a recess until 2:00 o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon, at 12:00 o'clock noon, a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock p. m. of the same day.)

[fol. 395] Los Angeles, California, Tuesday, May 4, 1948—2:00 P. M.

The Court: All right, gentlemen, proceed.

Mr. Dixon: May it please the court, we wish to call Mr. Ellis J. McClanahan, as vice-president and director of the Standard Oil Company, chairman of the board of the defendant Standard Stations, Inc., under Rule 43(b).

Mr. Hall: I do not think Mr. McClanahan is director of Standard.

ELLIS J. MCCLANAHAN, called as a witness by plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?
The Witness: Ellis J. McClanahan.
The Clerk: That is E-l-l-i-s J.?
The Witness: That is correct.
The Clerk: How do you spell your last name?
The Witness: M-c-C-l-a-n-a-h-a-n.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. McClanahan?
A. Burlingame, California.
Q. By whom are you employed or with what company are [fol. 396] you connected?
A. Standard Oil Company of California.
Q. What offices or positions, if any, do you hold with that company?
A. I am vice-president of the Standard Oil Company of California.
Q. Do you hold any office in Standard Stations, Inc.?
A. I am the chairman of the board of Standard Stations, Incorporated.
Q. Are you an officer or director of the Atlas Supply Company?
A. I am a director of Atlas Supply.
Q. Briefly, what are the duties of your office as vice-president of the Standard Oil Company of California?
A. Well, I am responsible or accountable for the marketing of the products marketed by the Standard Oil Company of California and the certain segments in marketing.
Q. Is it a fair statement to make to say that you are the officer in charge of the marketing and distribution of the petroleum products of the company?
A. That is right, sir.
Q. How long have you been associated with the Standard Oil Company?
A. Since 1912.
Q. What positions other than the one which you now [fol. 397] have have you held with the Standard Oil Company during that period of time?
A. Well, they are rather numerous, Mr. Dixon.

Q. Perhaps we can limit it if you will try and tell us what positions you have occupied in the marketing end of the business.

A. All of my experience with the company has been in marketing, starting as a tank gauger at a wholesale plant in Seattle, and then following as a sales representative on a tanker in Alaska; following that, a branch manager at Astoria, Oregon; later, assistant district manager at Sacramento; and then northern division manager of marketing in the Northwest, with headquarters in Seattle; district manager in Honolulu; and then assistant general sales manager with headquarters in Seattle; and then to the home office in charge of advertising. Following that, I was general manager and president of the Standard Stations, Incorporated; and after that, was made general sales manager for the company before I became a vice-president in charge of marketing.

I think that covers the ground in a general way.

Q. Thank you very much. In your position as officer of the company in charge of the marketing of the petroleum products of Standard of California can you tell the Court approximately how many gallons of gasoline the company distributes through any retail outlets during the year, say, [fol. 398] 1947—approximately? I do not mean the accurate figures.

A. Well, you are dealing in millions of gallons, and I would hesitate to make a statement in that connection.

Mr. Hall: I think you have been furnished with those figures, Mr. Dixon.

Mr. Dixon: We have, Mr. Hall, and I was going to ask Mr. McClanahan if he could estimate in gallons what the approximate gallonage was that the company distributed through retail outlets other than company owned outlets in 1946.

A. Other than company?

Q. Yes. I will hand you what has been marked Government's Exhibit 9 for identification and ask you if that is of some assistance to you in indicating the figures?

A. Yes. I think I can truthfully state that these figures represent the sales by dealers, or the sales by us to dealers in barrels, not in gallons.

Q. I believe by referring to Government's Exhibit 9 the purported sales to dealers are in excess of 6,000,000 barrels, is that correct?

A. Well, this is not totaled. It would possibly be around 6,000,000 barrels.

Q. That is for the year 1946?

A. That is right.

Q. At 42 gallons to a barrel that would be approxi-
[fol. 399] mately a quarter of a billion gallons of gasoline was distributed by the Standard Oil Company in the year 1946; is that substantially correct?

A. Yes; about 252,000,000 gallons; that is right.

Q. Now by referring to Government's Exhibit 9 you will find there several prices at which the gasoline is reported sold to dealers depending upon, I assume, the grade of gasoline that was so sold. Is it a fair estimate, by referring to that exhibit, to say that the average cost—the average price, rather, of the gasoline so sold to dealers during the year 1946 was approximately 17 cents a gallon?

Mr. Hall: Would you pardon the suggestion, Mr. Dixon? It may be that your misinterpret the portion of the exhibit 9 for identification you are referring to. I believe that those figures with respect to range of posted tank truck prices were designed to indicate a maximum and a minimum.

Mr. Dixon: I see.

Q. Perhaps Mr. McClanahan could tell the court approximately what an average price, tank wagon price, of gasoline sold during that year would be?

Mr. Hall: Where?

Mr. Dixon: Through all of the retail outlets.

Mr. Hall: In the seven western states?

Mr. Dixon: That is right.

A. Approximately, did you say, Mr. Dixon?

[fol. 400] Q. That is right, Mr. McClanahan.

A. In 1947?

Q. '46.

A. In 1946.

[fol. 401] Mr. Hall: If the Court please, I think I shall object to that question. Counsel has been furnished with this statement that shows a range of prices for 1946-1947. It seems to me that that is a matter of mathematical computation, as to what the amounts would be. That is an average cost obtained, and therefore the question is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and I object to it on that ground.

The Court: I think, however, if we have a witness, or an accountant, or someone with the figures, there can be no objection if he gives a summation of the average, if it can be arrived at. If he can't, he can say so.

A. My answer would be this, Mr. Dixon: That it would be so approximate that I doubt whether it would be of any value to you. There were several price changes in the period 1946-1947 in various localities, and the range, as shown on here, runs all the way from 14 cents a gallon to 28 cents, almost 100 per cent, depending on the point of delivery. The weighted average cost in the metropolitan areas, where your volume is greater, could be a figure between 14 and 27.9 cents.

Q. By Mr. Dixon: My question, Mr. McClanahan, is whether you would be able to give the Court an approximate estimate of what the average price for the total amount so sold would be? I realize there is no yardstick which you can apply, but would 17 cents a gallon be a fair [fol. 402] average, in your opinion?

A. In 1946?

Q. That's right.

A. I would say it would be closer to 18 cents, possibly.

Q. Then if we settle for 17½, is everybody satisfied?

Mr. Hall: I would not be, Mr. Dixon.

Q. By Mr. Dixon: What is your best estimate then, Mr. McClanahan, of what the average price would be? Would it be 18 cents a gallon?

A. Yes.

Q. Thank you. Now, Mr. McClanahan, in your position as vice president in charge of marketing of petroleum products, are you familiar with the relative position of the Standard Oil Company with reference to the amount of gasoline and petroleum products sold, say during the year 1946, as compared with the other companies in the industry, in the western area?

Mr. Hall: Pardon me a moment, Mr. Dixon. Are you now confining your question to gasoline sold through retail dealers?

Mr. Dixon: I did not so state, but that was going to be my next question, Mr. Hall. I was asking first if he knew what the total amount was with reference to all [fol. 403] gasoline sold.

A. To all classes of trade?

Q. That's right.

A. Branded and unbranded?

Q. That's right, whether the Standard Oil Company sells more gasoline than any other company, or whether it sells less, or whether it is first in the industry, third or fifth? Do you know, or can you tell the Court?

Mr. Hall: I object to the question as multifarious, argumentative, and no proper foundation laid.

Mr. Dixon: I think the foundation has been laid, your Honor. I agree that it is multifarious, but I am endeavoring to get to the point here as quickly as possible.

The Court: I will leave it to the witness, can you answer the question in that form, or would you rather have it split up?

The Witness: No, I can answer in that form, approximately.

The Court: We will take the view of the employee, or director, of your clients, as to whether it is too involved or not.

The Witness: That figure would be for the year 1947 or 1946?

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. 1946.

A. Around 23 per cent.

[fol. 404] Q. Is there any other company in the western area, meaning the States of California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, Idaho and Utah, to your knowledge, that sells or distributes more gasoline than the Standard Oil Company of California in that area?

A. In the State of Utah I am sure that the Utah Refining Company markets more products there than we do.

Q. With the exception of that State, then, the Standard Oil Company of California distributes more than any other company, in that area? I mean the sale of petroleum products?

A. Yes, that is quite true, with the exception of Utah, and possibly Idaho. I am not sure about Idaho.

Q. Are you able to state to the Court what the relative position of the Standard of California is with reference to the amount distributed, sold through retail outlets, in this same area?

A. Percentage wise?

Q. That's right.

A. Between 12 and 14 per cent.

Q. Is there any other company that you know of that sells in amounts in excess of the Standard Oil Company in that area, at the retail outlets?

A. I can't answer that truthfully. There may be some States in that area where we would occupy a second [fol. 405] position on the retail trade. I would say, in the majority of places that we are probably in first position, but I would not say that is so in all areas.

Q. Are you familiar, Mr. McClanahan, with the source from which the crude oil is acquired, that is used by the Standard in its refining process of gasoline?

A. No, I am not competent to answer that, Mr. Dixon.

Q. Can you tell the Court about how many refineries that are engaged in the business of refining gasoline from crude oil are operated by the Standard Oil Company of California in the Western area?

A. There are three refineries, all in the State of California.

Q. Are those refineries supplied with crude from any States outside of the State of California, to your knowledge?

A. I am sure they are not.

Q. I believe it is a fact, is it not, that the company itself operates about 1100 retail outlets in the western area?

A. 1090, I think—1092.

Q. In addition to those retail outlets your company also serves and supplies gasoline to approximately 6,000 other outlets, isn't that a fact?

A. That is a fact, sir.

Q. In the course of delivering gasoline to the 6,000 [fol. 406] retail outlets, other than those operated by the company, can you tell the Court what the processes are with reference to taking gasoline from the three refineries and delivering it to the outlets for sale to the consuming public of those outlets?

A. You are speaking now of the dealers?

Q. That's right, the 6,000 dealers you have mentioned.

A. The finished product is taken from the refinery in tankers, or tank cars, of commercial over-the-highway carriers, and delivered in some cases direct to the station, in their underground storage, and in other cases delivered to bulk plants, from which it is redistributed by tank truck or over-the-highway carriers to the respective service stations.

Q. Does Standard secure any gasoline from any other source other than the three refineries in California, which is distributed by it to any of these 6,000 retail outlets in the Western area?

A. Other than California?

Q. That is right.

A. May I have that question again?

Mr. Dixon: I will ask the reporter to read it.

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. Yes, we obtain gasoline from the Utah Refining Company at Salt Lake, to serve that area in the State of Utah. [fol. 407] Q. Is any of the gasoline that you acquire from the Utah Refining Company shipped from that State into any of the other States in the Western area, for delivery to the retail outlets?

A. Yes, some of that gasoline finds its way into Southern Idaho, and I believe to plants in Eastern Nevada. That would be all.

Q. Is it a fact that all of the gasoline which Standard distributes to the 6,000 retail outlets you have mentioned, in the western area, comes either from the three Standard refineries in California, or is purchased by Standard and delivered after said purchase to the retail outlets in the area, from the Utah Refinery in Utah, or Salt Lake?

A. That's just the way I answered it a short time ago.

Q. I believe you testified that some of this gasoline from the refinery was delivered directly to some of the outlets, is that correct?

A. It could be, in some cases.

Q. In direct tank car shipment?

A. Yes.

Q. And in other cases some of it is delivered to what you have referred to as the bulk plant?

A. That is right.

Q. Is this delivery to the bulk plant by tank car, or [fol. 408] sometimes by tanker also?

A. And by truck and trailer.

Q. In other words, it is delivered to the bulk plant by any one of those three methods?

A. That is right.

Q. Will you tell the Court just how this bulk plant operates with reference to taking gasoline from the bulk plant and putting it into a tank wagon for delivery to the retail outlets served by the bulk plant?

Mr. Hall: May I have the question read, please?

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. I don't think that needs any amplification. It is just done that way. The tank truck is loaded at the bulk plant through what we term a filling stem, either by gravity from the tank, if it is full, or by a powered pump into the tank truck. Then it is driven to the respective dealers, and delivered into their underground tanks.

Q. When gasoline is delivered to the bulk plant by any one of the three methods that you have already described, it is a fact, is it not, that it is at that time commingled with whatever gasoline may also be in that bulk tank?

A. Arriving by the same method?

Q. That's right.

A. It could be, and it could also be in a separate tank. We have tanks situated at terminals where we will take [fol. 409] an entire cargo, and that gasoline might be commingled with any previous shipment.

Q. But it is possible, as I have suggested,—it sometimes may be commingled with gasoline that is already in the tank, is that correct, at the bulk plant?

A. It could happen.

Q. Is gasoline being constantly withdrawn from the bulk plant and placed in the tank wagon for delivery to the retail outlets?

A. Well, that depends on the season of the year. We oftentimes build up a reserve during the winter, and these tanks can remain intact for some later period of time before there would be a constant delivery, that you speak of.

Q. It is a fact, is it not, that it may also be just the other way,—when there is a demand for gasoline, it may be constantly going into the bulk plant, and almost at the same time going out?

A. That's right, it could happen.

Q. Under those methods of distribution that you have described, it is a fact, is it not, that the gasoline that ultimately winds up in the tank of the retail dealer is at all times under the control of the Standard Oil Company until it is delivered to the tank of the retail dealer?

A. No, the title to the gasoline changes hands when it is put into his tank from our tank truck.

[fol. 410] Q. I mean at that time, up until the time it goes into the tank of the retail dealer, it is under the control of the Standard Oil Company, up until that time?

A. You say under control. Do you mean by the owner of the property?

Q. The owner of the gasoline.

A. Yes, they deliver gasoline in their own trucks, or through wholesale distributors, and the title remains in the company until it is put in underground storage.

Q. Do you know whether any of the bulk plants which were mentioned feed any tank wagons that cross any of the State lines in this area we have described?

A. I can't answer that, Mr. Dixon. I don't know specifically where that would be.

Q. It is a fact, is it not, that there are some such bulk plants used by the company in its distributing system?

A. There may be some, but very few. I believe in Spokane, Washington, we do service the Panhandle of Idaho, if that's the point you have in mind.

[fol. 411] Q. Now, Mr. McClanahan, can you state to the court from what sources the company acquires its oil, that is, I am talking now about the oil that is delivered to the retail outlets for sale to consumers in automobiles, motor oil?

A. Well, we are large manufacturers of our own lubricating oils. We have plants to perform that function. And then we do purchase large quantities from different sources to augment that supply and to round out our line, so to speak.

Q. Do you know from what sources Standard acquires, shall we describe it as crude oil, for such purposes, or is it crude oil?

Mr. Hall: Well, that is asked and answered, counsel.

Mr. Dixon: I do not believe it has been, your Honor.

Mr. Hall: The witness has already testified that the crude oil came from California.

Mr. Dixon: I am talking now about the oil that is used, Mr. McClanahan, for use in automotive purposes, in automobiles, rather than the oil that is refined into gasoline. Do you understand?

A. Yes; I understand. We buy crude from many different sources in many different fields in the State of California. We do select certain crudes that have higher lubricant values, from which we manufacture our motor oils.

[fol. 412] Q. Do you acquire any such oil from any sources other than the State of California?

A. Not crude oil.

Q. Do you acquire any oil of any kind that is ultimately delivered to the retail outlets for use in automobiles of the consuming public from any sources other than the State of California?

Mr. Hall: May I have the question read, please?

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. We do purchase certain stocks from other areas, but they are usually blended here before they are sold to the motorist, or treated. They are not sold to the motorist in the state in which they are purchased, if that answers it.

Q. By Mr. Dixon: Can you indicate to the court the approximate amount, total amount, of lubricating oils distributed by your company to retail dealers in the western area during the year 1946?

The Witness: This (exhibit) may help me here.

Mr. Hall: What was the exhibit you handed the witness, counsel?

Mr. Dixon: Government's 9.

A. Around 135,000 barrels of all grades and brands.

Q. And the same number of gallons to a barrel as in a barrel of gasoline?

A. That is right; 42.

[fol. 413] Q. Could you tell the court just approximately the total amount of gallons of such lubricating oil distributed and sold to the retail outlets by Standard Oil Company in the year 1946?

A. It would run around seven and one-half million gallons.

Q. Is any of that lubricating oil packaged, Mr. McClanahan, for distribution to retail outlets?

A. Yes.

Q. And where is that packaging done?

A. Richmond, California; we may do some at El Segundo, but I think most of it is at Richmond.

Q. It is a fact, then, is it not, that all of the lubricating oils that are distributed through the approximately 6,000 outlets in the western area in cans—I mean less than barrel lots—is packaged in the State of California?

A. That is right. As far as I can recall, that is correct.

Q. And Standard transports the lubricating oil in the barrels or the packaged lots to the various distributing points for ultimate distribution to retail outlets in the various states, does it?

A. That is correct.

Q. And during that entire period of time from the packaging of the oil at the two plants that you have mentioned [fol. 414] in the California factories or refineries of Standard until it is ultimately delivered to the retail dealer at the 6,000 outlets we are talking about is it under the control of the Standard Oil Company at all times until so delivered?

A. The company retains title to the oil until the dealer signs the delivery slip at his place of business.

The Court: Well, he means more than legal title. He means actual control. I mean in the sense in which control means dominion over it. In other words, you have it stored in places which you own?

The Witness: That is right.

The Court: And which you have under your complete control, from which it is withdrawn for delivery?

The Witness: That is right.

The Court: Is that what you meant?

Mr. Dixon: That is right. That is what I meant by "control", not merely legal title.

The Witness: That is right. We are responsible and assume control of legal title until it is delivered to the dealer at his premises.

Q. And is it a fair statement to make, Mr. McClanahan, to say that this oil either in barrel or packaged form is more or less in a constant state of flow from the time it leaves the refinery until it is delivered at the retail outlet to the dealer?

[fol. 415] Mr. Hall. That is objected to as calling for a conclusion of the witness.

The Court: Yes; that calls for a conclusion. He should describe that, because that is going to be one of the issues in this particular case. Whether there is an interruption at any time becomes very material, so I do not think the witness should be called upon to give a conclusion. He should state what goes on and whether these elements which constitute this process are repetitious and go on over a period of time, and so forth, and day after day, and so forth. From that, then you can draw the inference whether it is continuous or not, and whether that continuity is limited to state limits or whether it extends to outside the state.

Mr. Dixon: Quite right, your Honor, as to the question. I will ask Mr. McClanahan now, if you will, Mr. McClanahan, to endeavor to describe to the court the journey that this lubricating oil takes from the time it is packaged or either in the quart or barrel or cans at the factories you mentioned until it reaches the retail outlets.

A. It is barreled or placed in quart cans or in five-gallon cans or in two-gallon cans at the plant or filling point such as Richmond, we will say; and also, that includes 55-gallon barrels and half-barrels. And then the oil is transported from the plant or the works possibly to a bulk plant, where it makes an intermediate stop, and then it goes [fol. 416] from there to the purchaser's premises, or it may go directly from the refinery to the purchaser's premises, depending upon the size of the delivery, if it happens to be in carload lots, box cars in the case of barrels—very little of it sold in tank cars—so those two forms of distribution are used direct from the refinery in carload lots or commercial carriers or to a bulk plant from which it is redistributed to the dealer. The dealer purchases it in barrels, cans, or in bulk in some cases.

Q. I believe you referred to the bulk plant as being one of the intermediary stops of the oil from the refinery to the dealer, is that correct?

A. It could be that we have what we call a supply point such as the refinery, and it is shipped from there to a bulk plant at a remote point where it is warehoused, and we usually ship in mixed carload lots where we can effect a more economical method of distribution.

Q. The purpose of the supply plant or the bulk plant, as we may refer to it, is to supply the dealers in the immediate area of that bulk plant with the lubricating oil, is that correct?

A. That is correct; and other products.

Q. Yes; and other products. From what sources does the Standard Stations, Inc. or Standard Oil acquire tires, tubes and batteries which are distributed through some of [fol. 417] these 6,000 retail outlets in this area, Mr. McClanahan?

A. We purchase them from the Atlas Supply Company, a lot of them, not all of them. The majority would be purchased from that source.

Q. From what states outside the western area, if any, are those products delivered from to Standard within the area?

A. Why, none to my knowledge.

Q. In other words, all of the tires, tubes and batteries which are distributed to retail outlets under, say, TBA contracts are acquired from factories or plants within the western area?

A. Within the State of California.

Q. Oh, all within the State of California?

A. All within the State of California.

Q. And from such factories within the State of California can you tell the court where these tires, tubes, batteries, and accessories are shipped by the company manufacturing them?

A. We have several so-called tire warehouses located at strategic points in the western area. I believe there are around—well, I don't know how many there are. I think you must have a record of that. But we have one in Seattle, one in Portland, San Francisco, Phoenix; we have a nice plant here at Compton, and I believe there is one in [fol. 418] Spokane and, I think, in Salt Lake City.

Q. Do you have any warehouses to which these products are shipped in the States of Nevada and Idaho.

A. I don't believe we have. I am quite sure we have not.

Q. And from what sources, if any, are the retail dealers that are operating under TBA contracts in those states served by Standard?

A. Well, the northern part of Idaho such as the Panhandle would be served out of the Spokane warehouse; the Salt Lake warehouse would possibly serve Idaho south of the Salmon River and the State of Utah. As for Nevada, I think most of that would come out of San Francisco.

Q. Do any of these places at which Standard receives its products, that is, the products we are mentioning under the TBA contracts, thereafter deliver the product across state lines to dealers in other states?

A. I just mentioned that the Utah warehouse possibly supplied Southern Idaho, and Spokane would possibly supply northern Idaho and the Panhandle. I think most of the other states would be confined to delivery from the warehouses in their respective states. There would be no point in shipping from the State of Washington down to Portland when you have a warehouse at both points. I don't think there would be any reason for doing it.

[fol. 419] Q. I believe you stated you have been with the company in the sales end since—when was it—1913?

A. About 1912, pretty close.

Q. This may be a difficult question for you to answer, but can you tell the court what your connection or association with the company was in the middle 20's or thereabouts?

A. In 1922 or '3 I was assistant general sales manager in Seattle—no. I was assistant district manager in Seattle from 1923 until 1927, and at that time I was transferred to the Hawaiian Islands as district manager over there. I am pretty sure of those dates.

Q. You were connected with the company in sales capacity at that time, were you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you familiar with what are called the lease and sublease or license arrangements in effect at that time?

Mr. Hall: What time is that?

Mr. Dixon: The 20's, the late 20's.

The Witness: You said the middle 20's, I believe.

Mr. Dixon: Well, middle or late 20's, Mr. McClanahan.

A. No; I can't recall the types of paper that we were using then. We did have leases. I am not sure about the term—what did you call them—license agreements?

Q. Well, lease or sublease arrangement or license [fol. 420] arrangement.

A. I recall the use of lease and subleases at that time.

Q. Let us call them lease and subleases.

A. All right. I think they were in effect then.

Q. I will hand you what is marked Government's Exhibit 5 in evidence and ask you to examine the same and state to the court, if you can, whether the subleases in use by the Standard Oil Company at that time contained provisions comparable to or substantially the same as paragraph 4 of Government's Exhibit 5?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is objected to as calling for evidence which is not the best evidence, no proper foundation laid, incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Read the question.

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Court: I have not gathered from the testimony of this witness that he was familiar with the terms of the leases under which stations were operating at that time, and unless that is first shown the question is improper.

Mr. Dixon: I agree with your Honor, but I thought I had already asked the witness by the previous question whether he was familiar with the lease and sublease arrangement and he testified that he was.

The Court: Well, that was too general. It should be [fol. 421] followed by an inquiry as to whether he actually saw leases and knew their terms, before you ask him to compare.

Mr. Dixon: I agree with your Honor. It is entirely quite right. My question was if he knew, and I will withdraw my question if it is objected to on that ground.

The Court: Once a counsel objects to it and the objection is good, I must sustain it.

Mr. Dixon: Thank you, your Honor.

The Court: And besides, as you know, I am a great believer in the rules of evidence. I still insist after nearly 40 years at the bar—38 years at the bar of California, nearly 40, 22 years of which I spent on the bench—I still believe that I can put in more testimony with the aid of proper counsel in an hour than any administrative body can put in in three days, and I can do it by observing the rules of evidence. And we can do it by observing the rules of evidence. I fail to see that disregarding the rules of evidence gets you anywhere. So I think that the foundation should be laid.

Mr. Dixon: Thank you, your Honor. I will be very glad to do that.

Q. Mr. McClanahan, will you state to the court whether you saw any of the Standard subleases when you were with the company in the 20's in your capacity as selling for the company?

[fol. 422] A. Yes; I saw some of these leases.

Q. Are you familiar generally with the provisions of the leases, subleases, rather, that were used by the company at that time?

A. No; I couldn't answer——

Mr. Hall: What time was that?

Mr. Dixon: In the middle 20's.

The Witness: I couldn't.

Q. Did you negotiate any leases for the company at that time?

A. Well, I might have. I can't recall any specific instance where I did, but I may have.

Q. Could you tell the court just what your actual work was at that time, as far as you can?

A. This is the middle 20's, again?

Q. That is right.

A. I was in Seattle as assistant district manager, and for a considerable period of time I was looking after the Alaska end of our business at that time, where we covered mostly the marine and fishing trade. I believe in '25 or '26 I then was identified more closely with our retail business, and I would say in those two years I was required to direct sales affecting all of our products, including resale. I was not a salesman, however. I was part of the management, and at that time we covered many of our [fol. 423] various channels of sales, besides re-sale.

Q. From your association with the company in the capacities you mention at that time do you know whether the company, that is the Standard Oil Company, employed any subleases that were entered into with dealers selling Standard petroleum products at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have occasion to familiarize yourself with any of the forms or provisions of such subleases?

A. Only possibly to the extent or term of the lease and possibly the monetary consideration. Beyond that I did not familiarize myself with the leases.

Q. Do you know whether any of the provisions of any of the subleases so used at that time contained provisions requiring the sublessee to only sell or use Standard petroleum products at the properties subleased?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is objected to as no proper foundation laid, calling for a conclusion of the witness, incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and objected to on those grounds.

The Court: I do not think proper foundation has been laid to show some familiarity of this witness with the terms of the leases at the time.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. When was the first time, Mr. McClanahan, that you [fol. 424] had anything to do with familiarizing yourself with any of the lease forms of the Standard Oil Company?

A. Well, that question is rather general, isn't it?

The Court: Well, he just wants you to fix the date.

The Witness: Oh, I see.

The Court: Then he will start from there.

A. Oh, I see. Well, I became partially acquainted with some of our paper in the latter part of 1938, but not in detail nor word for word.

The Court: The question is: Did you see any number of the papers, paper work, to use an army term, that was being turned out at that time?

The Witness: No; I did not.

The Court: See any of the instruments?

The Witness: No.

The Court: Whatever they were called, by which relationship between the company and the various outlets were established?

The Witness: No. My work did not require me to do that. That was handled by other people.

The Court: Mr. Dixon, if I may make a suggestion?

Mr. Dixon: Certainly.

The Court: I do not know. Probably a week from now I will know more about the case than I do now. You have lived with it.

[fol. 425] Mr. Dixon: It is purely background material, your Honor.

The Court: You are supposed to have lived with this case for months. It does seem to me that there ought to be available other witnesses by whom you can prove these things.

Another thing, if I may suggest, is this: While, in the interests of continuity, it is permissible to go back a period of years, ultimately, because we know of this action, because the Government only seeks injunctive relief as to certain practices and because a chancellor must take the case as he finds it as of the time of trial, and for that reason supplemental pleadings are not necessary in the strict sense of the word, in equity, and won't be necessary even on the law side of the court because we are required to find the facts as they are shown by the evidence, even without the amended pleadings, but because of this particular situation I think we may refuse a certain relief if the court should find that conditions existing at the time of trial do not warrant it, what they did in the past is not of such importance except insofar as it throws light on what they are doing now and throws light on what they might do in the future, because injunctive relief is directed at practices in the future based upon a finding as to what they are doing now.

In other words, we are interested in immediacy, so [fol. 426] that the inquiry as to the background is merely background.

Mr. Dixon: That is right.

The Court: Filling in a picture, as motion picture people would say. We have a drop upon which we throw a picture of the past in order to walk in front of it in the present and act as though we are doing the same thing we were doing in the past.

But at any rate, regardless of that, just merely a suggestion, I do not think this witness has enough familiarity to warrant taking the time trying to get his recollection as to a thing with which he has only hazy familiarity.

Mr. Dixon: I am sure your Honor appreciates that the witness is called here under 43(b).

The Court: That is right. In justice to you, I know that nobody is objecting to leading him. However, even though a witness is called as an adverse witness under that section, that section, as you know, is nothing novel to us in California. We have had it for 30 years. It is the famous Section 2055 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

I do not know how long you have been in California. As a matter of fact 80 per cent of the things that are good under the New Rules have their counterparts in the California Codes and all the writers, including myself, have admitted the fact. In fact, the first series of lectures I [fol. 427] gave on the New Civil Rules before the Bar here and before the Stanford Law Society in San Francisco, all I did was compare New Rules with the Code of Civil Procedure and found very few that did not have their counterpart.

So I know the scope of the inquiry. But what they are objecting to is to asking for conclusions from a person who does not have sufficient familiarity with that subject to give you even conclusions.

[fol. 428] Mr. Dixon: I quite agree with you.

The Court: In justice to the witness, he is not showing any hesitancy to answer any questions, and I am old enough to assume that a man who comes before this Court, and takes an oath before God to tell the truth, tells the truth. Unconsciously at times he may be biased; he cannot help it. That is why you are allowed this latitude in cross-examination. Sometimes a person is biased and his testimony may be colored. If you have studied modern psychology you will understand that is correct. He hasn't indicated this unwillingness so far to answer, and the only reason you can treat him as an adverse witness is because you called him under the Section, and therefore you don't guarantee what he is going to say. You are just fishing, hoping you will catch something.

Mr. Dixon: Just one other question I would like to ask this witness on that point. Perhaps he can answer it, and perhaps he can't. I don't know.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Can you tell the Court, Mr. McClanahan, approximately how many non-company operated retail outlets were selling Standard petroleum products in the late '20's?

Mr. Hall: I think we may be able to furnish you with that.

The Witness: This will be a wild guess, Mr. Dixon. In [fols. 429] the '20's?

Mr. Hall: Pardon me. Do you want the witness to give a wild guess?

The Court: Can you approximate it?

The Witness: I think so.

Mr. Hall: If your Honor please, on that point, we can get the accurate information for counsel, if that is what he wants. I don't know whether we can go back into the late '20's or not. I don't like to have the record show speculation and conjecture or guesses.

The Court: Go ahead.

Mr. Hall: My objection is made, your Honor.

The Court: I thought you were offering to give him some information.

Mr. Hall: No, the witness has indicated that his answer would be a guess. I am objecting to it on that ground.

The Court: Let me suggest this: Many a time a witness says guess when he really approximates, that is, he states it approximately, on the basis of any knowledge that he has. He may give an answer, and it does not have to be numerically accurate, because the distance of time is such that he cannot very well answer, unless he had the exact figures before him. Mr. Hall wants to know whether you are guessing, or whether you are basing whatever you are going to say upon your approximation of what you knew? [fol. 430] With that admonition I will overrule the objection. If he guesses too wild, I will strike out the answer.

Mr. Hall: If everybody understands that it is a guess, it is all right.

The Witness: This was the middle of the '20's?

The Court: The late '20's.

The Witness: The late '20's?

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

A. In the seven Western States under consideration?

The Court: Yes, in the late '20's.

A. Around 1800 to possibly 2000 accounts; I would say that that would cover it, approximately.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. I direct your attention, Mr. McClanahan, to the late '30's, around 1938 and 1939. Can you indicate to the Court the approximate number of retail outlets, non-company operated, in the Western area at that time?

Mr. Hall: There I think we can really give you the figures, Mr. Dixon, and not a guess.

The Witness: It is just approximate.

The Court: If this witness can state, Mr. Dixon, you can accept the offer as to the more accurate information.

Mr. Hall: So long as it is understood that the witness is just speculating, guessing.

The Court: He is giving an approximation. I would not [fol. 431] call it guessing. It is not a guess. I think it is an approximation.

The Witness: Around 8500.

The Court: Let us use a term, and call it a margin of error. What margin of error do you think there is in your approximation?

The Witness: Approximately 10 per cent.

The Court: What do they call it in manufacturing,—tolerance?

The Witness: Tolerance.

The Court: So you would give a margin of error, or tolerance, of 10 percent?

The Witness: That is correct.

The Court: One way or the other?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. I believe there are approximately 6,000 non-company retail outlets in the Western area at the present time, is that correct?

A. Serviced by us?

Q. That's right.

A. Around 5900, to be exact.

Q. Is it a fact that since the period you have described, in the late '30's, the Standard Oil has lost approximately, in your opinion, 2,000 retail outlets?

A. Around 2500.

[fol. 432] Q. Were those outlets that were under dealer agreements of any of the types of the five agreements that we have previously referred to?

Mr. Hall: Pardon me. May I have the question read?

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Court: I don't remember. Was he shown the agreements?

Mr. Dixon: I believe that's right. I think the witness—I am presuming he is familiar with the five types of agreements.

The Court: I don't remember that he was shown them.

Mr. Dixon: I don't think he was.

The Court: Have you seen the three types of agreements marked here for identification, I think 1 to 5, which Mr. Hall brought into court, and presented to counsel? I think you had better withdraw the previous question, and let my question stand as preliminary, because I did not hear it. Slightly, at times, my thought may be momentarily elsewhere, and I may have overlooked a question, but I don't think I heard any question relating to his knowledge of the instrument.

The Witness: What is the question?

The Court: Let me ask you one preliminary question: Now you have examined Exhibits 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, which are forms of instruments designated by such numbers.

[fol. 433] The Witness: Yes.

The Court: The question propounded will relate to those five instruments. Reframe your question, please.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Can you state to the Court, Mr. McClanahan, whether the approximately 2,000 stations, retail outlets, we will call them, that you estimate the company lost since the latter part of the '30's, were represented by outlets covered by agreements of the types you have just referred to, namely, Government's Exhibits 1 through 5, inclusive.

A. Yes, I can state that a great number of the 2,000 were covered by some form of paper, some of which may have been covered by one form or another form. I can't say that all five forms were used on one account, but some one of the forms might have been used on all of the accounts, or a majority of them.

The Court: But you can't tell that far back?

A. No.

The Court: How many of the particular five were used, or in how many instances?

A. I would say a great number of these were covered by some form of contract,—a supply contract.

The Court: Let me ask you this question: Do you know of any instance where a relationship was established,—I am not going to call it by any name, but I will use a word [fol. 434] such as relationship, because it is a generic term. I don't want to call it a lease, an agency, or anything else, because that is one of the problems in the lawsuit. I don't want to give it a name at the present time. Do you know of any form of relationship that was established between Standard and one of these outlets which was not covered by a written agreement?

Mr. Hall: Your Honor is referring to this time?

The Court: Yes, 1938 and 1939.

The Witness: No, I can't recall one relationship.

The Court: Put it the other way. I will ask you a leading question: Is it a fact, or is it not a fact that wherever any relationship was established, it was done not by oral agreement, but by written agreement?

The Witness: In the majority of cases.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. It is a fact, is it not, Mr. McClanahan, that the Standard sells a considerable number of outlets with which it has no written agreement?

The Court: I will allow the question, but I don't see any materiality.

Mr. Dixon: I said written agreement.

The Court: That was not your question.

Mr. Dixon: May the reporter read the question?

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Court: I will allow the question, but if this calls [fol. 435] for the answer which I think it does, it would not be material, because we are not concerned by sales in general. I assume the Standard Oil Company sells its products to others. I don't think it would be doing the amount of business it does, if it confined itself to these gasoline outlets. But they are not charged in the complaint as monopolistic tactics, and as I understand, no charge of fixing prices is involved in this lawsuit. I can't see the materiality of the particular question. Are you objecting to it? I have no objection to its being answered. If you are objecting technically, I will sustain the objection.

Mr. Hall: No, your Honor, I was not objecting to it. But I think it is strange that counsel should put a question like that when the very documents he introduced this morning disclosed the answer in accurate form.

The Court: Maybe he wants to give me a preview of what is in the documents, because I haven't looked at them yet.

Mr. Hall: I have no objection.

The Court: You may answer.

The Witness: You used the term "considerable number." I can't give it to you exactly. I believe it is around 750 accounts, without a supply contract.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. That is, without a written contract?

A. That is right, a written contract obligating us to supply them.

[fol. 436] Q. Do you sell any of those outlets——

The Court: Let me ask this question. The witness put in a clause there, which I would like to have clarified.

Mr. Dixon: Certainly.

The Court: What do you mean, without any obligation to supply?

The Witness: I believe he used the term "open accounts." Is that correct?

The Court: That's right.

The Witness: That means that these accounts are open to the end that they have not an assured supplier under obligations to supply them. And the question put to me, as I understand it, was that we had a considerable number of those accounts. We had 750.

The Court: Am I to take your answer to mean this, then: That you are not under obligation to supply them, and they are not under obligation to confine themselves to you?

The Witness: That is correct.

The Court: In other words, they call on you when they wish to, and if you can supply them consistent with your other needs you are going to do so, is that correct? Is that your idea, or is it not?

The Witness: Partially right, sir. They call upon us if they need supplies. We have a supply arrangement with them, but we are not obligated to continue it.

[fol. 437] The Court: Have they the right, when you cannot supply them, for instance, to call upon others?

The Witness: That is correct.

The Court: In other words, the obligation which is contained in these contracts which compels them to get from you enough to supply all their demands— I have forgotten the phraseology.

The Witness: Requirements?

The Court: Their requirements, did not exist as to the outlets about which you are talking now, is that correct?

The Witness: That is correct.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Mr. McClanahan, will you state to the Court whether you would sell any Standard gasoline to any such station under an open account, or oral arrangement, as you have called it, if there was any other gasoline dispensing pump at that same outlet?

A. No, we would not.

Q. So that as to these accounts with which you had no written agreement, it is a fact, is it not, that as long as the Standard Oil furnishes these accounts with gasoline, that the only pump at that retail outlet is the Standard Oil pump, is that correct?

A. That is right, sir.

Q. In your capacity as sales manager, or in charge of sales, and the distribution of petroleum products, are you [fol. 438] familiar, Mr. McClanahan, with the yardsticks that are applied by the Standard Oil Company in selecting service station retail outlet sites?

A. Does that conclude your question?

Q. Yes.

A. In a general way. We have specialists, or experienced men, who do that for us, but in a general way they are directed to effect their efforts to gain the representation at points where we haven't what we consider adequate coverage, both on the highway, and in the communities and any subdivisions. Further than that, there is a constant change going on in the retailing of petroleum products, in that their leases expire, highways being moved, and various other physical changes that are taking place, which require a constant search for, you might say, relocating existing stations, for acquiring new sites, and a very careful study is made as to our demands for our representation.

(Short recess.)

[fol. 439] The Court: All right, Mr. McClanahan, resume the witness stand.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. It is a fact, is it not, Mr. McClanahan, that the number of service stations that may be operated within a given area is limited? Do you understand my question?

A. I think I do, Mr. Dixon. It is limited by adequacy of distribution, if that answers it. We haven't anything in the way, we will say, of an exact number of units in a community as a limit. It depends on the growth of the community, the change in buying habits, the change in highways. Do I understand the question correctly?

Q. I think so, yes. And that the selection of such sites, generally, depends upon the amount of motor traffic that passes a particular site or area during a given period; is that one of the criteria applied?

A. Traffic is one, accessibility of the site is another, and the mobile buying habits of the public is another. It depends on the class of trade that you are catering to. On the areas that have fast-moving travel we find that visibility is very important, so they can see the station before they get to it. In a community it is not so important because they know where the station is located through continuous observation. Traffic is only one point.

Q. Now directing your attention for a moment to [fol. 440] Government's Exhibit 9, I will ask you to examine the same and refer thereto to the range of posted prices for automotive oils delivered to retail outlets in the western area. Will you examine the same and state to the court, if you can, what an approximate average price per gallon would be for the lubricating oils involved in that compilation?

A. You are speaking now of the wholesale price that the company charges the dealer?

Q. That is right; yes.

A. For our naphthenic base oils manufactured entirely here in California the range would be—the price would be approximately 60 cents a gallon. For Pennsylvania oils manufactured in the east but possibly blended here the price would be approximately 75 to 78 cents a gallon. On our ~~non-solvent-treated~~ western oils manufactured here the price would be approximately ~~35 cents a gallon.~~ That is the price to the dealer.

Q. Now coming back to the subject of service stations, Mr. McClanahan, it is a fact, is it not, that these retail outlets also furnish potential market for purchases of automotive accessories by motorists?

A. Yes; they are a potential outlet for what we term allied merchandise, allied petroleum products.

Q. And such products include tires, tubes, batteries, [fol. 441] and other automotive accessories, do they?

A. Generally, the immediate needs or essential needs of a motorist; that is correct.

Q. It is a fact, is it not, that Standard has used not only its own company-operative retail outlets but also the independent dealer outlets for the source for the sale of such automotive products and accessories since 1930?

A. That is right.

Q. From your experience as vice-president in charge of sales and distribution of petroleum products for the company is it not a fact that many motorists who enter the retail outlets at which Standard products are sold request petroleum products such as motor oils other than those sold or manufactured by Standard?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is objected to as calling for a conclusion of the witness, no proper foundation laid, incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Read the question.

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Court: Overruled. If you know.

A. I am quite certain that that does not prevail.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Do you of your own knowledge know of any instances of such situations occurring which have come to your attention, Mr. McClanahan, as vice-president in charge of sales of petroleum products for the company?

[fol. 442] The Witness: Is that question completed?

The Court: Yes. You may answer.

Mr. Dixon: That is correct.

The Witness: Would you mind repeating it, please?

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. No, I do not, with this exception: That shortly after the war the supply of Pennsylvania oils was rather short and we had some difficulty in supplying our customers' demands, our own customers, with that particular product. But I can't recall any instance where they came into our stations and asked us for other products.

Q. That is products other than those manufactured and sold by Standard?

A. That is correct.

Q. In the petroleum field?

A. That is right.

Q. Or the petroleum products field? Pardon me.

A. That is right, sir.

Q. How long has Standard been selling tires, tubes, batteries and automotive accessories to independent dealer outlets to which Standard petroleum products are sold?

A. 1936 to '8 is when, I believe, they merged all the sale of those products through that class of outlet.

Q. And was 1938 the first time that the company started to use the type of agreement which has been marked [fol. 443] Government's Exhibit 4?

A. To my knowledge this was generally used after that period.

Q. Was there any other type of agreement which was in use by the Standard Oil Company which covered the distribution of tires, tubes and batteries to retail independent outlets prior to that time, to your knowledge?

A. Yes. I recall that we had a distributor's agreement for certain retail outlets prior to that time.

Q. So that there are in effect at the present time, are there not, two types of agreements which relate to and deal with the distribution of tires, tubes and batteries through the independent retail outlets at which Standard petroleum products are sold?

A. I can't answer that exactly. I don't know.

Q. Directing your attention to all of these agreements, namely, Government's Exhibits 1 through 5, inclusive, it is a fact, is it not, Mr. McClanahan, that all of these agreements which may be entered into with independent dealers in the various states in the western area require the approval of the main office of the Standard Oil Company of San Francisco before they may be executed——

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. —and become effective?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is objected to, if the [fol. 444] court please, as assuming facts contrary to evidence that counsel himself has already introduced. He refers to five types of contract now in use. The exhibit that he offered this morning, Exhibit 6, states very clearly that the distributor agreement, the use of that was discontinued in September, 1944.

The Court: Remember he is cross-examining this witness and therefore he is not bound by the testimony, and you may elicit questions for the purpose of laying foundation for contrary testimony, under our rules. He is not vouching for the testimony of this witness. This witness is being examined as an adverse witness under that particular section, which means that he can contradict him. So if he wants to elicit a contradiction between this and something else, he may do so and then choose, later on, to rely on the wording of the agreement or to rely on the statement of the witness also.

Mr. Hall: It would seem to me, your Honor, as if he was attempting to impeach the document that he himself offered this morning by the testimony of the witness.

The Court: He is not impeaching. The section under which the witness is called is very explicit.

Mr. Dixon: I have it here, your Honor.

The Court: All right. I have it. Is very explicit. This is 43(b):

[fol. 445] "A party may interrogate any unwilling or hostile witness by leading questions. A party may call an adverse party or an officer, director, or managing agent of a public or private corporation or of a partnership or association which is an adverse party, and interrogate him by leading questions and contradict and impeach him in all respects as if he had been called by the adverse party, and the witness thus called may be contradicted and impeached by or on behalf of the adverse party also, and may be cross-examined by the adverse party only upon the subject matter of his examination in chief."

So that is broad, broader in fact than our Section 2055 of the Code of Civil Procedure, although in substance the courts have so ruled in interpreting our own statute.

All right; you may answer.

The Witness: Will you read the question again, please?

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. As for the leases, they would be executed in San Francisco. There may be one or more here that could be executed in the field, such as Exhibit—it is No. 3 here, the petroleum products and equipment agreement. I would say generally they would be executed in the home office, [fol. 446] with the possible exception of the one that I mentioned.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Now, do you, that is, does Standard sell any tires, tubes and batteries to any independent dealer within the 6,000 outlets that we have before referred to that may have a TBA type of contract—or, withdraw the question. Does Standard sell any tires, tubes and batteries to any independent dealer to whom Standard sells petroleum products without that dealer entering into a written TBA agreement of the type of Exhibit No. 4—2 and 4, I guess?

A. Yes. According to my information, we may have a few of these whom we sell currently on the open market basis, without such an agreement, but they would be very few.

Q. In other words, it is a fact, is it not, that substantially all the tires, tubes and batteries that are sold to independent dealer outlets are sold to dealers who have the type of contract referred to as Exhibits 4 and 2?

A. They are consigned to them and then individually sold; that is right.

Q. Will you state to the court how the Standard determines the amount of products, that is tires, tubes, and batteries, which it will purchase for the dealer outlets, for distribution to the dealer outlets?

A. How it determines the amount?

Q. That is right.

[fol. 447] A. Well, that is based on a very carefully maintained historical record of their previous purchases and estimates on what we consider their future requirements.

Q. In other words, when entering your orders for tires, tubes, and batteries for distribution to retail outlets handling the TBA and distributor type of agreement you take into consideration the prospective requirements of all of the outlets under that type of contract, do you not?

A. Yes, sir. We protect them on a future supply and order our requirements accordingly.

Q. It is a fact, is it not, that when placing these orders the Standard contemplates the ultimate delivery of the tires, tubes and batteries to either the company-operated outlet or the independent dealer outlet which is subject to the TBA type or distributor type of contract, Government's Exhibits 2 and 4?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is objected to as calling for a conclusion of the witness, no proper foundation laid, irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: Who is overruled, Dixon or Hall?

The Court: No. When I say "overruled" it means that you may answer.

The Witness: Okay. All right.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

[fol. 448] A. No; we don't segregate the tires in our warehouses as to where they are eventually sold. They are stocked and inventoried, and then the separation takes place when the shipment is designated.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. It is a fact, is it not, Mr. McClanahan, that any stoppage of the tire, tube or battery in any one of your seven warehouses that you have referred to is merely a temporary stopping place for the product until it can be conveniently delivered to the dealer outlet?

A. That is right. They are warehoused there and redistributed from that point to the purchaser.

Q. And it is a fact, also, is it not, that the ultimate destination of all the tire, tube and battery products that are ordered for the Standard dealer, that is the dealer, that is the independent dealer outlet or is the company-operated retail outlet?

A. Not entirely, Mr. Dixon. We do sell tires and batteries to trucking accounts who might take delivery direct from the warehouse and it may not go through a dealer.

Q. What percentage of the business which Standard does in the sale and distribution of tires, tubes and batteries is of that character?

A. Well, considering the non-dealer sales, the non-automobile dealer sales, and considering the airport dealers, the marine dealers, the trucks who may buy at the ware-[fol. 449] house, and adding to that, if we may, the products that our own company uses on its equipment and does not purchase, except takes delivery from our warehouse, it would probably represent roughly 10 per cent.

Q. Now, it is also a fact, is it not, Mr. McClanahan, that there is a constant movement of these products from your warehouse to the dealer and company-operated outlets?

A. There is now. During the war we just did not have any products to move.

Q. Do you have any contracts of the type of Government's Exhibit 4 that do not require the dealer who executes such contract to also purchase his full requirements of gasoline and petroleum products from Standard?

The Witness: Read that question, will you, please? May I ask to have the question read?

Mr. Dixon: Surely.

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. To my knowledge we have not.

Q. In addition to tires, tubes and batteries which are sold to independent dealers under types of contracts Government's Exhibits 2 and 4, other types of merchandise in the line of automobile accessories is also sold to such dealers, is it not?

A. That is right.

Q. And it is a fact, is it not, that many of such [fol. 450] products are shipped in to various warehouses or distribution points maintained by Standard in the states mentioned from states outside the states we have previously referred to as the western area; is that not true?

A. You are referring now to products other than tires, tubes and batteries?

[fol. 451] A. That is right. Many of them originate in States outside of the seven Western States.

Q. And these accessories are handled in substantially the same manner by Standard, insofar as distributing them is concerned, as are the tires, tubes and batteries, are they not?

A. I would say substantially, but not entirely.

Q. I direct your attention to the five types of contracts, Government's Exhibits 1 through 5, inclusive. Do you know of any financial aid that has been given to any of the independent dealers who signed any contracts of that character with the Standard Oil Company?

A. Any specific instance?

The Court: No, the general policy.

The Witness: Yes, I would say that we possibly have several dealers that we have assisted financially, who may have one of these contracts.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. It is a fact, is it not, Mr. McClanahan, that in many of such instances Standard has in fact made gifts to many of the independent dealers executing such contracts as part of the transaction?

A. No, that is not true, Mr. Dixon. We just don't make gifts to anybody.

Q. Let us put it this way, then: It is a fact, is it not, that with the dealers which execute these types of [fol. 452] contracts, Standard frequently makes money available to them for the purpose of setting up or establishing a business, which is not in fact repaid to Standard by the dealer?

A. I am not trying to circumvent your question, but I am trying to give you a factual answer. Every piece of assistance that we have rendered to these dealers that I know of has been with the thought of helping that dealer to become a better merchant, in order to better serve the trade; and when he becomes a merchant of that type we are repaid in some instances for our loan, but they are not gifts.

Q. I hand you what has been marked for identification as Government's Exhibit 16, and ask you if you recall ever having seen that document?

A. No, I can't recall seeing this particular document. I may have. I see it's addressed to me. We pass on a lot of documents. This is dated 1945. It may have come to my attention, but I can't specifically say.

Q. I realize you can't pick out any particular transaction, Mr. McClanahan, at this late date. Will you examine the document, and state to the Court, if you can, whether the difference between the item marked "Loan" in the amount of $4,000, and the item marked "Repayment, $2500, at no interest, in 120 equal monthly payments" represents, in fact, a disbursement to the party involved in this proposal of that amount of money?

[fol. 453] A. The difference here between the $4,000 and the $2500 represents a total of $1500, or $12.50, which I would say was value received for the representation at this particular point.

Q. In other words, from your examination of that exhibit it is a fact, is it not, that insofar as the information contained therein is concerned, there is no provision in the proposal for the repayment to Standard by the proposed dealer of the $1500 differential between the $2500 and the $4000 referred to?

A. That is correct, except in this way: That he used the loan to build the station on which we obtained the lease, so we have a certain equity in the improvements of the station, in that amount, regardless of whether it was paid back or not. This man built a station. It was equipped. We assisted him financially, and we had the value of his representation at Kamos, Utah.

Q. The $1500 differential, then, was paid by the representation of the proposed dealer there of the Standard products at that city, is that correct?

A. That would be part of the compensation, I would say, for the representation at that point of the station be built.

Mr. Dixon: Government's Exhibit 16 is offered in evidence.

[fol. 454] The Court: It was payment for the good will which was acquired by him in selling your products, is that right?

The Witness: Your Honor, we have cases similar to this, not many, where we attempt to give the dealer a stake in the business, trying to have him operate a business with some proprietorship and some pride of ownership, and in that way we have a proper representation. Here is an individual who perhaps did not have the funds to build the station. He wants to go in business, and the site is one we would desire from the standpoint of serving the public, and we assisted him financially, and rather than have him pay back the entire loan we perhaps negotiated this on the basis of a longer lease, better representation, in considering all the terms of the transaction. That $1500 was only one feature. There may have been other things that rounded out the transaction between the dealer and the company.

The Court: What I am trying to find out is what your consideration was for forgiving him $1500.

The Witness: These things I mentioned. We did not have representation at that point, where it might have cost us ten thousand or fifteen thousand dollars to build a station.

The Clerk: Is this admitted?

The Court: Admitted.

The Clerk: 16 in evidence.

By Mr. Dixon:

[fol. 455] I hand you what has been marked for identification Government's Exhibit 17, and ask you to examine that exhibit, Mr. McClanahan, and state whether or not you are familiar with the transaction referred to in this document.

A. I can't recall the instance when this came to my attention. That was three years ago. It apparently received my consideration, because I notice it is addressed to me, but I certainly can't say that I didn't see it, but I don't recall specifically this particular instance. I probably did.

Q. In other words, was that the type of example that you have occasion to consider frequently?

A. Not frequently. Very infrequently.

Q. By referring to that exhibit, Mr. McClanahan, can you state to the Court whether or not the difference between the item marked "Loan, $10,000," and the item marked "Repayment, 60 per cent over a period of five years, no interest," represents in fact a grant to the dealer executing any agreements made pursuant to that exhibit and arrangements, of approximately $4,000?

A. It's first of all a ten-year assurance; not five. The assured tenure is for 120 months. That is a ten-year period. And the total transaction, weighing the whole thing, and not just the payment of that one particular item, [fol. 456] but the value of the extended tenure at this particular point warranted in our opinion at that time a payment of only 60 per cent of the total loan, and the absorption we made can be looked upon as having value from the standpoint of representation, or even building a station at that particular point where we needed representation.

The Court: How was the amount absorbed handled? Was that profit and loss? I know you have nothing to do with accounting, but do you have any idea?

The Witness: I do not know. I can say, at the time there would be no motive in having it from an accounting standpoint at all. It was done primarily to negotiate the best arrangement we could with this particular dealer.

The Court: I did not ask as to the motive, but how it was reflected on the books of the corporation.

The Witness: I don't know.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. The $6,000 amount of the $10,000 amount involved there, which went to the dealer, was carried as a non-interest bearing loan, the amount thereof, namely, $6,000.00, being due from the independent dealer, who entered into that arrangement, Mr. McClanahan, is that correct?

A. It says so here, sir: no interest on the amount he was to return.

Q. It is a fact, is it not, that there were several other transactions of that type and character, in which loans [fol. 457] were made, the full balance of which was not repaid by the proposed dealer, and which loans were non-interest bearing in nature?

A. There would be very few non-interest bearing loans; very few; and the total number of loans, interest bearing or non-interest bearing, would amount to very few in number.

Q. Would the fact that it was an interest bearing or non-interest bearing loan depend upon your ability to make a deal with the proposed dealer on that basis?

A. Combined with the competitive activities at that time, which has a great influence on each one of these particular transactions.

Mr. Dixon: Thank you. We will offer Government's Exhibit——

Mr. Hall: Pardon me a minute. This exhibit that you have just offered in evidence, Exhibit 16, is not a complete document. The original of that was exhibited to you, and it had a second page. The photostat which has now been offered in evidence is minus the second page.

Mr. Dixon: We have no objection to it all going in. If counsel wants to put it in, all right. We have no objection.

Mr. Hall: It is not a complete document as it stands.

The Court: Let me look at it. I think while it is true that if a document is lengthy you may offer only a portion of it, when you are dealing with a memorandum, and the [fol. 458] memorandum consists of several pages, it is not customary to offer a part of it only.

Mr. Dixon: We have no objection to it going in.

The Court: What is the other one?

Mr. Hall: The other one is very informative.

The Court: Where is it?

Mr. Hall: I have a copy of it.

The Court: Give it to me.

Mr. Dixon: Substituted for this.

The Court: I will substitute that for the other.

Mr. Hall: I think the witness should be shown the second page of that document.

The Court: Yes, because it bears a signature. Will you put your stamp on this, Mr. Clerk?

Mr. Dixon: Have you finished with 17?

The Witness: I have.

Mr. Dixon: Government's Exhibit 17 is offered in evidence.

The Court: It may be received.

The Clerk: 17 in evidence.

The Court: He is merely giving the second page.

Mr. Hall: Let me have the first page.

The Court: He wants that, because he is giving you the second page.

Mr. Dixon: I think that is all of this witness, your [fols. 459-460] Honor. We offered, I think the record will show, Exhibit 17 in evidence, and it is in evidence.

The Court: All right. You may step down. You may tomorrow, if you desire to, examine your witness at the present time. It is perfectly all right. I always take the view that you have a right to examine him on cross-examination, if you want to do it at the present time rather than later, and sometimes it avoids repetition.

Mr. Hall: No, your Honor, I can wait until the morning.

The Court: I don't mean now, but do it tomorrow rather than defer it. You may call him back later on as your own witness. There is less opportunity of repetition if you do it while the testimony is fresh in your mind. You may want to have him amplify certain matters he has testified to, after you return. I take the view that when a witness has testified, that is evidence in the case, and while he was called by your adversary, you cannot later on recall him, and go over such material as to which he has already testified.

Mr. Hall: Yes. He can be called on another aspect of the case, I assume?

The Court: Oh, yes. We will take an adjournment until tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon, at 5:00 o'clock p. m., an adjournment was taken until Wednesday, May 5, 1948, at 10:00 o'clock a. m.)

7

[fols. 461-462] IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES IN AND FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

CENTRAL DIVISION

HONORABLE LEON R. YANKWICH, JUDGE PRESIDING

No. 6159-Y-Civil

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff,

vs.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA and STANDARD STATIONS, INC., Defendants.

REPORTERS' TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS

Los Angeles, California
Wednesday, May 5, 1948

APPEARANCES:

(As heretofore noted.)

[fol. 463] Los Angeles, California,
Wednesday, May 5, 1948—10:00 A. M.

The Court: Proceed.

ELLIS J. McCLANAHAN, a witness called by the plaintiff, having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Yesterday, Mr. McClanahan, you mentioned that gasoline from a refinery in Salt Lake City was distributed in Utah and in a part of Idaho. Do you recall that testimony?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if it is not a fact also that gasoline from Texas is distributed in the eastern area of Arizona?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, it is a fact, is it not, that the Standard Oil Company of California distributes for sale three grades of lubricating oil, namely, the RPM, the Standard Penn, and the Zerolene.

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. All of those oils are blended, are they not, either at the El Segundo refinery or at the Richmond refinery, [fol. 464] both refineries being in California?

A. Yes; I recall stating that yesterday, that we purchased the bright stock and the neutrals and blended them in either Richmond or El Segundo.

Q. The Seguro refinery, located in Bakersfield, does not manufacture lubricating oil, does it?

A. No, sir.

Q. It is true, is it not, that irrespective of the place where an ingredient of the lubricating oil may come from all the lubricating oil distributed by California in the seven western states is blended or processed or manufactured at either El Segundo or Richmond?

A. That is correct.

Q. The Standard Oil Company of California has a marine terminal located at Point Wells near Seattle, Washington, does it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is a fact, isn't it, that certain bulk stocks transported to that plant are barreled at that plant?

A. Yes; we barrel certain products at Point Wells or Richmond Beach.

Q. And among those things that are barreled is lubricating oil?

A. That is right; RPM, Standard Penn, and Zerolene.

Q. Standard Oil Company has also a plant located at [fol. 465] Willbridge, near Portland, Oregon, doesn't it?

A. That is right, sir.

Q. And there there is a barreling process goes on with respect to bulk stocks that come into that plant; isn't that true?

A. That is right, sir.

Q. Both Willbridge and Point Wells are marine terminals as well as storage plants and barreling plants, are they?

A. That is correct.

Q. Yesterday, in mentioning the location of, I believe you called them tire warehouses—another name sometimes used is "accessory warehouse", isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In mentioning the location of accessory warehouses, I think you neglected to mention Fresno. There is an accessory warehouse at Fresno, is there not?

A. Yes. I inadvertently overlooked Fresno. We do have an accessory warehouse at that point.

[fol. 466] Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 6, and the Item B thereof, and I read to you this portion of Item B:

> "Use of the Distributor Agreement (like or substantially similar to Form SS-130-E) preceded use of the Dealer Agreement TBA. Use of the Distributor Agreement was thereupon and thereafter discontinued."

And then the exhibit goes on to point out that as of March 12, 1947, a total of 556 Distributor Agreements were outstanding, and that as of the present time that number has been reduced to 232. Are those facts correct, according to your understanding?

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, the practice with respect to these distributor agreements in, say, September, 1944, just has not been a form that has been used by the company?

A. No, it was superseded by the dealer agreement.

Q. It was superseded by the dealer agreement, TBA?

A. That is correct.

Q. So wherever an occasion occurs for an agreement of that nature, dealer agreement TBA is now used?

A. That prevails, yes, sir.

Q. When tires, tubes and batteries, or other automotive accessories, come into an accessory warehouse, are they earmarked in any way for the dealer?

A. No, they are all either stacked or piled or ware-[fol. 467] housed together by grades and sizes, irrespective of their ultimate destination.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 16, and I call your attention to the second page of that exhibit, and to the first paragraph on that page. This page was not shown you, I think, yesterday. It was evidently inadvertently omitted when the Government introduced the first page. I will read you the first paragraph on page 2:

"Ordinarily we do not like to consider making a loan where full return of the principal is not received."

I will pause there, and ask you if that is the policy of the company, as stated in that sentence?

A. It is.

Q. And has been for a number of years?

A. Yes.

Q. I will continue with the paragraph reading:

"However, the Salt Lake District has advised that the Utah Oil & Refining Company, who at present do not have any representation at Kamas offered our proposed lessor, a week after our deal was tentatively concluded, $3,000 toward the construction of his service station and garage, with 100% absorption with no note or mortgage as security."

My question to you now is this: Was that circumstance, [fol. 468] as reported to you in this memorandum, a material influence prompting your acceptance or approval of this investment?

Mr. Dixon: I object to that, your Honor——

The Court: I think the vice of that question is "A material influence," because it brings in a speculative element. The question is whether there was any influence. Modified in that way, I will allow it to be answered.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. You have heard the last part of the paragraph which I have read to you, Mr. McClanahan.

A. I have.

Q. Was that circumstance that I have read to you concerning the Utah Oil & Refining Company a circumstance prompting your acceptance or approval of this investment?

Mr. Dixon: Same objection, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Dixon: On the ground that it is wholly immaterial.

The Court: If it is immaterial, then the entire inquiry is immaterial. Certainly, motive is important; otherwise, the fact that they paid a bonus, as it were, to acquire a particular site, does not mean anything.

Mr. Dixon: The position of the Government, as we have indicated previously, is that these agreements in themselves are illegal per se.

The Court: I understand that. I may say right now I don't agree with you, because it goes right in the teeth [fol. 469] of the case I read to you yesterday. You will have to show me later authorities which repudiate that doctrine in that case in 299 U. S., Pick case, which says specifically, that agreements, the object of which is merely to confine a person to one source of supply, are not per se violative of the Sherman or the other Act, but they may be so if they actually result in a substantial restriction on interstate commerce.

The mere fact that in itself it denotes that a man loaned money, and then forgave part of it, is not a violation of any law at all. You have a right to secure business, and pay for the privilege. In fact, the oil business is notorious for what is called overriding things, overriding costs, overriding royalties, and so forth. There is such competition among them that they resort to all sorts of practices in order to get business.

But we are not trying here the practices of the oil industry. We are trying here a simple question of whether this particular form of controversy is violative of the two statutes, and you have brought in this fact merely to show the working of the arrangement.

In itself there is absolutely nothing wrong for a man to pay a bonus to get something he wants, unless it is in violation of a law, such as fixing prices, and price control has been abandoned for several years, so that in peace times it [fol. 470] never has been a violation of law.

In view of that fact, if the fact of the loan is at all material, certainly the particular inquiry is material, just as the question I asked yesterday, and that is, as to the reasons which were behind the reduction of the loans.

Mr. Dixon: May I state to your Honor the position of the Government in this case is as I have pointed out previously, that in the context and use of these contracts, and the scope and extent to which they are used; as the evidence,

I believe, in part already indicates that in such use of this type of contract, which completely excludes all competition from these outlets, from other companies engaged in the same business as the defendants here, it is the contention of the Government that under those circumstances the contracts are illegal per se.

The Court: I understand your contention. But you don't want me to stop the lawsuit right now, and give you judgment on the basis of the direct examination of one of the witnesses, do you?

Mr. Dixon: No, your Honor. Our objection to this line of questioning, so the record may show it, is that the motive of the defendants in entering into this type of contract, so-called economic justification for it, is wholly immaterial.

The Court: I understand the phrase "economic [fol. 471] justification," but that is not the point at all. But remember this is a court of equity, and I am sitting here as a chancellor, and we exercise the power which the English chancellor has exercised for hundreds of years, except that by our Constitution and laws we take the chancellor powers as they existed at the time of the adoption of the Constitution, and from then on we are on our own, as it were, because our own courts have modified the rules.

In view of the scope of the relief asked in this case,—you are not asking me merely abstractly to say this is an illegal contract, and slap Standard Oil on the wrist, and say: Go along; don't do it any more. You are asking me to order them to sever their connections by getting rid of their properties. You are asking me to abridge the contracts they may have entered into for a lease of these properties, and the like.

When the scope of the question is so broad, then the background of the controversy is of the utmost importance to the chancellor, in determining the extent of the remedy. There is another very important reason, and that is this: Laches do not apply to the Government. If a private individual came into court and sought the aid of the court to evaluate a contract, the existence of which he knew, or should have known, and to cause the abandonment by an industrial group, or industrial organization, of the [fol. 472] practices which have been indulged in for many years, then the chancellor might ask the question: Why, knowing of this, didn't you proceed before this? And if satisfied that the laches existed, not actually from the delay of time, but from a change of position, the Court might deny relief.

[fol. 473] To illustrate, the other day in a case involving price control, where I found that for more than one year no action was brought, while I could not use the lapse of one year as a ground for denying injunctive relief to the Government, I denied the recovery or the reimbursement of the renters of the amount paid, upon the ground that the Statute of Limitations having run against the demand, that I would apply a similar limitation against the exercise of the equity power of ordering the reimbursement.

Now, that principle cannot apply in this case. No laches applies to the Government. You can, all of a sudden, make up your mind to come into court and ask that a practice existent for 20 years be abolished and nobody can say that you slept on your rights because the Government does not sleep on its rights and the Statute of Limitation does not run against the Government, nor does laches run against the Government. It is the old Latin nullen tempus occurrit regi. I think that is the way it goes. Just because that is the rule, then there should be a greater liberality in allowing the proof on the part of the defendant because, while the court, assuming that all the facts alleged in the complaint are proved, would not be justified in denying equity relief, the scope of the relief, being discretionary, might be affected by the motivation and the good faith which may appear from the record.

[fol. 474] To illustrate this, going back again to the prayer of your complaint, assuming that you are entitled to—well, I can't pick it out just offhand—assuming that you are entitled to an injunction which forbids the enforcement of any of these contracts, or may even ask them to divest themselves of ownership or as to those which have ownership, which I assume is implicit in the prayer and also in the general prayer——

Mr. Dixon: May I interrupt for a moment, your Honor, to state the Government's position on that point, that perhaps your Honor may have a wrong impression insofar as the Government's contention on that point is concerned.

Paragraph III of the prayer of the complaint asks the court not to declare these contracts or leases as void. We are asking the court to declare these particular provisions unenforcible as far as the defendants are concerned.

In other words, I gathered from your Honor's remarks that perhaps you felt the Government was asking the court in this case to declare void all of these leases, and so forth, that may be brought into this case, and some of which are the foundations under which these service station outlets are operated.

All the Government is asking, your Honor, is that these provisions in the contract of the type that we have [fol. 475] previously described and referred to be declared unenforcible; and there isn't any question here of any divestiture as far as the Government is concerned of any of the properties that may be involved in this case at all.

The Court: Well, all right. I am glad you called my attention to the limits of the prayer.

Mr. Dixon: And, of course, we are asking for the injunctive relief to prevent the entering into contracts which will contain the provisions complained of.

The Court: Notwithstanding that, what I have said still holds to the extent I have indicated, as modified by your statement.

To sum it up, I have made a rather lengthy statement merely because I feel, as you gentlemen know in all these lawsuits, that as each point arises at times it is helpful if we clarify our thoughts and discuss plainly and state the views on the particular question and the reason why a certain ruling is made.

I still say that in view of the facts I have indicated, the background of these loans should be gone into, because, if it is immaterial, then of course the entire inquiry is immaterial, because you would not have brought out the fact that one of the means of securing these agreements was, in effect, giving a bonus to these people by helping them if you had not thought it had some bearing. Now, if [fol. 476] it has any bearing, the reason why they did is also material. And that is also why I asked the questions I did yesterday and that is why Mr. Hall's questions today are in line with those questions.

With that, I will stop.

Mr. Dixon: I don't want to interrupt you, your Honor.

The Court: I am through. I am through. That will do me for the rest of the day. In the morning I always make a speech and then I am through for the rest of the day.

Mr. Dixon: I know it is helpful to counsel for the Government to get your Honor's views on these matters as they develop. I am just directing your Honor's attention to provision 33——.

The Court: I could cite authorities from your own memorandum. I haven't my points and authorities with me so that I can pull one out both for you and against you as occasion demands.

Mr. Dixon: This testimony that we are now referring to is introduced under paragraph 33 of the complaint to indicate some of the various means and methods whereby these contracts are secured and entered into.

The Court: Go ahead. All right; I have already said all I am going to say. Objection is overruled.

Mr. Hall: Do you want the question re-read, Mr. McClanahan?

[fol. 477] The Witness: If you please.

(Question read by the reporter as follows:

"Was that circumstance that I have read to you concerning the Utah Oil and Refining Company a circumstance prompting your acceptance or approval of this investment?")

A. It was.

Q. I note on this exhibit that we have been referring to, Government's Exhibit 16, and on the second page thereof the words "Okay E. J. McC". Are those your initials?

A. They are.

Q. Now, Mr. McClanahan, I invite your attention to Government's Exhibit No. 17 and to a paragraph at the bottom of the first page of the exhibit which I will read to you. Reading:

"Dealer has right to terminate company's present agreements by paying Company $3,206 (depreciated value of Company's existing investment) and has stated intention to do so if transaction is not approved. Texas Company has contacted dealer regarding establishing him as their wholesale distributor. (Texas Company does not now have bulk distribution plant in vicinity.)"

[fol. 478] Were the facts stated in that paragraph an inducement prompting your approval of this investment?

Mr. Dixon: I assume, your Honor, we have the same objection?

The Court: Yes. Overruled.

A. It was one of the primary inducements for approving that loan.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I will ask you one more question about the property that is referred to in Government's Exhibit 16. That, if I understand the situation correctly, was a case where a service station was about to be put in or erected?

A. That is right; at Kamas, Utah.

Q. Whereas, in the case of the property referred to in Government's Exhibit No. 17 that was a service station which had been selling products of Standard Oil Company of California for a number of years, wasn't it?

A. Yes. I think we have been serving this company for something like seven or eight years, 14 years, in fact.

Q. In the parlance of the oil business a "split pump account" is an account which handles the products of more than one supplier, isn't it?

A. That is right, sir.

Q. The term would be applied to a gasoline service station that had the pumps of more than one company purvey[fol. 479] ing gasoline, wouldn't it?

A. That is correct.

Q. Yesterday reference was made to open accounts and I believe an exhibit in evidence shows that in March of 1947 there were 742 of those open accounts to which your company sold gasoline. Do you recall that testimony?

A. I don't recall that particular number. It was approximately that amount, as I remember it.

Q. It is true, isn't it, that the dealer operating under one of those open accounts would be perfectly free to tell Standard Oil Company at any time to pull out its pumps so that he could put in the pumps of some other supply company; isn't that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. And that has always been the case with those open accounts, hasn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. I think yesterday, in your testimony, you said that in the case of these open accounts Standard Oil Company of California would not sell its gasoline to one of those open accounts if the account handled was a split pump account.

A. That is right.

Q. That is correct. What are the policy reasons which underlie Standard's practice not to sell to split [fol. 480] pump accounts?

Mr. Dixon: Objection to that question, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

A. We have felt as a result of many years' experience that the so-called split pump account is not a good account for us to serve in the public's interest. Experience has proven that they tend to misrepresent the products to the trade. Oftentimes they sell a gasoline out of one pump that the customer may think he is buying from another, creating what we call substitution. We have known of many instances where they have transferred the products from an underground tank to another tank, where it is sold under another brand, because of some temporary compensation that they might get from that particular supplier.

We know from cost studies that it costs us on an average from a cent to a cent and a half a gallon more to serve a split pump account with a multitude of pumps, because of the uncertainties of deliveries, the uncertainty of quantities and the constant sales followup that is required to maintain representation with that account.

We also know through experience of it that the dealers themselves are not favorable to dividing their interests with suppliers, for two basic fundamental reasons: They haven't the merchandising support from the supplier like they would have if that supplier knew that they were [fol. 481] constantly selling his product; and secondly, they haven't an assurance of supply. There is no obligation on the part of the supplier to continue supplying a split pump account such as there is on a long term, secured tenure arrangement with what we call a 100 per cent account. That is, generally, the reason why split accounts have to a great extent ceased to exist.

Does that answer it?

Mr. Hall: You may take the witness.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Mr. McClanahan, you said that the single pump or the split pump operator does not get the support of the supplier. What do you mean by that?

A. Well, in the first place, he carries what we term a neutral color scheme and his place of business is not identifiable by the mobile buying public such as it would be if he represented the advertised products of a supplier. It is difficult for a buyer to single out the particular product that he wants. That is one phase of it.

Q. Is not the operator of this single pump or split pump station supposed to be an independent businessman?

A. That is right.

Q. Operating on his own?

A. That is right.

[fol. 482] Q. Does the Standard Oil Company have any investment in that business apart from delivery of gasoline to that outlet?

A. None whatsoever.

Q. So that it has no financial interest whatever in the manner or method whereby the operator of that pump, a single pump, sells the product, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And at any time, as you have suggested, either party may terminate the arrangement, cease selling to that outlet or the dealer cease selling your product?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. Are you referring to open accounts, counsel?

Mr. Dixon: Yes; that is what we are talking about.

Mr. Hall: The witness' testimony has not been directed to open accounts.

Mr. Dixon: The latter part of his testimony, as I understood it, was particularly directed to why Standard Oil Company did not, as a matter of policy, desire to sell and would not, in fact, sell the split pump account, counsel.

Mr. Hall: All right. You and I disagree, but we will go ahead. I did not mean to interrupt you.

[fol. 483] By Mr. Dixon:

Q. So you say the reason that the Standard Oil Company will not sell a split pump account is because they feel, that is, the Standard Oil Company feels that it is not in the interest of the dealer himself, is that correct?

A. No. I stated not in the interests of the public.

Q. Just where is the public affected, provided the Standard Oil Company can sell gasoline to such an outlet and gets paid for its products?

A. I think I outlined that in answer to the other question, that we have experienced substitution, adulteration and misrepresentation of our products from the time it is put in the tank of the dealer until it reaches the consuming tank of the public, accompanied by indifferent service.

Q. If the Standard Oil delivers the gasoline to a dealer with one or two different pumps does it all go in the same tank?

A. No.

Q. What opportunity, then, is there of any fraud on the public if that gasoline comes out of the tank and goes into the pump bearing the label of the Standard Oil Company?

A. It does not always work that way, Mr. Dixon. Have you ever purchased a gasoline from a split pump account?

Q. I know that I have seen practically no split pump accounts in existence, and I don't believe there have been [fol. 484] any that I have noticed for sometime.

A. That is right. They are not popular.

Q. That is why I am directing my inquiry as to why the Standard Oil Company, which apparently, as you have indicated, has a policy of not selling such accounts, does not want to carry a split pump station or operate a split pump station.

A. I endeavored to outline the reasons in answer to that a short time ago. I might emphasize them again; that is not a permanent arrangement; it is not an economical manner of distribution and we——

Q. Well, let me ask you about that, Mr. McClanahan.

Mr. Hall: Let him finish his answer before you interrupt him.

The Court: Let him finish his answer.

Mr. Dixon: Go ahead.

A. That there is that possibility that we know has existed in the past of misrepresentation of our products so that the ultimate consumer, in many instances, from our previous experience, just did not receive our product.

Q. How long has the Standard Oil Company had this policy of not selling to split pumps?

A. Around '38 or '39. I believe that is the year. It may vary one or two years.

Q. How many split pump accounts, if you know, did you [fol. 485] have before that time?

A. Well, there was a transition from split pump business to representing the company entirely in previous years, and through practice that diminished. I can't recall the exact amount in 1938 or 1939, but there were not very many. It was a process of eliminating themselves.

Q. Was that because the dealers who wanted split pumps could not get them from your company or perhaps some of the other companies, if you know?

A. No; because dealers generally did not want to merchandise in that manner. It was not a sound policy for them.

Q. For the reason, you say, that the dealers decided themselves that they did not want to carry two types of gasoline and that was why the company adopted the policy? Was that one of the reasons?

A. That was one of the reasons, and the better dealers felt that way about it.

Q. But if a dealer honestly wanted to carry a split pump account and was a person of integrity and honesty the Standard Oil Company would still not sell that dealer if he carried a split pump at his station; is that a fact, Mr. McClanahan?

A. That is right.

Q. You mentioned the possibility of fraud on the [fol. 486] public as further justification for that. Can you tell this court what actual difference there is between the various regular grades of gasoline that are distributed in the market today under various brand labels?

A. I am not a technical man, Mr. Dixon. All gasolines being sold today will propel an automobile. There are certain advantages in grade that we feel have values noticeable to the public.

Q. Let us discuss for a moment this so-called regular type of gasoline.

A. Well, that is what we call a regular type of gasoline, applies to all manufacturers. They all make a regular type.

Q. And it is substantially the same octane rating, is it not?

A. No. The octanes differ considerably between one grade and another.

Q. I am talking now about regular gasoline.

A. I am talking about the second brand regular gasoline.

Q. I am not talking about the third run of gasoline.

A. The first grade, we are not talking about the first grade. That is the high octane?

Q. No, sir.

A. The regular grade.

[fol. 487] Q. What is the substantial difference, if any, between the so-called regular grades of gasoline that are sold in the market at retail outlets today?

A. The differences mainly that are noticeable to the motorist through feel would be quick starting or quick acceleration, and those are the two things that are perceptible to the motorist. Then——

Q. That depends somewhat on——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. Let him finish, please.

A. Then there is a dilution that takes place of an inferior grade that is injurious to the motor. The end points are high and it does not totally combust, and in the winter time when you do need a quick starting fuel an end grade would be quite noticeable and injurious to the motorist and worth less money.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. What difference, if any, is there in the octane rating, if you know, of grades between the regular brands of gasoline on the market today?

A. I would say there is a range of between 67 and 73 or 74, probably 7 degrees or 7 octanes.

Q. What difference from an octane grading point of view is there between Standard gas and, we will say, Shell gas—regular gas I am talking about now?

The Witness: Do I have to answer that?

The Court: Yes.

[fol. 488] A. Shell makes a good gasoline.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. I asked what the difference is between the octane rating, if any.

A. Well, between the Shell and our own gasoline, our second grade, there would be very little difference, if any.

Q. What difference is there between Standard and Mobil gas, if any, regular gas, if any?

A. They may vary with the season of the year.

Q. At the same time of the year, Mr. McClanahan.

A. The same time of the year?

Q. Yes.

A. There could be some difference in favor of Mobilgas in some respects. It might be favorable to us. There are several elements that make up a gasoline. Octane is just one and——.

Q. Is there any——

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. Let him finish his answer.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Is there any substantial difference, Mr. McClanahan, in the two gases?

A. There could be.

Q. Now, what would that substantial difference be between Mobilgas and Standard gas at the same time and of the same grade?

A. We have what we call a tailored gasoline to meet the requirements of the climates on the Pacific coast. We [fol. 489] send the winter grade to Seattle with a certain starting feature. We have another grade for Spokane, and there are about 10 different sections on the coast and we place those gasolines in those areas to meet the climatic requirements in those areas. We think, as far as our knowledge is concerned, that we are the only company who climatically tailor-makes their gasoline. We think that is a difference in favor of quality and it is of benefit to the motorist.

Q. Is that part of the advertising program of Standard up in those areas as against Mobilgas?

A. That has been used extensively.

Q. And Shell gas?

A. It has been.

Q. What results, if any, have you had from the Shell and Mobilgas or any of other companies selling there with reference to that?

A. Well, our sales have responded favorably to the quality advertising back of that particular feature.

Q. It is a fact, is it not, Mr. McClanahan, that there are various exchange agreements covering regular grades of gasoline between the various companies engaged in this business of distributing regular gasoline to the consuming motorist?

A. That is right; there have been and still are.

Q. So that it is a fact, is it not, that gasoline coming from the Standard refineries may, by exchange pro-
[fol. 490] visions, actually wind up in a pump of any other company selling gasoline under a different label in the immediate area in which the company is selling that gasoline, is that not a fact?

A. Not quite. It might find its way into some one other company's tanks who happened to be exchanging at that time. There is quite a difference between our gasoline finding its way into their tanks and their gasoline in payment to our exchange finding its way into our tanks. We sometimes do not accept the quality that is offered to us, quite frequently.

[fol. 491] Q. Following that, my question, Mr. McClanahan, is, if the Standard Oil Company refines gasoline in its California refineries, that is Standard Oil gasoline, isn't it?

A. That's right, Chevron gasoline.

Q. Or Chevron gasoline, and by these exchange agreements may that gasoline ultimately come into the account of a company selling Mobil gas?

A. I can't recall exchange with them that has happened or might happen.

Q. Do you know, when this gasoline is exchanged from your refineries with another company retailing regular gasoline to the public, where that gasoline goes after it has been turned over to the company with whom it has been exchanged?

A. Not precisely.

Q. So it is a fact, is it not, that under this exchange arrangement that the Standard Oil gasoline may in fact ultimately find its way into the pump of another company selling retail gasoline to the public, under a different trade name?

A. That could happen.

Q. You think, then, that would be all right? I mean, you don't think that they would be doing what you said of the operator who was running a plant of his own, or an outlet of his own, and wanted to sell two different kinds of [fol. 492] gasoline, and have two different pumps in his outlet? You think that would be all right, do you?

A. I don't think I understand your question, Mr. Dixon.

Q. Withdraw the question. As I understood your position, Mr. McClanahan, you said one of the reasons why the Standard Oil Company would not sell a split pump account was because you felt that the public might be hurt by having Standard gasoline go into the pump of the other company at that outlet, is that correct?

A. Standard gasoline would not go into the pump of the other company, but their gasoline might go into our pump. That is what I object to.

Q. How do you know the converse would not be true?

A. They might have a bad quality of gasoline, and our gasoline is unquestioned, so far as the motorist is concerned.

Q. If that dealer is likely to do that, is he going to distinguish between Standard gas, and the other gas at that pump, if he is going to do that sort of thing?

A. Probably not.

Q. You think that is wrong,—that chance to defraud the public, that is wrong, and on that basis Standard does not sell to a split pump account?

A. Mr. Dixon, we have had accounts, where we have had [fol. 493] the trademark and the color in the pump, and the account has sold gasoline from that pump for six months, and we haven't delivered a gallon of gasoline to the dealer in six months, but the meters on that pump showed a tremendous output. Our gasoline is accepted, and has a certain acceptability, and is a drawing card to bring people into the station, but they do not get our gasoline.

Q. Suppose some of this exchange gasoline found its way into these outlets and into a different pump?

A. It would not find its way into our pump. You are speaking about gasoline we take from someone else that we exchange with?

Q. The gasoline that the Standard turns over to somebody else, which ultimately finds its way into the retail outlets.

A. No, I don't think we would exchange with people who would do that.

Q. It is a fact, is it, as you stated a short time ago, that you do not follow the gasoline that is exchanged, to know whether or not that could happen?

A. Practically it doesn't, Mr. Dixon. If we——

Q. But you don't know——

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. Let the witness complete his answer.

A. In connection with an exchange, we may pay a [fol. 494] certain company a certain quantity, paying back, you might say, gasoline we borrowed from them. We would not loan to a company, or borrow from a company we thought would take that gasoline and put it into our tank at a resale account.

Q. In other words, you determine with whom you are to make your exchange agreement, is that correct?

A. That is correct. We are not exclusive, in that we deal with people that have integrity.

Q. Now, Mr. McClanahan, I direct your attention to this Government's Exhibit 16. You will note the proposition of the Utah Oil & Refining Company, according to this memorandum, Government's Exhibit 16, contemplated this party getting $3,000 from the Utah Refining Company to go ahead with its proposal, as outlined in this exhibit, is that correct?

A. Yes, it so indicates here that the competitor offered $3,000.

Q. And Standard only had to put up half of that amount, or $1500, is that correct?

A. No.

Q. I mean that you did not get back?

A. That's right. We put up $4,000.

Q. Yes, you put up $4,000, and got back $2500, so there was an actual $1500 there that your company did not get back in this transaction, is that correct?

A. That is not correct.

[fol. 495] A. No, that is not correct.

Q. I am talking now about the money that you gave them, or that is referred to in this transaction; that was never actually repaid, was it?

A. No.

Q. That is the point I am making.

A. With this amplification, Mr. Dixon. There were certain advantages that we gained of value to us, that more than offset the $1500 absorption, by the greater tenure, and an outlet in a community where we did not have representation, and where it would have cost perhaps more to build a station of our own.

Q. That $1500 was charged off to what, the general operating expenses of the company? How would that be handled, do you know?

A. No.

The Court: He said yesterday that he did not.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Do I understand then this letter, Government's Exhibit 16, to mean that $3,000 would have gone to the party involved here rather than the $1500 that he ultimately got from Standard, according to that exhibit?

A. Do you mean he would have obtained $3,000 from the competitor as against our $1500?

Q. That's right.

A. That is quite right, and he possibly would not pay [fol. 496] any of the $3,000 back, I don't know.

Q. Then what do you understand by this Exhibit 16, when it refers to the fact that the $3000 therein was to go to this party from the Utah Oil & Refining Company?

A. As this was presented to me, and as I review it now, we were trying to gain representation at Kamas, and apparently the Utah Refining Company were trying to do the same thing with the same prospective operator.

Q. Was there a station already built at this property, or not?

A. I don't think so, because it says: "toward construction." I presume it was built subsequent to the financial arrangements he had to make. He probably used some of this money to build the station. That is the usual way it occurs. So he was perhaps dealing with the Utah Oil, or they were soliciting his representation. Our people were doing the same thing.

Where competition exists of that nature, certain agreements are arrived at which we think are the result of competitive negotiations with the account. As I mentioned yesterday, we evaluate all features, the investment, the building of the station, the representation at that point, where we do not have any, so that our interests will be available. You will notice here it says that this person has resided at Kamas for 31 years, and is a skilled me-[fol. 497] chanic. He is the kind of individual we like to have associated with us, and assist them, and they make good merchants for the company.

Q. From the document, Exhibit 16, does it appear to you that Standard Oil Company was getting this station in fact by putting up $1500 in the manner disclosed, as against $3,000 offered by the Utah Oil & Refining Company?

A. That's the way it appears to me.

Q. And it was on that basis that you approved this arrangement, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you testified, Mr. McClanahan, that the distributor agreements were rapidly going out of use by the company. There are still some of them that are in use, are there not?

A. I believe that figure is around 252 remaining.

Q. And the dealer holding a distributor agreement, so-called, as that agreement terminates, do you sign him up on the TBA agreement? Is that the policy of the company?

A. That is correct.

Q. So, whereas the distributor agreements may be gradually eliminated as they terminate, they are supplanted by the dealer TBA agreement?

A. That is correct.

Q. That is correct, isn't it?

[fol. 498] A. Yes, sir

Q. The net result of that transaction is that Utah, mentioned in Government's Exhibit 16,—the result was that that potential competitor, the Utah Refining Oil Company, at that outlet, was eliminated, isn't that true?

A. The existing competition. That competition existed at the time we were negotiating with this individual. It actually existed.

Q. Were they operating a station at that time?

A. No, but they were apparently vigorously bidding for representation. We were having, therefore, potential competition. It was the immediate situation that caused us to make the arrangements that we did.

Q. Do you know whether they have representation there at the present time, the Utah Oil & Refining Company, in that city?

A. No, I do not, sir.

Q. I believe you testified also that it was the policy of the company not to make loans unless they got the full amount of the money back that was put up.

A. That is correct.

Q. It is a fact, however, that such loans were made, isn't it, Mr. McClanahan, in which the Standard did not get the full amount of its loan back?

A. I think half of the loans that we ever made were [fol. 499] discussed here today. I think they will total three or four.

Q. It is a fact that those loans, so-called, were made in the various States in which Standard does business, isn't it?

A. I am not acquainted with the other two, Mr. Dixon, but it so happens, I believe, that one is at Hermiston, Oregon, and the other Utah. I don't know where the other two were.

Mr. Dixon: I think that is all.

Recross Examination

By Mr. Hall:

Q. It might be true, might it not, Mr. McClanahan, that when the term of the distributor agreement expired that the Standard Oil Company would not have a chance to replace them with an agreement TBA, because some competitor would come in and sign up that particular dealer?

A. That is quite right, and it has happened.

Q. Those cases have occurred, haven't they?

A. Yes.

The Court: The answer was obvious.
Mr. Hall: That is all.

(Short recess.)

Mr. Hall: May I recall Mr. McClanahan?
The Court: All right.

[fol. 500] Recross Examination (Continued)

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Will you tell us to what extent Standard checks the quality of gasoline which it receives, as the result of an exchange?

A. We have a very rigid procedure that we follow before we accept in kind products that we exchange with other companies, and in many cases we won't accept the product that they offer in exchange for a similar product that we loan to them, for a reason that we think we were justified in, that we would be selling the product under our brand, that we have advertised extensively from a quality standpoint, and the source of the product differs many times from that standpoint. We have had instances recently where we have loaned our first grade gasoline, which contains only 1 cc of lead, and we were offered gasoline containing 3 cc's of lead, which we would not accept. We have had other cases,—a recent one where a major company gasoline has been offered us in payment for gasoline we have loaned to them, which would be high in sulphur, which did not meet our specifications, and we just won't accept the gasoline.

In some cases we have accepted a product from other companies, below our product, and we have re-run these products in our refinery to bring them up to our specifications; and in cases of that kind they usually pay us for [fol. 501] the additional processing.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Would you care to name the companies, Mr. McClanahan, with whom you exchange gasoline, which was not satisfactory to Standard?

A. I would prefer not to. I think the record can be obtained, that would show that, if it is material.

Q. I won't press the question.

The Witness: I do it primarily from the standpoint of the competitors' interests. I can substantiate my statement.

The Court: May I ask you this question: You talked about various grades of gasoline. Do you sell grades of gasoline to others, without insisting that they sell it under your brand?

The Witness: That is a good question. We do. There is a provision in the State of California which permits us to grant a rebranding license, or permits the taking of our gasoline, and rebranding it under their trademark name; but they have to register that trademark with us, and they can only sell it under the designated name prescribed in the permit, and they can only do it by written consent from us, where agreeable to both parties.

The Court: Do you also sell that brand of gasoline under [fol. 502] your own?

A. No. Can I cite an instance?

The Court: Yes.

The Witness: Let us take, for instance, Petrol. We supply Petrol with gasoline, and they have a brand name called, I think, PDQ, so we permit the Petrol Corporation to take our gasoline and sell it under the brand PDQ, so marked on the pumps, PDQ. But we would not sell PDQ.

The Court: What is the difference between that gasoline and yours? Is it of a lower octane, or what?

The Witness: Not necessarily. It could be. Our supply contracts with people that rebrand varies some, so it gives us quite a little latitude on quality, where we can give them a product that will meet their requirements from a specification standpoint, but not necessarily meet ours. In some cases they are identical, but not always.

The Court: Is that practice general?

The Witness: I think so.

The Court: And it has been for some years?

The Witness: Yes.

The Court: It does not apply to Petrol alone?

The Witness: No, it applies to Signal and other companies.

The Court: I do not wish to disclose secrets. I happened to try, when I was on the Superior Court, a case involving [fol. 503] Signal, and I there learned they were securing gasoline before selling it themselves. I could not bring that out in any other way, except asking you to see if that applies, and it becomes germane because of your statement of your insistence that a particular brand be handled under certain conditions, and not mixed with others.

The Witness: That is correct.

The Court: That reemphasizes what you have said, and that is that your product be sold as such product, and that there be no substitution of another which is not of that quality, and you apply that even to exchanges?

The Witness: That's right.

The Court: All right. Anything further?

Mr. Hall: Nothing further.

Mr. Dixon: No further questions.

The Court: All right, gentlemen, that concludes the examination of the witness and I think we will take our regular adjournment until 2:00 o'clock.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock p. m. of the same day.)

[fol. 504] Los Angeles, California, Wednesday, May 5, 1948—2:00 P. M.

Mr. Hall: There are three exhibits in evidence, your Honor, Exhibits 1, 3, and 4, which are forms of agreement. At the end of each agreement it appears by a note at the bottom of the page the form is for use in the States of California, Arizona, Nevada, Oregon, and Washington. There were forms of the same agreement for use in the States of Idaho and Utah. And I am making this statement with Mr. Dixon's permission for the record. The only difference in the forms for use in the States of Idaho and Utah as distinguished from the forms in evidence is that in the forms for use in the States of Idaho and Utah the language in paragraph 3 of Exhibit 1 "and shall not be sold, or offered for sale at prices lower than Company's authorized retail prices therefor at time and place of sale" is eliminated in the Idaho and Utah forms.

Now, there is a similar elimination in paragraph 4 of the Idaho and Utah form corresponding to Exhibit 4, and a similar elimination in the Idaho and Utah form corresponding to Exhibit 3?

Mr. Dixon: The Government offers into evidence Exhibits 16-A through -F, inclusive, the same being the documents relating to proposal contained in Exhibit 16.

The Clerk: Shouldn't the record show these are marked [fol. 505] for identification?

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

The Court: They may be received.

The Clerk: Are they received, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hall: Before your Honor rules may I have a general objection running to the documents which counsel is now offering on the grounds that they are irrelevant and immaterial. I am not objecting on the ground of authenticity.

The Court: Which form is this? This is not any of the five original forms; is it?

Mr. Dixon: I beg your pardon, sir?

The Court: This is not any of the five forms?

Mr. Dixon: Yes, your Honor. May I say that the purpose of offering these exhibits is so that the court and the record will have before it all of the papers which relate to the transaction described in that Exhibit 16. And these documents show, which are from the Standard files—show the execution of the contracts and the contracts involved on that property which contain the provisions under issue in this case.

I might say also that there are some other documents in the file there that are of a character which tend to explain the transaction generally, and the Government felt that all of the documents that were in Standard's files [fol. 506] should be put in.

The Court: You offer this as a typical transaction?

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

The Court: Let's see; is Utah in this?

Mr. Dixon: Oh, yes, your Honor. Yes.

The Court: I had forgotten Utah merely because the contracts did not mention Utah.

Mr. Dixon: Yes. The states involved are——

The Court: Yes, all right. That is all right. The objection will be overruled and they may be received as Exhibits 16-A to -F.

The Clerk: These are also marked for identification before being offered.

Mr. Dixon: The Government asks that Exhibits 17-A to -I be marked for identification, the same being papers and documents relating to the transaction referred to in Exhibit 17, and ask that they be admitted into evidence.

Mr. Hall: Defendants object to the offer on the grounds that the documents are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Let me look at those. This is a form of TBA contract?

Mr. Dixon: That is right, your Honor.

The Court: All right. The objection is overruled and the group may be received as 17-A to -I, inclusive.

Mr. Dixon: The Government offers for marking and for [fol. 507] identification Exhibits 18 to 18-D, inclusive.

Mr. Hall: Defendants object to the offer on the grounds that the documents and each of them are irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Dixon: Said documents are marked for identification, relating to the proposition covering property in the State of California and the City of Los Angeles. The documents are marked for identification purposes and I offer it into evidence.

[fol. 508] The Clerk: Is that admitted, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

The Clerk: 18 in evidence, and 18-A to E, inclusive, admitted in evidence.

Mr. Dixon: The Government asks that exhibits be marked No. 19, and 19-A to 19-F, for identification, the same being a transaction comparable to transactions described in Exhibits 16, 17 and 18, in the City of Spokane, Washington.

Mr. Hall: The defendants object to these documents, and to each of them, upon the ground that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Dixon: And the Government offers the same in evidence.

The Court: These are some of the papers Mr. McClanahan was examined on?

Mr. Dixon: No, he was not examined with reference to these particular transactions, your Honor. Just the first two.

The Court: This was the one we were talking about yesterday, where there was an objection that only the first page was introduced?

Mr. Dixon: No, your Honor, this is an entirely different matter. That was 16, as I recall it.

The Court: Objection overruled. They may be received as 19, and 19-A to F, inclusive.

Mr. Dixon: The Government asks that Exhibits No. 20 [fol. 509] and 20-A to G, inclusive, be marked for identification, the same being a comparable transaction in the City of Parma, Idaho.

Mr. Hall: We don't accept the characterization, your Honor.

Mr. Dixon: That's right.

Mr. Hall: We object to each of the documents.

The Court: We will receive them without characterization.

Mr. Hall: We object upon the ground that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Dixon: The only purpose of the characterization was to identify the exhibit for the record; that was all.

The Clerk: 20 marked for identification, in evidence, and 20-A to G, inclusive, marked for identification, in evidence.

Mr. Dixon: The Government asks that Exhibits No. 20 and 21-A through H, inclusive, be marked for identification, the same being transactions in San Pedro, California.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Dixon: The Government offers in evidence Exhibits 21 and 21-A through H, inclusive.

Mr. Hall: Is that the one I just looked at?

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

Mr. Hall: The defendants object to these documents, [fol. 510] and each of them, upon the ground that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Objection overruled, and the documents will be received as 21 and 21-A to H, inclusive.

The Clerk: 21 and 21-A to H, inclusive, marked for identification and admitted in evidence.

Mr. Dixon: The Government now calls Mr. E. D. Thompson, general manager of Dealers Sales for the defendant Standard Oil Company, under Rule 43 (b).

ERSKIN D. THOMPSON, called as a witness by the Government under Rule 43 (b), being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name?

The Witness: Erskin D. Thompson.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. What is your address, Mr. Thompson?

A. Oakland, California.

Q. By whom are you employed?

A. Standard Oil Company.

Q. What is your position or office with that company?

A. General manager of Dealers Sales.

Q. How long have you been with the company, Mr. Thompson?

A. Thirty-two years in January.

[fol. 511] Q. How long have you held your present office or position?

A. Since the 1st of June, 1944.

Q. What positions did you occupy with the company prior to that time?

A. I started as a service station operator in Seattle, in 1916. In 1918 I was assistant special agent on a tanker in Alaska. Later that year, special agent at Duwamish, Washington and about three years later, special agent at Whittier, California; then Anaheim, California; and in 1923 I went to Oakland as City Sales Superintendent. About four years later, to Seattle, in the same capacity. In 1928, to Fresno, California, as assistant District Manager. In 1931, to the home office of Standard Stations, Inc. In 1932 I went in as assistant manager of the sales development and advertising department. Later I became manager. In the fall of 1943 I spent a few months as assistant general sales manager, and in June, 1944 was established in my present position.

Q. In your position and work with the Standard during the latter part of the twenties, that is, that period from 1920 to 1930, did you have occasion to become familiar with the types of agreements used by the company at that time, insofar as the sale of petroleum products by Standard dealers was concerned?

A. In a general way, yes. I was in an administrative [fol. 512] position, and did not actually negotiate the contracts, but I know generally, as far back as my recollection goes.

Q. In that position, Mr. Thompson, did you at any time have occasion to examine or look at the requirement of agreements used by the company in dealing with the dealer outlets?

A. I would say yes, but, as I say, in a more or less superficial way. My recollection isn't too good that far back.

Q. Were you familiar with the form of subleases in use between the company and dealers selling products at that time through retail outlets?

A. Yes, generally.

Q. I will hand you what is marked Government's Exhibit 5, and ask you to refer to Paragraph IV, contained on said exhibit and state, if you can, whether a provision in substantially the same language as that was used in the leases you had occasion to become familiar with, or were familiar with in the later '20's?

Mr. Dixon: I subpoenaed——

Mr. Hall: That is objected to as calling for evidence that is not the best evidence; no proper foundation laid; and incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Did you start to say something, that you subpoenaed——

Mr. Dixon: I started to say we quite agree that this is [fol. 513] not the best evidence. This is a Standard official, Standard employee for many years, and we are merely trying to expedite the trial by asking the question.

The Court: Let us have the question.

(Question read by the reporter.)

[fol. 514] The Court: Overruled. Go ahead.

The Witness: I am just reading the paragraph, your Honor.

A. I would say that the later '20's, that a paragraph similar to this—I don't know how far back that would go, but I would say in the very late '20's the form would have been very similar to this.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Mr. Thompson, are you familiar from your position and experience with the company with the type of agreements which were used by Standard in the '30's with reference to distributing petroleum products to retail outlets and dealers?

A. I was familiar in the years '31 and '32, and have general knowledge of the type of agreements that existed subsequent to that date. However, as my testimony shows, I was out of that activity a portion of that period.

Q. Can you state from your experience and service with the company what that type of arrangement was, generally speaking?

A. Starting in the early 30's?

Q. Yes.

A. In the early 30's our business was handled primarily on leases and agency agreements, and agency agreements without leases. In 1934, I believe it was, that the distributor type of agreement was introduced in conjunction with it——

[fol. 515] Q. May I interrupt you to ask you whether the distributor type of agreement you have just referred to is what is called Government's Exhibit 2?

A. That is correct as to general form. That may not have been the form in use in 1934. Then in——

Q. Go ahead.

A. Then in 1938 the agency agreements were superseded by a dealer agreement, and in 1944——

Q. May I interrupt you there, again? By dealer agreement do you mean the type of agreement described as Government's Exhibit 1?

A. It was substantially the same. The print date on this is later, but they would be approximately the same.

Q. Can you state to the court the reason for the dispensing with the use of the agency arrangement or——

Mr. Hall: I do not think he had finished his previous answer, Mr. Dixon.

Mr. Dixon: I am sorry. Go ahead.

The Witness: Did you wish me to finish that history?

Mr. Dixon: Yes; go ahead by all means. Pardon me for the interruption.

A. In 1944 the distributor agreement was replaced by a dealer TBA agreement.

Q. That is what is called Government's Exhibit 4?

A. That is correct. And at that time a further type [fol. 516] of agreement known as "Petroleum Products and Equipment Lease" was introduced.

Q. That is what we call Government's Exhibit 3?

A. That is correct.

Q. Had you finished?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And now, can you state to the court, Mr. Thompson, if you know, what the reason was for discontinuing the use of the lease and agency arrangement?

A. In 1938 or thereabouts?

Q. Yes. Was that when it was discontinued?

A. My testimony indicated that, I believe it was in 1938, 1937 or 1938, when that was discontinued; and while I was not directly connected with this type of work at that time, the documents show that there were some changes in the corporate structure at that time or agreements. The agency agreements prior to that date had been between the dealer and Standard Stations, and at that time the agreements, due to some corporate change with which I am not familiar —the agreements were between Standard Oil Company, still administered and still negotiated by Standard Stations, but the agreements were between Standard Oil Company and the dealer, which would be the only reason that I would know for changing the agreements; and in the general change it is evident that they changed the titles.

[fol. 517] Q. What control, if any, if you know, did the company exercise over the agent under the agency agreement?

A. No control whatever other than our general interest in his operation.

Q. In other words, he was, as far as the company was concerned, an independent businessman, shall we say?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Hall: You are asking about the agency?

Mr. Dixon: That is correct.

The Witness: And I am speaking of our policy of handling the account from a practical standpoint.

Q. Now, Mr. Thompson, in your capacity as general manager of dealer sales you are in contact, are you, with the salesmen who sell the products, petroleum products of the company?

A. Not directly, except in isolated cases. The salesmen operate out of our district offices and branch offices.

Q. From your position with the company can you state to the court whether any customers of the dealer stations by "dealer stations" I mean those now operating under the type of agreement described in Government's Exhibits 4, 2, and 1.

Mr. Hall: You had better show him the documents.

The Witness: May I see those, please?

[fol. 518] Mr. Dixon: You bet.

Q. —came into the retail outlets you operated by dealers working under those contracts and requested oils for lubricating oils other than those distributed or handled by Standard Oil Company?

A. Our promotional efforts, of course, are directed at both our brands of lubricating oil and gasoline; and I would say that for the most part—in fact in practically all instances, consumers, motorists who buy our gasoline would be also buying our lubricating oil. There are undoubtedly occasions where preferences for other lubricating oils exist, and in those cases, our dealers stock other oils, competitive oils, dealers under these agreements.

Q. Do you mean that the dealers who express either to the company or to some representative of the company that the customers wanted lubricating oil better than those handled or distributed to them by Standard were given the privilege under those agreements of handling those oils?

A. In a few instances that privilege was granted formally. However, in most cases the dealer just ordered and stocked the competitive oils without any understanding had with our company.

Q. Do you mean he ordered and stocked them in spite of the provisions in the contract which limit the stocking and handling of petroleum oils other than those from [fol. 519] Standard in the premises at which the agent was operating?

A. I am talking about the matter of practice in administering our business under the contracts, but not the terms of the contract. I presume that the dealer would proceed in his own best interests, regardless.

Q. Well, handing you Government's Exhibit 2 and directing your attention to a provision therein which has the marginal note "Quantity", I will ask you whether or not under such circumstances that provision of the contract was complied with by the dealer, or would be complied with by the dealer?

A. This particular agreement, of course, has been out of use since 1944, and there are so few remaining that our operations are uniform as between this agreement and the TBA agreement which does not carry that clause.

Q. I will hand you what has been marked Government's Exhibit 1 and direct your attention to paragraph 3 thereof, and ask you whether that provision would permit the dealer to sell other oils than those distributed or handled by the Standard?

Mr. Hall: Well, now, just a minute. That objection goes to the legal conclusion of the witness. I have no objection to the witness testifying to what the practice was. But you are asking him as to whether the language of an agreement would permit such and such an event to occur.

[fol. 520] Mr. Dixon: It is preliminary. After all, this witness is presumably familiar with these agreements.

The Court: No. I think that calls for interpretation.

Mr. Dixon: It does, your Honor.

The Court: Of the inner meaning of the agreement. I do not think he is in a position to do that.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Can you state—pardon me.

The Court: You can show whether that is a fact that resulted, if he knows.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Can you state to the court what the purpose of provision 3 in that contract is?

Mr. Hall: Now, that is objected to as calling for a conclusion of the witness and no proper foundation laid.

The Court: Let me see that.

Mr. Dixon: I think this is very fundamental, your Honor.

The Court: I think that question is not permissible. I think the result of the agreement is the test and not for what purpose it may have had in mind. If the purpose is not apparent, then you may show it had that effect; if it is apparent then it is a matter for the court's interpretation. Under either event that question would not be permissible as a proper inquiry.

Mr. Dixon: I am asking the witness——

The Court: You have this in mind, that when you are charging conspiracy, then you may propound to a defendant [fol. 521] who is on the stand, when you cross-examine him, what the purpose of the agreement was. When you are charging a company with violation of the law which is the subject of a civil suit you may go behind the apparent purpose or the apparent language to show that the certain arrangement had an effect, but that you can only prove by showing either contemporaneous statements of the parties or their officers, or by showing the effect which it had. I do not think even as cross-examination that that question is proper because it calls merely for a conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, I am asking this witness who is an official of the company using this contract what the purpose of this provision is. I do not know who else would be better qualified to answer that, unless it be the court as a matter of law. And if it is something——

The Court: I will say this: If that is the purpose, I think I will allow you to ask this: If he knows why that provision was put in. If he knows, I will let you ask him that.

Mr. Dixon: Very well, your Honor.

The Court: But not the purpose.

[fol. 522] Q. Can you state to the Court, if you know, what the purpose of the provision is in Exhibit 2, under the marginal note "Quantity"?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute.

The Court: Read the question.

(Question read by the reporter.)

Mr. Hall: I thought the Court said you could not ask the witness——

The Court: That is the same question. I forget the wording in which I said I would allow you to ask the question.

Mr. Hall: Whether the company adopted this provision.

The Court: Yes. I think I will allow it in that form. Do you know why this provision was adopted? I want you to state facts.

The Witness: Frankly, that provision, in one form or another, has been running through these contracts for so many years, I don't know where it started. All I know today is the manner in which we operate, and how the contracts are administered. I will be very happy to tell you that.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Will you do that for us, please?

A. We try, naturally, to sell our product to all dealers, either with or without these contracts, and try to sell it as nearly 100 per cent as is possible to do so. We do have, however,—we had at the last survey we made of retail [fol. 523] outlets, 25 per cent of our outlets handle competitive lubricating oil, which I would feel would be a reasonable measurement of the extent we enforce that provision.

Q. In these contracts, Mr. Thompson, that is, Government's Exhibits 1, 2, 3 and 4, it is a fact, is it not, that the dealers signing these contracts have to acquire all of their petroleum products from and through the Standard Oil Company?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. The agreements, first, speak for themselves, so far as their contents are concerned. The question is objected to upon the ground that there is no proper foundation laid, and that it calls for the opinion and conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Dixon: The Government is perfectly content, your Honor, to rest its case upon the language of these contracts, placed in the scope and context of the evidence in this case, as to the use and extent which these contracts are used. We are endeavoring, however, through this witness, to get from the company the interpretation which they place upon these contracts in operation, so the Court may have the benefit of all of the evidence here relating to these contracts which the Government challenges as being in violation of the Sherman Act and Clayton Act, when placed in the contracts that they are placed in in this case.

Mr. Hall: May I be heard a moment, your Honor? [fol. 524]. The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hall: I think this goes back to the statement the Court just made. Counsel and the Government are complaining of certain forms of contract, as to the purpose of the contract from the standpoint of the company. That is beside the point. The Government has a right, under the statute, to inquire as to the effect of the contract, but certainly not as to the meaning which the company puts upon the contract, or the purpose of reason for the company putting something into the contract. The practice of the company may be shown for the purpose of showing the effect of the contract, but beyond that the inquiry would be irrelevant and immaterial, and outside of the issues of the pleadings.

The Court: I believe the particular question is objectionable. I will have to sustain the objection. I am thinking of one of the leading cases. I cannot at the present time think of the name of it, but I believe it is the Hardware Floor case, where the Court held that the exchange of information, apparently innocent on its face, was, in effect, a hint, if I might call it that, something like Mr. Lewis hinted recently, that the company had violated the contract without warrant, which the Court held was a very strong hint that they actually quit. But the Court said that practices of that type may be shown to have been intended as a hint to follow certain particular practices; but, [fol. 525] if I remember the case aright, the conclusion there was reached, not by asking a person what their interpretation of the contract was, but what was done after that exchange of information was received. And in the San Francisco case the Court, while there was no outside evidence that such resulted, held, however, that there was no violation. So I feel that this inquiry in the form in which you have it is not proper, and calls for a conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Dixon: If the Court please, as I have previously stated, it is the position of the Government here that these contracts are clear on their face. We are, however, endeavoring to determine the interpretation in view of the allegations of Paragraph 34.

The Court: The interpretation of the parties is not material. It is the result that is material.

Mr. Dixon: Sometimes, your Honor, the Government feels that the result follows, as a matter of law, from the contract and the language in these contracts itself.

The Court: No, if the contract is of a nature that it has a certain result, that may be true, but there is also this inquiry: If, in fact it does not result in that it becomes merely a paper covenant, and in all monopolies, such as the famous Trans-Wrap case (152 Fed. 2d, 198), which was, of course, a patent case, decided last fall, there was a very interesting point involved, and it is germane to our [fol. 526] discussion, because you have cited a lot of patent cases involving monopolies, which I do not think apply to this type of case. You have cited the Mercoid case, and others, and this Trans-Wrap case modifies the Mercoid case.

In the Mercoid case, the question before the Court was this: Whether an agreement by the patentee of an article with his licensee, that all the improvements shall belong to the patentee, was not monopolistic, and the Court said that it was monopolistic all right, but within the monopoly which the patent law allows. The court, however, said that the man would be protected, even though it might be shown later on that this result was in restraint of trade, and in violation of the law. In other words, the Court wanted to uphold the patentee in his monopolistic right, insofar as his dealings were concerned, and not declare it per se monopolistic, even though it could be prosecuted under the Sherman and Anti-trust law.

Another proposition is this: Either this contract has that effect, or it does not have that effect. If it does have that effect, then it is a question of interpretation by the court, and therefore this inquiry is immaterial. If it does not have that effect, then it becomes a question of law, and no evidence is shown, that regardless of its language, it had that effect, then it becomes a question of law to determine whether that is a violation of one act or the other, [fol. 527] because I agree with you that under the Clayton Act the tendency would be sufficient, while under the Sherman Act it must actually result in a restriction.

That is the general point. I don't know whether counsel will agree with me. In other words, the first that is required is proof. Then, under the Clayton Act, as the history shows the very object of the Clayton Act to be, is to call certain contracts in their inception, if they have resulted in unreasonable restraint, especially after the Supreme Court, in the Standard Oil case had held that reasonable restraint is permissible in common law, and only unreasonable restraints are condemned by the Sherman Act.

I will say this: If you think the language has that effect, then, of course, you can take a chance of selling me that interpretation, but certainly I would not be aided very much by the opinion of a lay person on the subject.

Mr. Dixon: Perhaps I should explain the reason for my question, then, your Honor.

The Court: I think we have talked an awful lot, both you and I. I think I understand you. If you don't understand me, I am sorry.

Mr. Dixon: I do understand you.

The Court: If it were Friday I would say, as I usually do, I am getting tired, but this is only Wednesday, and we have just begun.

[fol. 528] Mr. Dixon: The witness made certain statements, and I felt advised, because of those statements, to pursue this line of questioning, but I will not continue with my questioning in view of your Honor's ruling.

Q. Mr. Thompson, can you state to the Court where the warehouses that receive the products distributed to the retail outlets in the nature of tires, batteries, and tubes and other automotive accessories are located?

A. I, of course, do not handle the distribution of tires, batteries and accessories. I am trying to recall Mr. McClanahan's enumeration of them. I know there is one in San Francisco and Seattle and Portland and Spokane, Salt Lake, Fresno and Phoenix. I think that is the list. I wouldn't be certain of that.

Q. Those are seven in number, are they? The company has seven warehouses?

Mr. Hall: They have eight, as you know, Mr. Dixon.

The Witness: I am not too familiar with it.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Can you state to the Court how many there are, seven, eight or nine, or whatever it is?

A. I don't know for sure; something in that neighborhood.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge, Mr. Thompson, whether any of those places that the company may have for distributing tires, tubes, batteries to dealers, distribute [fol. 529] across any Stateline?

A. No, I am not familiar with the distribution of tires, tubes and batteries, as general manager of dealer sales.

Q. You are not familiar with that part of the products?

A. No, for the reason that TBA alone handles that in the company. I have nothing to do with the aviation department, or the marine end. It is so scattered, we have one unit in our office that handles that distribution. I only have a very superficial knowledge of what transpires.

Q. Do you know, Mr. Thompson, whether, as general manager of dealer sales, that there are any truck stations operated by independent dealers on open account?

A. I don't believe there are, Mr. Dixon. There are 42 of them, I know, and I believe they are all under the same form of agreement.

Q. By that you mean same form or type of agreement, of the kind referred to in Government's Exhibits 1 to 5?

A. Except there are none under the old distributor type agreement, whatever that number is.

Q. I hand you Government's Exhibit No. 9 for identification, and ask you to refer to the portion thereof headed: Total Gross Quantities of Automotive Lubricating Oils Sold by Standard Oil Company of California to Retail Dealers,—and state, if you can, from the figures contained [fol. 530] therein, what percentages of the amounts expressed on that portion of the exhibit just referred to are RPM motor oil what percentages are Standard Penn motor oil, and what percentages are Zerolene motor oil?

Mr. Hall: If the Court please, I will object to any inquiry of the witness with respect to the document that has not been received in evidence, unless it is for the purpose of laying a foundation for its introduction in evidence. This is a document marked only for identification. I think before counsel crossexamines the witness with respect to the document or its contents, that it should be either offered or shown that he is now laying the foundation for its introduction later.

The Court: I presume that is the object, to have the examination of the witness with regard to the document, and if he does not disclose the contents, except to identify it, so that it may be admitted, it is permissible.

Mr. Hall: Your Honor will see from the last question that he is not trying to lay the foundation for its introduction in evidence, but he is assuming the truth of the facts stated in the document, to get the witness' opinion from those matters.

Mr. Dixon: May I be heard in regard to the question and the objection?

The Court: All right.

[fol. 531] Mr. Dixon: We subpoenaed, through the Standard Oil Company, certain statistical information, of which there was a compilation in answer to that portion of the subpoena. Among the things we asked the Standard Oil Company, was the dollar volume of the lubricating oil sold to retail outlets under these agreements. We did not get that information, presumably because the company perhaps could not get it, but they did give us this compilation of figures of the total amount of lubricating oil sold, but they did not give us the price. They gave us the price in the compilation of three different types of oil which are included in the total figure given. The purpose of my question is to determine, if possible, from this witness, whether he can tell this Court the approximate percentages of the different types of oil that are sold by the Standard Oil Company, from that memorandum. That is the purpose of it.

Mr. Hall: If your Honor please, I can't understand why counsel does not offer it in evidence.

The Court: The objection is to the witness using the memorandum, not to refresh his recollection, but if you want to refresh his recollection, you can use any memorandum. I agree with Wigmore that you cannot use a calendar or a newspaper, but the sole idea that a witness can only refresh his memory from something he himself wrote is as dead as the dodo. But you are not using it for that [fol. 532] purpose. You are asking him to really translate in his own oral testimony figures he finds on the document, which is not in evidence yet.

Mr. Dixon: My question is directed to this witness to determine, if possible, from him, if he can answer, what the percentage of the sales is of these particular products, and this witness, as I understand it, is supposed to be in charge of dealer sales. If he can't answer it, then the question is improper, of course.

The Court: I will sustain the objection. I will allow the question to be asked as to whether he knows, without any reference to this document, what the percentage would be of the sale.

Mr. Dixon: I was just going to ask him that.

The Court: I will give you credit for it.

Mr. Dixon: You take it, your Honor.

Q. Do you know, Mr. Thompson?

A. In what period?

Q. The year 1946, approximately what the percentages were?

A. I would have to give you an approximation.

Q. I understand.

A. Because I would be very happy to supply those figures to you, with an opportunity to review them.

Q. We would much rather have the figures themselves. [fol. 533] If you can give us, Mr. Thompson, the actual percentages, we would rather have that, from your records, of the sales of RPM motor oil, Standard Penn motor oils and Zerolene motor oils, the total amount of your sales. I am perfectly satisfied with your doing that.

A. The thing, I believe, we were unable to supply was the dollar value, because it would be a terrific job to make a compilation of the percentages. I would roughly guess, for each dealer outlet, 55 per cent RPM, and 35 per cent Standard Penn, and 10 per cent Zerolene, would be my best approximation.

Q. Mr. Hall does not like guesses, and I don't know whether that is acceptable to him. Perhaps we had better have the actual figures.

Mr. Hall: You will admit that this is the first time you have asked us for those figures?

Mr. Dixon: Yes, it is.

Mr. Hall: I am perfectly content, Mr. Dixon, that you build your case on guesses.

Mr. Dixon: I don't know of any better guess than from an official in charge of this particular business for the company.

Q. To the best of your knowledge, is that the approximation?

A. I would say that is approximate. It might be [fol. 534] slightly different compared to the actual figures.

Mr. Dixon: Thank you very much. That is all I want to know.

The Court: Any questions at this time?

Mr. Hall: Are you all done with the witness?

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

Mr. Hall: With the Court's permission I would like to do my examining of Mr. Thompson as a part of our case, if agreeable.

The Court: That is all right. There is no objection.

Mr. Hall: I have no questions at this time.

(Short recess.)

[fol. 535] (Short interruption for other court proceedings.)

The Court: All right.

Mr. Dixon: The Government asks that Exhibits 22, 22-A to -I, inclusive, 23, 23-A to -X, inclusive, 24, 24-A to -I, inclusive, be marked for identification.

The Clerk: So marked.

Mr. Dixon: The Government offers said exhibits 22 to 22-A through I, inclusive, in evidence.

Mr. Hall: These are objected to and each of the documents that has been marked in each package which has been marked are objected to on the grounds that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Dixon: The Government offers into evidence——

Mr. Hall: Hold it just a moment.

The Court: Did you separate 22?

Mr. Dixon: No, your Honor. They are all together. They should be clipped together.

The Court: That is all right. They may be received and marked 22 and then 22-A to I.

Mr. Dixon: The Government offers into evidence Exhibits 23, 23-A to X, inclusive.

Mr. Hall: Defendants object to each of the documents so referred to on the grounds that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

[fol. 536] The Court: Are they of a similar character or a different character?

Mr. Dixon: Those are of a similar character.

The Court: All right. Overruled.

Mr. Dixon: The Government offers into evidence Exhibits 24, 24-A to I, inclusive.

Mr. Hall: To each of these documents defendants object on the grounds that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will call Mr. Alan E. Van Sinden as its next witness.

Alan E. Van Sinden, called as a witness by plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Alan E. Van Sinden.

The Clerk: How do you spell your first name?

The Witness: A-l-a-n.

The Clerk: Middle initial?

The Witness: E.

The Clerk: And your last name?

The Witness: V-a-n S-i-n-d-e-n.

[fol. 537] Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. What is your residence address, Mr. Van Sinden?

A. 4568 Edgewood Place, Los Angeles.

Q. And your occupation, Mr. Van Sinden?

A. Salesman.

Q. For whom do you work or by whom are you employed?

A. The C. E. Ridley Company.

Q. And what is the business of the C. E. Ridley Company?

A. Distributors of Macmillan Ring-Free Motor Oil and greases.

Q. And in what area or territory is your duty as salesman for Macmillan Ring-Free products?

A. In Los Angeles-Hollywood district and part of the district on the east side.

Q. How long have you been employed as a salesman of Macmillan Ring-Free lubricating oil and greases?

A. Well, I have been altogether six years, practically six years.

Q. Has that been continuously with C. E. Ridley and Company?

A. No. I have been with the C. E. Ridley Company for the past eight or 10 months; and prior to that the balance of the time was put in with the Macmillan Petroleum Company.

[fol. 538] Q. And what is the business of Macmillan Petroleum Corporation, if you know?

A. Manufacturing and selling of Macmillan motor oil, gasolines, and petroleum products.

Q. And do you know the source of their supply of lubricating oils and greases? Where is their refinery located?

A. Their refinery is located at Eldorado, Arkansas.

Q. Will you just state generally what your duties as a salesman of lubricating oils and greases are with respect to the trade that you solicit?

A. Well, I solicit business from the consumer accounts, such as trucking accounts, ice cream, dairies and things like that. And also, most of my work has been with service stations and garage re-sale accounts. I solicit the business to increase the sale of Macmillan oil if it is in there or to encourage the dealer to take on the line if he does not have it at the present time.

Q. You say that a part of your calls are made upon service stations?

A. Yes; they are.

Mr. Driscoll: At this time, if your Honor please, the Government will ask to mark for identification the documents produced by the defendants under subpoena No. 2, Paragraph I, item No. 32, being documents in reference [fol. 539] to service station of Ferrick and Knott, located in the City and County of Los Angeles, California.

The Clerk: Is this admitted in evidence, your Honor?

Mr. Hall: No. It has not been offered yet.

The Clerk: No. It is just being marked Government's Exhibit 25 for identification.

Mr. Driscoll: I now move the admission of the Exhibit No. 25 into evidence.

Mr. Hall: The offer into evidence is objected to on the grounds that each and all of the documents are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: This is another sublease?

Mr. Driscoll: Sublease and dealer agreement TBA and confirming letter of sale.

The Court: The objection will be overruled. They will be marked 25.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Mr. Van Sinden, in the course of your duties as salesman do you call on those service stations which distribute petroleum products under the brand of the Standard Oil, the Chevron Service Stations?

A. I do to a very limited extent.

Q. Have you ever called upon a service station located at 5300 Santa Monica Boulevard, operated by Ferrick and Knott?

A. Yes; I have.

Q. When did you first call on that station?

[fol. 540] A. I was transferred into that territory in June of 1943 and at that time I made contact with Mr. Ferrick of the Ferrick and Knott station.

Q. And do you recall whose gasoline and petroleum products they were retailing at that time?

A. To the best of my knowledge, I think they were retailing Wilshire products.

Mr. Hall: Pardon me. Could I have that date called for by the question?

Mr. Dixon: 1943, Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall: 1943.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. As a result of your call on this service station did you at that time sell them your product?

A. Yes; I sold them then.

Q. And those products were Macmillan lubricating oils and greases?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you continue to sell them thereafter?

A: I continued to sell the account for a period of a year, I would imagine, or a year and a half, and then——

Q. Approximately—excuse me.

A. Well, they made a change of gasolines about that time and at that time I lost them.

Q. At about what time did they make that change, if you recall, to the best of your knowledge?

[fol. 541] A. I believe it was November of 1944.

Q. And do you recall whose brand of gasoline and petroleum products they then began to dispense?

A. They had made the change to Standard Oil Chevron's products.

Q. At the time of your call when they discontinued purchasing your Macmillan lubricating oils and greases what, if anything, in connection with that call then occurred, if you can remember?

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. I object to any conversations with this dealer at this station on the ground they are hearsay, your Honor, and ask the court to instruct him in his answer not to relate any conversations with the dealer.

The Court: Read the question.

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Court: Well, I can't see the materiality of anything that occurred after an agency has abandoned it.

Mr. Driscoll: The witness, your Honor, has testified that he began first calling on this station in 1943, when they were selling Wilshire gasoline and lubricating oils and greases and petroleum products, and that he sold them Macmillan Ring-Free oils and greases, and continued to do so until they changed to Standard Oil lubricating oils and greases and gasoline about the month of November or the latter part of 1944.

[fol. 542] Now we desire to demonstrate the effect of these contracts by the facts and circumstances of what occurred at the time this account was discontinued and Standard Oil products were taken on by the dealer. It certainly is relevant to an explanation of the operation of the contract, what the dealer thought he had.

The Court: I will overrule the objection and will reserve a motion to strike. It may be it bears upon the inducements for resuming dealings.

Mr. Hall: First, may I be heard on that?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hall: Conversation with the dealer would clearly be hearsay. The dealer is not in court. I am not entitled to cross examine the dealer because he is not in court.

The Court: Well, it is not so much what the dealer said. It is any inducement the witness made on behalf of the company that would be binding as being the person who was authorized to conduct the negotiations.

Mr. Hall: Oh, you mean the inducement this man who is on the stand now made?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Driscoll: That is not the purport of my inquiry, your Honor. My inquiry is as to when he made the last call or a call that he made upon this dealer, the first call he made after the dealer had taken on the products of the [fol. 543] Standard Oil Company. What then in the business relationships between the dealer, Ferrick and Knott, and this salesman occurred as between them.

The Court: I may not see the object of this. I will overrule the objection and reserve a motion to strike.

Mr. Driscoll: Will you read the last question, Mr. Reporter?

(Question again read by the reporter.)

A. Mr. Ferrick informed me that they had just recently made a new contract with the Standard Oil people and we would no longer be able to sell him Ring-Free oil, as a result of the contract and the new connections they had made. And I asked him about the amount of stock he had on hand, as to whether or not they were going to dispose of that. I had reasons for asking that. He said, "No." He says, "I imagine," he said, "that we can just continue to sell that out until it is exhausted and that will end our relationship."

Mr. Hall: Now, if the court please, I move to strike the answer of the witness under the rule stated by Mr. Justice Holmes in Buckeye Powder Company v. DuPont Powder

Company, 248 U. S. 55. That was a triple damage suit under the Sherman Act, and in confirming the judgment for the defendant Justice Holmes said, at page 65:

> "* * * Several exceptions were taken to the exclusion [fol. 544] of statements by third persons of their reasons for refusing or ceasing to do business with the plaintiff. We should be slow to overthrow a judgment on the ground of either the exclusion or admission of such statements except in a very strong case. But the exclusion in this instance was proper. The statement was wanted not as evidence of the motives of the speakers, but as evidence of the facts recited as furnishing the motives."

Evidently he is ruling upon this hearsay statement of the dealer as furnishing motive prompting the dealer not to deal with his company. It is exactly in point, your Honor, and it is hearsay, and I move to strike it on that ground.

Mr. Driscoll: Your Honor, the contracts with this particular station which are in evidence and which are contracts offered as Government's Exhibits 2 and 4, the sublease which is Government's Exhibit 5, and dealer agreement TBA substantially the same as Government's Exhibit 4; those provided for the exclusion of the competitive lubricating oils and greases. And this testimony is offered as evidence of the operation of those exclusive clauses.

Furthermore, your Honor, the allegations of the complaint here are a continuing one and in the "effects clauses" or in the number of the effects it would seem to me that the Government is entitled to show what the operators themselves [fol. 545] interpreted these contracts as being.

Mr. Hall: If the court please, that is exactly in line with the opinion I have just read. The evidence is barred where the evidence desired is the facts recited as furnishing the motive. The statement in itself which was made by this dealer to this witness as a notive, as a state of mind of the dealer himself, has no relevancy.

What the Government is trying to prove is the real reason, the real fact underlying what he told this witness as prompting him not to deal with this witness' company. Now, that is hearsay within the rule stated by Mr. Justice Holmes.

The Court: I cannot see how you can bind the company in this case to an interpretation of the contract by outsiders. You may show what the effect of the contract was. My only object in allowing the testimony was to find out whether this was preliminary negotiation in which certain commitments were made or expressions given by this witness that might be binding on the company. And certainly the statement of a dealer as to why he ceased to do business, to handle the company's product and preferred another, would not be binding on them.

Mr. Driscoll: It is not offered for the purpose of binding Standard Oil, if the court please.

The Court: How he understood it does not matter. It is [fol. 546] how he acted, how he acted.

Mr. Driscoll: It is offered as evidence as what he did and what the acts were and what the effects of the acts were.

The Court: General restraint of commerce does not occur in the minds or hearts of men. It occurs, to apply the language of Mr. Justice Holmes used on another occasion, "in the market place." Whether the contract has the tendency is to be determined from its wording and from its effect.

The law does not punish intentions not carried into effect, and it is a truism of equity that the injunctive power of the court is never used to allay somebody's fears as to something that might happen. We are not interested in what might have happened. We are interested in what happened as a result of these contracts.

The objection is sustained.

Mr. Hall: The motion to strike will be granted, your Honor?

The Court: Will be granted; yes.

Mr. Driscoll: If the court please, the Government at this time would like to make an offer of proof.

The Court: Do not make an offer of proof. I never accept an offer of proof because it encumbers the record with a lot of things. In your offer of proof you may put in things that are not germane; and your question here is plain [fol. 547] enough so that I ruled on it and no offer of proof is necessary.

Mr. Driscoll: Very well.

The Court: If you want to make an offer of proof, make it in writing.

Mr. Driscoll: Very well, your Honor. Thank you.

The Court: Remember I am also the jury in this case and it is not a case of excluding the jury and making an offer of proof. And I do not want, unconsciously, three weeks from now when you are through, or four or five weeks from now when I decide the case, to find lurking in my mind something that may be contained in your offer of proof but is not in the record.

Mr. Driscoll: Very well, your Honor.

The Court: So it is dangerous. Furthermore, this court disapproves, and in California especially we have turned our thumbs down on offers of proof. The Supreme Court of California has repeatedly said that offers of proof should not be accepted and that they are unnecessary if counsel makes his question plain enough so that it can appear from the record what he seeks to prove. It is plain enough and you have argued it fully and my ruling here is consistent with the ruling I made on the other question where you sought to prove the purpose by a leading question.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. From and after the time that Ferrick and Knott [fol. 548] Service Station began the sale of Standard Oil petroleum products did you sell them any further lubricating oils or greases?

A. No; I did not.

Q. Did you attempt to do so?

A. I did for a limited length of time of possibly five months.

Q. When was the last time that you called on them?

A. I would say about May or April of 1945, near April of 1945.

Mr. Hall: What was that question, please?

The Witness: May or April of 1945. Well, now, wait a minute. I beg your pardon. Could I change that?

Mr. Driscoll: Go ahead.

A. The last time I called on them was approximately 30 days ago.

Q. And did you attempt to sell them Macmillan Ring Free oil and grease at that time?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. And were you successful or unsuccessful?
A. Unsuccessful.

Mr. Driscoll: You may have the witness, Mr. Hall.
Mr. Hall: That is all.
The Court: All right; step down.
Mr. Driscoll: I will call Mr. H. G. McDonald.

[fol. 549] HENRY G. McDONALD, called as a witness by plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?
The Witness: Henry G. McDonald.
The Clerk: Henry G. How do you spell your last name?
The Witness: M-c-D-o-n-a-l-d.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. What is your residence address, Mr. McDonald?
A. I live at 9407 East Mandale in Bellflower at the present time.
Mr. Hall: I can't hear the witness. Will you speak a little louder, please?
A. I reside at 9407 East Mandale Street in the City of Bellflower at the present time.

Mr. Hall: In what place? I did not get the city.
The Witness: Bellflower.
Mr. Hall: Oh, thank you.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. What is your employment or occupation, Mr. McDonald?
A. I am a salesman with the C. E. Ridley Company.
Q. And the C. E. Ridley Company are distributors of Macmillan Ring-Free oils and greases?
[fol. 550] A. Correct.
Q. What territory do you cover as a salesman for these oils and greases?
A. I cover the eastern section and the south section of Los Angeles, out east as far as the Orange County line and down south as far as Carson Street in North Long Beach, and as far north as the south side of Slauson Avenue.

Q. To what type of trade do you call on and to whom do you sell your oils and greases?

A. Primarily to service station accounts, garage accounts, and commercial accounts for resale of Macmillan Ring-Free motor oil, and also the opening up of new business accounts.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will now ask to have marked for identification a document produced by the defense under the second subpoena, paragraph I, item No. 30, being an assignment, bill of sale, letter of acceptance, dealer TBA agreement covering premises at Long Beach Boulevard and Olive Street in Compton, California, between John William Martin and the Standard Oil Company.

[fol. 551] The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 26, marked for identification.

Mr. Driscoll: We also ask to have marked for identification, the documents produced by defendant under Paragraph I of the second subpoena, Item 31, being a sales agreement between C. G. Stewart and his wife, and Standard Oil Company of California, a dealer agreement TBA, covering the premises at 17904 Clark Street, Bellflower, Los Angeles County, California.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 27 marked for identification.

Mr. Driscoll: If your Honor please, the Government will now move for the admission of Exhibits 27 for identification and 26.

Mr. Hall: We object to each and all of the documents included in the exhibit marked for identification 26 and 27, upon the ground that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Objection overruled. They may be received and marked 26 and 27.

The Clerk: 26 and 27 in evidence.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Mr. McDonald, in the course of your duties as salesman, do you call on service stations generally, including those that are operated by Chevron dealers dispensing the petroleum products of the Standard Oil Company of California?

[fol. 552] A. Yes, I do call on a few Chevron dealers.

Q. What specific dealers have you called on, if you recall?

A. I called on Gib Stewart, and Jack Martin.

Q. Do you know the address of Mr. Martin?

A. He is at the corner of Olive and Long Beach Boulevard in Compton.

Q. Have you been successful or unsuccessful in selling Mr. Martin petroleum products?

A. I have been unsuccessful.

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. That is objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Objection overruled.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. In the course of your duties have you called on Mr. Stewart, Chevron dealer, selling petroleum products of the Standard Oil Company?

A. Yes, I have called on Mr. Stewart.

Q. Have you attempted to sell him your products?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you been successful or unsuccessful?

A. Unsuccessful.

Q. When were those calls, if you recall?

A. They were within the last month; I would say approximately three weeks ago.

Q. Have you called on Chevron accounts and dealers [fol. 553] prior to that time?

A. I have, a few, yes.

Q. With respect to those, have you been successful or unsuccessful?

A. Unsuccessful.

Mr. Hall: No proper foundation has been laid as to time and place and——

The Court: Lay a better foundation.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. How long have you been a salesman for Ridley & Company?

A. 8 months.

Q. When, if you recall, did you ever call on a Chevron Standard Oil service station dealer? When was the first time you called?

A. I have been calling on them since March of last year.

Q. Were you successful in selling them?

A. Unsuccessful.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. I have to strike the answer of the witness, to give me an opportunity to object.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hall: There is no indication of place, time, or parties, your Honor, and I object upon the ground that no proper foundation has been laid, and move to strike the answer of the witness.

[fol. 554] The Court: It may be stricken. Lay a better foundation.

Mr. Driscoll: Your Honor, the witness has testified as to the territory his business consists of. I don't want to argue after your Honor has ruled.

The Court: Read the question.

(Question read by the reporter.)

Mr. Hall: We haven't any way of meeting this testimony, your Honor. We don't know who he is talking about.

The Court: I will sustain the objection. Before he is asked whether he was successful or unsuccessful, he ought to mention, if he can, the dealer. If he knows him by name, he ought to mention him.

Mr. Driscoll: You may cross examine.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. You say you have been a salesman for 8 months?

A. With the C. E. Ridley Company, that's right.

Q. What was your occupation before that?

A. I was salesman for the MacMillan Petroleum Corporation.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: Call your next witness.

[fol. 555] HENRY G. AKERBERG, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Henry C. Akerberg.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. What is your residence, Mr. Akerberg?

A. 1481 South Crest Drive, Los Angeles.

Q. What is your business or occupation?

A. I am the general sales manager of the Ringfree Division of the MacMillan Sales Corporation.

Q. Where are their offices?

A. Our head office, or home office, is in Los Angeles.

Q. What is the business of the MacMillan Petroleum Corporation?

A. Producers, refiners and marketers of petroleum products, our main line being MacMillan Ringfree Motor oils and greases.

Q. How long have you been employed by the MacMillan Corporation?

A. 18 years.

Q. Prior to that time did you have some experience in the oil business?

A. I have been with MacMillan all my time.

[fol. 556] Q. What has been the extent of your experience in your employment with the MacMillan Corporation?

A. I started out as a service station attendant, and I have been in the sales force, in a sales capacity, from then on, through the various departments, and various positions.

Q. As general sales manager, Mr. Akerberg, what, generally are your duties and responsibilities?

A. Well, I report to Mr. MacMillan direct, the head of the company. I am in charge of distributor sales and branch office sales.

Q. In what area or territory?

A. Throughout the United States.

Q. Does the MacMillan Petroleum Corporation distribute and market their products throughout the States of California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Nevada and Arizona?

A. They do.

Q. Is this distribution or marketing under your supervision?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the source of the lubricating oils and greases that are distributed and marketed by the MacMillan Corporation?

A. Our lubricating oil is refined in Norphlet, Arkansas, which is about 8 miles north of ElDorado, and is shipped from that point to distributors. Our greases are [fol. 557] manufactured by a grease concern near Kansas City, Missouri out of our lub stuff.

Q. Please inform the Court of the method and manner by which the MacMillan Petroleum Corporation distributes and markets their products from the refineries and sources you have indicated, throughout the Western area?

A. Our entire marketing through the Western area is handled by distributors. These distributors have definite territories to operate in. They obtain their oils and greases in carload lots direct from the refinery.

In Southern California they obtain some of their products from our packaging plant in Long Beach. This oil is shipped to the distributors in carload lots to take care of orders that they have on hand and to take care of orders that they are continually obtaining.

Sometimes carload lots are shipped direct to the ultimate buyer. The distributors have their own sales forces. They develop all types of accounts,—resale and commercial. They have zone distributors under them, that take care of specific parts of the territory, who also buy in carload lots or part cars.

Q. Is that operation much the same, or similar in most all of the States that you have indicated?

A. Yes.

Q. With respect to the movement or flow of your [fol. 558] products, is it frequent, constant, or what is the nature of it?

A. Of what?

Q. Of the flow or accomplishment of your orders?

A. The distributors send their orders direct to the refinery. Some of them send them in to me, and I send them to the refinery. The oil is shipped, as I say, in carload lots, and given to the distributors, who, in turn, make their deliveries to their accounts. Many of the accounts that the distributors handle are on a contract basis, and there is a continuous need of oil; or the flow of oil, as you have put it, to take care of those accounts. As I say, there are some accounts who obtain their oil direct from the refinery, on distributor orders—large buyers.

Q. Does your sales organization sell generally to retailers, retail outlets, including service stations?

A. Approximately 75 to 80 per cent of our volume is through resale accounts, the balance being commercial and industrial.

Q. Has there been any period of time in which MacMillan Petroleum Corporation sold directly itself in a manner different from the distributorship to which you have testified?

A. Yes, up until August of last year we operated branch offices in Los Angeles and San Francisco, and had our own sales force. At that time, about last August, we [fol. 559] turned those two markets over to distributors.

Q. Mr. Ackerberg, you are familiar with the grades, brands, qualities of oils bought and used generally by the motoring public, including those which are produced, refined and distributed and marketed by Standard Oil Corporation?

A. Yes.

Q. Are those oils and greases, including those which are marketed under the brand names of the Standard Oil Corporation, comparable to the MacMillan Ringfree lubricating oils and greases?

Mr. Hall: That is objected to upon the ground that no proper foundation has been laid; it calls for the conclusion and opinion of the witness, for which there is no basis in the testimony.

The Court: Read the question.

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Court: You may answer.

A. They are.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Do you or do you not—I have forgotten, Mr. Ackerberg, whether you so testified,—that a part of your duties as general sales manager is to supervise sales forces or sales organizations?

A. I am in charge of all distributor sales and branch office sales, which takes in the entire distributor sales throughout the United States, of MacMillan oils and greases.

[fol. 560] Q. Is it or is it not the policy of the MacMillan Petroleum Corporation to solicit business from service station accounts generally, including those which operate Chevron stations dispensing the brands of the Standard Oil Company of California?

A. We call on all types of legitimate resale accounts, which, of course include Standard stations.

Q. In your sales or solicitation of the Chevron stations dispensing brands of the Standard Oil of California, have you attempted to sell them MacMillan Ringfree oil?

A. I have not.

Q. Is it the policy of the MacMillan Petroleum Corporation to attempt to sell them——

Mr. Hall: That is objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: I will sustain the objection to that question. The question is not whether it is the policy. He says he has solicited business, so evidently he is seeking business from legitimate outlets.

The Witness: I have not personally. I thought that was what you meant.

The Court: I will sustain the objection to the last question, and the answer will be stricken.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Have you been successful or unsuccessful, if you know, in selling to Chevron stations?

[fol. 561] Mr. Hall: Just a minute——

The Court: That is too general. I think he ought to be able to give you instances, if not as to the person, as to the city and location, and the number of persons in charge of Chevron stations on whom he called. The objection to the last question will be sustained.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Do you know, Mr. Ackerberg, whether or not your company sells their lubricating oils and greases to the Chevron dealers who handle Standard Oil brands?

A. Our distributors occasionally make a sale to a Chevron station, but very seldom. I understand——

The Court: No, that is a sufficient answer. Don't emphasize it, because it might not be material.

Mr. Driscoll: You may examine, Mr. Hall.

The Court: Cross examine.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. You said you had been with the MacMillan Company 18 years?

A. That is correct.

Q. When did the MacMillan Company, to your knowledge, first begin the sale of its products through retail dealers?

A. We are celebrating our twenty-fifth anniversary this year.

[fol. 562] Q. I think you said that it was only recently that you started the distributor system?

A. No, we had distributors since 1934, and we have had distributors on the West Coast for a great number of years. We did operate in Los Angeles and San Francisco direct, that is, with our own sales force, but last fall, about the 7th of August, we turned these two offices over to distributors.

Q. While you were operating in San Francisco and Los Angeles without distributors your organization sold petroleum products direct to retail outlets?

A. That is right.

Q. You had leases and subleases, and documents of that kind, didn't you, with respect to the dealers that handled your products?

A. No, we did not. This was as to the MacMillan Ringfree Lubricating Oil, only there were no leases involved.

Q. I am asking you about the business of the MacMillan Company. The MacMillan Company sells gasoline, doesn't it?

A. I am not in that department.

Q. You know of your own knowledge the MacMillan Company sells gasoline, don't you?

A. Yes, that is right.

Mr. Driscoll: I object to this line of questions on the ground that they are not within the limits of the direct examination. No testimony has been offered whatsoever a- [fol. 563] to gasoline.

Mr. Hall: My notes then are misleading.

The Court: He talked of lubricating oil, but that does not limit the inquiry. You may ask him if he also sold gasoline. Overruled.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Your company sells gasoline, doesn't it?

A. That's r ght.

Q. And has sold gasoline for a great many years, hasn't it?

A. That's right.

Q. In what place?

A. I don't believe that any went outside of California. I am not sure.

Q. The MacMillan Company has had MacMillan dealers, hasn't it, for a number of years?

A. Yes.

Q. There have been quite a lot of service stations scattered around California painted with the design and format prescribed by the MacMillan Company, hasn't there?

A. I believe there has.

Q. Those stations are not split pump accounts, are they? Don't answer that until counsel has a chance to object.

Mr. Driscoll: That is objected to as going far afield [fol. 564] from the examination in chief, as to their service stations or setup and split pump accounts.

The Court: I am inclined to agree with that.

Mr. Hall: Counsel asked this witness if he developed all types of accounts. I suppose he means gasoline accounts as well as lub or oil accounts.

The Court: We are not interested in any phase of the business dealing with the stations. This question deals with stations, with which they may have agreements, in which we are not interested.

Mr. Hall: I agree with your Honor. I withdraw the question.

Q. How many of those distributors are there? Let us take California; how many distributors are there that handle lubricating oil for the MacMillan Company, in California.

A. Approximately 13.

Q. In the other six Western States,—I mean by that, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Utah, Idaho and Arizona,—how many are there?

A. Six—seven. Correct that.

Q. In answer to a question put to you by counsel, I think you said—correct me if I am wrong—that the lubricating oil and greases that MacMillan puts out were comparable to other lubricating oil and greases sold generally. Do you recall that testimony?

[fol. 565] A. The premium type, yes.

Q. Have I quoted you correctly on that?

A. Yes.

Q. What other lubricating oil or greases, competitive with MacMillan products, were you talking about when you answered that question?

A. I am speaking of the better types, such as Quaker State, Standard Oil, Kendall, Wolf's Head, RPM, Shell X100. The better oils.

Q. And those better oils have been sold in California and these other six Western States for a number of years?

A. That's right.

[fol. 566] Q. Can you give me the names of some more companies that would come within that category?

A. That we consider premium products?

Q. I don't know what you mean by premium products, but you go ahead and give me the names of the companies and I will ask you what you mean by premium products after that.

A. Do you mean just in the western states?

Q. The western states I mentioned, yes, and California.

A. Veedol, Triton, Richlube, Titus. How many do you want?

Q. Just as many as you can recall offhand.

A. Well, that gives you an idea of the type I mean.

Q. Well, I don't want an idea of a type. I want some names.

The Court: If you know any more trade names, give them. Each of those is a trade name of a particular company, isn't it?

The Witness: That is right. They are better oils.

The Court: Richlube is Richfield Company, isn't it?

The Witness: Yes.

The Court: Titus is what?

The Witness: Warren Refining, I believe, or Hyvis Oil Company of New York.

Mr. Driscoll: Are you going to pursue that line, Mr. Hall?

[fol. 567] The Court: Do you know of any other names? Can you think of any other names at present?

The Witness: Conoco.

The Court: Did you give us any Mobil?

The Witness: Mobil?

The Court: Did you give us that?

The Witness: No.

The Court: All right. That is the General Petroleum, isn't it, Mobil?

The Witness: Mobiloil.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Those companies that you have mentioned in your last answers have been doing a limited oil and grease business in the seven western states for a number of years?

A. Yes.

The Court: Are you through with the witness, Mr. Hall?

Mr. Hall: No. I am just going through my notes. I will be done in just a moment.

Q. There are, I think you said, certain gasoline service stations, at least in California, that are MacMillan stations; isn't that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, those MacMillan stations, I assume, handle the MacMillan brands of lubricating oils and greases, do they not?

[fol. 568] A. As well as others.

Q. They handle others, do they?

A. Yes.

Q. What others do they handle?

A. They handle some outside oils.

Q. Now, just name them.

A. Pennzoil, Quaker State. I am not familiar with the names of cheaper products, but I know they do handle some western oils.

Q. Cheaper western oils. Any others?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. What arrangement does Pennzoil have with MacMillan which results in the distribution by MacMillan of Pennzoil?

Mr. Driscoll: Now, just a moment, Mr. Ackerberg. That, your Honor, is objected to as attempting to reach the same field.

The Court: That is right. The objection will be sustained.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. In California and elsewhere there are a number of retail dealers that handle MacMillan oils and greases who are handling some other brand of gasoline, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, referring to those particular dealers what equipment do you furnish those dealers for the purpose of purveying the oils and greases?

[fol. 569] Mr. Driscoll: That is objected to, your Honor, as a continuation of the same line of questioning.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What quantity of lubricating oil was sold in the seven western states—and I am speaking now of the MacMillan lubricating oil or this brand name, that you speak of—I forget what it is—how much of that was sold in the seven western states during the year 1946, approximately?

Mr. Driscoll: Objected to, your Honor.

The Court: No. That bears on the volume of business. I think that has a bearing on the extent of the restraint.

Mr. Driscoll: It bears upon the volume of their trade, but it does not bear upon——

The Court: It may with the other, that is right.

Mr. Driscoll: It has no bearing upon the volume of Standard Oil's business, which is the total amount of trade that is restrained.

The Court: No. When you are producing a person who testifies as to attempts to sell, he purports to know what, if any, supply they have available. Supposing the amount that they would have available for outside trade would be a very small percentage of the needs of a large number of stations, the question would arise whether you have to keep the competition open for an infinitesimal amount that [fol. 570] might trickle through.

Mr. Driscoll: If ultimately——

The Court: What?

Mr. Driscoll: Excuse me, your Honor. I desire one more comment if you are finished.

The Court: Yes; all right. I was looking the other way so I did not see you get up.

Mr. Driscoll: Basically, your Honor, it is the character of the restraint that is complained of in this case.

The Court: I beg pardon?

Mr. Driscoll: It is the character of the restraint and not the volume of it that is complained of.

The Court: Yes. Volume is also a criterion, too. Volume is a criterion, especially under the Sherman Act.

Mr. Hall: Do you want the question read, Mr. Ackerberg?

The Witness: Yes, please.

The Court: You want to bear in mind, gentlemen, this principle: That in a case like this when they are talking about restraint of commerce, it is an entirely different concept than the concept of commerce in a regulatory area. For instance, in the Wages and Hour cases and the National Labor Relations cases an infinitesimal amount of commerce is sufficient to bring them within the rule. Incidentally, that ruling was made in a case which arose in California, the Santa Cruz Fisheries case, where our Cir- [fol. 571] cuit Court disagreed as to the quantum of commerce that is necessary. Judge Wilbur held that it should be at least 50 per cent or more commerce involved before the Federal restrictions applied, and the court in that case ruled that the amount of commerce is not material.

But when you are talking about restrictions and when you are talking about what is reasonable and unreasonable, the quantum of the restriction of commerce is important.

Mr. Dixon: May I be heard just a moment, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Dixon: I would like to again suggest that the commerce which the Government contends is restrained here is the commerce flowing from Standard to these stations. In other words, that is the actual amount of commerce, some figures of which are already in, which is the subject of the restraint in this case.

The Court: They are restraining other people's commerce.

Mr. Dixon: That is right.

The Court: In other words, that commerce is determined by reference to what other commerce would be available.

Mr. Dixon: Yes, sir.

The Court: Supposing there is not another company here that could supply five per cent of that commerce. The question would arise whether you are going to throw the market open for the sake of that and disallow an [fol. 572] arrangement which the Supreme Court says is valid unless it results in restriction in commerce.

I still insist that 299 U. S., the case cited yesterday, the General Motors case, which provided specifically that a person could not use any parts other than Chevrolet parts and parts manufactured by General Motors is still the law today and has not been modified by any subsequent cases.

So we have to have a comparison between the two—the question of restraint and commerce to whom, and what amount of commerce are they keeping out by these arrangements, as I see it.

Mr. Dixon: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Dixon: And we concur in that view, and the commerce here is the commerce in the petroleum products, first; and second, in the tires, tubes, batteries and automotive accessories.

The Court: That is right. We will get to that. We are talking——

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, for a moment. It operates two ways. The restraint operates to prevent the dealer here from exercising his right to purchase those commodities in a competitive market, as well as preventing competition of the other suppliers from selling that market.

The Court: That is what you have alleged in your com- [fol. 573] plaint.

Mr. Dixon: That is right.

The Court: I know that.

Mr. Driscoll: And for that reason we submit that even though there may be small dealers or large dealers, it is immaterial, that are in competition theoretically for that market, if they were not precluded from competition by these contracts.

The Court: That is an argument to be made at the conclusion of the case. I know the theory of your case, but I still insist that because this is an equity case it is permissible to have for the record, for the purposes of comparison, the figures which these questions seek to elicit from this witness. What effect is to be given to them is to be determined later on.

Mr. Dixon: We appreciate your Honor's views. I rose to point out to your Honor that the objection to this particular question was based on the theory of the Government's case.

The Court: That is all right. I do not object, gentlemen, to any discussion, especially in a case of this character. We have assigned several weeks to try it, and within reasonable limits I will hear your reasons as we go along. But I do not wish to make every objection the occasion for a restatement about what I know is in the pleading [fol. 574] and what I know the issues are, that is all, just in the interests of economy of time. Because three weeks have been assigned to this case does not mean necessarily that you must take it. If you take a week or two weeks, I am quite certain I can use the other time to great advantage.

Now let us get back to the question. Will you read the question?

(Question read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. By Mr. Hall: What quantity of lubricating oil was sold in the seven western states—and I am speaking now of the MacMillan lubricating oil or this brand name that you speak of—I forget what it is—how much of that was sold in the seven western states during the year 1946, approximately?").

Mr. Driscoll: May the record note our objection?
The Court: Yes. I have overruled the objection.

A. Do you want sold by us to distributors, or distributors to the trade?

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Well, I would like the over-all amounts that reached the buying public.

The Court: Give the whole of it. You do not sell direct to the trade, do you?
The Witness: No. Our distributors sell it to the trade.
The Court: Then, of course, you indicate both amounts, if there is any discrepancy between the two. If they sold [fol. 575] less than you placed with them, why, all right.

A. Well, sales to the trade, 1946, was 1,865,429 gallons.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Are you refreshing your memory from some document?
A. Some notes.

The Court: Yes; the witness has them before him.
Mr. Hall: May I see them?
The Witness: This was requested in the subpoena.
The Court: Did the reporter get that? Please don't whisper. We don't whisper here.

(Remark read by the reporter.)

The Court: That is very important, a remark like that, because it indicates that you brought that in anticipation of needing it.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How many——
The Court: May I take a look at it?

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How many retail outlets dispensed MacMillan lubricating oil during the year 1946, approximately?

A. I don't have those figures with me.

Q. Could you give us an approximation?

A. I would rather check the records to give you a figure on that.

Q. Could you give us that——

A. That may be a thousand or two off either way.

[fol. 576] The Court: If that is the marginal variation, give us what your best recollection is. We won't tie you to an exact figure, just an approximation so far as you remember it.

A. Around nine or ten thousand accounts.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. And that is in all these seven western states?

A. Resale accounts.

Q. Yes. And that would be for the year 1946, I think I asked you?

A. No. '46 was not that high.

Q. Oh, you were higher in '47 than '46?

A. Yes.

The Court: Just answer, please. Don't just shake your head. We don't ad lib here. When we get television in the court room we will catch your nod.

The Witness: All right.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What were your arrangements with distributors? Can you tell us a little about that, a picture of what your distributor does, how he handles your products and how he deals with your company in the dispensing of lubricating oils?

The Court: You know, maybe Mr. Dixon does not know what I am referring to, but you gentlemen are old timers in Los Angeles. I am going to do a Monroe. I am going [fol. 577] to say the objection that should have been made is sustained. We call that "the Monroe", the name of a very distinguished judge of the Superior or Municipal Court, Charles Monroe. He used to protect himself, when lawyers did not object, by saying "The objection which should have been made is sustained." However, counsel arose so I merely anticipated the objection would be made.

Mr. Hall: All right. No further questions.

The Court: Any redirect?

Mr. Driscoll: Yes, your Honor.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Among the brands that you mentioned, Mr. Ackerberg, as being comparable to your oil was the brand RPM. You were referring then to the brand that is dispensed and marketed and sold by Standard Oil Company of California?

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: Gentlemen, from my own curiosity I will ask Mr. Hall. I have always been curious to know what those initials stood for. I never understood what they stood for. Does anybody know?

Mr. Hall: I will have to refer to the expert, your Honor.

The Court: Well, it is all right. I don't want to interrupt, but I have always been curious to know.

[fol. 578] Mr. Thompson: If you want to know, I will get it for you.

The Court: All right. Go ahead.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. And of those brands, the other brands and other names that you mentioned, they are sold throughout this western area?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, as to the volume that Mr. Hall inquired about, will you refresh my memory on that: Was that as to the volume of 1946 or '47?

The Court: No. He said '7, in 1947. He said in 1946 it was not so high. Isn't that correct?

The Witness: '46 in volume was higher than '47 in volume. He asked me about the number of accounts we had, and after answering the question I wouldn't swear to it, because the number was pretty close together.

The Court: All right.

The Witness: But our volume in '46 was greater than in '47.

The Court: In other words, you sold less goods in '47, is that it?

The Witness: That is right.

The Court: But you had a larger outlet, you had more customers who sold less, is that it, in 1947?

The Witness: I am pretty sure we had more outlets. I [fol. 579] would have to check the figures because all of my figures are national. They are not broken down into this number of states.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. What, Mr. Ackerberg, among other things, if any opinion you have upon it, do you attribute the reduction in the volume of your sales in 1947 as compared to 1946?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. If the court please, that calls for the witness' conclusion without foundation for the question.

The Court: Yes; I will sustain the objection as not redirect examination, also, but chiefly I think it is not material.

Mr. Driscoll: Developing facts which were inquired upon in cross examination, your Honor.

The Court: That does not make any difference. Merely because matter was gone into does not open up the subject for inquiries that are not germane. The reason for the falling off of business is not material in this case. If you show that his supplying of Standard Oil outlets, whether the Standard Stations or the Chevron or any of the others, was less in one year than another, then you might inquire if he knew what caused it. But there is no evidence in the record which is related to those preliminary inquiries.

[fol. 580] By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Do you know whether or not your sales through Chevron Standard Oil outlets in '47 were less than they were in '46?

A. I don't know about Standard's specifically.

The Court: As I understood you to say, so far as your records show to Standard Stations, whether they are Chevron or regular Standard, your sales were sporadic; isn't that true?

The Witness: We never did have much volume through Standard Stations at any time.

The Court: No volume at any time. All right.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Do you attribute that factor to have any significance in your sales program?

The Court: No. That is an inference to be drawn. I will sustain the objection.

Mr. Driscoll: That is all, then, your Honor.

The Court: That is all.

However, this: If you put a solicitor on the stand who testifies that the accounts were opened and then abandoned, then of course that question might be material. It is a question of argument and it is an inference rather than a question subject to direct testimony.

All right; step down.

Well, gentlemen, you did very well. You just concluded the examination of this witness and we will take our regu- [fols. 581-582] lar adjournment until tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock.

(Brief discussion off the record.)

(Whereupon a recess was taken until 10:00 o'clock a. m. of the following day, Thursday, May 6, 1948.)

[fols. 583-584] IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES IN AND FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
CENTRAL DIVISION

Honorable Leon R. Yankwich, Judge Presiding

No. 6159-Y-Civil

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff,

vs.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA and STANDARD STATIONS, INC., Defendants.

REPORTERS' TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS
Los Angeles, California
Thursday, May 6, 1948

APPEARANCES:
(As heretofore noted.)

[fol. 585] Los Angeles, California, Thursday, May 6, 1948, 10:00 A. M.

IRVINE H. SHEARER, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?
The Witness: Irvine H. Shearer.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. What is your business or occupation, Mr. Shearer?
A. Distributor for the Kendall Refining Company.
Q. What is the name of the firm that you have employment or occupation with?
A. The Buck-Shearer Oil Company.
Q. What position do you occupy with them?
A. I am president of the Buck-Shearer Oil Company.
Q. What is the business of the Buck-Shearer Oil Company?

A. Distributing Kendall lubricants, motor oils, greases and gear lubricants.

Q. From what source do you get your supply of Kendall lubricants, oils and greases?

A. The Kendall Refining Company at Bradford, Pennsylvania.

Q. Over what area do you represent the Kendall Refining Company here?

A. Los Angeles, Orange, Santa Barbara and Ventura [fol. 586] Counties.

Q. Mr. Shearer, how long have you been connected with the Buck-Shearer Company?

A. Since December, 1934.

Q. Did you have association or connection with the oil business prior to that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With whom, and how long?

A. With the Kendall Refining Company, starting October 1st, 1919, up until about the 1st of July of 1934, when I had a breakdown. I resigned then, and came West, and then we formed the Buck-Shearer Oil Company.

Q. What position did you occupy or hold with the Kendall Refining Company?

A. I was oil sales manager.

Q. Will you just briefly relate to the Court what your method of distribution and marketing of the Kendall oil in your territory is?

A. Here?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, the oil—all of the lubricants that we use are obtained from the Kendall Refining Company, Bradford, Pennsylvania, shipped here in carload lots, stored in the Bekins warehouse at 3625 South Grand Avenue; from there we distribute on orders received from our salesmen, myself [fol. 587] included, as a salesman, because I cover a territory also.

Q. From your past experience in connection with the Kendall Oil Refining Company, are you familiar with their distribution system in the Western area, that is, Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, Nevada and Arizona?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is that system?

A. They have distributors, the same as our company. They operate no direct branches in this area. In fact, the only direct branches they operate are adjacent to the refinery where gasoline is involved.

Q. And the distribution pattern, then, is through their distributors to retail outlets?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To whom do you distribute through your organization the products of the Kendall Oil & Refining Company?

A. Service stations, garages, car dealers, commercial and industrial accounts.

Q. Mr. Shearer, does your organization, your sales organization, solicit the accounts of the products which are handled and dispensed by the so-called Chevron dealer handling products of the Standard Oil Company?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Hall: May I have the question read?

[fol. 588] Q. Have you any explanation for that?

A. We——

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. I object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: That is too broad, Mr. Driscoll. If you are going to show attempts to deal with them, his attention should be called to specific things. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Do you sell to the Chevron stations handling the products of the Standard Oil?

A. We have on several occasions where the order was phoned to us, usually for a case of oil where some particular customer requested that Kendall be made available to them at that point. But I would be unable to give you names of those customers because no record was kept at the time, other than the regular sales record, because we were not permitted to establish a sign or identification mark at the station, and it has always been the policy of the Kendall Refining Company and ours to make every possible effort to have an identification of our product where it is being sold.

Q. From your experience background, Mr. Shearer, in the oil business are you familiar generally with the grades and qualities of oil that are being used by motorists generally?

[fol. 589] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you familiar with the grades and qualities of the oils which are produced, refined, marketed, and distributed by the Standard Oil Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is your Kendall oil comparable to that which is distributed and sold by the Standard Oil?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is objected to as calling for the conclusion of the witness, calling for speculation and conjecture, and no proper foundation being laid.

The Court: I think it would call merely for his general knowledge.

Mr. Hall: The question asks whether it is comparable, as I recall it. I do not think that is general knowledge. I think that is just a conclusion, speculation and conjecture.

The Court: I think we permitted another witness to state the same thing. The objection is overruled.

Mr. Driscoll: Your answer?

The Court: He may answer.

Mr. Driscoll: Do you want the question?

The Witness: I would like that question again, please.

Mr. Driscoll: Would you read the question, Mr. Reporter?

[fol. 590] (Question read by the reporter.)

Mr. Driscoll: Your answer?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Driscoll: I did not hear it.

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Driscoll: You may examine, Mr. Hall.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What were those counties of Southern California in which your organization distributes Kendall oil?

A. At the present time it is Los Angeles, Orange, Ventura, and Santa Barbara. I would like to qualify that, to further answer your question, and that is the fact that the supply of oil which has been available to us has not been sufficient for us to be active in Ventura or Santa Barbara Counties; so that our activities have been confined for the past several years just to Los Angeles and Orange Counties.

Q. In other words, during the past seven years you have sold all the lubricating oil that you could get your hands on, haven't you?

A. The past several years, yes, sir.

Q. Your acquaintance with this Southern California situation goes back, as I understand, to 1934?

[fol. 591] A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Driscoll: Just one moment. I would like to have counsel go somewhat more into detail into the broad term "situation". I do not know what the witness would refer to.

The Court: It is a preliminary question. He is going to go into the detail.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Since 1934 and in the counties you have mentioned your distribution has been through salesmen, hasn't it?

A. Yes, sir; salesmen and sub-distributors.

Q. Oh, you have sub-distributors?

A. We have sub-distributors; yes, sir.

Q. How many of those do you have for those counties you have mentioned?

A. We have just three at the present time.

Q. How many salesmen have you at the present time for these counties you have referred to?

A. Well, aside from the sub-distributors we have three salesmen of our own.

Q. Do you employ any form of contract in connection with your sale of lubricating oil products?

Mr. Driscoll: Just one moment. That is objected to, your Honor, as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. To how many retail outlets did you sell lubricating [fol. 592] oil products in the counties you have referred to in the year 1946?

A. I would say approximately 600.

Q. And how many in the year 1947?

Mr. Driscoll: One moment. I am sorry I was engaged. I did not hear the answer to the question before this one, Mr. Reporter.

The Court: All right.

(Answer read by the reporter.)

Mr. Driscoll: Thank you.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, how many during the year 1947, approximately?

A. Oh, about 500.

Q. How many during the year 1945?

A. Well, our business in '45 and '46, to the best of my recollection, was on about an even basis; so I would say around 600 in '45.

Q. How many in '44?

A. Well, it was much less at that time because we were unable to get packaged goods; that is, when I say "packaged goods" I mean canned oil or anything for the smaller buyer, and we had no container with which we could dispense it, furnishing containers such as highboys or bulk containers.

Q. That was a condition that prevailed during the [fol. 593] years the war was in progress, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you sell more oil in the counties you have referred to in the year 1947 than you did in 1946?

A. No, sir. It was just the reverse.

Q. Just the reverse?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you sell more in 1947 than you did in 1945?

A. No; we didn't.

Q. Did you sell more than you did in 1944?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During 1946 how many distributors did you have?

A. We had six.

Q. How many salesmen did you have?

A. What year was that?

Q. '46.

A. '46. We had six salesmen.

Q. When a service station takes Kendall oil from you how many grades do they usually order?

Mr. Driscoll: One moment. Will you identify the type of service station? That is objected to as too broad. The witness is unable to understand that.

Mr. Hall: All right, all right.

Q. How many grades of Kendall oil do you distribute or try to distribute?

[fol. 594] A. We try to get a station or a garage to handle at least three grades of oil.

Q. Three grades?

A. Yes, sir; three weights.

Q. Three weights?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that would be light, medium, and heavy?

A. That would be like, say, 10, 20, and 30 or 20, 30, and 40, depending on the type of business they are in.

Q. And each one of those grades would, of course, have to be placed in a separate tank, wouldn't it?

A. If they are bought in bulk. But we also have the canned oil which we try to dispense; in fact, we emphasize distribution in cans rather than in bulk.

Q. Oh, you do?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you sell a great deal more of the canned product than you do of the bulk product?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you give me about the proportion of one and the other that you sell?

A. I think I am safe in saying that about 60 per cent in cans and 40 per cent of bulk.

Q. In answer to a question put to you by plaintiff's counsel I think you mentioned comparable oils. Will you give [fol. 595] us the makes of oils which you regard as comparable with the oils that you purvey?

A. Shall we get into a—we handle strictly a Pennsylvania oil and in the Pennsylvania class.

Q. Now, I did not ask you for an explanation. I asked you for names. Just run down the list of oils which you regard as comparable with your oil.

A. Pennzoil, Quaker State, Hyvis, Valvolene are the better-known Pennsylvania oils.

Q. Well, is there anything else?

A. Then we get into a discussion of——

Q. Are there any others that are comparable to your oils?

A. Well, there is room for discussion.

Q. What is that?

A. I say, there makes room for discussion.

The Court: A comparison does not mean——

A. Well, they are generally accepted by the public. Then the leading brands of all of the major companies, such as your RPM, Shell X100, Richfield Pennsylvania oil, Signal Pennsylvania, associated Veedol, Union Triton. They are in the generally accepted high-grade oil class.

Q. Yes. They all compete with your oils?

A. Yes, sir; they do.

Q. Do you think of any others now?

[fol. 596] A. Well, there are dozens of other brands.

Q. Well, just give us one dozen others.

Mr. Driscoll: Well, your Honor, the witness has indicated that he has exhausted his recollection.

Mr. Hall: Oh, no; he has not at all, Mr. Driscoll.

A. Well, Macmillan and Gulf is one, although that is not marketed in this area.

[fol. 597] Q. Have you given me all that you can recall now?

A. All that I can recall offhand, sir.

Q. That compete with your organization?

A. That's right, yes.

Q. Those oils have been competing with Kendall oils ever since you came to California, haven't they?

A. Yes.

Mr. Driscoll: The question of competition with Kendall and other brands of oil, not Standard oil brands, is wholly immaterial.

The Court: Let us have the question and answer.

(Record read.)

The Court: I think it may go to bias. Overruled.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Are Kendall lubricating products, and by that I mean lubricating oils and greases and whatever else Kendall sells,—are they sold outside of counties in California where the organization operates?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They are sold throughout California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what other states in the West are they sold?

A. I believe in every State in the West.

Q. You would say they were sold in Washington, Oregon, Arizona, Nevada, Utah and Idaho?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 598] Q. Do you know whether the sales in those States, outside of California, are through distributors, or by direct contact with the outlets?

A. They are through distributors.

Q. Are Kendall oils sold nationally?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. East, west, north and south?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Mr. Shearer, you have testified that during the war years you had difficulty in obtaining an adequate supply of oil?

A. More since the war than during the war years. During the war years, if I may explain, our output—that is, our sales were limited, due to the fact that we did not have the packaged goods, nor did we have highboys or other containers that we could put at the customer's place of business that would enable us to service them in bulk.

Q. But under all normal circumstances, either at that time, or at any time, now or in the future, that you have a supply of oil, you can sell all of it that you can get, is that correct?

A. I don't know if I am right in stating this; the [fol. 599] shortage—the worst shortage that we had was during '36, and we naturally lost quite a bit of business then due to not being able to take care of it.

Q. In ordinary times, and at the present time, if you can get additional orders you could get additional oil to fill them?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Driscoll: That is all.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Mr. Shearer, you were served with a subpoena by the Government to produce certain records or a compilation of figures, were you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you produce those figures?

Mr. Driscoll: One minute, your Honor. That is objected to——

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Driscoll: Whether we choose to produce them.

The Court: That's all right. He may answer the question.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Have you those figures with you, Mr. Shearer?

A. I have, sir.

Q. Those figures requested you to state the sales to Chevron dealers in '46 and '47, didn't they?

A. Yes, they did.

[fol. 600] Q. What were the sales to Chevron dealers in 1946?

A. We had no record kept. I will explain in this way: When we would get an order for Bill's service station, or Bill and Joe, there was no record kept in our office to the effect of whether or not that was a Chevron station, and for that reason we were unable to compile the figures that you asked for, of Chevron stations.

Q. I did not ask for them.

A. The Government.

Q. The same difficulty, I suppose, was encountered with respect to the figures for 1947?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. I think you testified in your examination in chief, Mr. Shearer, did you not, that your organization does not sell to Chevron service stations?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute——

The Court: You may answer.

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: May I have the question and answer read?

(Record read by the reporter.)

The Court: Anything further that you have, Mr. Dixon?

Mr. Dixon: No.

By Mr. Hall:

[fol. 601] Q. Didn't you testify on direct examination that there were certain sales made of Kendall products to Chevron dealers?

A. I did, sir.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Those few sales that counsel has inquired into were made, I think you testified, by telephone, upon request of the Chevron dealer for some customer he had?

A. That's right.

Mr. Driscoll: That is all.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Did you comply with those telephone requests whenever they came in?

A. Yes, we did.

Mr. Hall: That is all, thank you.

The Court: You are zig-zagging now. I think these gentlemen who are not connected with the company may be released from their subpoena, unless you want them kept, or will bring them back on notice.

Mr. Driscoll: Yes, so far as we are concerned.

The Court: The point is this. If you want to keep somebody under subpoena subject to notice, I will do so, but unless you do, I think these men should be free to go about their business, and not have to wait until they would be called.

Mr. Driscoll: So far as the Government is concerned, they may be released.

[fol. 602] The Court: Unless you call my attention to it, that you want a particular witness to return, that will be the order. Proceed.

Irving G. Barmby, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: Your name, please?

The Witness: Irving G. Barmby.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Barmby?

A. In Sacramento.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I am a salesman for the Inland Oil Company.

Q. What is the business of the Inland Oil Company?

A. They are distributors of MacMillan products and greases.

Q. In what territory or area do they distribute the products?

A. In Sacramento and adjacent counties—five counties.

Q. What territory do you cover for the Inland Oil Company?

A. I cover Sacramento, Placer, ElDorado, Solano and Yolo Counties.

[fol. 603] Q. What generally, Mr. Barmby, are your duties as a salesman for your company?

A. For soliciting business at service stations, garages, agricultural accounts, industrial and commercial accounts.

Q. Do you solicit business in the stations that are operated by Chevron dealers selling products of the Standard Oil Company?

A. I do.

Mr. Driscoll: At this time, if your Honor please, the Government would ask to have marked for identification documents produced by the defendant under Paragraph I, Item 8, being dealers' TBA agreement between the Standard Oil Company and one William T. King.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 28, for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Mr. Barmby, in the course of your business, have you become acquainted with Mr. William King, who operates a service station in Rio Vista, California?

A. I have.

Q. What type of station, and what products does Mr. King sell at his service station?

A. He has a Chevron service station, and sells Standard products.

Q. When did you first become acquainted or call upon Mr. King?

A. In July of 1946.

[fol. 604] Q. And at that time did you sell him any of your MacMillan products?

A. I did.

Q. Did you thereafter at any time sell him any further MacMillan products?

A. I did.

Q. When was that?

A. In the year—the first part of the year of 1947. There was a demand for a case of MacMillan Ring-free oil.

Q. And you delivered that to him?

A. I did.

Q. Does Mr. King, in his service station, display your signs?

A. No, he does not.

Q. Did he display the oil that you delivered and sold to him?

A. No, he did not.

Q. Where did he keep or store that?

A. He stored it in the back room of the service station.

Q. Is Mr. King in any other business in the town of Rio Vista?

A. Yes, he is.

Q. What other business does he have?

A. He has a garage adjoining the service station.

Q. In connection with Mr. King's operation of the [fol. 605] garage next to the service station, have you called upon him to purchase oils for that place?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And has he done so?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you called on Mr. King for the purchase of oil at his service station since the first part of 1947?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Have you been successful or unsuccessful?

A. I have been unsuccessful.

Q. But you did sell him oil at his garage?

A. I did.

Mr. Driscoll: If your Honor please, the Government will move the admission of the exhibit marked for identification, Exhibit No. 28, the TBA dealer agreement between Standard Oil and William King, dated October 6, 1947?

Mr. Hall: Each of the documents is objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: This is another TBA agreement?

Mr. Driscoll: Yes, sir.

The Court: The objection will be overruled. It may be received.

The Clerk: 28 in evidence.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Are you acquainted, Mr. Barmby, with the service [fol. 606] station that is operated at the corner of 7th and H Streets in Sacramento?

A. I am.

Q. When did you first call on that station?

A. In the latter part of 1945.

Q. At that time who operated it?

A. A fellow by the name of Mr. Chase.

Q. What sort of products did Mr. Chase handle and dispense at that time?

A. General Petroleum products at that time.

Q. What brand name?

A. Mobil oils and greases.

Q. Did you sell Mr. Chase your MacMillan oil?

A. I did.

Q. Did you continue to sell Mr. Chase his oil?

A. I did.

Q. For how long a time?

A. I sold Mr. Chase our oil, Ring-free oil, until a time that he sold out to a man by the name of Ed Reese, who was operating a service station.

Q. Do you recollect when that change took place?

A. That took place in the early part of 1946.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will ask to have marked for identification the documents produced by the defendant under Paragraph I, Item 9.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 29 for identification.

[fol. 607] By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Since the time that Mr. Reese acquired this service station, and began to operate it as a Chevron dealer, dispensing the products of the Standard Oil Company, have you solicited his business for Ring-free oil?

A. I have.

Q. Have you been successful or unsuccessful?

A. I have been unsuccessful.

Q. Are you acquainted, Mr. Barmby, with the service station operated by Mr. C. S. Morgan, at Courtland, California?

A. I am.

Q. When did you first become acquainted with that service station?

A. That was in 1946.

Q. At that time who operated the station?

A. A fellow by the name of Mr. Waterworth.

Q. What products was he dispensing at that time?

A. Chevron products.

Q. Mr. Barmby, did he at that time have any other business? Was he engaged in any other business?

A. Yes, he was.

Q. What business?

A. He had a garage across the street from the service station.

Q. Did you solicit business of Mr. Waterworth for the purchase of MacMillan oil?

[fol. 608] A. I did.

Q. At his service station?

A. I did.

Q. Were you successful in selling him?

A. No.

Q. Did you solicit him for the sale of MacMillan products at his garage?

A. I did.

Q. Were you successful there?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he display your sign?

A. Yes.

Q. When did Mr. Morgan take over the operation of this business?

A. He took over in 1947, in the latter part of 1947.

Q. Have you solicited the business of Mr. Morgan at his service station?

A. I have.

Q. Have you been successful or unsuccessful in selling him?

A. I have been unsuccessful in selling him.

Q. Does he buy any oil from you at all?

A. He does. He has a garage across the street from the station.

Q. But in your solicitation of his business to handle [fol. 609] your oils at the service station, you testified that you have or have not been successful?

A. I have not been successful.

Q. Are you acquainted, Mr. Barmby, with the service station operated in Del Paso Boulevard and Orange Street, Sacramento?

A. I am.

Q. Who operates that station?

A. Mr. Alex Knutson.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will ask to have marked for identification the document produced by the defendant under Paragraph 1, Item No. 10, being dealers' TBA agreement, between Gordon Waterworth and wife, and Standard Oil Corporation, and the consent to that TBA agreement from Gordon Waterworth to Joe Morgan, under date of October 10, 1947.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 30, marked for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Have you, in the course of your duties, called on Mr. Knutson, Mr. Barmby?

A. I have.

Q. What type of station does Mr. Knutson operate?

A. He had a Chevron station, and sells Standard products.

Q. When did you first call on him?

A. Around 1946.

[fol. 610] Q. Have you been successful in selling Mr. Knutson your products?

A. I have not been successful in selling him.

Q. Are there any other service stations that you know of that you have called on who dispense the products of the Standard Oil Company of California, Chevron stations?

A. Yes, there are.

Q. Can you identify them?

A. One was Parrell & Freis, Sacramento.

Mr. Hall: May I speak to counsel? Perhaps I can shorten it.

[fol. 611] The Court: All right; go ahead.

Mr. Hall: Now, this brings up the question as to the Government's answers to our interrogatories. We have not been advised of any service station in connection with this of the nature that he is now referring to in his testimony. If the answers to interrogatories mean anything, then the witness should be precluded from going into that line of testimony.

Mr. Dixon: In behalf of the Government may I say at this time that this information concerning this particular contact was just available to the Government today, as I understand it, from this witness. The Government has complied in every respect and made every effort to comply, and has given counsel for the defendants every information that it had at the time the court entered its order concerning answers to be given to the interrogatories.

The Court: In a case of this character we should not bind too strictly either side by the admissions, especially if they are omissions. In other words, while the answers to the interrogatories lay down the pattern and it should not be departed from in any important particular, deviations or omissions should not be disallowed, because, after all, this is a court of equity. And, as Judge Wilbur taught me the first time I sat with him after my appointment to this bench in a statutory three-judge court, he said that [fol. 612] any evidence goes in a court of equity because ultimately we are supposed to disregard what is not material, which, of course, makes the sky and your particular wish or the way you feel after breakfast the limit.

However, I do not mean to promulgate any such latitude. But I think, within the limits I have indicated, any departure by either side from what is in the answers to the interrogatories will be allowed.

Mr. Hall: If your Honor please, I do not want to argue the point, but your Honor may have overlooked the form in which the Government has submitted its answers to the interrogatories, in certain cases posting us, without giving us the names of the dealers who would be referred to, they gave us area or the dates. They gave us, in other words, the intimation that they would cover dealers other than the dealers listed in their answers. No such intimation is given with respect to this witness who is now on the stand.

The Court: All right. I have already ruled.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will ask to have marked a document produced by the defendants under Paragraph I, subpoena No. 2, TBA agreement between the Standard Oil and one A. J. Knutson, dated April 15, 1947.

Mr. Hall: Are you offering it into evidence?

Mr. Driscoll: Not yet. I am having it identified.

The Clerk: It is Government's Exhibit 31 marked for [fol. 613] identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. What business, Mr. Barmby, were Parrell & Freis in at the time that you first contacted them?

A. Well, they were in a body and fender works.

Q. What is the address of that?

A. Of the Parrell & Freis?

Q. Yes.

A. They are on Ninth Street between X and Broadway.

Q. And did you sell them Macmillan Ring-Free oil at that time?

A. I did.

Q. Did you continue thereafter to sell it to them? Do you sell them your oil now?

A. No; I don't.

Q. When did they cease buying it?

A. In the summer of 1947, of last year. It was in the latter part of the summer and I sold them one order of Macmillan Ring-Free. At the time there was some kind of a contract in with the Chevron station at Ninth and Broadway.

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. I move to strike out that portion of the answer beginning with the words "at the time" they were contracting with the Chevron station.

The Court: Well, that is a conclusion. That may be stricken.

By Mr. Driscoll:

[fol. 614] Q. What business are Parrell & Freis in now?

A. They are in the body and fender business.

Q. Do they have any other business besides body and fender?

A. They have a station, Chevron station.

Q. Where is that Chevron station located?

A. At Ninth and Broadway.

Q. Do you know when they acquired that Chevron station?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is objected to as calling for speculation and conjecture, no proper foundation laid.

The Court: If he knows, he may answer.

Mr. Driscoll: What is the ruling?

The Court: If he knows. I will overrule the objection.

A. I don't know.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Do you sell Parrell & Freis your products at the Chevron service station operated by them?

A. At present?

Q. Have you at any time?

A. I took one shipment at the Chevron station, Ninth and Broadway, last year.

Q. Was that shipment displayed?

A. No; it was not.

Q. What did they do with it?

A. Put it in the back in their oil room.

[fol. 615] Q. Since delivery of that order have you been successful in selling them any more oil?

A. I have not been successful.

Q. What are the trade practices of the Inland Oil Company as distributors of Macmillan Ring-Free oil as to the display of advertising of your products?

Mr. Hall: Pardon me. May I have the question read?

(Question read by the reporter.)

Mr. Hall: I think, if the court please, that enters an area that I was barred from on previous Government witnesses. I recall attempting to ask some of those witnesses as to the methods of disposing of their products and retailing, and was shut out by Government counsel's own objection.

Mr. Driscoll: Your Honor, this has only to do with the display of advertising.

The Court: Read the question.

(Question again read by the reporter.)

The Court: I do not think it is material. I think, as to some other witness, it was brought in indirectly, whether they did it in that manner or not, but the methods of business are not material. It is already in the record that some of the concerns other than the defendants allowed display of their own or other advertisements, and there is at least an indication that Standard did not. We are not concerned with methods, because the display or [fol. 616] non-display of advertising signs could not, by stretch of the imagination, result in a restriction on commerce.

Mr. Driscoll: Prohibition, your Honor, of an equal opportunity to display or advertise the products is certainly a limitation.

The Court: That may be true, but that cannot be proved by the fact that another company allowed it.

Mr. Driscoll: Well, your Honor, the question is aimed at this particular station, as to whether or not having oil, this competing oil, the Chevron station would permit it to be advertised. Now, an equality and opportunity to advertise wares is certainly as much a part as an opportunity to sell itself.

The Court: I did not take it that that question called for what he knew they were doing. If you want to call for conversation whether he asked——

Mr. Hall: I do not want to object to anything that was done——

The Court: I beg pardon?

Mr. Hall: I do not want to object to anything that was done, your Honor.

The Court: If you want to show that he asked to put some of his placards and signs up, and the man said he could not do so, I will allow it. But I did not so understand your question.

[fol. 617] Mr. Hall: I want to make my objection clear, that I am objecting simply to a question which calls for the policy of his company with respect to advertising.

The Court: Of his company?

Mr. Hall: Yes.

The Court: Yes; that is right. I so understood the question.

Mr. Driscoll: Very well, your Honor, I will withdraw the question.

The Court: Go ahead.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. At the time that you delivered this case of oil to this Chevron station did they accept your advertising signs and wares?

A. No.

Q. Did you speak to them with respect to their placing it underneath the counter in the back of the station as you have testified?

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. No conversation, please. That is objected to as calling for hearsay.

The Court: Yes. I will sustain that.

Mr. Driscoll: At this time, your Honor, the Government will move the admission of the exhibits identified as No. 31, a dealer TBA agreement between A. J. Knutson and Standard Oil Company, April 15, 1947; and Exhibit No. 30 for identification between Joe E. Morgan and the Standard Oil [fol. 618] Company; and assignment of a dealer TBA agreement.

Mr. Hall: Why don't you let the documents speak for themselves, Mr. Driscoll?

Mr. Driscoll: I wanted to identify the date of them, Mr. Counsel.

Mr. Hall: You do not have to do that.

Mr. Driscoll: Dated May 7, 1946.

Mr. Hall: Each of the documents in each of the exhibits is objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: They may be received. Objection is overruled.

The Clerk: That is 30 and 31 admitted into evidence.

Mr. Driscoll: And likewise, the Government moves the admission of the document which has been marked for identification as Exhibit No. 29.

Mr. Hall: Each and all of the documents in that exhibit are objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: The objection is overruled. They may be admitted.

The Clerk: 29 in evidence.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. The service station, Mr. Barmby, at Courtland, California that you testified to being operated by Mr. Morgan was the station formerly operated by Mr. Waterworth?

A. That is right.

[fol. 619] Q. And its address, please, if you know it.

A. Well, I would say it is a half a mile south of Courtland.

Mr. Driscoll: Very well. You may examine.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How long have you been a salesman for lubricating oil products?

A. About three years.

Q. What was your business or occupation before that?

A. Well, I was in a refining business with the Brighton Oil Company.

Q. Brighton Oil Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Where was that located?

A. That was out on Folsom Boulevard.

Q. What were your duties in connection with that business?

A. That was picking up oil and selling——

Q. Picking up what?

A. I used to pick up the old crank case oil.

Q. Oh, this was one of these re-cleaning oil businesses?

A. Yes.

Q. You said Folsom Boulevard. Where is that located, [fol. 620] Sacramento?

A. That is out east of Sacramento.

Q. So you were in the re-cleaning oil business up until three years ago, is that correct?

A. Well, my father-in-law sold out and then I was not with the company any more.

Q. How many years were you in that business?

A. I was about three and one-half years.

Q. Since you have been a salesman for this Ring-Free oil, how many counties—let's see, now; that is three years you have been that kind of salesman, is it?

A. Yes; it is.

Q. Well, that would take it back to the years 1945, '46, and '47, is that right?

A. End of '45 up until the present time; that is right.

Q. Now, you were soliciting accounts within a certain area up here north towards Sacramento, weren't you?

A. That is right.

Q. How big an area was it during those three years?

A. Five counties.

Q. Five counties?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many accounts did you solicit during those three years in those five counties? I am not trying to hold [fol. 621] you down to any figure but just your best approximation.

Mr. Driscoll: Perhaps it would help, counsel, if you would ask him what types of account.

Mr. Hall: Thank you, sir. I will bear that in mind.

A. Oh, about 350.

Q. 350?

A. Yes, accounts.

Q. You would say that was a maximum number of accounts that you were soliciting during that three-year period in those counties?

A. I would say that is approximately the accounts that I have that I contact personally myself.

Q. Yes. Well, I am asking you for your best estimate of all the accounts.

A. That is right. Yes.

Q. That you solicited in those counties and have solicited during a period of three years, whether they are your regular customers or whether they are not.

A. I gave you the approximate customers, what I have at present myself.

Q. That is what I thought you were doing. Those are your regular customers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, how many over and above your regular customers have you solicited during those three years in those [fol. 622] counties, approximately?

A. Well, let's see. I will say probably about 900.

Q. 900. Are you including in the 900 the first figure you gave of your customers?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you do not always keep a customer, do you?

A. Certainly not.

Q. The customer changes, doesn't he?

A. That is true.

Q. That has been frequently the case during the last three years?

A. Yes.

Q. There have been many cases during the last three years where a customer would stop handling this Ring-Free oil that you have been selling?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: That is all, thank you.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Mr. Barmby, for the information of counsel, what oil is it that you sell and dispense?

A. Macmillan Ring-Free motor oil.

Mr. Hall: Isn't that what I called it? Did I miscall that thing?

[fol. 623] Mr. Driscoll: Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Barmby, these new customers that you have attempted to testify to, have you been able to add any Chevron stations to your account?

A. No.

Mr. Driscoll: That is all.

Mr. Hall: May I have the last question, please?

(Last question and answer read by the reporter.)

Recross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, you said, Mr. Barmby, that you lost some accounts.

A. That is true.

Q. You recall that testimony. Those accounts that you lost did not all start to handle Chevron products at the time you lost them, did they?

A. That is true.

Q. What?

A. Yes; that is true.

Q. All of them?

The Witness: Would you state that again? I am sorry.

Mr. Driscoll: He said that was true.

The Witness: I said, "That is true."

By Mr. Hall:

[fol. 624] Q. In other words, the only accounts you ever lost were people that went into the handling of Chevron products?

A. Oh, no, no.

Q. Well, I did not think you meant that.

A. No.

[fol. 625] Q. As a matter of fact, you lost customers that handle products having nothing to do with Chevron, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. And who went into products having nothing to do with Chevron, isn't that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And who took products in place of your products, which were not Chevron products?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. But it is also true, I think you testified, Mr. Barmby, that each time a dealer changed to Chevron you lost him, and you have never added a Chevron account?

A. That's true.

Mr. Driscoll: That is all. You may be excused. And, your Honor, this witness, so far as the Government is concerned, may be released from the subpoena.

The Court: All right. We will take our usual adjournment at this time until 2:00 o'clock.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock p. m.)

[fol. 626] Los Angeles, California;
Thursday, May 6, 1948, 2:00 P. M.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will call Mr. Floyd Hofto.

FLOYD HOFTO, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Floyd Hofto.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Hofto?

A. Seattle, Washington.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. Sales manager for McDonald & Company.

Q. What is the business of McDonald & Company?

A. They are distributors for MacMillan oil, Western Washington.

Q. MacMillan Ring-free oil?

A. Yes.

Q. In what territory?

A. Western Washington.

Q. When were you first employed by the McDonald Company?

A. About a year ago, March, 1947.

Q. What was your position at that time?

[fol. 627] A. Salesman for MacMillan oil.

Q. Prior to that time had you had any experience in the sale of lubricating oils and greases?

A. Working with my dad only, who was in a similar business in Montana.

Q. Generally, what are your duties as sales manager of McDonald & Company?

A. Supervising sales in the area.

Q. Have you had any other employment with McDonald & Company?

A. I sold oil the first three months in his employment.

Then I went into selling his power saws, for which he is a national distributor.

Q. For how long were you in that?

A. I was put back in oil in December of last year.

Q. In your present capacity?

A. Yes.

Q. While you were employed as a salesman a year ago, 1947, what type or what class of trade did you call on to sell the products?

Mr. Hall: May I have the question read, please?

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. Service stations and garages.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. And in the course of your duties did you call on Chevron service stations?

[fol. 628] A. We called on all of them.

Q. Are you acquainted with the Gibbs service station at Issaquah, Washington?

A. Yes, I called on him about a year ago.

Q. You called on him for what purpose?

A. We wanted to sell him oil.

Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful in selling him?

A. Unsuccessful. I don't recall the exact reason, but we just couldn't sell him.

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. No reasons; no conversation.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. That was about when, if you recall, or as nearly as you can recall?

A. About a year ago. I think it was in April.

Q. Have you called on him since?

A. No, it costs money to call on him.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. I move to strike out the answer beginning with the words "costs money."

The Court: It may be stricken out; that portion of the answer may be stricken. The question may be repeated to him, to see if he can answer it. Read the question.

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. No.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Are you acquainted with a service station that is operated by one Tangney, North Green Lake Way at 50th, Seattle?

[fol. 629] A. Yes.

Q. What type of station does he have?

A. That is a Chevron station.

Q. Have you called on him to sell your MacMillan oil?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you successful?

Mr. Hall: No proper foundation has been laid, and I object to it on that ground.

The Court: I think you ought to give us an idea of the time, approximately.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Approximately when did you first call on Mr. Tangney?

A. That was also about a year ago.

Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful in selling him?

A. Unsuccessful.

Q. Are you familiar with a service station operator at Cornwall and Champion, in Bellingham, Washington, run by Floyd Fessler?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you call on him to sell your product?

A. I also called on him approximately a year ago, to sell oil.

Q. Were you successful in selling him?

A. Unsuccessful.

Mr. Driscoll: At this time, the Government would like [fol. 630] to have marked for identification the documents produced by the defendant under Paragraph I of the second subpoena, No. 15, 13 and 14 for identification.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibits 32, 33 and 34 for identification.

[fol. 631] Q. Are you familiar with a service station, the McDonald Service Station, located at 7235 Sand Point Way, Seattle?

A. Yes.

Q. What type of station is that?

A. That is a Chevron station.

Q. Have you ever called on it?

A. Well, about a year ago, also in April, I believe.

Q. Pardon?

A. I think I called on him about a year ago in April, also.

Q. Were you successful in selling your Macmillan oil to him?

A. No, sir.

Q. Are you familiar with the station operated by one Al Wilson, of a service station at First Avenue and Boston, Seattle, Washington?

A. Yes.

Q. What type of station is that?

A. That is a Chevron station.

Q. Have you ever called on him?

A. Yes; also about a year ago.

Q. Did you sell him any of your Ring-Free Macmillan oil?

A. No.

[fol. 632] Q. Have you ever been successful in selling him oil?

A. No. I haven't called back.

Q. Have you ever been successful in selling oil to any of these stations that you have testified to?

A. No.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will ask to have marked for identification documents produced by the defendants, items 16 and 17, Paragraph I of the second subpoena.

The Clerk: Government's 35 and 36 marked for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Do you know a station operated by Pete Argenti at 26 Northeast and East 55th Street in Seattle?

Mr. Hall: Counsel, pardon me. What was the name?

Mr. Driscoll: Pete Argenti, A-r-g-e-n-t-i.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of a service station does Mr. Argenti operate?

A. That is a Chevron station.

Q. When you in your testimony here have said "Chevron service station" what products do those stations handle?

A. Well, the Standard products.

Q. The products sold and distributed by Standard Oil of California through their Chevron dealers?

A. That is right.

[fol. 633] Q. About when did you call on Mr. Argenti?

A. Well, that was also about a year ago.

Q. This was during the time in which you have testified you were a salesman out in the field?

A. That is right.

Q. Were you successful in selling Mr. Argenti?

A. No. He said he would pick it up if he ever wanted it.

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. Just a minute. I move to strike the answer of the witness as to what Mr. Argenti said.

The Court: Yes; that may be stricken out, beginning with "he said he would pick it up if he ever wanted it."

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Are you acquainted with Terry Coogan in Seattle?

A. Yes.

Q. What does Mr. Coogan do?

A. Mr. Coogan has a garage and service station that is Chevron.

Q. He operates a Chevron service station?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you called on Mr. Coogan to sell him Macmillan Ring-Free oil?

A. Also about a year ago.

Q. Have you been successful in selling him?

A. No.

[fol. 634] Q. Have you ever been successful?

A. No.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will ask to have marked for identification documents produced under Paragraph I of the second subpoena, items number 19 and number 20.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibits 37 and 38 marked for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Are you familiar with the Chevron service station located at 2232 Colby Street in Everett?

A. Yes.

Q. Operated by Hadley and Evans?

A. Yes.

Q. What type or what kind of service station do they operate?

A. That is a Chevron station and garage.

Q. Have you attempted to sell them your oil?

A. Yes; also about a year ago.

Q. And were you successful?

A. No. They had received calls for it.

Mr. Hall: Now, just one minute. The witness has answered the question. I ask the court to instruct this witness to refrain from comments as to occurrences at the station or as to conversations.

The Court: Probably he is not used to testifying in court. You can testify to what the results of your calls [fol. 635] were, but you cannot testify to what a man said. If you are asked whether you received an order or were successful in placing an order you can say, "yes." That is sufficient.

The Witness: Thank you. I will remember that.

The Court: All right.

[fol. 636] Q. Do you know a service station, Mr. Hofto, which is located at Renton, Washington, called the Louis Peretti Super Service Station?

A. Yes.

Q. What type of station is that?

A. That is a Chevron station.

Mr. Hall: What place was that, Bremerton?

Mr. Driscoll: Renton, R-e-n-t-o-n.

Q. Did you attempt to try to sell that service station your Ring-Free motor oil?

A. Yes.

Q. And with what results?

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. No foundation has been laid as to the time. Objected to on that ground.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. About when was your call on the Louis Peretti Super Service Station?

A. About a year ago.

Q. You attempted to sell him your oil?

A. Yes.

Q. With what result?

A. I did not sell him.

Q. Do you know a service station in Maple Valley, Seattle, operated by Mr. Ayres?

A. That is a Chevron station. It is out of Renton, not Seattle.

[fol. 637] Q. And about the same time as these other events you have testified to did you call on him and attempt to sell him?

A. That is right.

Q. Were you successful there?

A. No.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will ask that documents produced by the defendants under Paragraph I, items 21, 22, and 23 be marked for identification.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibits 39, 40, and 41 marked for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Now, Mr. Hofto, did you call on service stations in Everett, Washington?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever call on service station operated by Trautman and Spurling in Everett?

A. On this side of Everett. Yes.

Q. And what kind of products do they sell?

A. That is a Chevron station and garage.

Q. Do they sell at that station the products of Standard Oil of California?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you solicit them for business for your oil?

A. That is right.

Q. Were you successful in selling them?

A. No.

[fol. 638] Q. Now, Mr. Hofto, during the period of time in which you were a salesman for the MacMillan, or for McDonald, selling the MacMillan Ring-Free oil—I think your testimony was last spring—how long a time was that, a year ago?

A. It was about three months.

Q. And during the time since you have been sales manager—was that in December?

A. That is right.

Q. During any of that time have you or any of your salesmen been in the City of Seattle, calling upon Chevron stations in the City of Seattle, been able to sell them MacMillan Ring-Free oil?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is objected to as calling for a conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Driscoll: If you know?

Mr. Hall: I have no objection to his asking if they did sell the oil, but his question is: Were they able to sell it?

The Court: I think, in common parlance, that it means the same. Overruled.

A. We have sold some; none of those that are listed.

Mr. Driscoll: Pardon me. I couldn't hear you.

The Witness: We have sold some.

Q. What were the facts of those sales?

[fol. 639] Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. There has been no foundation laid for that. Objected to as calling for speculation and conjecture, incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: I did not quite get the answer to the previous question to this question.

(Record read by the reporter.)

The Court: Overruled.

[fol. 640] Mr. Driscoll: You may answer.

A. Well, we have sold a few of the Chevron stations; not a great deal.

Q. As to those that you have sold, did they display your oil?

A. Only in one case that I know of.

Q. In other cases they did not, do you know what they did with it?

A. So far as I know, it was just stored in a garage, just stored in the building, out of sight.

Q. Did you supply them with advertising media?

A. We naturally offered it when we gave them the oil.

Q. Did they use that?

A. Only in one case.

Q. The oil that you have testified to, the Ring-free oil, that you sold and distributed in Western Washington, what was the source of that, where does it come from? Where do you get it when you do order it?

A. It is shipped from ElDorado, Arkansas.

Q. How do you ship it?

A. We get it by boat.

Q. Do you order directly?

A. We place our orders directly with the MacMillan Petroleum Corporation, ElDorado.

Q. Where is that refinery located?

[fol. 641] A. In ElDorado, Arkansas.

Q. It is received by you by tanker?

A. Well, it is shipped in containers; not tanker necessarily; just a few.

Q. And then redistributed by you?

A. That's right.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will have marked for identification the documents produced by the defendant under Paragraph 1, Item No. 24.

The Court: That is Government's Exhibit 42, marked for identification.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government moves the admission of exhibits marked for identification 32, 33, 35, 36, 37, 38, and 34, and I would like to call the Court's attention to Exhibit 34, being a distributor's agreement under date of August, 1938.

Mr. Hall: The defendants object to each and all of the documents included in each and all of the exhibits offered on the ground that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: Exhibits 32 to 38, inclusive, admitted in evidence.

Mr. Driscoll: If the Court please, the Government moves the admission of the documents marked Exhibits Nos. 39 and 40.

[fol. 642] Mr. Hall: The defendants object to each and all of the documents included in each and all of the exhibits for identification offered, on the ground that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: 39 and 40 admitted in evidence.

Mr. Driscoll: You may cross examine, Mr. Hall.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How many times did you call at this station operated by Gibbs, in Issaquah?

A. I called once.

Q. How many times did you call at the station operated by Bob Tangney?

A. I had to call there twice. Mr. Tangney was not there the first call. I called twice there.

Q. How many times did you call at the station operated by Fessler in Bellingham?

A. Once.

Q. How many times did you call at McDonald's service station, in Seattle?

A. Twice. He was not in the first time.

Q. How many times did you call at the Al Wilson station in Seattle?

A. Once.

[fol. 643] Q. How many times did you call at the Argenti's service station in Seattle?

A. Once.

Q. How many times did you call at Terrence Coogan's garage and service station?

A. Twice.

Q. How many times did you call at Hadley & Evans, in Everett?

A. Once.

Q. How long ago was that?

A. About a year ago.

Q. Do you know what lubricating oil they were handling?

A. Standard.

Q. Any other brand?

A. Not that I noticed.

Q. How many times did you call at Peretti's station at Renton, Washington?

A. Once.

Q. How many times did you call at the Maple Valley station in Seattle operated by Mr. Ayres?

A. Once.

Q. How many times did you call at Trautman & Spurling's, in Everett?

A. Just once.

Q. Did you notice what lubricating oil they were [fol. 644] handling?

A. No, I don't recall what it was.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Mr. Hofto, from what you have just testified on cross-examination, with the exception of Tangney and McDonald, it appears that you called on all of these service stations only once?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you explain to the Court why you did not call upon them more than one time?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. I object to that upon the ground it is incompetent, irrelevant and outside of the issues of the pleadings, no proper foundation laid, and calling for speculation.

The Court: No, I think the question calls for a fact. You asked him how many times. He stated once. It might be that they will argue that that does not mean anything; that the man might not be interested in one call, and might not want anything at the time, and might want something later on. I can't tell what the reason was.

Mr. Hall: I was just clarifying the matters that have been opened up on direct, and we weren't at all clear from the record as to the number of times this man had called on [fol. 645] these various places. That was the purpose of the cross-examination.

The Court: I think it is material to say why he called only once. If it brings in something immaterial, I can strike it out, but otherwise the answer lends itself to speculation as to whether or not it was good salesmanship to try only one time. Salesmen are not supposed to try only once. They are supposed to try several times before they give up ultimately.

Mr. Hall: If the witness gives his own opinion——

The Court: I would strike his answer. You might put it this way: What, if any fact,—so as to be sure we are asking for facts—what, if any fact caused you to limit your call to that one time? It is rather inexpertly framed, but I am trying to avoid the possibility of bringing in hearsay. My object in reframing it is merely to convey to the witness the idea of what we want.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. What are and were the facts which caused you to make only one call on these Chevron service stations?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as too general.

The Court: They are talking about the last one—no, I think the question was directed to all these stations. I will allow you to answer it.

The Witness: We can only call on so many accounts a [fol. 646] day, and, therefore, we weren't encouraged, and we could not go back there.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. How do you mean you weren't encouraged?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute——

The Court: That is a good dictionary word. That has a definite meaning. I will sustain the objection.

Mr. Driscoll: That is all.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: Call your next witness.

Mr. Driscoll: If your Honor please, and counsel, if there is no objection may Mr. Hofto be excused? He is from Seattle.

The Court: Yes, I will excuse all these gentlemen.

Mr. Driscoll: Do you want him any more?

Mr. Hall: No.

GEORGE W. F. JOHNSON, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?
The Witness: George W. F. Johnson.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Johnson?
A. Las Vegas, Nevada.
[fol. 647] Q. What is your employment or occupation?
A. I am general manager of the McQuay Supply Company.
Q. What is the nature of the business of the McQuay Supply Company?
A. We are distributors for Quaker State oil in the area surrounding Las Vegas, together with other side lines.
Q. From what source do you obtain that Quaker State oil?
A. We order it from Los Angeles, but it isn't always shipped out of Los Angeles.
Q. Is ordering and sales part of your duties as manager?
A. I think so.
Q. Are you familiar with the source from which Quaker State oils and greases are shipped?
A. I believe so.
Q. From what source are they shipped?
A. We get some of it from Los Angeles, and the bulk of it comes from Oil City, Pennsylvania.
Q. Do your duties include sales contact with the service stations and garage trade?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you made any calls on Chevron service stations?
A. Yes.
[fol. 648] Q. Calling your attention to the service station located at Henderson, Nevada, operated by Russell Stephens, have you called on his station?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you made sales of Quaker State oil?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When did those sales commence?
A. In the early part of 1946.

Q. Did sales continue after that?

A. Approximately three or four months.

Q. When was the last time that you were able to sell oil to this station, if you did sell oil to the station?

A. I am not prepared to answer exactly.

Q. Approximately?

A. The middle of 1946.

Q. And thereafter did you attempt to make further sales?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you instruct other employees of your company to make contacts with this station?

A. I did.

Q. Were sales made?

A. No.

Mr. Somerville: At this time the Government would like to have marked for identification the document relating to [fol. 649] the service station at Henderson, Nevada, produced under Paragraph I, Item No. 28 of Subpoena No. 2.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 43.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. I call your attention now to the service station located at 1238 South Fifth Street, Las Vegas, operated by Floyd Johnson. Have you attempted to sell, or made sales of Quaker State oil at that station?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did those sales commence?

A. In October there was a sale made from our establishment to that place.

Q. October of what year?

A. 1946.

Q. Were additional sales made?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were additional attempts to sell made?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you have any containers for storage of Quaker State oil at this service station?

A. I am not prepared to answer that question.

Q. Very well.

Mr. Somerville: At this time the Government would like to mark for identification the documents produced in response to Subpoena No. 2, Paragraph 1, Item 29.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 44, marked for [fol. 650] identification.

Mr. Somerville: The Government offers in evidence Exhibit 43 for identification.

Mr. Hall: The document, and each and all of its part, and each and all of the documents included in the offer are objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: 43 in evidence.

[fol. 651] Mr. Somerville: That is all.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Johnson?

A. Las Vegas, Nevada.

Mr. Somerville: That is all. You may step down.

The Court: Gentlemen, before you call the next witness we will take a short recess. However, I feel I ought to make an announcement at the present time for the benefit of the witnesses and also for the gentlemen of the press, some of whom are specially covering this trial, as concerning the discussions that counsel have had with the court today about the case.

We are very sorry, gentlemen, to hear that Mr. Dixon has lost his father, which necessitates his absence for a few days from the city as he must fly east.

We extend to Mr. Dixon and his family our sympathy. While his father was of quite an advanced age, I know that all of us who have lost parents know the hurt that such a loss occasions no matter at what age it comes.

We have discussed this matter and tried to arrive at some arrangement that would not delay the case any longer than absolutely necessary. As stated at the beginning, the remainder of this month has been assigned to this case other than some law and motion matters which regularly come upon Monday. No other trial is scheduled. However, any loss of any large number of days during the [fol. 652] month will dislocate the calendar for next month because other cases are set, and one of them was specially set for early next month which involves a South American corporation which has been preparing for that trial for some months and which will have witnesses from such country here at the trial.

So, after consulting in the matter, it has been determined that rather than have Mr. Dixon's assistants continue in his absence, which would put him at a disadvantage because upon his return he would have to familiarize himself with what went on, and at times I know from experience it is not satisfactory for the chief counsel in any case to absent himself and then have to later on argue certain phases of the case from a cold record when he was not present in court. It has been decided that when we adjourn today the case will be continued until next Wednesday, which will give Mr. Dixon an opportunity to fly east and return.

We shall try to make up for the loss of time, and counsel have been cooperative in the matter. I may say that sitting in this type of case—I have had rather extended experience in the trial of cases of this type both in this District and elsewhere—counsel for the Government have proceeded very rapidly and counsel for the defendants have not in any way by undue cross-examinations retarded the progress of the case. In fact, I think they deserve a compliment for limiting the cross-examinations strictly to [fol. 653] what is necessary.

I think that was about all I wished to state for the record at the present time, unless counsel desire to add anything to what I have said.

Mr. Hall: May the record show, your Honor, that defense counsel join with your Honor in expressing our sympathy to Mr. Dixon?

The Court: All right. We will take a short recess and then we will continue.

(Short recess.)

[fol. 654] Mr. Somerville: The Government will call Mr. Beman as our next witness.

JOHN B. BEMAN, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?
The Witness: John B. Beman.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What is your residence address, Mr. Beman?
A. 131 South Citrus, Los Angeles.
Q. What is your occupation or business, sir?
A. I am president and general manager of the Pennzoil Company.

The Court: You are also an attorney at law?
The Witness: Yes, I am also an attorney at law, but partly reformed.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What is the business of the Pennzoil Company, Mr. Beman?
A. The business of the Pennzoil Company is the marketing,—the purchasing and marketing of lubricating oils and the manufacturing and marketing of so-called lubricants, or commonly known as greases.
Q. Do your duties include supervision over the ordering of oils and greases and sales and distribution of those [fol. 655] oils and greases?
A. They do, except we do not order greases. We manufacture greases.
Q. From what source do you order your oil?
A. Our oils are ordered mainly from Oil City, Pennsylvania.
Q. From what company?
A. The Pennzoil Company, which happens to be a Pennsylvania corporation bearing identically the same name as the California corporation of which I am the president.
Q. What is the relationship between the Pennsylvania corporation and your company?
A. The Pennsylvania corporation owns a portion of the stock of the Pennzoil Company, a California corporation.
Q. Your corporation, then, is the distributing medium for Pennzoil products manufactured by the Pennsylvania company?

A. It is.

Q. What is the area that you distribute and market Pennzoil oils produced in Pennsylvania?

A. In the so-called eleven Western States, and a very small portion of the State of Texas.

Q. Do the eleven Western States include California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah and Nevada?

A. They do.

[fol. 656] Q. Please inform the Court, Mr. Beman, of the method and manner in which the Pennzoil Company of California distributes and markets their products from the refineries, and sources that you have indicated?

A. May I simplify that by talking first about Pennzoil?

Q. Yes.

A. The Pennzoil Company purchases oil from Oil City on orders placed from here by letter or wire for Pennzoil, which is delivered to our plant at Vernon, and to Emeryville, just outside of Oakland, California, Portland, or Seattle, for use and distribution in the three coastal States.

In the three Coastal States we do business primarily through divisions and branches as distinguished from distributors. In the eight remaining States and a small portion of Texas, we do business through distributors. We do business through a distributor in Western Washington, and in the counties in California known as El Centro and San Diego. In one or two outlying points we do business through distributors, even in these three States where mainly we do business directly through branches and divisions.

Q. From what source are shipments made with respect to your distributors, speaking now of lubricating oils?

A. The oil known as Pennzoil, which is marketed by our distributors, of whom there are about nine in the eight [fol. 657] States, other than the three coastal States, is ordered by these distributors by orders placed with us. We in turn then place an order with the Pennzoil Company at Oil City, Pennsylvania, ordering and directing shipment of the particular quantity of oil directly to the distributor who shall have placed the order, and then we pay for the oil as the purchaser from the Pennzoil Company at Oil City, within ten days of the receipt of invoice indicating the shipment has been made. And we thereupon invoice the material, the oil, to the distributor, and bill him for it, and these particular shipments are made to him mainly by car, either tank car, or if it is packaged oil, in box cars. Occasionally, in the case of emergency oil is shipped from our Vernon plant, or our Emeryville plant, or our Portland plant, to someone of these distributors who are in what we might refer to as the mountain territory.

Q. Would oil from those sources possibly cross State lines?

A. It necessarily does.

Q. With respect to the movement or flow of lubricating oils, is it frequent, constant, or what is the nature of it, Mr. Beman?

A. Well, for example, eight or nine cars are shipped out of Oil City each and every month, to some of our distributors in the mountain territory. One or two shipments are received at our Vernon plant, by shipment, first [fol. 658] from Oil City to Baltimore, where it is loaded in tanks of ships, and brought through the Panama Canal to Wilmington, and from there by tanker to our plant at Vernon. That ship may go on with a portion of its load to San Francisco, or to Oakland, where it is put in tank cars, and goes to the Emeryville plant, and some of it may go to Portland, and occasionally to Seattle.

Q. Are shipments made pursuant to orders received from your distributors?

A. These particular boat shipments would not be ordered by distributors, because those boat shipments constitute a supply for our three so-called coastal states, and our branches, but the distributor business is mainly, as I have indicated, in tank car shipments made directly to us out of Oil City.

[fol. 659] Q. With respect to greases, would you tell us from what sources those greases originate, and to what points they are shipped by the company?

A. Greases are made up very largely of oil, and the greases contain other substances, stearic acid, and materials that I would not attempt to learn, even much less recite; but the oils which are component parts of those greases are sometimes Pennsylvania oil, which we take out of our bulk storage, or they may be western oil, California oil,

These greases are processed, and, as we would say, manufactured in our grease plant here at Vernon. The grease that is manufactured there is shipped in cars to our other Branch Division points, and to all of our distributors.

In other words, all of the grease, or so-called lubricants that we market, is manufactured here at our Vernon plant for the entire jurisdiction, the eleven western states, and our foreign distribution, too.

Q. With respect to the sales policy of your company, do you market directly to the service station and garage trade in the three coastal states you have mentioned?

A. Yes.

Q. And have you salesmen that contact this trade?

A. We do.

[fol. 660] Q. How many salesmen do you have?

Mr. Hall: Do you mean in the seven western states, Mr. Somerville?

Mr. Somerville: No, I was thinking with reference to the three coastal states.

A. May I say we have no salesmen except in the three coastal states, with the exception of one so-called distributor-representative, who might be classed as salesman, and he calls on the distributors of the so-called mountain territory.

Q. With respect to your distributors, does the Pennzoil Company do a certain supervisory work or joint-promotional work for these distributors?

A. Yes, to a substantial extent.

Q. And that would include advertising and sales promotion, would it?

A. That's right.

Q. Are you familiar, Mr. Beman, with the grades, brands, qualities of oil bought by and sold generally to the motoring public, including those produced and refined by the Standard Oil Company of California?

A. Generally speaking, yes.

Q. Would you say that those oils and greases manufactured by Standard Oil Company are comparable to Pennzoil oils and greases?

[fol. 661] A. I have heard that word "comparable" used. Frankly, I don't know what it means with relation to this case. If you mean competitive in that sense——

The Court: I think he means in the same class, so far as the market is concerned.

A. Well, there are several markets, your Honor.

The Court: The market in which you operate.

A. The market isn't only a matter of location. It is a matter of individual choice, too.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Let us talk about the service station and garage market.

A. There are some smart service station and garage people too, and I am not attempting to be facetious, and that's why I say, if you mean what oil is in competition, why yes, I know several of them.

[fol. 662] Q. And they serve a like utility as far as use is concerned?

A. Well, I am not expert enough to say no, but I don't think they do as far as utility is concerned.

Q. Does your company instruct its salesmen to contact Chevron service stations and the service trade generally?

A. We do.

Q. Going back to the matter of comparability, Mr. Beman, your Pennzoil products are competitive with various grades and brands of Standard Oil oils?

A. That is right.

Mr. Somerville: I think that will be all.

The Court: All right.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. This corporation of which you are president is a California corporation?

A. Organized under the laws of the State of California: yes.

Mr. Somerville: Mr. Hall, will you excuse me. Did the witness finish his answer to next to the last question I asked him, the one preceding that last question?

The Witness: What was the question?

(Record read by the reporter.)

[fol. 663] Mr. Somerville: That is all.

The Court: All right.

Q. By Mr. Hall: Are you an officer of the Pennsylvania Corporation of the same name?

A. The one, the Pennsylvania company, I am not.

Q. Does the Pennsylvania company have an office in California?

A. It does not.

Q. In the States of California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Arizona, Utah, and Idaho, which I will for convenience call the seven western states, what were the number of retail outlets handling Pennzoil during the year 1946, approximately?

A. I can only give it approximately. I would say between not less than eight and probably not more than twelve thousand accounts.

Q. And what was the approximate number of retail outlets handling Pennzoil in those seven western states during the year 1947?

A. My mind wandered to that past answer because——

Q. What, your mind wandered?

A. My mind wandered to the answer to the last question because I was wondering whether that number "12,000" would cover it if we include all of the distributor accounts, but I think it was right. I think my answer was right, not less than eight and probably not more than twelve thousand accounts.

[fol. 664] Mr. Hall: Will you read now my last question, Mr. Reporter?

(Last previous question read by the reporter.)

A. Approximately that number, 8,000 to 12,000.

Q. When was it, Mr. Boman, that you backslid from the legal profession into the oil business?

A. Well, I started the day I was admitted to practice in 1912. In 1916 I became an attorney for the Pennzoil Company and that was the first backslip I made.

Mr. Somerville: I object to that kind of question, your Honor, on the ground it is outside the scope of the pleadings.

The Witness: It calls for a conclusion, too, if I may object, myself.

Q. By Mr. Hall: You have been familiar, then, with the affairs of Pennzoil Company since about 1916?

A. That is right.

Q. How many retail outlets handled Pennzoil in the seven western states during the year 1916, approximately?

Mr. Somerville: I object to this line of questioning as being irrelevant and immaterial.

A. Well, the answer——

The Court: Just a minute.

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute, Mr. Beman. Your counsel is objecting.

[fol. 665] The Court: What was the question?

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Court: Overruled. I am being consistent. I have allowed that to be asked, but the method of procedure I am not allowing. As I pointed out, comparison may be useful in determining what amount of restraint there may be, if any. All right.

A. I would say there were probably less than 2,000 at that time. The company was only a little over two years old.

Q. By Mr. Hall: Is Pennzoil lubricating oils sold as packaged goods or are they sold in bulk?

A. Both in packages and in bulk.

Q. You mentioned some plant near here from which your lubricating oil coming from the east was distributed. I think maybe it was in Vernon, is that correct?

A. Oil is distributed from Vernon. The Pennzoil, if we are talking about that, is distributed from Vernon to our San Diego and El Centro distributor, to our branch at Colton, to our branch at Santa Barbara, and to our branch at Bakersfield.

Q. What do you have down at Vernon in the way of a plant? Is it a warehouse or is it a processing plant?

A. We have a warehouse with a blending room and a grease manufacturing room.

[fol. 666] Q. Is this Pennzoil lubricating oil that comes into Vernon blended at Vernon?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Do you have any other plants in California similar at all to the Vernon plant?

A. At Emeryville, a suburb of Oakland, we have a plant at which blending and packaging—and I refer to canning—are part of the operation. No greases are manufactured there.

Q. Do you do any canning down at Vernon?

A. We do.

Q. Then, if I get the picture, Mr. Beman, it is this: That your blending stocks come in from the east and they go either to Vernon or Emeryville?

A. Come in from the east.

Q. Well, wherever they come from.

A. Well, you said "they come in to the east."

Q. Come from the east.

A. That is right.

Q. They come from the east to Emeryville and Vernon?

A. That is right.

Q. And at both those places they are blended?

A. That is right.

Q. And then they are distributed from those two centers to various branches, is that correct?

[fol. 667] A. That is right.

Q. Is it true that the Pennzoil lubricating oil that eventually finds its way into retail outlets in California would come originally from either the Emeryville plant or the Vernon plant?

A. Well, probably yes. Not originally but——

Q. Well, I mean it would come from either one of those, one or the other of those plants?

A. That is right. No other intermediary in California.

Q. Yes.

A. That is right.

Q. I think you said a moment ago that Pennzoil lubricating oil is furnished both in bulk and as a packaged goods, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. Which do you retail the most of in the seven western states, the stuff that comes in the bulk or the stuff that comes in the packages?

A. Offhand, I would say about 50 per cent in the—now, I have to think in terms of 11 western states, Mr. Hall, but I assure you that the other four would be typical of the seven to which you refer. And I would say that in the 11 western states probably 50-50 would be the best ratio, the nearest ratio that I can guess.

Q. Does your company as a matter of policy try to push [fol. 668] one rather than the other? I am speaking now of packaged goods, on the one hand, and bulk stock, on the other.

A. No. I think we leave that pretty largely as a matter of choice to the dealer.

Q. How many grades of Pennzoil will a retail outlet ordinarily carry?

A. Well, the smaller ones, maybe two grades, if you are referring, Mr. Hall, to the SAE number, that is SAE 10, 20 or 30. Is that what you mean by grade?

Q. I am speaking as a lawyer who has not yet backslid into the oil business, Mr. Beman, and when I speak of the grade I think of what the ordinary ~~layman thinks~~ of as maybe, light, medium, and heavy. Do you have those?

[fol. 669] A. Yes, but we call them 10, 20, and 40 or 20, 30 and 40, depending on where we want to start to be light and where we want to end to be heavy.

Q. Yes. Are there any other subdivisions of your product besides what you have just referred to of light, medium and heavy?

A. In the Pennzoil there are none.

Q. You only have three grades, then?

A. No; I didn't say that.

Q. Well, how many grades do you have?

A. Well, from 10 to 90, so far as I have ever heard. I don't remember ever hearing of any more than that.

Q. How many separate grades would there be?

A. 10, 20, 30, 40, 50, 60, 70, 80, and 90.

Q. Nine grades?

A. If you have counted right. I didn't count.

Q. I counted them up as you were going along. I think that is nine.

A. All right.

Q. And now, if they were handled as bulk stock, each would take a separate tank, would they not?

A. Certainly.

Q. You could not mix them in the same tank and still preserve the identity of the grade, could you?

A. You could not.

Q. Do you furnish the tanks to the retail outfits?

[fol. 670] A. We have furnished some; yes.

Q. I mean furnish free of charge?

Mr. Somerville: I object to this question as incompetent and immaterial.

A. In some cases——

Mr. Somerville: It is irrelevant and immaterial, and I object to it.

The Court: It is a general question. I do not want the witness to go into any great detail into the method of operation. All right; you may answer the question.

A. In some cases we have supplied the dealer with the highboys or what we call sealed containers as the dispensing unit for oils that they purchased from us.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Without cost to the dealer?

A. Yes; we have done it without cost to dealers.

Q. Generally speaking, during the year 1946 did you sell all Penzoil lubricating oil you could get your hands on?

A. In 1946?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

Q. You did not?

A. No.

Q. What did you do with that that you did not sell?

A. We were smart enough not to buy it.

Q. You mean you did not buy it from your eastern parent, [fol. 671] is that it?

A. We did not buy it from anybody, because there would be nobody else to buy it from but the eastern parent.

Q. Did your eastern parent in that year have a pretty good surplus of it that it was not selling?

A. Not as——

Mr. Somerville: I object to that question.

The Court: I will sustain the objection.

Mr. Somerville: It is not within the scope of the direct examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Has there been a change in your system in the three coastal Pacific Coast states with respect to your salesmen-distributor situation during the last five or six years?

A. Yes. In the County of San Diego——

Q. Well, I am speaking now generally.

A. No, generally, none.

Q. Have you changed from a salesman to a distributor or a distributor to a salesman during that period?

A. If I understand your question, the answer is no.

Q. Yes. Now, how about the other states of the seven western states we have mentioned?

A. Let us know what you want to know about them. May I ask the reporter?

Q. I think you are right, Mr. Beman. Let me reframe [fol. 672] the question. In the States of Arizona, Nevada, Utah, and Idaho has there been a change during the last five or six years from salesmen to distributors?

A. No; because, as I have said before, we have never had a salesman so far as I know outside the three coastal states, except the one so-called distributor-representative who is out there and, we hope, selling.

Q. That makes it clear. Then that has been your system in the seven western states?

A. That is right.

Q. The system you have described of distribution in the seven western states has been the system pursued by your company during the last six or seven years?

A. That is right.

Q. Your company has an advertising budget for the advertisement of these lubricating oils and greases of Pennzoil, has it?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the advertising budget during 1947?

A. I think it was $210,000.

Q. Was that more or less than the year 1946?

A. May I correct '47?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I think '47 was about $190,000, and I am quite certain that '46 was around $190,000.

[fol. 673] Q. What was your advertising budget before the war, say for the year 1940?

Mr. Sommerville: I object to this line of questioning.

The Court: This is the last question I will allow. There were no objections before. I will allow it to be answered.

The Witness: In 1940, something over two hundred—and I think about 210—and I believe that is where the figure 210—came into my mind. From 1941, that was the budget.

and I went in in 1941 and cut the expenditures down to about $190,000.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How many salesmen do you have now in the area where you use salesmen, and I think you said that was the three Pacific Coast states.

A. 38 to 41 or 42, and then that would probably include one or two division managers—in fact, about four division managers.

Q. That is what you have at the present time?

A. I will correct that. I think it would be more nearly 43 or 44 all told.

Q. How many did you have in the year 1946?

Mr. Somerville: I object—

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: I would say almost identically the same number.

[fol. 674] By Mr. Hall:

Q. Would it be the same for 1947?

A. It would be the same, so far as my memory of the number of salesmen goes which would be back probably to 1939.

Q. How many salesmen did you have in the three Pacific Coast states in the period before the war, say in 1940?

A. Well, as nearly as I can guess, or remember, it would be around 37 salesmen in 1940, and supervisors and managers, also referred to as salesmen, which would bring the number up to some 43 or 44.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: Any redirect examination?

[fol. 675] Redirect examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Mr. Beman, during the past several years have you gained or lost in the number of Chevron accounts?

A. I thought you were going to say in weight. Have we gained or lost in our Chevron accounts?

Q. Yes.

A. I have absolutely no way of knowing. In our Chevron accounts, did you say?

Q. Yes.

A. Did I say we had any Chevron accounts?

Q. That answers the question.

A. Just because we are entitled to them does not mean we have them.

Q. With respect to Pennzoil blended at Vernon, is Vernon the only plant where blending is done in the western area?

A. No, we blend at Portland and at Emeryville.

Q. With respect to the Pennzoil blended at Emeryville and at Vernon, does a great portion find its way across state lines?

A. Speaking of Vernon, I would say not a very great portion of Pennzoil crosses the state line, except the California line into Mexico, and I take it you are not interested in that.

[fol. 676] Q. No. Let us put it this way, Mr. Beman——

A. I want to finish the answer, because I said not in any very great quantity. Occasionally we will ship out of Vernon all that is blended at Vernon, to Salt Lake, which I think is in Utah, or Phoenix, Arizona, and sometimes as far as El Paso, Texas, but those shipments are generally made because of an emergency, a sudden order of some kind.

Q. You testified, Mr. Beman, that blending plants are at Emeryville and Vernon, California and Portland, Oregon?

A. That's right.

Q. With respect to all of the other western states involved, do all shipments of oil come in the blended state?

Mr. Hall: I would like to have the question read.

(Question read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. ——into these other states?

Mr. Hall: The question is unintelligible.

The Court: The witness is having difficulty understanding the question.

Mr. Somerville: Let me reframe the question. Mr. Beman, what states are supplied from Emeryville blending plant?

A. From Emeryville we supply Nevada and a part of Oregon and in emergencies we might send it to Boise.

Idaho, or some place like that. But mainly it would be only Nevada and the southern part of Oregon that would be [fol. 677] supplied out of Emeryville.

Q. What states are supplied from the blending plant at Oregon?

A. Mainly Oregon, and to a very substantial extent the State of Washington and to some extent Idaho.

Q. With respect to all of these states shipments are also coming from Oil City, Pennsylvania, are they not?

A. That's right.

Q. So that the flow of Pennzoil is coming both from Pennsylvania and from these blending plants across state lines into other states?

A. That's right.

Q. Your company is seeking to increase its business, rather than restrict it, isn't it, Mr. Beman?

A. It certainly is.

Q. And orders are taken pursuant to demand for Pennzoil products?

Mr. Hall: I object to that as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: It is leading. I will sustain the objection.

Mr. Somerville: That is all.

[fol. 678] Recross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. With respect to Pennzoil that is sold at dealer outlets in California, is it true that that comes through either the Emeryville plant or the Vernon plant?

A. I think I have answered it. The Pennzoil we sell to dealer outlets in California comes in tank cars by rail, or in boats by water to Vernon or Emeryville. It comes in its two component parts, neutral oil, which is the lighter portion, and bright stock, which is the heavier portion, and those two are mixed, as you laymen would put it, and I still do, or blended into a product known as Pennzoil; and it isn't Pennzoil until it is blended.

Up to the time it is blended it is nearly 100 per cent pure Pennsylvania neutral or 100 per cent Pennsylvania bright stock.

Q. That is true with respect to all of the Pennzoil lubricating oil handled by retail outlets in California?

A. I can't think of any exception. There may be. In 1944 I think some Pennzoil was canned at Oil City, Pennsylvania, at the refinery there, and shipped out in cans.

Q. But that was not your usual method or practice?

A. No, that was because cans happened to be more available at that time, and it would certainly be an emergency [fol. 679] or an exceptional case. And I must qualify that in saying I am not even certain any of that came as far west as California. I know a lot of it was distributed in the mountain territory.

The Court: Anything further?

Mr. Somerville: Yes.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Mr. Beman, are Pennzoil lubricating oils shipped into the western area from Pennsylvania?

A. Into the western area, meaning the eight——

Q. Including the eight states.

A. They are shipped into the 11 western states, but those 11 western states include the eight states into which it is shipped.

Q. In respect to blended products, Mr. Beman, the oil is brought in from Pennsylvania is it not, pursuant to and in satisfaction of a desire on the part of your trade for blended products, for blended lubricating oils?

Mr. Hall: I object to that as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: It is a conclusion. It is a leading question; besides, it is not cross-examination, and from the witness' statement the answer is apparent, that it is blended to satisfy the needs. They are not in business for their health. They are in the business to make a profit. To do so they have to satisfy the demands of customers.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. The products are blended because of and pursuant [fol. 680] to the demand of the trade for blended products?

A. That is correct, to meet the SAE grades, light, medium and heavy, so to speak, and means a mixing in the lighter grades of a larger portion of the neutral as compared with the bright stock, and that varies with the SAE grade. [fol. 681] Obviously, to carry several hundred thousand gallons of each one of these grades would require four or five times the storage space that it does to take those two.

simple, sole component parts and mix them into the quantity that you need, when you need that particular quantity, and that particular grade. The oil is there just the same.

Mr. Somerville: That is all.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: As you know, the Court will adjourn until tomorrow morning, but the case will be continued for further trial to Wednesday, May 12th. All witnesses under subpoena will return at that time, without further notice, unless they are excused by counsel who subpoenaed them.

Mr. Driscoll: If your Honor please, before you do adjourn, there were two or three exhibits that have been marked for identification, and examined by counsel, which the Government would like to offer in evidence, so the record may be clear up to now on the exhibits. They are Exhibits 41, 42 and 44.

The Court: What are they?

Mr. Driscoll: Dealer agreements, subleases——

The Court: Of the same type as those already introduced?

Mr. Driscoll. Yes, your Honor.

Mr. Hall: The defendants object to each and all of the documents offered, under each and all of the numbers re-[fols. 682-683] ferred to, on the ground that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: The objection will be overruled, and the exhibits identified as Exhibits 41, 42 and 44 will be received as exhibits, to bear the same number. And let the record show these proceedings occurred after my observation about the time of adjournment. The Court will adjourn, and the case will be continued as already stated.

(Whereupon, an adjournment was taken until Wednesday, May 12, 1948, at 10:00 o'clock a. m.)

[fols. 684-685] IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES IN AND FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, CENTRAL DIVISION

Honorable, LEON R. YANKWICH, Judge Presiding

No. 6159-Y-Civil

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff,

vs.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA AND STANDARD STATIONS, INC., Defendants

REPORTERS' TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS

Los Angeles, California, Wednesday, May 12, 1948

APPEARANCES:

(As heretofore noted.)

[fol. 686] Los Angeles, California, Wednesday, May 12, 1948, 10:00 A. M.

Mr. Dixon: May it please the court, before proceeding, it is my understanding that it is not the intention of your Honor to hold court on Friday.

The Court: That is correct. However, we will hold court on Monday to make up for it.

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

The Court: I do not know absolutely the hour. I will determine that tomorrow. I have not looked at Monday's calendar. We had a very long law and motion calendar last Monday. They kind of zigzag and I hope the next one is a zag; that it is not very long. At any rate I will let you know tomorrow at what time. I thought, if I have anything in the morning, we might convene a session at 1:00 o'clock and that will give us a long afternoon. But I will tell more definitely tomorrow.

Mr. Dixon: That will be fine, your Honor. The Government has several out of town witnesses that we hope to finish with before court adjourns tomorrow, because they were subpoenaed prior to the knowledge that your Honor has just given us concerning the intention not to hold court on Friday.

The Court: That is all right. Then we will just hold them over, that is all.

[fol. 687] Mr. Dixon: Thank you, your Honor.

The Court: I may say off the record, gentlemen,

(Brief comment off the record.)

Gentlemen, I presume you all saw the group of cases that were decided on May 3rd. There was another one decided last Monday but I have not received it.

I would call your special attention to one of them. I have the slip decision, which, of course, we receive. I presume Mr. Dixon received that one. We get slip decisions immediately. I mean a few days after, although I understand there is one of the law services photostats them and sends them to those who are others than the officials who get them.

The case I refer to is Federal Trade Commission, Petitioner v. Morton Salt Company.

The Clerk: Mr. Dixon just handed me one.

The Court: Yes; these are the same. You have three. You do not have the fourth one. The one that interests us, the fourth one, is Federal Trade Commission v. Morton Salt, and the reason I call your attention to it is because it discusses not only the prior Salt case but it also discusses some of the cases which have been the subject of argument in your briefs or memoranda, namely, the Pattern case. I refer to the pattern case, the Standard Fashion Co. v. Magrane-Houston Co., and comment on it.

It is also interesting for this reason, which does not [fol. 688] appear in the opinion itself but appears in the partial dissent of Justices Jackson and Frankfurter—I have always said that dissents, at times, give an insight into the majority opinion—and that is, that Justice Jackson and Justice Frankfurter seem to feel that the court here has adopted, in passing on the rulings of the Federal Trade Commission in holding certain practices to be discriminatory under the Clayton Act, the criterion of "possibility". In other words, that if the contract has the tendency to have the result, that it is within the inhibitions of the Act and warrants the type of order which was made in this case.

The minority opinion, the partial dissent, feels that that is a departure from the Standard Fashion case and others which, as they read them, call for reasonable certainty; in other words, probabilities that the consequences would flow.

So both of them turn upon the interpretation of the word "may" in Section 2 of the Clayton Act, namely, that they may have that result.

I thought I would call that to your attention for whatever it might be worth and it might gloss, to give an old fashioned word, in this particular case.

I have not seen the other except what is reported in the newspapers and, of course, it is so truncated that you cannot form an idea, but we will probably have it by next [fol. 689] Monday. We usually get them on Saturday. The other three have no particular bearing, as I read them, because they relate merely to the type of control of theatre chains which might be a violation of the Act, both in an action brought directly by the Government and others in actions brought by individuals to recover damages which they might have suffered by reason of the practices which are condemned by the Act.

All right. Now we will proceed.

[fol. 690] Mr. Somerville: The Government calls as its next witness Harry Ellis.

HARRY R. ELLIS, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Harry R. Ellis.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What is your residence address?

A. 1816 South Stoneman Avenue, Alhambra.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. Salesman.

Q. By whom are you employed?

A. The Pennzoil Company.

Q. How long have you been employed in that capacity?

A. 19 years, as a salesman.

Q. In what area or territory, Mr. Ellis, have you been assigned as salesman during this period?

A. During the entire period I have been in one territory, with the exception of two years I spent in San Diego. I was in San Diego from 1940, in January, to 1942, in March. The rest of the time was spent in the area between Los Angeles City limits and the east city limits of the City of Ontario. Then from Garvey Boulevard north to the Foot- [fol. 691] hills, with the exception of Pasadena.

Q. Will you state generally what your duties as salesman are with respect to the trade that you solicit?

A. My duties are to call on all service stations, specialized repair shops and motor car dealers in my territory.

Q. Have you, during the course of your experience, called on those service stations selling petroleum products of the brand of the Standard Oil Company, the Chevron Stations?

A. I have.

Q. Have you ever called on a service station operated by Mr. Lewis S. Crawford, located at 1701 West Main Street, Alhambra?

A. I have.

Q. When did you first make sales, or attempt to sell Pennzoil products at this service station?

A. Well, I sold oil to that station up to the time of January——

Q. I want to know the first time that you called upon Mr. Crawford, approximately.

A. Do you mean the month?

Q. Well, the year.

A. 1945.

Q. Do you recall whose gasoline and petroleum products [fol. 692] Mr. Crawford was retailing at that time?

A. Douglas.

Q. A Douglas station?

A. That's right.

Q. As a result of your calls during that period, were you successful or unsuccessful with respect to selling Pennzoil lubricating oils and greases?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: May I have the question and answer read?

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Witness: May I ask the prosecuting attorney a question: Do you mean at the time, at the Douglas station?

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. 1945, the time you are referring to.

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Did you make additional calls after this original call?

A. Every two weeks.

Q. And you made sales of lubricating oils and greases several times?

A. Yes.

Q. How long did those sales continue?

A. Until January of 1946.

Q. Did you call upon Mr. Crawford again after January, 1946?

[fol. 693] A. Yes.

Q. Were you successful?

A. No.

Q. At the time you again attempted to sell Mr. Crawford did he express any dissatisfaction with Pennzoil products?

A. No.

Mr. Hall: That is objected to as calling for the conclusion of the witness; hearsay; no proper foundation laid.

Mr. Dixon: If the Court please, we wish at this time to present to your Honor, and to counsel for the defendants, memoranda covering this question which has been previously considered by your Honor, in part, and we submit that a re-examination and consideration of the authorities here will show that questions of this character are admissible in evidence to show the motive of the person whose business is being solicited for not purchasing the products, or dispensing with any further purchases of the products. We suggest the cases here, your Honor, clearly allow this type of questioning for the purpose we have mentioned; and I believe your previous discussion of the matter is contained on page 189 of the record, where counsel for the defendants raise the principle in the decision in the Buckeye Powder Company case, the opinion in which case was written by Justice Holmes. You will note in the memoranda we have submitted to your Honor that the very learned Justice Holmes has allowed defendant relied upon [fol. 694] loss of custom to show damages, and the only way he had to prove it was by statements of the customers whose custom he lost, as to why they discontinued the handling of his products.

Here, we have a written contract which binds the individual station operators to get their entire requirement from the defendants so that, as I view the question, the only thing that is material is the fact that the man declined to give an order. Then the rest of it is a conclusion which would be barred for that reason, aside from the hearsay rule. That is the way I took it. If we are talking about motive, the question arises whether in a case like this, where you are relying, to prove the contract, upon a written undertaking which the Court must interpret, whether the motive of one of the parties to that contract, as expressed in a conversation to a third party, where the representatives of the defendants were not present, is material under any theory.

Mr. Hall: There is another argument, I think, your Honor. This dealer, let us say for example, may have expressed the view that they did not want to buy Pennzoil because they liked some other brand of oil better; or they might have expressed the view that they did not want to buy Pennzoil because they felt themselves obligated to Standard.

The Court: The latter alternative is the only one in [fol. 695] this type of questions in the previous case for the limited purpose for which the Government is offering this type of testimony in this case.

The Court: Wait until I run through this. I will hear you, Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall: The question is whether the fact that a dealer says something to a salesman is, in and of itself, material, or whether, on the other hand, the Government is relying upon the truth of what the dealer said to the salesman. That is the only way you can get around the hearsay rule here.

The Court: I may say this: The way I took the question before, and the way we argued, was that it called for the reason, and not the motive. The motive is an entirely different thing from reason. Reason is grounded on matters which may be factual. Motive is a hidden purpose a man may have in doing a thing. In the cases Wigmore uses in this paragraph, which is cited here, he seems to use both words as being synonymous.

As I take them, they call for a fact, and that is a ground for refusal, which would be hearsay, for the reason that we are dealing here with a written contract. I am familiar with the cases cited, except that I confess I did not remember that they covered the particular point. But it is apparent that in Lawlor vs. Loewe. That was a civil action under the Antitrust Law to recover treble damages, and the [fol. 696] — which counsel for the Government are interested. They are not interested in determining the relative merits of the various grades of oil.

Mr. Hall: But what I say I think illustrates my point that these dealers are not brought in, they are not subject to my cross examination. Therefore, what factual reason they assigned for their refusal to buy Pennzoil products would be hearsay, and not within exception to the hearsay rule.

Now, if it were simply a case of materiality of what they had said, and not the facts they assigned as a reason for what they say, then I think there would be force to counsel's contention, that this evidence should go in; but that is not what they are trying to do. They are trying to bring in at second hand a statement of reasons why the dealer did not purchase the particular lubricating oil. We all know that where the fact, in and of itself, that a statement was made, or that a notice was given, is material to the case, then that statement may be put in evidence, despite the hearsay rule, but when they attempt to establish as a fact the facts which are embodied in the statement—in other words, when they attempt to bring in the statement for the purpose of proving the truth of the facts narrated in the statement, then the hearsay rule applies. That is the distinction which Mr. Justice Holmes was referring to in the Buckeye case.

[fol. 697] The Court: Anything further?

Mr. Dixon: I believe our position in reference to this question is set forth in the brief. Unless your Honor cares to hear further on it——

The Court: I want to look at the New York poultry case which, of course, was a civil case.

Mr. Hall: May I point out that motive may be demonstrated by what a man says, quite irrespective of the truth of the facts narrated in the statement.

The Court: That is true. I can see the distinction in a case where you are seeking damages, because even if you had a written contract, then the fact that plaintiff must prove loss of custom is directly traceable to the fact, but the question in my mind is whether, in a case of this character, the grounds assigned are material.

This Greater New York live poultry case, I am familiar with. That was the case which later on developed into the Schechter case. That was the case where the Government made a wrong guess, because the Supreme Court denied certiorari and held that the Schechter Brothers were guilty of Antitrust violation, and that of necessity the same principle would apply. That was an NRA case, and involved interstate commerce, and also the commerce clause, when the control over it was exercised, and the Congress demonstrated they could not apply the same criterion in determining what commerce is, without taking into consideration the particular legislation which was before the Court in the particular case.

[fol. 698] I think in this case, gentlemen, the opinion of Judge Swan gives a good indication of the ruling. I think I will read it. I will begin in the first column on page 159 at the bottom.

(Greater New York Live Poultry C. of C. v. United States, 47 Fed. (2d) 156, at 159.)

"* * * Here a primary object of the conspiracy was control of the poultry trade between marketmen and retailers, which may be assumed to be a local trade, but the record contains evidence to justify a finding that one of the means for effecting that object was the prevention of recalcitrant market-men from obtaining poultry from receivers whether within or without the State of New York, and that the activity of the Truckmen's Union in preventing purchases by such recalcitrants was not merely coincidental but was part of the conspiracy.

"A number of the assignments of error relate to the admission over objection of the testimony of witnesses for the prosecution as to reasons given by receivers for their refusal to sell recalcitrant marketmen. Such statements of reasons, though hearsay, are admissible to prove the state of mind of the declarant if that be in issue."

Citing Lawlor v. Loewe, Wigmore on Evidence; Hubbard [fol. 699] v. Allyn, a Massachusetts case.

"They are not admissible, however, to prove the truth of the facts recited as explanation of the state of mind of the declarant. * * * In the case at bar the reasons for the refusals to sell were a material issue, since the Government sought to show them related to the conspiracy and the defendants claimed that the true reasons were entirely different. The appellants would have been entitled to an instruction limiting the probative force of the evidence to that issue—more specifically, warning the jury not to consider the statements as evidence of the truth of the matters asserted therein. * * *"

Then they go on to say that because they did not ask for the instruction. So that the true basis of the ruling is that if the question elicits merely an explanation of the state of mind, it is admissible if that is an issue in the case.

Now, let us go back to the question.

(Question read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. At the time you again attempted to sell Mr. Crawford did he express any dissatisfaction with Pennzoil products?")

The Court: I will overrule the objection.

[fol. 700] Mr. Hall: Your Honor then rules in accordance with this limitation expressed in the opinion your Honor just referred to?

The Court: Yes. I will limit it merely to the motive, so called. I am inclined to think, gentlemen, that the decision to which I referred—Federal Trade Commission v. Morton Salt—if I read it aright and if it holds that the possibility that a contract may result in restraint of commerce, is a criterion, and that if that is a broadening of the previous ruling, the inquiry becomes material for this reason: Even if we assume that the written contracts did not prevent the dealers from dealing in other products, if in practical application they have that effect, then the inquiry is material.

To that extent I am merely following what I did last week. But I think I am inclined to go further in view of this late decision and hold that even if it can be argued as a question of law that on their face they did not have that effect, if in reality, in the minds of the dealers, they not only refused but gave as their refusal their belief that they were bound by the contract not to, then we are confronted with a different situation and have a right to inquire into the matter, even though it is hearsay, in order to determine the motivation and the ground given for the action. Because, if the contract, although on its face not [fol. 701] restrictive, in the minds of the people with whom he was dealing had that effect, then it becomes a material issue in the case.

I am trying to think very fast, gentlemen, as I have to, because, as I told you, I did not read this opinion until yesterday and I can see, if I read it aright, that it goes a little further than the previous cases, and in the light of that the inquiry limited to motives is material. I will so limit it. In other words, the answers to be elicited are not to go to the truth of the statements that the dealer may have made, you see. They are not proof of that.

Mr. Hall: In other words——

The Court: They are merely to show the reasons or the motives, to use the word of the decision, which he assigned for his actions. Whether they are called for and justified by the contract and by the circumstances, that is a question which does not enter into it at present.

Have I made myself clear, gentlemen?

Mr. Hall: Yes, your Honor.

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

The Court: Off the record:

(Brief comment off the record.)

Mr. Somerville: Do you have the question in mind or do you wish it read?

The Court: Better read the question again.

[fol. 702] (Question read by the reporter.)

The Reporter: That question was answered.

Mr. Hall: May I have the question and answer?

The Court: Read it again.

(Question and answer read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Did he ever express dissatisfaction during the period preceding the last sale which you made?

A. No.

Q. What reason did he assign for his refusal to buy further products from you?

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. That is objected to as calling for a conclusion of the witness, no proper foundation laid.

Mr. Somerville: I will withdraw that question.

Mr. Hall: And leading.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Did Mr. Crawford assign any reason for breaking of sales to you?

Mr. Hall: That is the same question and the same objection, your Honor.

The Court: I think, the way it is worded. I would ask him what he said, what, if anything, he said. If you do that, then I will reserve a motion to strike if the answer goes beyond what I said.

Mr. Hall: Pardon me, your Honor. My objection went [fol. 703] further, to the foundation for the question, which has not been laid in time or parties present.

The Court: Yes. If we are beginning to put in persons, if we are going to put in testimony relating to stopping, I think they are entitled to a more definite statement as to the locality and person, if he can remember the person.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What was the approximate time, Mr. Ellis, that you called upon Mr. Crawford with respect to making a sale after your last order?

A. In January.

Q. What year?

A. 1946.

Q. At that time was any conversation had with Mr. Crawford concerning his refusal to purchase any more Pennzoil products?

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. I do not object to that question, but the foundation for a conversation has not been laid. We have not either the time or, the parties present stated yet.

Mr. Somerville: We have the time and the parties present. He testified——

Mr. Hall: Or the place of the conversation.

The Court: If you can give more detail, please do.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Where did this occur?

A. In the dealer's place of business in his service station [fol. 704] building.

Q. Did you answer that a conversation was held with Mr. Crawford?

A. Yes.

Q. What was that conversation?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. I would like to know, and I ask again for the question eliciting who was present.

The Court: If you know the name of the people.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Was anybody else present?

A. Mr. Crawford and myself.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What was the conversation?

A. He stated he was sorry that he would be unable——

Mr. Hall: May my objection run to all this conversation, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

The Witness: Okay.

Mr. Somerville: You may answer.

A. He said he was sorry but he would not be able to handle Pennzoil any longer, and that I would have to pick up my containers. That was the statement made to me.

Q. Did he give any further explanation?

A. Yes; he did. He said that the station would no longer be Douglas as it was being changed to a Chevron station, and that was his reason.

[fol. 705] Mr. Somerville: At this time, your Honor, the Government asks that TBA agreement dated March 1, 1946, between Louis S. Crawford and Standard Oil Company, produced under subpoena No. 1, item 1, be marked for identification.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 45 for identification.

Mr. Somerville: The Government offers Government's Exhibit 45 for identification into evidence as Exhibit next in order.

Mr. Hall: Defendants object to the material offered as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: 45 in evidence.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Mr. Ellis, during the period that the service station was a Douglas station did you observe anything with respect to what competitive oils and greases were handled?

A. Yes. They handled Pennzoil and Quaker State, MacMillan and, of course, Douglas oils.

Q. Were these products prominently displayed in the station?

A. Oh, yes. Yes. In fact, my product had a sign out in front and so did Quaker State.

Q. After January, 1946, after this service station became a Standard station or a Chevron station, what did you observe with respect to the display of competitive oils?

[fol. 706] A. None.

Q. Did you call upon this station several times after?

A. Yes.

Q. And you never made any additional sales?

A. That is right.

Q. And did you observe any competitive oils displayed in the station?

A. No.

Q. Mr. Ellis, did you call upon a service——

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. Did the witness answer the last question?

The Reporter: Yes.

Mr. Hall: What was the answer?

(Answer read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Mr. Ellis, did you call upon a service station operated by W. L. Kissinger, located in Ontario, California at 304 East A Street?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When, approximately, as far as you can remember did you begin calling on this station?

A. Well, it was quite a ways back. In fact I have called on Mr. Kissinger ever since he has been in business; in fact ever since I have been with the Pennzoil company, at one or more locations.

Q. We are speaking with reference to this particular [fol. 707] location, Mr. Ellis. Could you give us an approximation, a year or a month, if you remember?

A. Well, it was at least a year before that.

Q. Name the year, Mr. Ellis.

A. 1942.

Q. 1942. Were you successful or unsuccessful in selling Pennzoil products?

A. At that time?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. What was your answer?

A. Yes.

Q. My question was: Were you successful or unsuccessful?

A. I was successful. I am sorry.

Q. Did you continue to make sales of lubricating oils and greases to Mr. Kissinger?

A. I continued to sell oil; yes.

Q. Did you contact anyone other than Mr. Kissinger at this station with respect to sales of your product?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. Who?

A. Vern Mortimer.

Q. During what period?

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. I did not get that name. Will [fol. 708] you speak louder, please?

The Witness: Vern Mortimer.

Mr. Somerville: I would like to call for Government's Exhibits 23-X, 23-L, 23-M, 23-N, and 23-O and -P.

May the record show at this point that Government's Exhibit 23-K is a lease dated June 4, 1943, between W. L.

Kissinger and Zoe Kissinger, his wife, and Standard Oil Company of California.

Government's 23-P is a dealer agreement TBA, dated February 1, 1946, between Vern Mortimer and Standard Oil Company of California covering the premises at 304 East A street, Ontario, California.

Mr. Ellis, what was the last time that you made a sale to Mr. Kissinger or to Mr. Mortimer at this station?

A. July, 1943.

[fol. 709] Q. In what capacity was Mr. Mortimer occupying this station at that time?

Mr. Hall: I object to the question as calling for the conclusion of the witness, and speculation and conjecture.

Mr. Somerville: The question may be withdrawn.

Q. Mr. Ellis, did you ever contact Mr. Mortimer prior to 1943, with respect to sales of your Pennzoil products?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And at that time was Mr. Kissinger manager of that station?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as calling for the conclusion of the witness.

The Court: You can't prove agency by the declaration of an agent. He may describe what, from his own observation, the man was doing at that place. That is about all.

Mr. Somerville. Yes.

Q. Will you describe that?

A. Mr. Mortimer was manager for Mr. Kissinger up until——

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. I move to strike the answer of the witness.

The Court: Strike it out.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Were Mr. Kissinger and Mr. Mortimer working at this station at the same time?

A. Yes.

Q. When was the last sale that you made at this station?

[fol. 710] A. In July, 1943.

Q. Did you again contact anyone at this station?

A. I did.

Q. Who did you contact?

A. Mr. Mortimer.

Q. Did you observe anything with respect to the station at this time different from your previous visits?

A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Hall: Objected to upon the ground that no foundation has been laid. The time has not been shown, which you are talking about.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Approximately when did you recontact Mr. Mortimer?

A. I contacted him every two weeks in each month, and 1943 was the last order I got; in July, 1943 was the last order I got.

Q. The first time that you contacted him, two weeks later, after this order, was there any change with respect to this station?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. What was that change?

A. It had changed from a Hancock station to a Chevron station.

Q. Did Mr. Mortimer express any dissatisfaction with Pennzoil products?

[fol. 711] A. No, he did not.

Q. Had he ever expressed any dissatisfaction of Pennzoil products?

A. No.

Q. At this time, that you recontacted Mr. Mortimer, were any other persons present?

A. Not to my knowledge; just myself and him, in his station building.

Q. Were any conversations held concerning the reasons for his refusal to purchase more Pennzoil?

Mr. Hall: Are you referring to the visit within two weeks after some date in July, 1943?

Mr. Somerville: Yes.

Mr. Hall: He may answer yes or no.

Mr. Somerville: Do you want the question reread?

The Witness: Yes.

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Witness: He said due to the——

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. That can be answered yes or no.

The Court: Yes.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Were conversations held?

A. Yes.

Q. What were those conversations?

Mr. Hall: That is objected to as calling for hearsay: [fol. 712] no proper foundation laid.

The Court: Lay a better foundation.

The Witness: I was told at that time I would have to have my containers picked up, as they would not be allowed to carry outside oil in the future, and they would have to get rid of all their outside oils.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Prior to the time that this station became a Standard Oil or Chevron station, did you observe anything with respect to competitive brands of oils and greases handled?

A. I did.

Q. What did you observe?

A. That carried in stock Hyvis, Valvoline, Quaker State, Pennzoil and Hancock.

Q. After this station changed to a Standard or Chevron station, what did you observe?

A. All Standard products on the shelves.

Q. No competitive oils were displayed?

A. That's right.

Q. Are you acquainted with a service station located at 25 East Valley, San Gabriel, California?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Have you ever contacted that station with respect to making sales?

A. Yes.

[fol. 713] Q. When did you first contact that station?

A. That would go back quite a few years.

Q. Approximately?

A. That would go back at least to 1936.

Q. Who did you contact at that time?

A. Mr. Moreland.

Q. What brands of gasoline and oils were displayed at this station?

A. He changed gasoline several times. He put Wilshire in there at one time. I don't remember all the different brands he changed in that period of years.

Q. Did you make several sales to Mr. Moreland?

A. He was a steady customer.

Q. When was the last sale that you made?

A. It was April, 1945.

Mr. Hall: Was that M-o-r-e-l-a-n-d?

Mr. Somerville: Yes, Clarence A. Moreland.

Q. Did you make any further attempts to sell your products at this station?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. When?

A. Every two weeks from then on.

Q. Who did you contact upon your revisit?

A. Mr. Russell.

Q. Did you observe anything with respect to the type [fol. 714] of station that was operated?

A. It was strictly a Chevron station.

Mr. Somerville: The Government asks that dealer agreement TBA, dated March 24, 1947, between W. A. Russell and C. L. Russell, parties of the first part, and Standard Oil Company, party of the second part, and the letter dated September 11, 1947, between Standard Oil Company and W. A. Russell, which was produced pursuant to Subpoena No. 1, Item 6, be marked for identification.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 46 for identification.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Upon your revisit, at the time you observed that Mr. Russell was operating the station, did you observe anything with respect to the type of accessories, such as tires, tubes and batteries sold by this station?

A. No, I can't answer that truthfully.

Q. Did you observe anything with respect to whether or not Atlas tires, tubes and batteries were advertised on the front of the station?

A. I would hate to answer that.

Mr. Hall: What is the answer?

The Witness: I did not answer it.

Mr. Somerville: Mr. Hall, in response to the subpoena, in respect to this particular item, I believe there is a preceding TBA agreement, superseded by this agreement. May we have you check on that?

[fol. 715] Mr. Hall: We will investigate it this afternoon. You realize, we don't keep all of our agreements down here at counsel table?

Mr. Somerville: Yes, I realize that. The Government moves the admission into evidence of Government's Exhibit 46 for identification.

Mr. Hall: The defendants object to the offer, and to the offer of each and all of the documents included in the exhibit, upon the ground that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court. I will look at them. Overruled.

The Clerk: 46 in evidence.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Were you ever able to make any sales to the Russell Brothers?

A. No.

Q. Was any reason given—I am referring now to the first time that you called upon the Russell Brothers, which I believe you testified was 1945, July, 1945?

A. April, I think it was.

Q. 1945?

A. Yes.

Q. At that time who did you approach in respect to making sales?

A. Mr. Russell.

Q. Was anybody else present?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Where was this?

[fol. 716] A. In his station.

Q. Were any conversations held?

A. Yes, he took——

Q. Were any conversations held with respect to the sale of Pennzoil products at that station?

Mr. Hall: I would like to have the time fixed more accurately, your Honor.

Mr. Somerville: The witness testified April, 1945, and testified that it took place at the station, and the parties present.

The Court: You may bring that out on cross-examination,—any additional details.

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. I was told——

Mr. Hall: Objected to. No proper foundation has been laid and it is hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I was told that I would have to pick up my containers, and that they would not be able to handle Pennzoil.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Were any further reasons assigned?

A. It was obvious——

Mr. Hall: No.

The Court: That will be sufficient.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. S. P. Myers, 1975 East [fol. 717] Valley, Rosemead, California?

A. I am.

Q. Have you attempted to sell Pennzoil products to Mr. Myers?

A. I have.

Q. Describe the circumstances which led to your contact with Mr. Myers with respect to handling Pennzoil products?

A. I had not been calling on Mr. Myers. Then we got an indirect order through our office by phone for a case of Pennzoil. I contacted him for that purpose, and he told me that he bought that case of oil——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is objected to,—any conversation without the foundation being laid.

The Court: Give the time and place.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Did you then approach Mr. Myers with respect to making regular sales of Pennzoil products?

A. I did.

Q. When did this occur?

A. February, 1948.

Q. Where?
A. In his station, at that address.
Q. Who was present?
A. Mr. Myers.
Q. Were any conversations held with respect to Mr.
[fol. 718] Myers handling your products?
A. Yes, there was.
Q. What were those conversations?

Mr. Hall: I object upon the ground that no proper foundation has been laid, and it is hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I called in response to this indirect order, to find out if I could make further sales, and he told me that he bought this particular case of oil for one customer that had demanded it, and he was not in a position to stock Pennzoil at that station.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. In that sales approach, Mr. Ellis, did you ask if he had calls for Pennzoil products at his station?
A. Yes, I asked him that question.
Q. What did he answer?
A. He said he had calls for it.
Q. Nevertheless, you were unable to sell it?
A. That's right.
Q. Have you called upon a station operated by Mr. Dwight W. Shirk, 2109 Fourth Street, LaVerne, California?
A. I have.

Mr. Somerville: At this point, I would like marked for identification these documents produced under Subpoena No. 1, Item 7 which relate to the service station at 1959
[fol. 719] East Valley Boulevard, Rosemead, California, including dealer agreement TBA, dated May 20, 1946, between A. N. DeRush and the Standard Oil Company of California, and an assignment of this agreement to S. P. Myers, effective as of September 1, 1947.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 47 marked for identification.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Mr. Ellis, when did you first call on Mr. Shirk?
A. That was a long time ago.

Q. Was it prior to 1945?

A. Oh, yes, many years.

Q. Were you able to sell him lubricating oils and greases of your company?

A. I was.

Q. Were those sales substantial?

A. They were very substantial.

Q. Approximately how many gallons, on an average, did you sell him of lubricating oils?

Mr. Hall: Why don't you tie it in with a period?

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. You say you sold to Mr. Shirk for a period of several years?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. What types of gasoline and oils were handled at this station during the period preceding August, 1945?

A. Well, previous to that time,—that's at the time that [fol. 720] it became an actual Chevron station,—prior to that it was Standard Oil, and prior to that I believe—I can't truthfully remember what the gasoline was previous to that time.

Q. Approximately when did that station become a Standard Oil Company station?

A. Well, I would say about 19——

Mr. Hall: Don't your documents answer that question?

Mr. Somerville: Yes.

The Witness: Close to 1944. Approximately that. I don't remember the exact date that was a Chevron station.

Mr. Somerville: The Government asks that the documents brought in in response to Subpoena No. 1, Item 8, relating to the service station at 2409 4th Street, be marked for identification. This group of documents includes dealer agreement TBA dated August 23, 1945, between Standard Oil Company of California, and Dwight W. Shirk.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 48 for identification.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Did you observe anything with respect to the types of oil handled at this station prior to the time it became a Standard or Chevron station?

A. He had several other brands besides mine. I am quite sure he handled Quaker State at one time.

Q. After this station became a Standard Oil Station, or Chevron station, were you able to make additional sales of [fol. 721] oils or greases?

A. Yes, I was. That is while it was a Standard Oil station.

Mr. Hall: What was the answer to the last question?

(Answer read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When did you last sell Pennzoil products to Mr. Shirk?

A. February, 1945.

Q. Did Mr. Shirk express any dissatisfaction with Pennzoil products at this time, or subsequently?

A. Not at all.

Q. Did you again contact Mr. Shirk with respect to making sales?

A. I did.

Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful?

A. Unsuccessful.

Q. After the last order that you placed, approximately when was it that you recontacted Mr. Shirk with respect to further orders?

A. Two weeks.

Mr. Hall: What was the date of the last order?

Mr. Somerville: I believe the witness testified October, 1945, wasn't that right?

The Witness: No, February, 1945.

By Mr. Somerville:

[fol. 722] Q. February, 1945. It would be two weeks later. Where did you call on Mr. Shirk?

A. At his station.

Q. Were any other parties present?

A. I can't remember that.

Q. Were any conversations held with respect to the continuation of sales of Pennzoil products?

A. There were.

Q. What were those conversations?

A. Well, I was told in so many——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. Objected to upon the ground that no proper foundation has been laid, and calling for hearsay.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. This conversation occurred sometime in February or March, 1945, and you don't recall whether any parties were present other than Mr. Shirk, is that correct?

A. I don't believe there was anybody present except myself and him.

Q. Did you ask Mr. Shirk——

Mr. Hall: Please don't lead the witness, counsel.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Did you attempt to sell further Pennzoil products to Mr. Shirk?

A. I did.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. I move to strike the answer of the witness. I did not have a chance to get in my objection.

[fol. 723] The Court: This is merely a preliminary question. It is leading to something.

Mr. Hall: I don't object to the conversations after the foundation is laid, but I think this question is a little different.

The Court: No. He merely asked him if he attempted to do that and he said yes. That was a preliminary question. Now he may ask him when and where.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Were any conversations then had with respect to Mr. Shirk continuing to sell your products?

A. There were.

Q. What were those conversations?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: I was told that under existing circumstances he would no longer be able to handle Pennzoil.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Did he assign any further reason?

A. Other than it was a Standard Oil station.

Q. Have you ever contacted a service station located at 801 Alosta Avenue, Glendora, California?

A. I have.

Q. What is your answer?

A. I did.

Mr. Somerville: The Government offers into evidence Exhibit No. 48 for identification, with the documents, relat-[fol. 724] ing to the service station at 2109 Fourth Street, La Verne, California.

Mr. Hall: The defendants object to each and all of the documents on the ground that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled. They may be admitted.

The Clerk: 48 in evidence.

Mr. Somerville: The Government asks that Government's Exhibit 47 for identification be introduced into evidence.

Mr. Hall: The defendants object to each and all of the documents so offered upon the ground that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: 47 in evidence.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Did you contact this station during the period that it was operated by Champion & Bissonette?

A. I did.

Mr. Hall: I hesitate to interrupt, but you have me confused on the stations. Is this the DeRush station, or the Glendora station?

Mr. Somerville: This is a Glendora station.

Mr. Hall: What happened to the DeRush station?

Mr. Somerville: Those documents were offered into evidence.

[fol. 725] Q. Did you contact this service station at any time during the period when it was operated by Mr. Champion and Mr. Bissonette?

A. I did.

Q. When was this period?

A. During the years 1947 and 1948.

Q. Did they purchase any oils and grease from you?

A. They purchased one order in October, 1947.

Q. Did they make any additional purchases?

A. No.

[fol. 726] Q. What did you observe with respect to the manner in which Pennzoil was handled by them on the order that you did place with them?

A. It was placed inside of a small back room out of sight.

Q. Did either Mr. Champion or Mr. Bissonette indicate an interest in Pennzoil as a regular stock item?

The Witness: I didn't get the question.

Q. Did they indicate an interest in Pennzoil products as a regular stock item?

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. That is objected to as no proper foundation laid. We haven't had the time, place, nor parties present as to the conversation.

The Court: Fix the time of the talk.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When was this sale made, Mr. Ellis?

A. October, 1947.

Q. And who did you talk to at that time?

A. Mr. Champion and Mr. Bissonette, both of them.

Q. Was anybody else present?

A. No.

Q. And this was at the service station that they operate?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you attempted to place orders for additional [fol. 727] stocks of oil in the future?

A. I did.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is just the question I registered an objection to a moment ago as leading.

The Court: Ask him if he had any further agreement with them and what it was about.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What conversations, if any, were held concerning a stock of Pennzoil products?

A. Well, each time I solicited them after that, they had plenty on hand after that one order.

Q. Pardon?

A. Each time I called after two weeks after that they had plenty on hand after that former order.

Mr. Hall: I move to strike out the answer of the witness as not responsive. The question calls for conversation.

The Court: Did he tell you that?

The Witness: That is right; they had plenty in stock.

The Court: All right. Overruled, so long as you give it as a statement.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Was any further reason assigned?

A. No.

Mr. Somerville: That will be all, Mr. Ellis.

The Court: All right. Gentlemen, I purposely did not break the continuity of the examination so we would reach a good stopping point. And, as I have already informed [fol. 728] you, I am due to address the Lawyers Club at their luncheon. So if we take a recess for five or 10 minutes we will only have 10 minutes and we can't achieve very much. So I think we will break the rule and return earlier.

Mr. Somerville: If your Honor please, may I ask that this document produced under subpoena No. 1, item 9, which relates to the service station at 801 East Alosta Avenue, Glendora, California, be marked for identification. It includes the dealer agreement TBA, dated September 25, 1947, between Bissonette & Champion, and Standard Oil Company of California.

The Court: You are asking it be marked only for identification?

Mr. Dixon: Put it in evidence.

The Court: Are you offering it in evidence?

Mr. Somerville: Yes.

The Court: Has it been marked before?

Mr. Somerville: No; it has not been marked. My next thought is to mark it in evidence.

The Clerk: 49 marked for identification only.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Somerville: I will ask that this be introduced into evidence, your Honor.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Hall: Defendants object on the ground that each [fol. 729] and all of the documents are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: If they are the same type as those I have admitted, I will allow them. I will take a look. You may step down, sir.

Mr. Hall: The witness, I assume, is going to return this afternoon?

Mr. Dixon: Oh, yes.

The Court: Oh, yes. You will have to return for cross-examination. They are of the same type of agreement and letter covering the matter, TBA agreement. Overruled.

The Clerk: 49 admitted in evidence.

The Court: All right. At this time, gentlemen, we will take our regular adjournment until 2:00 o'clock. I am certain I shall not be delayed because they promised to adjourn promptly, and I am going to try to see if I can practice, myself, the injunction I give lawyers to return at the allotted time, 2:00 o'clock.

(Whereupon, a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock p. m. of the same day, Wednesday, May 12, 1948.)

[fol. 730] Los Angeles, California, Wednesday, May 12, 1948. 2:00 P. M.

The Court: All right, gentlemen.

The Clerk: Just take the stand, sir.

HARRY R. ELLIS (Recalled).

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Where is your headquarters office that you work out of, Mr. Ellis?

A. Los Angeles.

Q. What address?

A. 942 South Hope.

Q. That is the Pennzoil Building, isn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. How long has that been your headquarters?

A. Well, I don't just remember the exact number of years but we have been there quite a while. It goes back before the war.

Q. Before the war?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think you said you had been a salesman for 19 years, with the exception of two years, is that right?

A. Well, I was a salesman those two years, too, but not in this locality.

Q. Not in this locality?

[fol. 731] A. That is right.

Q. How long have you been a salesman for Pennzoil in this locality?

A. A total of 17 years.

Q. 17?

A. Yes.

Q. What were the years you were in some other locality?

A. 1940 and '41.

Q. Except for 1940 and 1941 you have been a Pennzoil salesman in this area that you mentioned this morning, is that right?

A. That is correct, with the exception of those two years.

Q. What?

A. With the exception of those two years that you just mentioned.

Q. You have had the same area during those 17 years?

A. Well, not exactly. The territorial lines were changed a little from the way they were when I first took over.

Q. Well, let me put it this way: For how many years have you had substantially the same locality that you are now canvassing?

A. Well, the bulk of the territory has been 17 years.

[fol. 732] Q. Who is the superior in the company that you report to?

A. Fred Williams.

Q. Fred Williams?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you make written reports to him?

A. I do not.

Q. You do not make written reports of any kind?

A. Only expense accounts.

Q. Have you ever made reports of any kind to him except expense accounts?

A. Oh, occasionally, when they want some special data as to progress of business in the field.

Q. Does the company take any procedure for checking your movements as a salesman?

A. I imagine the supervisors keep pretty good tab on us.

Q. And that has been the case for a number of years?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you keep a diary yourself?

A. I don't keep a diary but I keep a cardex record of my sales by every month, or I get a copy of the invoices of all the sales I make and I post a cardex record.

Q. Do you enter in the card index anything but sales?

A. No.

[fol. 733] Q. You do not indicate when you call on a person?

A. Yes; I do.

Q. You do?

A. I do. On this card, on the front side of the card, I put a date under the column marked "order" if I get an order; and if I don't get an order I put it just under "call", the date.

Q. Have you got an index card for the six dealers you referred to in your testimony this morning?

A. Well, if I haven't in my possession at this time, I have at the office?

Q. You have at the office?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you consulted those recently?

A. Yes, sir; I have. I have looked at every one of them to make sure that my records agreed with those.

Q. In the year 1939 how many separate accounts did you sell Pennzoil to in your area?

A. Well, that would be a pretty hard question to answer because I can't remember how many there were at that time.

Q. Well, give us an approximation.

A. Well, I would say around possibly 300 in my territory.

Q. And during the year 1947 approximately how many [fol. 734] separate accounts did you sell to in your area?

A. Well, I would say active accounts possibly maybe 250.

Q. I am not asking you for active accounts. I am asking you how many you sold during that year, separate accounts.

A. Well, that would be the same answer.

Q. 250?

A. Yes.

Q. How much for the year 1946?

A. I don't believe '46 would be any different much than '47.

Q. During 1947 how many separate retail outfits did you contact where you did not make sales?

Mr. Somerville: Object, your Honor, irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Read the question, please.

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Court. Overruled. If you remember.

[fol. 735] A. I cannot answer that question accurately.

Q. Did you answer the question?

A. I say I cannot answer that question accurately.

Q. I am just asking you for your best recollection.

A. That varies too much.

Q. Between what limits would it vary for the year 1947?

A. Do you mean over previous years?

Q. No.

A. I don't understand your question.

Q. Let me reframe my question. During the year 1947 approximately how many different retail outlets did you contact that you didn't sell to?

A. That's an impossible question to answer.

Mr. Somerville: I object, your Honor, upon the ground that it is irrelevant.

The Court: He doesn't know. He can't answer.

The Witness: I can't answer that question.

Mr. Somerville: It is not within the scope of the direct either.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. It is a fact, isn't it, that during 1947 you contacted a lot of retail outlets where you did not make sales, is that correct?

A. Naturally; you always do.

Q. That would be true for 1946, wouldn't it?

A. That would be true for any year. Every salesman [fol. 736] does that.

Q. Where do you get your prospects?

A. Where do I get them?

Q. Yes.

A. By keeping my eyes open as I drive throughout the territory.

Q. You just see a likely gas station and you pull in, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. How much time do you spend talking to the gas station man?

A. That depends upon what my prospects are of selling the prospect.

Q. How many calls do you make a day, on an average?

A. I think the average is around 30 calls a day.

Q. 30 calls a day?

A. Yes.

Q. How frequently do you call on the same outlet?

A. Every two weeks.

Q. Is that a regular practice with you?

A. That's right.

Q. So, just to be sure I understand you, whether you make a sale or not, you call on the same outlet every two weeks?

A. That's right.

[fol. 737] Q. Are there any other Pennzoil salesmen that cover the same area that you cover, or is that area here exclusively for you?

A. So far as dealer outlets are concerned, that is, retail outlets, that is a closed territory of mine.

Q. In 1947 how many other salesmen were working for Pennzoil out of the Los Angeles office, at your headquarters?

A. Offhand, I could not answer that.

Q. Approximately?

A. Out of the Los Angeles office?

Q. Yes.

A. That would be pretty hard to answer. I would say, maybe 15 or 16.

Q. Maybe 15 or 16?

A. I am just guessing at it. I will tell you that, right now.

Q. We have had a lot of guesses, and yours is just as good as anybody else's. You mentioned this morning a conversation with a Mr. Russell. Do you recall that testimony?

A. That's right.

Q. Was that W. A. or C. L. Russell?

A. There were two of them at the time I called on them—Russell Brothers.

Q. You were talking of both?

A. Yes.

[fol. 738] Q. Let me get this clear now. The conversation or conversations that you had with Russell referred to in your morning testimony, was that with both Russells?

A. Yes, I think that is correct.

Q. When you call at a gas station, do you get out of your car, and park your car, and walk around the station property?

A. I walk into it, yes, into the station building, or wherever the owner happens to be.

Q. That is, you get out, and park your car, that is your usual practice?

A. That is right.

Q. You go into the building, don't you?

A. That's right.

Q. This morning you referred to a service station operated by a man named Crawford, at Alhambra. Do you recall that testimony?

A. That's right.

Q. How frequently did you call on Mr. Crawford during the year 1945?

A. Every two weeks.

Q. How often during the year 1946?

A. Well, after I gave it up as a bad job I didn't do much calling.

Q. When did that happen?

[fol. 739] A. That was right after January, 1946.

Q. Do you recall going to that station after January, 1946?

A. Sure.

Q. When?

A. In February.

Q. Do you recall going there after February, 1946?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. How often?

A. I called there every two weeks. There was a reason for that call.

Q. Every two weeks after February, 1946, up to what date?

A. Well, I would say possibly into at least the end of March.

Q. Did you call at that station at any time during the first three months of 1947?

A. I don't believe I can answer that. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember calling there at all after March of 1946?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Would you say that you didn't call there after March, 1946?

A. No, I wouldn't say that either.

[fol. 740] Q. You wouldn't say either way?

A. No.

Q. While your memory is very clear as to the January, 1946 date, and as to certain events in 1945, your memory gets weaker after March, 1946, is that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. You recall your testimony concerning that station operated by Kissinger of Ontario?

A. That's right.

Q. I think you said the last sale at that station that you made was July, 1943, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you call at that station after that time?

A. Every two weeks.

Q. Every two weeks until what date?

A. Well, it must have been at least six months after that time.

Q. For at least six months?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you call at that station at all in 1946?

A. Yes, I did occasionally.

Q. Did you call at that station during the first three months of 1947?

A. I don't believe I did, in 1947.

Q. Did you call there at all in 1947?

[fol. 741] A. No.

Q. In 1946 did you see any lubricating oil for sale at that station other than oil that was sold by Standard?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you go out and walk around the station?

A. I always go out and walk around the station, and walk into the station, in fact.

Q. You didn't see any lubricating oil, other than the Standard product?

A. No, I did not; that's right.

Q. You are quite sure of that?

A. I am quite sure of that.

Q. The Russell station in San Gabriel, do you recall your testimony concerning that?

A. That's the one you just asked me about.

Q. The last one I asked you about was the Kissinger station in Ontario?

A. Just before that you asked me about Russell Brothers, before Kissinger.

Q. I asked you which you called on. You recall your testimony about the Russell station, the Russell episode, don't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Your sale there was April, 1945?

A. That's right.

[fol. 742] Q. Did you call at that station after that date?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Up until what time?

A. Well, I made several calls. As I told you before, there was a particular reason for making the calls.

Q. Then you stopped making them?

A. That's right.

Q. I think you said you went there during the first three months of 1947?

A. That's right—I didn't call in 1947.

Q. At one or two places in your testimony this morning, you referred to some statement made by one or more of these station operators, that you were to take out your containers. Do you remember that testimony?

A. That's right.

Q. What were those containers?

A. Some of them were 15-gallon sealed containers on a stand, and others were highboys.

Q. Are those containers furnished free of charge to the operator?

Mr. Somerville: That is objected to as irrelevant and immaterial to any issues in this case.

The Court: It is material. He may answer.

The Witness: What was the question again?

Mr. Hall: Will you read the question?

[fol. 743] A. In some cases they are highboys. As a rule, in a case of this kind they are loaned, and the sealed containers are, I believe, some of them are loaned, and we had a policy at one time where they were on deposit. The dealer put up a small deposit on them, to be sure that we would get them back.

Q. In referring to the station at LaVerne, operated by Shirk, this morning, in your testimony, you said something about selling your products to that station after it became a Standard station?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do I have that incorrectly?

A. No, that is correct.

Q. Was that at one time a Standard station, as distinguished from a Chevron station?

A. I believe that is correct.

Q. When it was a Standard station you sold Pennzoil to the station?

A. I did.

Q. Do you recall the period during which that station was a Standard Oil station?

A. I think they became Standard Oil in 1941.

[fol. 744] Q. And became a Chevron station when?

A. I think, in 1944. I am not positive of it but that is my recollection.

Q. But while it was a Standard station you sold Pennzoil to the station?

A. I did.

Q. These containers that you speak of that are put in the station by Pennzoil are exclusively for the handling of Pennzoil products, aren't they?

A. That is right.

Q. Your company does not permit them to be used for any other product?

A. That is right.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: Any redirect?

Mr. Somerville: Yes.

Redirect Examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Calling your attention, Mr. Ellis, to your call on Mr. Crawford during the month of February, 1946, I believe your testimony was that you had some reason for calling; is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. What was that reason?

A. Checking on these containers to see when I could [fol. 745] take them out.

Q. Now, with respect to matters of the dates to which you have testified this morning have you checked your records, your own personal records, and company records to refresh your memory?

A. I have.

Q. And with respect to the matters to which you have testified, there was something extraordinary, was there, that set that time out apart from calls, regular calls?

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. Now, wait a minute. That is objected to as no proper foundation laid, leading and suggestive, and incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Somerville: I concede that, Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall: Do you withdraw the question?

Mr. Somerville: I withdraw the question.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Calling your attention now to your calls on the Russell Brothers after April, 1945, you stated that you had reasons for calling there. What were those reasons?

A. Well, I was told to take my containers out of there and I couldn't take them out, though, until they sold the stock out of them, and they were permitted to sell the stock out of them but then they had to get rid of them.

Q. Calling your attention now to the service station [fol. 746] operated by Mr. Shirk, do you know of your own knowledge whether Mr. Shirk was an employee of the Standard or an independent operator at the time?

A. He was an——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is objected to as calling for a conclusion.

The Court: That objection is sustained.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. You testified that it was a Standard station, Mr. Ellis, and that sales of Pennzoil were made. Were those made to Mr. Shirk personally or to Standard Oil Company?

A. No; to Mr. Shirk personally.

Mr. Somerville: That will be all.

The Court: All right, you may step down. Call your next witness.

Mr. Somerville: The Government desires to call Verne Mortimer as its next witness.

Verne Mortimer, called as a witness by plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Verne Mortimer.

The Clerk: How do you spell your first name?

The Witness: V-e-r-n-e.

The Clerk: And your last name?

[fol. 347] The Witness: M-o-r-t-i-m-e-r.

The Clerk: Thank you.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Mortimer?

A. 2493 Electric Avenue, Upland, California.

Q. And what is your occupation?

A. Service station operator.

Q. Calling your attention to a service station located at 304 East A Street, Ontario, California, were you at one time employed at this station?

A. That is right.

Q. When did you begin your employment, approximately?

A. In 1932 I went to work for Mr. Kissinger.

Q. How long did you continue as an employee of Mr. Kissinger?

A. Until August 1st, 1943.

Q. Did your duties include making sales of oils and greases?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you make any purchases from Mr. Ellis of Pennzoil Company?

A. Yes, for Mr. Kissinger.

Q. And did you make purchases of other oils for that service station?

A. Yes.

[fol. 748] Q. During this period of time what gasolines were dispensed by this station?

A. Hancock.

Q. During this period of time, Mr. Mortimer, were competitive oils stocked in the station?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they displayed prominently?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there signs directing the motorists' attention to these oil displays?

A. Yes.

Q. What were some of the competitive oils and greases handled during this period?

A. Valvoline, Quaker State, Pennzoil, Hyvis, and the Hancock Brothers.

Q. Did you purchase substantial quantities of oils and greases from Pennzoil Company?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. Objected to as too general.

The Court: Well, what is "substantial" may be a question.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What were the average sales or purchases of Pennz oil that were made?

A. Well, it was a substantial amount but I couldn't quote figures on it. We bought both in bulk and in canned, by the case, several cases.

[fol. 749] Q. Was that true of other competitive oils also?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your testimony with respect to the last date since you were an employee of Mr. Kissinger?

A. I took over the station August the 1st, 1943.

Q. And at that time did you sign a contract with Standard Oil Company?

A. I did.

Q. At that time did you enter into a sublease agreement with Standard Oil Company?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. Are those in evidence, Mr. Somerville?

Mr. Somerville: No; there is not a sublease agreement, Mr. Hall. There is a TBA agreement dated February 1, 1946. We called in the subpoena for all documents relating to this service station and it appears that some documents that were superseded by that agreement were not brought in.

Mr. Hall: I object to the question on the ground that it characterizes a written document and calls for its contents, as not the best evidence.

The Court: I think the witness may answer if there is such a document. Overruled.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Does there exist a contract as of the date you took over operation of this station with Standard Oil Company? [fol. 750] A. To the best of my knowledge there is; I believe there is.

Q. Do you have those documents with you, Mr. Mortimer?

A. No; I do not.

Q. Upon your condensing operations of this station in your own name what gasolines and oils did you dispense and sell?

A. At the beginning I was permitted to keep those oils, the supply of oils that I had, until the supply was exhausted and then we had all Standard products.

Q. Were instructions given to you by Standard Oil Company representatives concerning the stocking of competitive oils and greases?

A. Yes.

Q. When were these instructions given you?

A. At the time of the signing of the agreement.

Q. Where?

A. At the station.

Q. And who were the Standard Oil people who call upon you?

A. The Pomona representatives.

Q. Do you recall his name or their names?

A. A Mr. Burke.

Q. Was there a Mr. Biddle also present?

A. I believe he was. I can't be certain.

[fol. 751] Q. Was that Mr. Louis Burke?

A. That is right.

Q. What were these instructions, Mr. Mortimer?

Mr. Hall: Well, just a minute. No proper foundatio has been laid. We object to the question on that groun

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. You have testified that instructions were given you

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By these gentlemen. What were those instructions

Mr. Hall: No showing has been made of time, place no parties present. On that ground and the lack of founda tion we object.

The Court: You had better lay a foundation as to tim and place.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When did you have a conversation with Mr. Burke

A. It was at the time that I took possession.

Q. Where was this conversation?

A. At the station.

Q. What was the conversation?

A. That I was to dispose of the oils on hand and not t replace them.

Q. Did you comply with these instructions?

A. I did.

Q. Were any instructions given to you with respect t [fol. 752] the handling of TBA products, tires, tubes, bat teries, and similar accessories?

A. As soon as they would be available.

Q. Had you been handling competitive tires, tubes, an batteries prior to the time that you took over the opera tion of this station while an employee of Mr. Kissinger's

A. Yes.

Q. Did salesmen for competitive oils and greases call upon you after you commenced operation of this station?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall any of the names of the companies' representatives?

A. Well, there was a Quaker State, Hyvis, Pennzoil, and Mr. Ellis with Pennzoil; Mr. McHenry with Valvolene.

Q. Did you make any purchases of oils and greases from these salesmen?

A. I did from Valvolene, from Mr. McHenry.

Q. And did you purchase this in bulk or in cans?

A. In cans and in five-gallon pails.

Q. And where did you keep these oils?

A. Down beneath in cabinets or in the back room.

Q. They were never prominently displayed?

A. No.

Q. Was there any occasion upon which a Standard Oil representative saw these oils?

[fol. 753] A. He may have, but not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you continue to receive calls from your customers for competitive oils such as Quaker State and Pennzoil and Valvolene?

A. I did.

Q. Mr. Mortimer, is your Chevron station identified by any numerical designation?

A. No. 7333.

Q. Calling your attention to the year 1947 have you ever handled Union TX-5 oil?

A. Yes.

Q. How much of this oil did you handle?

A. One barrel at a time.

Q. You made regular purchases of that oil?

A. Yes.

Q. During 1947?

A. Yes.

Q. Commencing about when?

A. Oh, I don't recall exactly. Probably in June or July of '47.

Q. Why did you handle this oil?

A. Due to customer demand.

Q. Did anything occur with respect to your handling this oil in the month of January, 1948?

A. I was told to——

[fol. 754] Q. Answer it yes or no.

A. Yes.

Q. When did that occur?

A. As I recall, in January or February.

Q. And where did it occur?

A. At the station.

Q. And who were present?

A. Myself and a Mr. Burke.

Q. Was there anything said by Mr. Burke?

A. He asked me to dispose of the barrel of TX-5 and its contents and not to replace it.

Q. Did his injunction apply to future handling of the oil as well?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you comply with his instructions?

A. I did.

Mr. Somerville: That is all.

The Court: Cross-examine.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. If I understand your correctly, Mr. Mortimer, you were an employee of Hancock Oil Company up until August of 1943?

A. No. I was an employee of Mr. Kissinger during the time from '32 until '43.

[fol. 755] Q. Yes. And then the station became a Chevron station?

A. A Standard station.

Q. A Standard station?

A. A dealer station, a Standard dealer station.

Q. Then you became the dealer for the Standard oil products after that?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you still have the station?

A. No.

Q. When did you dispose of it?

A. March the 13th of this year.

Q. Was that because of dissatisfaction with the treatment accorded you by Standard?

A. No.

Q. What was that Union Oil product that you had this conversation with Mr. Burke about?

A. Oh, T5X.

Q. T5X.

A. That is a diesel motor fuel.

Q. Yes.

A. Motor oil.

[fol. 756] Q. Did the time come when you ceased to have demand for that product?

A. No.

Q. You were a Standard Oil dealer in Standard Oil products from August 1, 1943 to this year, is that correct?

A. No, we became a Chevron station in the meantime.

Q. You still remained a dealer, didn't you?

A. That is right.

Q. You continued to handle Standard's products?

A. That is right.

Q. How many grades of lubricating oil did you handle of the Standard brand?

A. Well, we had in RPM, 10, 20, 30 and 40 and 70; in Zerolene 30 and 40; and in Pennsylvania Oil we had 20, 30 and 40.

Q. That is nine grades, is that right?

A. Approximately, yes. I could be off.

Q. You handled those in bulk, did you?

A. Yes, and some in cans.

Q. You had bulk containers for each grade, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. How big were those containers?

A. 60 gallons.

Q. Then for the handling of this line it took nine 60-gallon containers, didn't it?

[fol. 757] A. Yes.

Q. Did you have at that station, during that time that you dealt in Standard Oil products, what you might call regular customers?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you say that the customers who came to the station asked you for lubricating oil other than the Standard brands?

A. Yes.

Q. Did they ask you for any other petroleum products other than the Standard brands?

A. Yes.

Q. What?

A. In oils?

Q. In oils.

A. In oils they asked for——

Q. They did not ask you for something other than the gasoline Standard was selling, did they?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Did you have pumps other than the Standard gasoline pumps?

A. No. We had a Diesel fuel pump, but it was Standard. [fol. 758] Q. At the time the station was a Hancock station did you handle competitive oils in bulk?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have containers for those competitive oils?

A. Yes.

Q. And you had Quaker State and Pennzoil and Valvoline, I believe you testified?

A. Yes.

Q. You did not have any difficulty storing those oils?

A. No.

Q. At any time during the period you were a Chevron operator did Mr. Burke, or any other Standard Oil Company representative request the names of customers requesting competitive oils?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: I move to strike the answer. I did not have a chance to object.

Mr. Somerville: I think that is a proper question, Mr. Hall.

The Court: The answer may be withdrawn. Read the question.

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Court: Let us have the objection.

Mr. Hall: The objection is that it is not proper redirect examination.

[fol. 759] The Court: It is a general question. Overruled. You may answer.

A. Yes.

Mr. Somerville: That is all.

Recross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What were these other grades of what counsel alluded to as competitive oils? You mentioned Quaker State, Pennzoil, Valvoline, and what else?

A. Hyvis.

Q. What else?

A. Those are the ones we handled, aside from Standard.

Q. I think he was talking about the period before the station became a station handling Standard Oil products, and you mentioned that you had a number of competitive oils in the station. Do you remember?

A. Yes.

Q. You mentioned the Quaker State, Pennzoil, Hyvis, Valvoline, and what else?

A. And Hancock.

Q. How many grades of each oil did you handle, in bulk?

A. Generally about four—three or four.

Q. Four grades of each one of those? Did you have one of those containers for each of the grades of each of [fol. 760] the oils you mentioned?

A. Some we carried in cans. We did not have highboys for all of those oils.

Q. How many highboys did you have in the station when you were handling these competitive oils?

A. Approximately a dozen.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Somerville: You may be excused.

The Court: Call your next witness.

Mr. Somerville: At this time, your Honor, I would like to read into the record some letters already in evidence, aside from Government's Exhibit 23, which is a letter——

Mr. Hall: Pardon me. Wouldn't it be feasible to give the exhibit numbers?

The Court: I am going to read all of the exhibits before I decide the matter. If you want to call my attention to them you may. I have examined quite a number of them already.

Mr. Somerville: I would merely like to call your attention to these particularly.

The Court: If you want any specific portion called to my attention you may do so, either for future argument, or as preliminary to some question to some witness. In fact, I myself suggested that we would not stop to read the exhibits. I am reading them myself.

Mr. Somerville: I will merely refer to the exhibits, so [fol. 761] they will be in sequence here respecting the testimony. Government's Exhibits 23, 23-T, 23-Y, 23-V and 23-X.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Somerville: The Government calls as its next witness Dwight Shirk.

Dwight W. Shirk called as a witness on behalf of the Government, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?
The Witness: Dwight Shirk.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What is your residence address, Mr. Shirk?
A. 2458 Third Street, LaVerne.
Q. What is your business or occupation?
A. Now?
Q. Yes.
A. I have an orange grove.

Mr. Hall: I can't hear.

A. Citrus grove.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Have you also been in the retail gasoline business at one time?
A. 15 years.
Q. Are you acquainted with the premises located at 2109 Fourth Street in LaVerne?
[fol. 762] A. I owned them.
Q. Did you operate a service station upon those premises sometime in the past?
A. Yes.
Q. When did you operate a service station there?
A. From 1935 until, I think it was March, 1945.
Q. Whose gasoline and oils did you dispense?

A. There is a correction there. I believe it was in March, 1946.

Q. Talk a little louder. I can't hear.

A. I think it was in March, 1946 when I rented the place. I think I made an error in my date. I am not sure.

Q. Answering the last question, whose gasolines and oils did you dispense at this station?

A. At what time?

Q. We will trace it through from the beginning.

A. When I started, in 1935, I think I had a pump of Union, Shell and Economy. I don't remember what the fourth one was.

Q. And did this continue up to 1941?

A. I had what we all a split pump station, and at different times there was different gasoline in those pumps. I think in 1939 and 1940 I had three pumps of Golden Eagle.

Q. When did this cease to be a split pump station?

A. I believe that the Standard products went in the 1st [fol. 763] of November, 1941.

Q. Did you continue to operate the station after the Standard products went in?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you continue to handle competitive gasoline?

A. No.

Q. Did you continue to handle competitive oils?

A. Yes and no.

Q. Prior to the period that it became a Standard Oil station you did sell a number of competitive oils, did you not?

A. That's right.

Q. What were some of the competitive oils that you handled?

A. Pennzoil was the main one. I had large sales of Pennzoil. But I had some others. I had Hyvis; I had Triton, which is a Union product, and I had some Standard Oil in there at different times.

Q. Were those oils prominently displayed in the station?

A. Yes.

Q. Were signs displayed in front of the station?

A. There was always a sign some place in the station for the oils that were handled. However, there was a limit to the number of signs we could have in front of our [fol. 764] station, due to a city ordinance. So, how many signs were out in front of the station, I would not be sure of that. I know there was a Pennzoil sign.

Q. Leading up now to the time your station became a Standard Oil retail outlet, did any Standard Oil Company representative approach you with respect to entering into a lease of your property?

A. Yes, I think the deal that was finally made was pending for at least a year and a half.

Q. What dates were involved?

A. What?

Q. When did this happen, Mr. Shirk?

A. That would be prior to November of 1941.

Q. Do you recall who the Standard Oil people were that you dealt with?

A. Mainly it was Lewis Burke.

Q. Were any financial inducements offered to you in consideration of your station becoming a Standard station?

Mr. Hall: That is objected to. No proper foundation has been laid.

The Court: I think if you limit it in point of time, it is a preliminary question.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When did Mr. Burke approach you with respect to leasing your property, Mr. Shirk?

A. Well, I don't think I can answer that, except that [fol. 765] it was prior to the time, some little time.

Q. Where did these discussions take place?

A. At the station.

Q. Did Mr. Burke say anything with respect to your granting a lease to the Standard Oil Company?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute, if the Court please. We haven't found who else was present.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Was there anyone else present, Mr. Shirk?

A. No specific time that I recall, other than just maybe the employees there at the station.

Q. So far as you recall there was no one present other than yourself and Mr. Burke and possibly the employees at your station?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. The witness said he can't recall anybody but Mr. Burke being present.

The Court: He said the employees.

Mr. Somerville: I have difficulty in hearing Mr. Shirk.

The Court: Speak louder. Who was present on this occasion you are talking about?

The Witness: I don't think we have any specific occasion we are talking about. Just prior to the signing of the lease.

The Court: How long before was it?

The Witness: There were Standard Oil men; sometimes [fol. 766] there was somebody with Mr. Burke, but usually Mr. Burke was alone, I think.

The Court: Go ahead.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. At any time during that period were any discussions held concerning advances of money or financial inducement for entering into a lease?

A. Yes, there was a lot of discussion on that.

Q. When were those discussions, during what period, and when was the last time?

A. A year prior to the signing of the lease that I now hold, which was September, 1941.

Q. Were those discussions held at your station?

A. Mainly so.

Q. Were some of them held at the offices of the Standard Oil Company?

A. I believe not. I think out to dinner, about one or two.

Q. What offers were made to you by Mr. Burke, during these discussions?

Mr. Burke: I object to that, if the Court please, as calling for the conclusion of the witness.

The Court: You can ask what they talked about, and what was said.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What, if anything, was said concerning financial assistance, financial inducements for entering into the [fol. 767] lease.

A. How much enlargement on that can I make?

The Court: First of all, was there anything said about any financial inducement? If you answer in the affirmative you can say what was said. If not, that ends it.

The Witness: The conversations were considerably on the paying of the full amount of the lease at the time that the lease papers were signed.

The Court: What was said?

The Witness: And it seems to be very much out of the ordinary to make a deal of that kind.

The Court: Who said that?

The Witness: The Standard Oil representative, Mr. Burke.

The Court: Who wanted the full amount?

The Witness: I did.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What happened?

A. Well, the deal drug——

The Court: You were trying to drive a hard bargain with the Standard Oil?

The Witness: I did the best I could. It took considerable time for them to pay me the full amount of the lease.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. But they did?

A. They did, yes.

Q. How much did this amount to?

A. $7500.

[fol. 768] Q. For what period was that lease?

A. From the date of the signing of it for 15 years, in advance.

Q. Describe what happened after your agreement with the Standard Oil Company in 1941, with respect to your sales of competitive oils?

A. In the signing of the lease and agreements, it was understood that I was to taper off as fast as possible.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute——

The Court: If an agreement is signed, the agreement is the best evidence. If there was any conversation on it, you had better relate the conversation, and not what you understood what was said.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. I move to strike out that part of the answer of the witness——

The Court: Yes, that may be stricken. He started to say something. All he said was that it was understood. That may be stricken.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Were any instructions given to you with respect to the sale of competitive oils and greases?

A. The main selling—

Q. Yes or no?

A. Yes.

Q. By whom were those instructions given?

A. The instructions were in the lease.

[fol. 769] Q. Did any representative of the Standard Oil Company give you any instructions?

A. It was talked about, yes.

Q. Who was it, Mr. Burke?

A. Mr. Burke.

Q. When?

A. At the time of the signing of the lease.

Q. In November, 1941?

A. No, September was the time of the signing of it.

Q. Where were those instructions given?

A. On the premises, I believe.

Q. Was anybody else present?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. What, if anything, was said with respect to the handling of competitive oils and greases?

A. I should sell our customers on Standard products, and taper off on competitive oils as fast as possible.

Q. What happened with respect to the display of competitive oils during this period?

A. They were not displayed.

Q. What happened with respect to the display of signs out in front, of other signs?

A. They were picked up.

Q. Did you continue to make some purchases of Pennzoil and other competitive oils?

[fol. 770] A. Yes.

Q. Did you continue to make purchases in the same volume as you had prior to this time?

A. No.

Q. From your experience in the service station business, can you tell us whether or not the display you had on hand of signs and advertisements, the taking of them off had any effect upon your sales of these competitive products?

Mr. Hall: That is objected to. No foundation has been laid, and it calls for speculation and conjecture, and is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: I am inclined to think that objection is good. I think he can testify to what result the actual change had. Read the question.

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Court: I think it is too broad. I think it really calls for a conclusion. He may be asked after that what the sales were. Then, of course, it is a question of inference whether or not it resulted from removing the signs or not. I will sustain the objection to the form of the question. Did you continue to operate the station yourself?

The Witness: For some time, yes.

The Court: After you entered into this lease, you removed the signs, is that true?

A. Yes.

[fol. 771] The Court: Then you got rid of the stock on hand of these other products?

The Witness: Some of them entirely and some of them I kept on hand.

The Court: Did you sell what you had on hand?

The Witness: I sold what I had on hand. I owned that.

The Court: You bought it?

The Witness: Yes.

The Court: You did not have that on consignment?

The Witness: No.

The Court: Then you ceased buying?

The Witness: On some of them, yes.

The Court: Of course, you did not have any sales, because you did not have anything to sell?

The Witness: On some of them.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Approximately when was the last order of Pennzoil placed with Mr. Ellis? I believe you testified that Mr. Ellis was the salesman.

A. It is awfully hard for me to establish a date on that.

Q. I call your attention to——

A. My guess is——

Q. To November, 1944?

Mr. Hall: What is this, a suggestion of the answer to the witness?

[fol. 772] The Court: No, in a case like this you can't be too technical. He probably knows of a particular sale, and he calls his attention to the particular date.

The Witness: I would have said in 1944.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Can you place the last sale with respect to any year or month?

A. I think it was in 1944. That would have been my guess.

Q. You don't know what month in 1944?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall sometime during this year a truck driver with a Pennzoil truck appearing at your service station to fill an order that had been placed for Pennzoil?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you recall when this event occurred?

A. It was after the station had been painted as a Chevron station, and I think that was 1944.

Q. Can you place the month, approximately?

A. No, I cannot.

Q. Were there representatives of the Standard Oil Company present when this truck driver appeared at your station?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. Who were those representatives?

A. There were two men, I was told, from the Frisco [fol. 773] office, and Mr. Lewis Burke.

Q. What happened with respect to the order of Pennzoil?

A. I received the order.

Q. Did the truck driver have any difficulty dropping that order with you?

A. I tried my best to place him off the lot, without taking the order in front of the Standard representatives, but he did not take the general hint. It was very funny to all of us, and I said: Go ahead, and leave the order.

Q. Was anything said to you immediately after this episode with respect to handling competitive oils?

A. We joked about it, at the time. I think a day or so later Mr. Burke said, since it has come to the surface this way, I think we had better not buy any more Pennzoil. After all, it's been quite awhile, and you should have been tapered off.

[fol. 774] Q. Did you make regular orders of Pennzoil with Mr. Ellis after that date?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you make any orders to Pennzoil Company at all?

A. I don't remember.

Q. You did not make any regular orders, at any rate?

A. No.

Q. Did Mr. Ellis again approach you with respect to taking orders?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you satisfied with the Pennzoil oil products at this time, Mr. Shirk?

A. Yes.

Mr. Somerville: I think that is all. Just a minute, please. That will be all, Mr. Hall.

The Court: All right. Do you want a recess now or do you want to cross-examine first?

Mr. Hall: It would be a very excellent time.

The Court: It would be a good time. All right; we will recess at a good time.

(Short recess.)

Mr. Somerville: If your Honor please, I would like to ask the witness a particular question or two.

The Court: Where is he?

Mr. Dixon: I will get him, with your Honor's permission.

[fol. 775] The Court: Go ahead. He is probably in the hallway.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Mr. Shirk, was it your testimony that you had split pumps at this station prior to its becoming a Standard station?

A. That is right.

Q. During this period that you had split pumps did you ever put gasoline in those pumps other than the gasoline on the brand name on the pumps?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Somerville: That is all.
Mr. Hall: That is all.
The Court: All right.
Mr. Thody: The Government now wishes to call Mr. J. E. Bradley.

J. E. BRADLEY, called as a witness by plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?
The Witness: J. E. Bradley.
The Clerk: Will you speak loudly, please?
The Witness: J. E. Bradley.
The Clerk: And that is B-r-a-d-l-e-y?
The Witness: That is right.
The Clerk: And your full first name, sir?
The Witness: John.

[fol. 776] Direct examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Bradley?
A. At 1831 Herbert Avenue, Salt Lake City.
Q. Will you kindly speak up?
A. 1831 Herbert Avenue in Salt Lake City
Q. And what is your occupation or by whom are you employed?
A. Peerless Oil Company. I am manager.
Q. In what business is the Peerless Oil Company engaged?
A. We are distributors for Pennzoil products.
Q. For what territory or sales area?
A. Western Wyoming, Utah and Nevada.
Q. How long have you been associated with the Peerless Oil Company?
A. Three years.
Q. Describe briefly, if you will, Mr. Bradley, what the nature of your duties are as manager of the Peerless Oil Company?
A. Well, sales and the office, the general operation of the company.
Q. What do you mean by sales?
A. Well, I make sales contacts and we have salesmen on the road.

[fol. 777] Q. Are you in charge of these salesmen?

A. Yes.

Q. You referred to office. What do you mean; are you in charge of the operations of the office?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you have any additional duties?

A. Well, just the general operation of the company.

Q. Are you or are you not in charge of the records maintained by the company?

A. Yes.

Q. You are or are not?

A. I am.

Q. Do you do any sales work yourself, personally, Mr. Bradley?

A. Yes. Some of my time is spent on sales.

Q. Is it correct to say occasionally you do?

A. Occasionally, yes.

Q. Describe, if you will generally, Mr. Bradley, the manner in which you order your Pennzoil products for sale in the area described by you.

A. Well, all our orders come through the Los Angeles office. It is all ordered through the Los Angeles office of Pennzoil Company.

Q. You mean you place your orders with Los Angeles?

A. That is correct.

[fol. 778] Q. And from where are the shipments received pursuant to those orders which you have placed on the Los Angeles office?

A. Well, the most of it, the biggest percentage of the oil in Utah comes from Oil City, Pennsylvania, and our Nevada points are serviced from San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Q. With respect to the Utah shipments and for your sales in the State of Utah do you receive all this merchandise from Oil City directly?

A. Well, the biggest percentage of it. You mean is it oil shipped from Oil City?

Q. For sale in Utah do you receive it in one central place?

A. No, no. The biggest percentage is, but we have drop shipments at our different points, and some are to individuals and some are to our subdistributors.

Q. With respect to the sales in the State of Nevada how are shipments of oil from the Los Angeles office made to the various customers you have? Are they handled through some central distribution center or——

A. There are some drop shipments from Los Angeles and some go to our agent who in turn delivers the oil.

Q. What is the situation with respect to greases purchased by you for resale in the States of Nevada and Utah? First, what is the situation with respect to Utah?

A. Well, all our greases are shipped from Los Angeles.

[fol. 779] Q. That is——

A. For Utah.

Q. For Utah? What was the origin of your greases for sale in the State of Utah?

A. Well, Southern Nevada comes out of Los Angeles, and the Reno territory is shipped out of San Francisco.

Q. From your experience in the oil business, Mr. Bradley, is Pennzoil, both the oils and the Pennzoil greases, comparable with brands and prices of motor oil generally used by the motoring public?

A. Yes.

Q. Are Pennzoil products comparable with RPM sold by the Standard Oil Company of California, through the Chevron outlets?

A. Yes.

Q. You have indicated previously in your testimony that you have some salesmen, I believe, is that correct?

A. Yes, we have six salesmen working out of Salt Lake.

Q. What territory do they cover?

A. That is Utah and Nevada.

Q. Both Utah and Nevada?

A. Yes.

Q. What type of sales outlets do you market your products through?

A. Our biggest percentage is through motor car dealers, [fol. 780] service stations and garages.

Q. What is your method of operation? Do the salesmen make contacts of those stations?

A. Yes.

Q. Do they have regular territories?

A. Yes, each salesman has their own territory.

Q. Do you maintain records of the volume of sales for oils and greases made by your company each year in those areas described by you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are those records maintained under your supervision and direction?

A. Yes.

Q. Are they kept in the regular course of business?

A. Right.

Q. Are you familiar, through your examination of those records, or otherwise, as to the volume of your sales in the State of Utah of oils and greases for the year 1946?

A. I have our purchases of oil, that is, our cost, if that is what you want.

Q. Answer yes or no.

A. I haven't those figures available.

Q. Do you know what your dollar volume of oils and greases sold by your company in the States of Utah and Nevada would be for 1946?

[fol. 781] A. 1946 our sales ran $225,000 on just oils and greases.

Q. For both States?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have comparable figures for the year 1947?

A. '47 was about $20,000 under the 1946 figure.

Q. Less than '46?

A. Right.

Q. Is it your policy, Mr. Bradley, to furnish your dealers with advertising material?

A. Yes.

Q. When is that material furnished, at the time the sales are made, or otherwise?

A. Yes, naturally if they handle our products we furnish the advertisements.

Q. What type of advertisement?

A. Regular curb signs, wall signs; we give away some caps for the mechanics. That is about the only advertising material we have.

Q. Do you furnish display equipment to your customers?

A. To display our products, yes.

Q. Have you, in the course of your business, made sales to the Utah Service, Incorporated, located at Springville, Utah?

A. Yes.

[fol. 782] Mr. Thody: At this point, your Honor, the Government wishes to have marked for identification the dealer agreement TBA, executed by Utah Service, Inc., dated March, 1941, and the accompanying papers in support thereof, which were furnished pursuant to Subpoena No. 1, Item 11.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 50 marked for identification.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Can you tell us, Mr. Bradley, approximately when you made sales to the Utah Service, Inc.?

A. It was in April of 1947.

Q. April, 1947? And to whom did you make those sales?

A. To the manager of the station.

Q. Do you recall his name?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Was the attendant on duty at that time?

A. Well, he was the attendant, but he was also manager of the station.

Q. Do you recall the volume of the order so sold to the station at that time?

A. It was around 10 cases of oil.

Q. Who made the delivery to the station?

A. I was traveling with our salesman at the time. We both delivered the oil.

Q. How was this delivery made? Was it made directly [fol. 783] to the station?

A. Yes.

Q. Was the merchandise displayed?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it placed on the shelves, so that it could be seen visibly?

A. At the time of delivery it was, yes.

Q. Were further sales made by you to this station?

A. No, sir, there was not any more sold, or grease.

Q. Were any further attempts made by you to make future sales?

A. Yes.

Q. What attempts were made by you?

A. Our salesman contacted the station about two weeks later, and he was told that——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. I move to strike the answer of the witness.

The Court: He just started to say our salesman was, and he did not finish.

Mr. Hall: I object to it as calling for hearsay upon hearsay.

The Court: I don't think the question called for hearsay.

I think the answer would be. The part that he contacted the station is all right, but what he was told, you can't testify to that, because you were not present.

By Mr. Thody:

[fol. 784] Q. Was your salesman successful or unsuccessful?

A. He was unsuccessful.

Q. Were any further attempts made to sell this station?

A. Yes.

Q. When were such attempts made?

A. About 30 days after the first call.

Q. The first call was made when?

A. In April, of 1947.

Q. April?

A. It was in April.

Q. I think your previous testimony, if I am not mistaken, was in February, 1947.

A. I thought I said April.

Q. Would you correct the record at this time?

A. It was April.

Q. April, 1947?

A. Yes.

Q. A subsequent attempt was made 30 days later, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. By whom?

A. I contacted them on the last call.

Q. Were you successful at that time, or unsuccessful?

A. I was unsuccessful.

[fol. 785] Q. Were there any conversations as to the reason why you were unsuccessful in making the sales of Pennzoil at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was present when such conversations took place?

A. Myself and the station manager.

Q. When was this?

A. That would be in May.

Q. May, 1947?

A. 1947.

Q. Where did these conversations transpire?

A. In the station, in the manager's office.

Q. In the building?

A. In the building.

Q. What was the nature of those conversations?

Mr. Hall: Objected to

By Mr. Thody:

Q. What were those conversations?

Mr. Hall: That is objected to as calling for hearsay.

The Court: I will overrule it, in line with the ruling I made this morning. Objection overruled.

The Witness: I was in, naturally trying to sell him our merchandise, our products. I was told that they could not handle any outside oils.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. You were told you could not handle——

The Court: Don't repeat the answer. Mr. Hall did that [fol. 786] too. It is very bad for the record, because the witness does not understand whether it is calling for another question, and the reporter does not know whether you are just soliloquizing, and whether it should go in or not.

Mr. Thody: Very well.

The Court: It is hard to get away from it, even with lawyers who have practiced as long as you have.

Mr. Thody: I move now, your Honor, that Government's Exhibit for identification No. 50 be admitted into evidence.

The Court: Is that of a similar type?

Mr. Thody: Yes.

The Court: Is that a TBA agreement?

Mr. Thody: A dealer agreement.

Mr. Hall: I object as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Objection overruled.

The Clerk: 50 in evidence.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Have you made sales, Mr. Bradley, to Fred A. Carleson, located at 535 South Main Street, Salt Lake City, Utah?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you acquainted with the type of business operated by Mr. Carleson?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you describe the type of business to the Court, please?

[fol. 787] A. It is a motor car dealer, that is a distributor for Cadillac and Pontiac for the State of Utah.

Mr. Thody: I now ask your Honor, that the dealer agreement TBA, executed by the Fred A. Carleson Company on June 7, 1944, and the supporting papers attached thereto, be marked Government's Exhibit for identification.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 51 for identification.

Mr. Thody: May the record show, your Honor, that this agreement was produced pursuant to Subpoena No. 1, Item 12?

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Do you maintain records of each individual account to which you have sold your products?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have an account for the name Fred A. Carleson?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you examined such account?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Can you state to the Court when you first made sales to Fred A. Carleson Company?

A. Well, as far as the record indicates, 1934. That is as far back as it shows sales to Fred A. Carlson Company.

[fol. 788] Q. Do your records generally go back beyond that period?

A. No; we haven't records beyond 1934. Those are the——

Q. So that your records do not necessarily show, or sales might have been made prior to that time?

A. Prior to that, yes.

Q. Have you examined your records on the amount of sales made to the Fred A. Carleson Company prior to the date June 7, 1944?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you state the amount of oils and greases sold to Pennzoil for the year 1943?

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. That is evidently calling for the contents of a record, your Honor. We have not seen the record. I object to it as not the best evidence.

The Court: Well, if he has a summary, or unless you know it yourself, unless he has knowledge, he can't testify.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Do you have knowledge?

A. Yes.

The Court: All right; go ahead.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Can you state what the volume of sales in the year 1943 to Fred A. Carleson Company were?

A. Right in the neighborhood of $2,000.

Q. Is that for the total year?

[fol. 789] A. Yes.

Q. And for the year 1944 do you have knowledge?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the amount of sales?

A. It was approximately $1,300.

Q. Now, does that $1,300 represent the first six months up to June 7th or does that represent the entire year?

A. That is the entire year of '44.

Q. Now, do you have knowledge of the volume of sales made in the year 1945?

A. Yes.

Q. What is it?

A. It was $135.00.

Q. And for the year 1946?

A. Just about exactly the same.

Q. And what is that amount?

A. There was $133.00. There was just two or three dollars difference in the two years.

Mr. Thody: I now move that Government's Exhibit 51 for identification be admitted into evidence.

Mr. Hall: Objection is made to each and every document included in that exhibit on the ground that it is irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: The objection is overruled and it may be received into evidence and be so marked.

[fol. 790] The Clerk: 51 in evidence.

Mr. Thody: At this time, your Honor, I wish to call the attention of the witness and also the attention of the court to paragraph 3(a) which has been added to the dealer agreement executed June 7, 1944. This short provision reads:

> "In addition to the sale of Company's lubricating oils on the premises described herein, the sale of Quaker State and Pennzoil Motor Oil by Dealer thereon shall not be deemed by Company to be a breach of this Agreement provided such sale does not constitute more than five per cent of total lubricating oil sales on the premises."

Q. Were you aware of the fact that there was a percentage limitation in the contract?

A. I knew there was a percentage but I didn't realize it was five per cent.

Q. Have you had any conversations with officers of Fred A. Carleson Company concerning this percentage?

A. Yes.

Q. When were such conversations had?

A. Oh, about in February of this year I had quite a discussion with Mr. Harry——

Q. And whose was that conversation?

A. In Mr. Carleson's office.

Q. And who was present?

[fol. 791] A. Harry Carleson and myself.

Q. Who is Harry Carleson?

A. He is manager of the Fred A. Carleson Company.

Q. And what was the conversation that was held concerning the percentage?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute, just a minute. That is objected to as irrelevant and immaterial, no proper foundation laid, hearsay, and not within the issues of the case.

The Court: A better foundation should be laid, but the objection as to materiality is overruled in line with the similar ruling I made this morning on similar questions.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Approximately when were such conversations held?

A. In February of this year.

Q. Approximately when in February?

A. Oh, in the middle, right in the middle of the month of February. I just couldn't say for sure which day.

Q. Well, was it closer to the 20th or was it closer to the 10th?

A. Oh, it was around the 15th.

Q. The 15th. You say that the conversations were held at the Fred A. Carleson Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Where at the Fred A. Carleson Company, in its office?

[fol. 792] A. In Mr. Harry Carleson's office.

Q. In his office?

A. Right.

Q. Where is that located?

A. 535 South Main Street in Salt Lake.

Q. Is that on the ground floor or where?

A. Yes. It is a one-story building.

Q. And what parties were present?

A. Just Mr. Carleson and myself.

Q. What were the conversations that were so held?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Oh, I was in to try to see if we couldn't get more of their oil business; and I was told that we wouldn't be able to enjoy any better business until their contract had ran out with the Standard Oil Company.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Was this percentage provision specifically mentioned?

A. He didn't mention any amount but he did tell me that as soon as their volume got up—they had a certain quota to meet—and as soon as that was sold, well, then he would be in a position to buy what he wanted.

Q. I think maybe you are discussing another provision in this contract also. Did you ever discuss the provision as to a gallonage amount which Fred A. Carleson should [fol. 793] buy, a gallonage amount of oil and greases which the Fred A. Carleson Company must buy from the Standard Oil Company?

A. Well, he said he had a certain amount he had to buy. I don't know what it was.

Q. Well, answer yes or no. I would like a yes or no response. Did you have such conversation?

A. Yes.

Q. And when did that transpire?

A. That is at the same time.

Q. At the same time. Will you tell the court the full nature of the conversations with respect to it?

A. Well, he just told me that it would be better not to use any of our products because he had a certain volume that he had to sell before his contract would be completed.

Q. Did he tell you what that volume was?

A. No.

Q. Were you aware at that time that that volume was for 20,000 gallons of lubricating oils and greases?

A. No.

Q. Based, Mr. Bradley, upon the 1943 sales volume which you have referred to, I believe your testimony, if I am not mistaken, was around $2,000, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know the amount, the volume of oils embraced within that sales volume?

[fol. 794] A. It was approximately 1,600 gallons of oil.

Q. 1,600 gallons.

A. The balance would be in greases. I haven't how much grease was sold.

Q. Did you ever have any other further conversations with the Carlesons concerning the differences in the volume over the 1943 level and the subsequent volume which you enjoyed?

A. Several times.

Q. And when did those conversations transpire?

A. Oh, I talked with him several times in 1946, and my first contact was right after I started with the company.

Q. When was that?

A. In about September of 1945.

Q. Have you had any current conversations?

A. Yes.

Q. When was the last conversation of this nature you had with them?

A. It was about February.

Q. And where did that occur?

A. That was at Mr. Carleson's office.

Q. Was that at the same time?

A. At the same time; yes.

Q. And what was the conversation? That is, the same as this previous conversation, the same time, place, and [fol. 795] parties present as the February 15th?

A. That is right.

Q. And what was stated there?
A. I was talking about February 15th——

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute, just a minute, Mr. Bradley. That is objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. What explanation or what reason was given as to the difference in volume which you now enjoy and the previous volume?

A. Well, he just said he had to sell a certain percentage of Standard oil products and that he had to make the quota. That has been the same reason every time I talked with Mr. Carleson, the reason of our drop in volume.

Q. You have persisted in attempting to make sales?
A. Yes.

Q. Was there any further conversation at that time?

A. Well, one reason that we have been contacting, we have been more or less assured that when the contract does run out that we will be able to enjoy a much better volume there.

Q. Did he express a dissatisfaction with the present contract he had?

A. Yes; he did.

Q. What was the nature of this dissatisfaction? Was it directed to the limitation on oil?

[fol. 796] Mr. Hall: Just a minute, just a minute. That is objected to as hearsay.

The Court: I think you should not lead him. He ought to say what it was. I will sustain the objection to that.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Was the dissatisfaction with the oil provisions of the contract?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was stated at that time?
A. He just said——

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. That is objected to as hearsay.

The Court: All right. Overruled. You may answer.

Mr. Thody: Yes.

A. He just said it would be good when it was over with and he could buy what he wanted to. That is the sum and substance.

Q. Was there ever any dissatisfaction expressed to you by the Carleson Motor Company concerning Pennzoil products?

A. No.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

The Court: All right. Cross-examine.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Bradley?

A. 1831 Herbert Avenue in Salt Lake.

Q. Salt Lake City in the State of Utah?

[fol. 797] A. In the State of Utah, yes.

Q. What is the dispensing equipment that Pennzoil furnishes to retail dealers?

A. The highboys to dispense our own products or the 15-gallon seals and some grease dispensers, gear grease.

Q. What is a highboy?

A. Well, it is a 30-gallon container, steel container, with a pump. It is either 30 or 60-gallon.

Q. Did I understand you to say that you started with the Pennzoil Company in 1945?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, is it a fact that you had not been connected with that company before 1945?

A. That's right.

Q. How many salesmen did you say operated out of the Salt Lake office?

A. Six.

Q. That was during last year, was it?

A. I had five last year. I have six this year.

Q. How many did you have in 1946?

A. There were five men at that time.

Q. And before that how many were there?

A. The same amount since I had been out there.

Q. What other brands of lubricating oils compete with Pennzoil in your area, that is in Utah and Nevada?

[fol. 798] A. Oh, there is Quaker State, Veedol, all your Associated oil products, and you have Standard or Chevron.

and MacMillan, Triton in some parts of the state—that is Union—and there might be other brands that I just can't think of at the moment.

Q. Quaker State?

A. I named Quaker State, I thought.

Q. Hyvis?

A. Yes, Hyvis is there, and now Phillips Petroleum which has just been in a short time.

Q. That has just been in a short time?

A. That is right.

Q. Does the Continental Oil Company put out lubricating oil?

A. Oh, yes; Continental Oil, Texas Company. There are several other independent companies that I just don't recall at the moment.

Q. You don't recall their names?

A. Not right at the moment.

Q. At the time attempt was made to sell the Utah Service, Incorporated in April, 1947 what brands of lubricating oils was the Utah Service selling at that time?

A. All Standard Oil products, as I recall.

Q. What other lubricating oils?

A. I don't believe they had any other oils in stock [fol. 799] at the time.

Q. Well, did you make an investigation to determine that fact?

[fol. 800] A. No; I couldn't say for sure whether he had any others at that time or not.

Q. How much Pennzoil did Carleson of Salt Lake take in 1947?

A. I would say around 200 or 300 gallons. I wouldn't be sure of that. I would have to check the records. It has been a small amount right through the last three years.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Thody: One further question, Mr. Bradley.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. With respect to your testimony on sales to Utah Service you testified, did you not, at the time the initial sale was made in April, 1947 that the Pennzoil products were displayed in a prominent place, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. When you returned 30 days later did that same situation prevail?

A. No.

Q. What was the situation at that time?

A. Well, they had been told that they couldn't display—

Q. No, no; just the situation.

A. It had been moved to the back room.

Q. Was it concealed?

[fol. 801] A. Yes.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

Mr. Somerville: The Government calls as its next witness Mr. Shidemantle.

Andrew J. Shidemantle, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Andrew J. Shidemantle.

The Clerk: How do you spell your last name, please?

The Witness: S-h-i-d-e-m-a-n-t-l-e.

Mr. Hall: Will you speak up so I can write it down.

The Clerk: It is Andrew J. and he is now spelling the last name.

The Witness. Shidemantle, S-h-i-d-e-m-a-n-t-l-e.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What is your residence address, Mr. Shidemantle?

A. 7220 Roanoke Road, San Marino.

Q. What is your business or how are you employed?

A. Vice-president and general manager of the Quaker State Oil Refining Company of California.

Q. And what is the business of that company?

A. The purchase and marketing of Quaker State motor oils and greases.

[fol. 802] The Court: Is that the same company of which Mr. John Beman is president?

The Witness: No. He is with the Pennzoil.

The Court: Oh, that is Pennzoil. All right.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. From what sources do you receive your lubricating oils?

A. Our lubricating oils all come from one of four refineries, all of which are located in the Pennsylvania field.

Q. And from what sources do you receive your greases?

A. The greases come from the same four sources and an additional source. What we refer to as our solid greases are all made at our plant in Buffalo, New York.

Q. Does your company have any relationship to the producer in Pennsylvania on the lubricating oils?

A. Well, our company produced some crude oils, if that is what I understand.

Q. Do you know whether or not there is any stock relationship between the Pennsylvania producer and the Quaker State Company of California, if you know?

A. Well, the Quaker State Oil Refining Company of California does not produce any oil, but the company from whom we receive our lubricating oils does produce some crude oil.

Q. Does that company own the stock in your company?

[fol. 803] A. That is right.

Mr. Hall: Now, wait a minute.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. If you know? Do you know that as a fact?

A. Yes; I do.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute, please. Let me make an objection. I do not know what company you are talking about. You say "that company" and you may refer to either an eastern or a western company.

Mr. Somerville: I am sorry, Mr. Hall. But did you testify as to the company from whom you receive your shipments of oil?

A. I don't believe I did. That is the Quaker State Oil Refining Corporation of Oil City, Pennsylvania.

Q. And your company is a subsidiary of that company?

A. My company is a totally owned subsidiary of the eastern company.

Q. Does your company do any blending of oils received from the fields in Pennsylvania?

A. We do not.

Q. What is the area under the jurisdiction of your companies, Mr. Shidemantle?

A. We serve the State of California, western Nevada and southern Oregon. If I may say, that is within the territorial boundaries of the United States and I don't [fol. 804] suppose you are interested outside of that.

Q. That is right. With respect to the territory you have just described how are Quaker State oils and greases distributed?

A. Well, they are distributed—we distribute them in two different ways. We have our own direct distribution in Los Angeles County, and in a certain area around Sacramento involving 14 counties. All of the rest is distributed by distributors.

Q. Are you familiar with the trade those distributors sell their products to? First—let me withdraw that question. Do you have any supervisory functions over distributors?

A. Myself?

Q. Your company.

A. Our company. Yes; we supervise the operation of our distributors through our own men in the field who spend all their time with the distributors and working with their men, soliciting orders from the trade.

Q. Your company does joint sales promotional work with the distributors?

A. That is right.

Q. And does your company do joint advertising work with those distributors?

A. Yes; I suppose you would call it joint, but in the [fol. 805] main our advertising is done by ourselves. Whatever advertising they do is generally done by themselves.

Q. And did your company have any supervisory functions over the distributors in the State of Washington?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. Are you familiar with the source from which their oils are received?

A. Yes, they are received from exactly the same source as the Quaker State Oil Refining Company of California receives them, from any one of the four refineries located in the Pennsylvania field, one of which is at Bradford, Pennsylvania, one at Oil City, Pennsylvania, one at Embenton, Pennsylvania, and one at St. Mary's, West Virginia. Then, of course, the greases come from the same source, either from one of those four refineries, or from our plant at Buffalo, New York.

Q. Does your company solicit accounts with service station dealers and garage dealers?

A. Yes, we do.

Q. That would be directly in the Sacramento areas and the Los Angeles areas?

A. That's right.

Q. Are you familiar with the trade solicited by your distributors?

A. Yes.

[fol. 806] Q. What trade is that?

A. Service stations, garages, car dealers, in the main, and some commercial business.

Q. How many salesmen, direct company salesmen, are employed by your company in soliciting this trade?

A. About 15.

Q. Are their sales efforts confined also to Los Angeles and Sacramento?

A. About 12 of them are confined to our own direct operations. The other three are in distributor territories.

Q. Are you familiar with whether or not they solicit the Chevron service station trade?

A. I think they do.

Q. And they still do so?

A. That's right.

Q. Are you familiar with the records of sales of this class of trade by your company?

A. Roughly.

Q. Are sales made to Chevron dealers?

A. Well, I would have to say I am sure it is a very, very small amount, if so.

Q. But an effort has been made over a period of some time?

A. Yes.

Q. To solicit that trade?

[fol. 807] A. That's right.

Q. Are you familiar with the grades, brands, qualities of oil bought and sold generally to the motoring public, including those oils dispensed and sold by the Standard Oil Company of California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are those oils and greases comparable to Quaker State oils and greases?

A. Yes.

Q. With respect to the movement or flow of your product, is it frequent, constant, or what is the nature of it, Mr. Shidemantle?

Mr. Hall: That is objected to as calling for the conclusion of the witness; to general, and calling for speculation and conjecture.

The Court: I think it does.

Mr. Somerville: I will reframe that, your Honor.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Does your company receive shipments directly from Oil City, Pennsylvania, regularly?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How often does it receive shipments?

A. We have merchandise coming to us all the time.

Q. Are those shipments made pursuant to orders placed?

A. Those shipments are made as a result of the orders [fol. 808] we ourselves have taken in our own territories from the dealers, or as the result of the orders that have been taken by our distributors, and forwarded by us to place with the refinery.

Q. With respect to distributors in the States of California, Oregon and Washington, are all orders placed with you?

A. No, just from those sections—all orders acquired in the State of California, Western Nevada, Southern Oregon, and a small section of Washington, are placed through us. We receive those orders, and in turn forward them to the refinery. The other section of Oregon and Washington, and at this time I might qualify that section: it is that section which lies only west of the Cascade Mountains in Washington and Oregon. Those orders are placed directly with the refinery by the distributors up there?

Q. Are those shipments received directly from the refinery in Pennsylvania?

A. All orders shipped from the refinery to distributors go direct to the distributor.

Q. Are you familiar with the distributors in the States of Utah, Idaho and Arizona with respect to your product?

A. Well, I simply know the names, you might say, of the distributors who cover the majority of those States.

[fol. 809] Q. Do those distributors receive their shipments directly from Pennsylvania?

A. They do.

Q. Through whom do they place their orders?

A. They place their orders directly with the home office of the Quaker State Oil Refining Corporation, at Oil City, Pennsylvania.

Q. Do any of your distributors handle Quaker State Oil on consignment from the producer in Pennsylvania?

A. No. From the producer in Pennsylvania? No, none of the distributors to whom the Quaker State Oil Refining Company of California sell receive any consignment from the Quaker State Oil Refining Corporation. I cannot answer that question as to what the distributors who deal directly with the Eastern company do. I cannot answer for them.

Q. Do any distributors under your jurisdiction have stocks under consignment from you?

A. Two.

Mr. Somerville: That is all.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Is this a fair statement of the situation, that the company that you are connected with obtains from its parent company in Pennsylvania all of the products that it, the California Company, distributes?

[fol. 810] A. Yes.

Q. That would be true whether the products are distributed directly or through distributors?

A. That's right.

Q. I think you said that your California Company was a wholly owned subsidiary of the Pennsylvania Company?

A. That's right.

Q. Do those distributors that distribute the products in Idaho and Utah come under your company, or under the parent company?

A. They come under the parent company.

Q. In fact, all distributors outside of California or Western Nevada and Southern Oregon, would come under the parent company instead of your company, is that right?

A. With the exception of one in Bellingham, Washington.

Q. Are you familiar with the annual report, 1947, of the Quaker State Oil Refining Corporation?

A. Well, to the extent that I have seen it.

Q. You have read it?

A. Not very thoroughly.

Q. By the way, this Quaker State Oil Refining Corporation is the parent company of the company you are connected with, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. I don't need to put this in evidence, unless counsel [fol. 811] request it, but if you want it in evidence, I will put it in. But I want to read to you a paragraph from the statement of H. J. Crawford, president—by the way, do you know him?

A. Yes.

Q. I want to read to you this statement, and then I will put the question: Since Quaker State motor oil and lubricants are sold almost entirely through independent distributors, the corporation is keenly interested in the prosperity of its distributor organization. The usual sales aids are continued. Although the corporation was unable to supply the demand, sufficient oil was available to enable its distributor organization to carry on a profitable operation. When the present high level of business activity declines, and competition becomes keener, Quaker State motor oil, with its nation wide distribution, and the widespread acceptance it enjoys, will retain its share of the market.—[fol. 812] My question to you is this: From your experience, and based upon your experience, do you agree with that statement of President Crawford?

A. I would like to hear that read again in its entirety.

Q. I will place it before you so that you can read it yourself.

The Court: Let him look at it.

Mr. Hall: I am handing it to him.

Mr. Somerville: I object to the question as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: No, he wants to see if the method of operation described coincides with his understanding of the method of operation.

Mr. Somerville: I object to the way the question is framed.

The Court: Ordinarily we don't allow comparative testimony, but Mr. Hall is putting it in as though he were asking an expert if he agrees with such a statement.

Mr. Somerville: I don't object to all that is in that paragraph, but I do object to some.

The Court: All right.

The Witness: I am still a little confused on the question. I will endeavor to answer that if you will ask me your part of the question again.

[fol. 813] Mr. Hall: Yes, will the reporter read him my part of the question where I began with the words: My question to you is this:

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. It says here that Quaker State will retain its share of the market. I think that is nothing other than what anybody in business would say in a report, if everything was equal, which it probably is.

Q. When your Quaker State oil is distributed to dealers, is it distributed in cans, or in bulk, or by both methods?

A. By both methods.

Q. What is the advantage of the distribution in cans, if any?

A. Well, they have both advantages and disadvantages.

Q. What are some of the advantages?

A. The advantages are that the dealer can—of course, the conception of the can in the beginning was to let the customer know he had sealed oil. Some of the other advantages occurring to the dealer are that he can purchase in small quantities—some of the smaller dealers. The disadvantages to the distributor are that it is a more costly method of distributing oil.

Q. In mentioning the advantages you said, if I understood you correctly, that it let the customer see what he [fol. 814] was buying, is that correct?

A. That is one advantage I believe.

Q. In other words, there is that advantage to canned oil generally that it avoids the possibility of substitution?

A. Yes.

Q. That is correct, isn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. Can you tell me how many retail outlets in the States of California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Utah, Arizona and Idaho sell Quaker State lubricating oils or greases?

A. Well, of course, having no jurisdiction over Utah and Idaho, if you eliminate that part I would have some idea there, and, of course, operating through distributors we have no record of how many dealers they sell, so I cannot answer that question.

Q. In your particular territory, that is, California, western Nevada and southern Oregon, can you give us any figure as to the number of retail outlets handling your products?

A. The only thing I can say is that we have a fair idea of what we have in our own directly operated territory.

Q. Isn't that territory I have just described your direct operating territory?

A. You mentioned all of California and Nevada, I [fol. 815] believe?

Q. Yes.

A. We don't refer to that as our direct operated territory. That is a little bit confusing. When you refer to it as our direct operated territory, that is where our salesmen solicit the outlet, and make deliveries and bill him.

Q. What is the direct operated territory?

A. That is Los Angeles County, and 14 counties surrounding Sacramento.

Q. In this direct operated territory in how many retail outlets are Quaker State products sold?

A. Roughly between 4,000 and 5,000.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Is your company trying to develop new business, as well as retain its old business, Mr. Shidemantle?

A. We do.

Q. Would you retain your sales market if all of the outlets were required to buy all of their requirements from a particular oil company?

Mr. Hall: That is objected to as argumentative.

The Court: He is still your witness. The answer is either obvious, in which case it is improper, or it calls for a conclusion, in which case it also is improper. I will sustain [fol. 816] the objection.

Mr. Somerville: I think that will be all.

The Court: Gentlemen, we have done very well, and so you may have information in advance, I find, on looking at my calendar, that fortunately the calendar for Monday is very light. There are only three matters. One is a motion to dismiss, which has been very carefully briefed, and which should not take very long. The other matters are formal matters, the presentation of a judgment, and the other is merely a setting. Really, the only object of the continuance is to allow a substitution of attorneys. The attorney in the case has stated to the court that he had given his client a substitution, but it evidently is in his pocket, and has never gotten in to the files. I want to have an attorney to deal with, having learned by long experience that a person in pro per gives too much trouble. I am quite certain, gentlemen, that it should not take over half an hour, so we can put in the full morning if you will come in at 10:30. I am sure that by that time I will have the other matters out of the way, and so I give you this notice now so that you will make arrangements in regard to witnesses.

Mr. Dixon: I appreciate that.

Mr. Somerville: May we take certain of the documents out of the court room, your Honor?

The Court: The clerk is authorized to let either side [fol. 817-818] have any documents they wish, for the purpose of making photostats, or further copies.

(Whereupon, at 5:00 o'clock p. m., an adjournment was taken until 10:00 o'clock a. m., of the following day, Thursday, May 13, 1948.)

[fols. 819-820] IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, IN AND FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, CENTRAL DIVISION

Honorable Leon R. Yankwich, Judge Presiding

No. 6159-Y Civil

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff

vs.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA and STANDARD STATIONS, INC., Defendants

REPORTER'S TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS

Los Angeles, California, Thursday, May 13, 1948

APPEARANCES:

(As heretofore noted.)

[fol. 821] Los Angeles, California, Thursday, May 13, 1948, 10:00 A. M.

The Clerk: 6159 Civil, U. S. vs. Standard Oil. Further trial.

The Clerk: Call your witness.

Mr. Thody: The Government calls as its next witness Mr. C. J. Estes.

C. J. ESTES, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Clarence J. Estes.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Where do you reside?

A. 204 La Espiral, Orinda.

Q. California?

A. Yes.

Q. What is your business or occupation, Mr. Estes?

A. Quaker State Oil distributor.

Q. What is the firm name?

A. C. J. Estes Company.

Q. How long have you served as a Quaker State distributor?

A. A little over four years.

[fol. 822] Q. What was your previous business, before that?

A. Industrial salesman for Quaker State Oil of California.

Q. What was the sales territory represented by you in the sale of Quaker State?

A. Six counties in the San Francisco Bay area.

Q. Name the counties.

A. Alameda, Contra Costa, San Francisco, San Mateo, Santa Clara and Santa Cruz.

Q. In the operation of the C. J. Estes Company, what is your particular function?

A. Manager and sales work.

Q. Do you handle the ordering of Quaker State products?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you describe to the Court, if you please, Mr. Estes, the manner in which you order your oils and greases for sale in the territory you have described?

A. We place our order to the Quaker State Oil Company of California, at Los Angeles, who transfers the order to Oil City, Pennsylvania for shipment.

Q. From whom do you receive the shipment of oils and greases?

A. Quaker State Refining Corporation, Oil City, Pennsylvania.

Q. Is the Los Angeles office that you refer to the office in [fol. 823] which Mr. Andrew Shidemantle is the manager?

A. That's right.

Q. How is this oil transported from Oil City, Pennsylvania?

A. Both by boat and rail.

Q. And sent directly to you?

A. That's right.

Q. Is Quaker State motor oil generally comparable with other brands and classes of motor oil used by the motoring public?

A. Yes.

Q. Is Quaker State comparable with RPM motor oil as sold by the Standard Oil of California, through Chevron outlets?

A. I would say so.

Q. In marketing Quaker State products in these counties you have described, what method do you employ?

A. First we send our salesmen out to solicit business for us, and following that we make deliveries by our own trucks.

Q. What type or class of outlets do you generally market these products through?

A. Service stations, garages, motor car dealers.

Q. You have mentioned some salesmen that you have. How many salesmen?

[fol. 824] A. Four.

Q. Is that the present number?

A. That is the present number.

Q. How many did you have in 1947?

A. Three.

Q. Do you give these salesmen any instructions as to the type of account or type of dealers they are to contact?

A. No; wherever they can get the business.

Q. Do they or do they not have complete freedom in the solicitation of their customers?

A. They do.

Q. They do have?

A. Yes.

[fol. 825] Q. Do you furnish your customers with advertising?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. What is the major outlet?

A. Well, mailing out literature, curb signs, can racks, highboys.

Q. Well, do you also furnish them with equipment to dispense your merchandise?

A. In some cases.

Q. And what is the nature of that equipment?

A. Highboys, seal containers, small seal containers.

Q. Do you do any sales contact work yourself personally?

A. Yes.

Q. Approximately how much of your time do you spend in that?

A. Oh, I would say 60 per cent.

Q. Have you contacted a station located at 2546 Telegraph Avenue in Berkeley, California?

A. Yes.

Mr. Thody: The Government now wishes to have marked for identification sublease and agreement dated November 15, 1944, and a dealer agreement dated November 15, 1944 for the station located at 2546 Telegraph Avenue, Berkeley, California.

The Clerk: It is Government's 52 for identification.

Mr. Thody: May the record also show, your Honor, that this agreement was produced by the defendants in response to subpoena No. 1, paragraph 1, item 15?

[fol. 826] The Court: All right.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Did you make sales to this station?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you make sales?

A. In the early part of 1944.

Q. Approximately when?

A. I would say in February or March.

Q. Do you recall to whom you made such sales?

A. I do not. In the earlier part we sold it as the Dana Garage and we solicited orders from most anybody that was there on the premises.

Q. When you speak of the Dana Garage was that the garage, the designation of the station at this location at 2546 Telegraph Avenue?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you recall whether such merchandise sold by you was prominently displayed?

A. It was at the beginning.

Q. How much merchandise did you sell at this time?

A. The opening order was 30 gallons.

Q. 30 gallons?

A. Six cases.

Q. Did you make any subsequent sales?

A. Yes.

Q. When?

A. It was just about a monthly order, 30 gallons a month.

Q. For what period of time?

[fol. 827] A. Up until November.

Q. November when?

A. 1944.

Q. Did you make any sales after November, 1944?

A. One.

Q. When was this?

A. It was along in the first week or second week in November.

Q. Of what year?

A. '44.

Q. Did you make any subsequent attempts to make further sales?

A. Yes.

Q. When?

A. Oh, in probably the rest of the year, the next two or three months.

Q. Were you successful?

A. No.

Q. Did you talk to anyone relative to the reasons for your failure to make such subsequent sales?

A. Yes.

Q. To whom did you talk?

A. Mr. Thillman.

Q. And who is Mr. Thillman?

A. He is the Chevron dealer.

Q. And when did you talk to him?

A. From November, sometime in November on until I quit calling.

[fol. 828] Q. When was the last time you talked with him?

A. I would say it was around in January sometime.

Q. January of '45?

A. '45.

Q. Can you fix a date? Can you fix the approximate date in January when you talked to him?

A. Oh, I would say around the middle of January.

Q. Around the middle. And where did this conversation take place?

A. In the office or accessory room.

Q. Of his station?

A. That is right, garage.

Q. What were these conversations?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Regarding why we could not secure any more business from him.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. What was the reason given?

A. Well, the reason given was that he had signed up on a Chevron deal and couldn't buy our product any longer.

Q. Did you make any subsequent attempts to sell your product after this?

A. That is right.

Q. You did?

A. Yes.

[fol. 829] Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful?

A. No. No; unsuccessful.

Q. Have you made any further contacts in attempts to sell Chevron stations?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you sold or attempted to sell the Union Square Garage in San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Mr. Thody: At this time, your Honor, the Government moves that Government's Exhibit 52 for identification be admitted into evidence.

Mr. Hall: Defendants object to each and all of the documents so offered on the grounds they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Are they of the similar type? Is that the dealer agreement?

Mr. Thody: That is the dealer agreement; yes, sir

The Court: And a sublease. Overruled.

The Clerk: 52 in evidence.

Mr. Thody: And the Government also wishes to have marked for Government's identification the distributor agreement dated February 21, 1941, with the Union Square Garage, and the letters referring thereto, and wishes to have marked as a further exhibit——

The Clerk: Government's 53 marked for identification.

[fol. 830] Mr. Thody: —and 53-A, the agreement entitled "Garage Management and Occupancy Agreement," executed between Standard Oil Company and the Union Square Garage.

The Clerk: 53-A marked for identification.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Referring back for just——

Mr. Hall: Pardon me one moment. I beg your pardon.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Referring back for just one moment to your testimony relating to Dana's Garage, on your subsequent visits after November, 1944 was your merchandise prominently displayed?

A. No.

Q. How was it?

A. It was kept in the back room, storage room.

Q. Was the back storage room part of the same building?

A. That is right.

Q. When did you attempt to sell the Union Square Garage in San Francisco?

A. Either May or June in 1946.

Q. Are you acquainted with the general location of the Union Square Garage in San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you describe generally where it is located with reference to the metropolitan business district of San Francisco?

A. Well, it is located in the center of the downtown sec-
[fol. 831] tion near the finest hotels, I would say.

Q. Is this a relatively large garage or a relatively small garage?

A. It is the largest one in San Francisco.

Q. To whom did you talk in making your attempted sales of your products at the Union Square Garage?

A. Mr. Pansini.

Q. And who is Mr. Pansini?

A. He is the son of the owner of the garage.

Q. Do you know what position he occupies?

A. He is the manager of that, of the Union Square Garage.

The Court: May I ask one or two questions? That garage is built on city property, is it not?

The Witness: I am not sure of that.

[fol. 832] The Court: That is in the square?

The Witness: Yes, Union Square.

The Court: In Union Square, which is over in the center, with the St. Francis Hotel on one side?

The Witness: That's right.

The Court: In that area, and on top of it is a ——

The Witness: —park.

The Court: There is a park, like Pershing Square?

The Witness: Yes.

The Court: This is right in it?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Were any representations made concerning your products at that time?

A. In a natural solicitation of trying to get our product in the garage, yes.

Q. Will you describe just what those representations were?

A. Our presentation was along the line of this being one of the main down town parking garages, that it was visited more widely by tourists than any other place we have in San Francisco, and we thought it would be feasible for him to carry our product, being that it was a nationally known product.

Q. Where did this conversation take place?

A. In Mr. Pansini's office.

[fol. 833] Q. Is that located at the garage?

A. In the garage.

Q. When did you say this occurred?

A. Either May or June, in '46.

Q. Could that be the latter part of May?

A. I am sure I can't just remember whether it was the latter part of May or the early part of June. I believe it was June.

Q. The first part of June?

A. The first part of June.

Q. Who was present during the conversation?

A. Clarence Arvin.

Q. Who is he?

A. Northern representative of Quaker State Oil Company.

Q. What further conversations took place at that time with Mr. Pansini?

Mr. Hall: That is objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: He was very much impressed with the presentation of our proposition, and said to come back the next time we were over in San Francisco, and he would let us know what he could do.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Did you follow up on that?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you visit Mr. Pansini?

[fol. 834] A. That's right.

Q. When did you have your subsequent visit?

A. About 10 days later than the first call.

Q. When would that be?

A. It would be the early part of June.

Q. Where did that visit take place?

A. In Mr. Pansini's office.

Q. Who was present then?

A. Mr. Arvin.

Q. Were there any further conversations relating to your attempts to sell products at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. What were those conversations?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Thody: You may answer.

A. Originally, as I said, we discussed in part our oil. He said he would find out if it was possible for him to do it. We went back to secure the answer. He said he had taken it up with the Standard Oil people, and it was not possible for him to stock Quaker State.

Q. Have you made sales at any time to this account?

A. No.

Q. Have you solicited yourself personally any other Chevron accounts?

[fol. 835] A. Yes, I have.

Q. Do you recall any particular account?

A. Not by name of the owner I do not, no.

Q. Do you recall any by the locations?

A. There is one in San Leandro.

Q. When did you solicit this account?

A. I would say that was July or August, probably, of '46.

Q. Do you keep records of the sales made by you to various garages and service stations?

A. Yes.

Q. Do those records include sales made by salesmen in your employ to whom you have referred in your previous testimony?

A. Yes.

Q. Do those records indicate any sales to Chevron stations?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is objected to as not the best evidence.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Have you examined these records recently?

A. Yes.

Q. Are those records kept or maintained under your supervision and control?

A. Yes.

[fol. 836] Q. Are those records kept in the regular, normal course of business?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know, from examining those records, whether or not you sell to Chevron stations?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as not the best evidence.

The Court: I will allow it to that extent. But I may say you have not laid enough foundation to allow him to testify as to gallonage, or anything like that, or the amount of business. Under our rule you must have the originals here. That is the only condition under which a summary may be given by an accountant, or anyone who has charge of the records, and is the only safeguard the Circuit has put on it. As long as the originals are available in court, anybody can summarize them, merely to assist the Court: If you don't have them, he cannot testify. To the extent the present question goes I will allow it, but no further. Read the question, Mr. Dewing.

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Witness: We sell a few.

Mr. Thody: That is all. I move, your Honor, that Government's Exhibits for identification Nos. 53 and 53-A be admitted into evidence.

Mr. Hall: The defendants object to the introduction of these documents, and to each of them, on the ground that [fol. 837] they are irrelevant and immaterial, and not within the issues framed by the pleadings. The documents which are included in this offer are not documents embraced in either the complaint or the bill of particulars which was required to specify the documents upon which the Government was to rely.

The Court: I will have to examine them.

Mr. Thody: The document, your Honor, entitled: Distributor Agreement, true it does not appear on the regular form, but it contains the essential clauses and conditions which have been referred to in the complaint; and though it appears typed on a separate page, it is similar to the type referred to in Paragraph 27 and Paragraph 29 of the complaint.

Mr. Hall: And I add to my objection, your Honor, that certain of the documents, I think it is 53-A, are not documents between any third parties and any of the defendants in this case, and that as to those documents no proper foundation for their admission has been laid. Those documents are not only subject to the objections which I have heretofore stated, but they are incompetent.

Mr. Thody: May I ask counsel if your objection is solely to relevancy and materiality, or are you also objecting on the grounds of authenticity?

Mr. Hall: As to the document to which Standard is not a party, I certainly object upon the ground of lack of authenticity.

[fol. 838] Mr. Thody: The documents were furnished to the Government, your Honor, pursuant to Subpoena No. 1, and were included with the material requested, and were furnished by the defendents, and came from their files of records kept in the regular course of business by them.

The Court: Gentlemen, in the covering letter, if I may call it that, of this group of exhibits, dated August 29, 1947, and which are the top two pages of the exhibit, signed by W. G. Watson, Attorney in fact, reference is made to the condition under which the Union Square Garage is operating; and in the next letter which antedates it, which is dated March 1, 1945, some reference is made to stockholding in the company which operates the garage. For this reason I believe that the reference to these documents ties them to the letters and makes them admissible. And the fact that they were so furnished in response to subpoena, shows that they were part of the files, and part of the documents to which the letter had reference. Otherwise, I agree with Mr. Hall, that they would not be admissible.

Mr. Hall: I hope your Honor won't overlook that part of my objection in which I allude to the pleadings, and particularly to the Bill of Particulars which, of course, is the charter we have assumed the Government is proceeding under in this case.

The Court: I don't remember to what portion of the Bill [fol. 839] of Particulars you refer. As I understand it, a Bill of Particulars does not stand in the way of proving the type of agreements which are involved in 53, upon the general issue of restraint.

Mr. Hall: That is the very point I am making, and what we have always had in mind since your Honor granted our motion for a Bill of Particulars.

The Court: Let me look at it.

Mr. Hall: We ask what particular forms of agreements the Government is going to rely upon; and in the Bill of Particulars they furnished us copies of those forms were given. Those forms are not like the documents now being pressed into evidence.

The Court: That is true as a general proposition, but I believe, however, the Government may show, notwithstanding the Bill of Particulars, that as to a particular distributor, say the Union Garage, a contract which was substantially of the same character was entered into, and so long as they are not so foreign to the issues the Government cannot be bound to the extent of not permitting a deviation in a form which is properly authenticated, because ultimately what these deal with is a form of agreement.

I am merely summarizing very quickly, gentlemen, what I find here, as I can read very quickly. I have what is called a proofreader's eye, having acquired it in long as- [fol. 840] sociation for many years with newspapers, and writing, like Mr. Hall himself. To continue, what I find in this letter is merely a form of agreement relating to the distribution of their products, in consideration of which they agree to put in some special equipment, for which a rental is to be paid in the sum of $5,900, as advance rental for the period of the contract, to be billed and deducted at the rate of $83.83. So that being the case, I think the Government is not precluded from introducing this merely because it is not upon the particular form. For that matter, at the time the Bill of Particulars was granted, the Government, while it knew of the general nature of the agreements, could not know the deviations that were made in particular cases, and I think that the agreements in the record will show that, while certain forms were used, additions were made to suit a particular occasion, and that the contracts for that reason are not uniform, so far as the typewritten inserts are concerned.

The objection will be overruled. It may be received in evidence and marked 53.

The Clerk: Is that also true as to 53-A?

The Court: Yes.

The Clerk: 53 and 53-A in evidence.

Mr. Hall: Defendants move to strike the testimony of the witness which has reference to the Union Square Garage, [fol. 841] and to his conversations with Mr. Pansini, on the ground that such evidence is irrelevant, incompetent and immaterial, and not within any of the issues framed by the pleadings or clarified by the Bill of Particulars.

The Court: This is merely to save your record in regard to the possible limitation of the Bill of Particulars. Objection overruled.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

[fol. 842] By Mr. Hall:

Q. You stated in your direct examination that the Quaker State oils that you distribute were generally comparable to other oils. What other oils were you referring to?

A. Pennzoil, RPM, Triton and so forth.

Q. Give me the names of the ones that your oils are comparable to?

A. I would say Pennzoil and RPM.

Q. Were those the only ones?

A. Oh, there is various other oils.

Q. Well, name them, please.

A. Triton, Valvoline, Hyvis, Kendall.

Q. MacMillan?

A. Yes.

Q. Wolf's Head?

A. Yes.

Q. How about Mohawk?

A. Which type of Mohawk?

Q. Well, any type; is any type of Mohawk comparable?
A. Mohawk Penn.
Q. I am asking you.
A. I said, "Mohawk Penn."
Q. Oh, I see. By the way, what do you mean by "comparable"?
A. Selling somewhat in the same price class and promoted [fol. 843] as a top qualified oil by other companies.
Q. Does Richfield make an oil in that category?
A. Yes; I am sure they do.
Q. And they sell it?
A. Yes.
Q. In competition with your oil?
A. Yes.
Q. Does Shell make an oil in that category and sell it in competition with yours?
A. Yes.
Q. Does the Texas Company make an oil in that category and sell it in competition with yours?
A. Yes.
Q. Does Continental Oil Company make an oil in that category and sell it in competition with yours?
A. Yes.
Q. Does Tidewater Associated Oil Company make an oil in that category and sell it in competition with yours?
A. Yes.
Q. And Union does, too, does it not?
A. Yes.
Q. How about the Utah Oil Refining Company?
A. Who?
Q. Utah Oil Refining Company.
A. I know nothing of them.
[fol. 844] Q. Does the Wilshire put out an oil in competition with yours?
A. Yes.
Q. Does General Petroleum Corporation put out an oil in competition with yours?
A. Yes.
Q. How many salesmen did you have in the year 1945?
A. Three.
Q. How many in the year 1946?
A. Three.
Q. In the territory which is included under your distribution how many retail outlets purchased lubricating oil or Quaker State lubricants from you during the year 1946?

A. I would say around 400.

Q. How many in 1947?

A. I would say approximately the same.

Q. Now, Mr. Estes, you spoke of seal containers. Will you describe what those are?

A. What we call the seal container is a 15-gallon container which can be sealed after delivery is made or before the delivery is made.

Q. Before the delivery is made. Well, it is not a can, is it?

A. No; it is a 15-gallon barrel I would call it.

[fol. 845] Q. Well, you say it is sealed before delivery is made?

A. It can be sealed at the warehouse when filled, before you deliver it to the customer, or after delivering it to the customer it can be sealed.

Q. Does that sealing prevent substitution?

A. Supposedly, yes.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Mr. Estes, in your testimony on the comparable oils —I refer to Shell, to Texaco and so on—have you in your visits to Chevron stations ever seen Shell oil displayed in a Chevron station?

A. No.

Q. Have you in your visits ever seen a Texaco oil displayed in Chevron stations?

A. No.

Q. Have you in your visits ever seen a Tidewater oil displayed in Chevron stations?

A. No.

Q. Have you in your visits ever seen a Union oil displayed in Chevron stations?

A. No.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

[fol. 846] Mr. Hall: Wait a minute.

Recross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What do you mean by displayed when you answered those questions?

A. Displaying is visible to the customer.

Q. Well, that would apply only to packaged goods, wouldn't it?

A. No. It could be displayed properly in a highboy, labeled properly.

Q. Where would the highboy be placed?

A. Usually they are directly in front of the station or inside the station room.

Q. If it was inside the station you would say it was displayed?

A. I would.

Mr. Hall: That is all—wait a minute.

The Court: Just tell me one thing: "highboy," as I have learned to know the word, has reference to a certain type of piece of furniture ordinarily.

The Witness: It is a container made of a single piece.

The Court: Why do you call it "highboy"?

The Witness: Because it stands up high.

The Court: It stands up high like the old-fashioned piece of furniture that we used to call a highboy, is that it?

[fol. 847] The Witness: That is right; with a pump on top of it.

The Court: What is it?

The Witness: With a pump on top of it.

The Court: With a pump on top of it.

The Witness: That is right.

The Court: That is all.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute.

Q. Assume that you are distributing Quaker State lubricating oils at a given service station by means of highboys, how many highboys would you normally require?

A. Three.

Q. Why would you require three?

A. Those are the popular weights of oil the customer buys.

Q. Well, how many weights does Quaker State put out?

A. They put out about—I think it is—let's see: 10, 20, 30, 40, 50, 60, and 70.

Q. So, according to your testimony, then, if I understand your correctly, to normally display a Quaker State lubricating oil, if you displayed it in highboys, you would have to have three highboys and they would be put either in front of the station or inside the station office, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. I beg pardon?

[fol. 848] A. Yes.

Q. How would its display inside the station office in highboys apprise the traveling motorist of the fact that Quaker State is being dispensed at the station?

A. By the highboys being properly labeled and with a target sign on top of the pump, which is usually above the vision of the window.

Q. If they were inside, you would have to go inside to look at them, wouldn't you?

A. I hardly think so. Most of these stations are fully glassed so that people see right into the station.

Q. You are assuming a station fully glassed?

A. That is right; which they are.

Mr. Hall: Thank you. That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Mr. Estes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In addition to selling oil through highboys do you also sell oil in packaged containers?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Approximately what percentage of your business is sold in packaged containers?

A. I would say ours is about 70 per cent.

Q. And when you sell goods in highboys is it customary [fol. 849] for you to also furnish advertising equipment?

A. That is right.

Q. What is the type of such advertising equipment furnished by you?

A. It is usually a curb sign.

Q. And how would that curb sign be used?
A. Be displayed out on the corner of the lot or visible to the traveling trade.

Mr. Thody: That is all.
Mr. Hall: Just a moment.

Recross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Which do you prefer to sell, quantities in highboys or quantities in what you call packaged containers?
A. Well, from a profit standpoint we prefer to sell bulk.
Q. I beg your pardon?
A. From a profit standpoint you prefer to sell bulk oil.

Mr. Hall: That is all.
Mr. Thody: That is all.
The Court: All right. This is a good time, gentlemen, to take a short recess as long as they finished with this witness. Then we won't have to interrupt the testimony of the next witness.

[fol. 850] (Short recess.)

Mr. Somerville: The Government calls Robert A. Beaman.

Robert A. Beaman, called as a witness by the Government, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?
The Witness: Robert A. Beaman, B-e-a-m-a-n.
The Clerk: B-e-a-m-a-n?
The Witness: Right.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Where do you reside, sir?
A. 1129 South Prospect Avenue, San Gabriel.
Q. By whom are you employed, Mr. Beaman?
A. Quaker State Oil Refining Company of California.
Q. In what capacity?
A. Salesman.

Q. How long have you been a salesman for Quaker State Oil?

A. Three years.

Q. Will you state generally what your duties are as a salesman?

A. Calling on all retail trade such as service stations, car dealers, garages, and so forth, to sell Quaker State motor oils and lubricants.

[fol. 851] Q. What area or territory do you serve?

A. A territory comprising Pasadena, Alhambra, San Gabriel, San Marino, and parts of Los Angeles.

Q. During the course of your duties have you called upon service stations distributing Standard gasoline or Chevron stations?

A. Many times.

Q. Have you ever called on a service station operated by H. E. Bagley, at 3698 East Colorado Boulevard in Pasadena?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: What was the name of the man?

Mr. Somerville: H. E. Bagley.

The Government asks that dealer agreement TBA dated August 16, 1946, between H. E. Bagley and the Standard Oil Company of California, produced under subpoena No. 1, item 2, be marked for identification.

[fol. 852] The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 54 for identification.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When did you first call upon Mr. Bagley?

A. It was the latter part of 1946, between November and December.

Q. Were you successful in selling your products?

A. No.

Q. Did you make any additional calls?

A. Yes.

Q. When, approximately?

A. The last time——

Q. How often did you call on Mr. Bagley?

A. Possibly three times.

Q. When was the last time you called on Mr. Bagley?

A. In April of this year.

Q. During any of those calls were you successful in making sales?

A. No.

Q. On your last call, in April, were any conversations held with respect to Mr. Bagley stocking your products?

A. Yes.

Q. Where were those conversations held?

A. In the station.

Q. Who was present at the conversations?

A. Mr. Bagley and myself.

[fol. 853] Q. What were the conversations?

A. I asked him if he did not have calls for Quaker State.

Mr. Hall: I object to this as hearsay, if the Court please.

The Court: Overruled.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. You may answer.

A. I asked him if he had calls for Quaker State, and he said he had calls for numerous brands of products, but just because his name was across the top of that building did not mean a thing; that he was unable to handle them.

Mr. Somerville: The Government offers Government's Exhibit 54 in evidence.

Mr. Hall: The objection is made to each and all of the documents, on the ground that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Is this the same type as the other?

Mr. Somerville: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: This is a TBA agreement of the Atlas pattern. Overruled.

The Clerk: 54 in evidence.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Have you ever called on a service station operated by Guy Moody, at York and Eagle Rock Boulevards, Los Angeles?

A. Yes.

[fol. 854] Q. When did you first call on this station?

A. Between November and December, of 1946.

Q. This is a Chevron station?

A. Yes.

Mr. Somerville: The Government asks that certain documents produced under Subpoena No. 1, Item 3, be marked for identification. The documents relate to the premises at 4401 Eagle Rock Boulevard, and consisting of a lease dated April 2, 1945, between Guy A. Thompson and Celia C. Thompson, and Guy W. Moody and Winona M. Moody, and a sublease dated July 1st, 1945, between the Standard Oil Company, lessor, and Guy W. Moody and Winona M. Moody, and an agreement dated July 31, 1945, between Guy W. Moody and Winona M. Moody, Guy A. Thompson and Celia C. Thompson and Standard Oil Company of California, assigning Lessee Moodys' right, title and interest to the Standard Oil Company; and a TBA agreement dated July 1st, 1945, between Guy W. Moody and the Standard Oil of California.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 55 for identification.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What were the circumstances that led to your calling on Mr. Moody?

A. For the same purpose as previously stated, to further the sales of Quaker State motor oils and lubricants.

Q. Did you make this call at the suggestion of anybody?

A. Yes, I did.

[fol. 855] Q. At whose suggestion?

A. At a Mr. Haywood's suggestion, who operates a service station across the street from Mr. Moody. Mr. Haywood is a dealer in Quaker State.

Q. When did you make this call?

A. That would have been the second call, which would probably have been in June, 1947.

Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful in selling Mr. Moody your product?

A. Unsuccessful.

Q. Did any conversations occur at this time concerning his handling your product?

A. Yes.

Q. Where were the conversations held?

A. In the station.

Q. Who were present?

A. Just Mr. Moody and myself.

Q. What were the conversations?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Mr. Moody told me that he did have some calls for Quaker State motor oil, and to satisfy those calls that he was going across the street to Mr. Haywood and buying Quaker State; that he had anticipated making an addition to his station in the form of an additional lube rack and [fol. 856] garage, and that when that was completed he would have a place where he might store a few cases of Quaker State, to have them out of sight, and would buy it.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Have you made any other calls on Mr. Moody?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you observed whether or not the shed has been constructed?

A. I think it has.

Q. Have you approached Mr. Moody with respect to storing Quaker State products in this shed?

A. No.

Q. Have you sold any Quaker State products to him at all?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever called at the service station operated by Wynn Blevins, at 2270 East Colorado Boulevard?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: What is the name?

Mr. Somerville: Blevins.

Q. And when did you first call on Mr. Blevins?

A. It would have been between the latter part of October —between October, November and December of 1947, the first time.

Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful in selling him? [fol. 857] A. Unsuccessful.

Q. Did you make additional calls?

A. One.

Q. When was that?

A. In April of this year.

Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful?

A. Unsuccessful.

Q. In your sales approach to Mr. Blevins, have you asked Mr. Blevins whether or not he has received any calls for Quaker State oils?

A. Yes.

Q. When did a conversation of this character take place?

A. On my last call.

Q. In April?

A. Yes.

Q. Where?

A. At the station.

Q. Who was present?

A. Just Mr. Blevins and myself.

Q. What was said?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: I asked him if he ever had any calls for Quaker State. He said yes, that he did; that sometimes he [fol. 858] would go across the street to his competitor, who handles Quaker State, and would buy to satisfy the demands, if necessary.

Mr. Hall: If the Court please, now that the answer has come in, I move to strike the answer on the ground that under the Court's ruling, what the dealer said does not indicate motive, but it is a factual statement.

The Court: The objection is probably good as to the last part of the answer. Will you read the entire answer so that I can segregate one portion from the other?

(Answer read by the reporter.)

The Court: I think the first sentence may remain. The remainder may be stricken.

Mr. Somerville: Quite agreeable.

Mr. Hall: I now move that the witness' testimony concerning a statement made by Guy Moody that he had gone across the street and purchased Quaker State, be stricken.

The Court: That will be stricken.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Were you able to interest Mr. Blevins thereafter in carrying a regular stock of Quaker State products?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute before you answer. That is objected to as calling for the conclusion of the witness.

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Court: I will sustain the objection. It calls for a [fol. 859] conclusion. I think the question should be along the same line as in the past, as to whether he called again, and whether he was successful, rather than a general statement as to whether he was interested or not.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Did you call any further on Mr. Blevins?
A. No.
Q. You never sold him any Quaker State products?
A. No.

Mr. Somerville: I should like at this time to have dealer agreement TBA, dated May 15, 1947, between Standard Oil Company of California and W. Blevins, covering the premises at 2270 East Colorado Boulevard, Pasadena, California, which was produced pursuant to Subpoena No. 1, Item 4, be marked for identification.

The Clerk: 56 for identification.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Have you ever called at a service station at 725 East Valley, San Gabriel, operated by Bill and Cecil Russell?
A. Yes.
Q. When did you begin calling on that service station?
A. November, 1946.
Q. Have you sold any oil there?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you observed anything with respect to the man- [fol. 860] ner in which this oil was handled?
A. Yes.
Q. How was it handled?
A. It was never displayed.

Mr. Somerville: At this point, I would like the record to show that there was a dealer agreement TBA, dated March 24, 1947, between W. A. Russell and C. L. Russell, parties of the first part, and Standard Oil Company, which is now in evidence as Government's Exhibit 46. I move the introduction into evidence of Government's Exhibit 55 for identification.

Mr. Hall: Objected to, as to each and all of the documents so offered upon the ground that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled. It may be received.

The Clerk: 55 in evidence.

Mr. Somerville: The Government at this time offers in evidence——

Mr. Hall: Let us examine it first, before you offer it.

Mr. Somerville: If you so desire, Mr. Hall. The Government offers Government's Exhibit 56 for identification into evidence.

Mr. Hall: The defendants object to each and all of the documents offered on the ground that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled. It may be received and marked 56.

[fol. 861] The Clerk: 56 in evidence.

The Court: It is another TBA agreement of the Atlas type.

Mr. Somerville: That is all.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Where did you say you lived?

A. 1129 South Prospect Avenue, San Gabriel.

Q. Are you related to John Beman, who appeared upon the stand heretofore?

A. No.

The Court: Is his name spelled the same as yours?

The Witness: I spell my name Beaman.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Did you ever discuss anything connected with this case with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, otherwise known as the FBI?

A. No, sir.

Q. You have been a salesman for three years, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was your occupation before you were a salesman for Quaker State?

A. During the war I worked at the Douglas Aircraft Company, Long Beach. Prior to that I was in the oil business.

[fol. 862] Q. In the oil business?

A. Yes.

Q. What phase of the oil business?

A. I was a salesman.

Q. Of lubricating oil?

A. Yes.

Q. Quaker State?

A. No.

Q. For what company?

A. Continental Oil Company.

Q. Here in Los Angeles?

A. No, out of Kansas City, Missouri.

Q. How many accounts did you call upon in the year 1946?

A. How many accounts in 1946?

Q. Yes.

A. May I ask a question?

Q. If the question is not clear to you, indicate what your doubt is.

A. Do you mean the number of accounts that I have——

Mr. Hall: Let me reframe the question.

Q. How many retail outlets did you visit in the year 1946, for the purpose of inducing them to buy your products? I am including all outlets, whether you sold the outlets or whether you did not.

[fol. 863] A. That would be a very difficult question for me to answer.

Q. Approximately?

A. In the year 1946?

Q. Yes.

A. Probably 3600, total calls.

Q. How many of those did you sell, approximately?

A. Probably 2400.

Q. In the year 1947 how many outlets did you call upon?

A. Those are not separate and distinct accounts, Mr. Hall.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. That number are not separate and distinct calls. Those are repeat calls.

Q. Let us get at it then in another way. How many separate and distinct retail outlets did you call upon in the year 1946 for the purpose of inducing them to buy your products, whether you were successful or not?

A. I don't understand the question.

Q. Give me another try at it, and I will see if I can make you understand it. We are talking now about the year 1946. You understand that?

A. Yes.

Q. In that year how many separate retail outlets did you call upon for the purpose of inducing the retail outlet [fol. 864] to buy your product?

A. I would say between——

Mr. Somerville: I object to the question upon the ground that it is irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I would say between 300 and 350.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How many did you sell?

A. Probably 200.

Q. In the year '47, how many separate and distinct retail outlets did you call upon for the purpose of inducing them to buy your product?

A. 300.

Q. How many did you sell?

A. 200.

[fol. 865] Q. In the year 1945 how many did you call upon, separate and distinct outlets?

A. Probably 300.

Q. How many did you sell?

A. I imagine 225.

Q. In connection with Russell Brothers down at San Gabriel you said that they did buy Quaker State products after they became a Chevron station, is that right?

A. I never called on them when they weren't a Chevron station.

Q. Well, they bought Quaker State products, didn't they?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you said they never displayed the products. Do you recall that testimony?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. It was never visible.

Q. Visible from where?

A. From anywhere other than unless you opened the door or——

Q. Opened the door to what?

A. Of the small shed that was attached to the back of one of the buildings in the back of their lot.

Q. They kept the Quaker State, then, in a small shed and it was shut up in the shed by means of a closed door, is [fol. 866] that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was true each time you went carrying the Qraker State, was it?

A. Every time that I called on them; that is right.

Q. What other lubricating oils were they carrying at that station at that time?

A. I have no knowledge of that.

Q. You didn't see any other lubricating oil at the station?

A. No.

Q. You didn't even see RPM?

A. Oh, RPM, yes.

Q. Oh, they had RPM, did they?

A. RPM, yes.

Q. Where did they display that?

A. They had that in the cans inside the window on a little shelf and in highboys in front of the station.

Q. Highboys in front of the station?

A. Yes.

Q. You are sure they were in front?

A. Yes.

Q. The Quaker State that they had shut up in the woodshed was that in bulk, that is, in highboys or was it in cans? [fol. 867] A. In cans.

Q. All of it was in cans?

A. Yes.

Q. They had no highboys at that station?

A. No; of no Quaker State.

Q. They had no—what the previous witness called containers, is that right?

A. No containers; no.

Q. What other lubricating oil, now, did you see at the station besides RPM and Quaker State?

A. Standard Penn.

Q. What else?

A. I think that covers it as far as I know.

Q. Did they have the RPM and Quaker State in highboys?

A. The RPM in highboys.

Q. Just the RPM?

A. Well, I think that they have some Standard Penn in highboys.

Q. How many times did you visit that woodshed?

A. About every three weeks.

Q. Every three weeks during what period?

A. From October of 1946 until now.

Q. Until when?

A. Until within the last 30 days.

Q. Every three weeks during that year?

[fol. 868] A. Approximately.

Q. Was the stock of Pennzoil replenished in that shed?

A. I never saw any Pennzoil.

Q. I beg your pardon, Quaker State?

A. Yes.

Q. You took orders for Quaker State from time to time?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see the dealer at that station serve Quaker State to a customer?

A. No.

Q. How large a consignment of Quaker State did they have in the woodshed?

A. Of Quaker State?

Q. Yes.

A. There was no consignments.

Q. Well, you know, I mean quantity. How big a quantity was it?

A. Usually—do you mean in what quantities did they buy or what was in there?

Q. Well, let us put it this way: What was the largest quantity of Quaker State you ever saw in the woodshed?

A. Approximately three cases.

Q. Three cases?

A. Yes.

[fol. 869] Q. That was the largest quantity they ever kept?

A. That was the largest quantity that I ever noticed. They have made larger purchases than that.

Q. You went to the woodshed every time you went to the station?

A. Not every time; no.

Q. What?

A. Not every time; no.

Q. How many times did you see this Quaker State in the woodshed?

A. I would say six times.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: All right. Any redirect?

Mr. Somerville: Just a moment, please. I think that will be all.

The Court: All right, step down. Call your next witness.

Mr. Somerville: The Government calls Russell Garett Stephens.

Russell Garett Stephens, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Russell Garett Stephens.

The Clerk: R-u-s-s-e-l-l?

[fol. 870] The Witness: That is right.

The Clerk: Your middle name?

The Witness: Garett.

The Clerk: Spell it, please.

The Witness: G-a-r-e-t-t.

The Clerk: And your last name?

The Witness: Stephens.

The Clerk: Spell it, please.

The Witness: S-t-e-p-h-e-n-s.

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Stephens?

A. No. 11 Nevada Way, Henderson, Nevada.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. At the present time I am unemployed. I am unoccupied.

Q. Have you been engaged in the service station business?

A. I have.

Q. Were you at one time the operator of a Chevron service station located at the corner of Victory Road and Boulder City highway at Henderson, Nevada?

A. I was.

Q. And was that a Chevron service station?

A. Not at the time I took over management of it or [fol. 871] the operation of it.

Q. What type of station was it at that time?

A. It was a red, white and blue Standard dealer station at the time I took over.

Q. At the time that you took over what was the approximate time that you took over the station?

A. August the 1st, 1945.

Q. And did you enter into certain agreements with Standard Oil Company?

A. I did.

Q. A TBA agreement dated August 10, 1945?

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. That is not the best evidence, calling for not the best evidence.

The Court: I can't hear your objection, Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall: Well, I think he is going to produce the agreement, your Honor.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. I will show you this agreement, dealer agreement TBA dated August 10, 1945, with the Standard Oil Company of California and Russell Stephens. I will ask you to examine that and tell me whether that is a true photostatic copy of your agreement.

A. That is right.

Mr. Somerville: I would like the record to show at this point that Government's Exhibit 43 in evidence is dealer agreement TBA to which Russell Stephens is a party, and [fol. 872] that this is the same Stephens mentioned by George W. F. Johnson, a previous witness from the McQuay Supply Company in Las Vegas.

Q. Upon commencing to operate this station——

Mr. Hall: Would you pardon me a minute, Mr. Somerville?

Mr. Somerville: I am sorry, Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall: If you will permit me a little time I want to examine this document, if you can spare just a moment, before you go on.

Mr. Somerville: Certainly. It is in evidence, Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall: Yes; I understand it is in evidence.

Mr. Somerville: I merely wanted to tie this witness into the previous testimony. We had anticipated that he would be here with Mr. Johnson but our schedule went awry.

Mr. Hall: All right. Thank you, Mr. Somerville.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Upon commencing to operate this station, Mr. Stephens, did you order supplies from Standard Oil and greases from Standard Oil?

A. I did.

Q. And did you obtain the supplies?

A. I did not obtain all that I ordered from them.

Q. What supplies of oils did you stock?

A. Of the Standard Oil products?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I supplied bulk oil only, which was the only [fol. 873] type oil that they could supply me with.

Q. They were unable to supply you at that time canned oil?

A. No; they were not able to supply me with canned oil.

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. I did not hear the reply of the witness. Will you read it, please?

(Answer read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Did you order supplies of competitive oils and greases?

A. I did.

Q. From whom?

A. From the McQuay Supply Company of Las Vegas, Nevada.

Q. When did you first order oil from them?

A. December the 18th, 1945 was the first purchase.

Q. And did you stock the oil in your station?

A. That is right.

Q. What type of oil was this?
A. Canned oil only.
Q. I mean what brand?
A. Quaker State oil.
Q. And did you make additional purchases of Quaker State Oil?
A. I did.
[fol. 874] Q. Also from the McQuay Supply Company?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you at any time receive any instructions concerning the handling of competitive oils and greases?
A. I did.
Q. When?
A. Approximately the fourth or fifth day of February, 1946.
Q. From whom?
A. Mr. E. D. Westbrook.

Mr. Hall: I did not get the name.

(Answer read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. And who is Mr. Westbrook?
A. Mr. Westbrook was the Standard Oil representative for that district.
Q. And where did these instructions occur?
A. They occurred in my grease rack at the station.
Q. Were any other parties present?
A. I believe my lubrication man was present.
Q. What was his name?
A. Art Walker.
Q. And what were the instructions that were given to you?
A. To discontinue the handling of the Quaker State oil.
Q. Mr. Westbrook then noticed the Quaker State oil in [fol. 875] your station?
A. That is right.
Q. And did you have that displayed prominently?
A. Not prominently; no.
Q. Did Mr. Westbrook inspect the station?
A. That is right.
Q. And he discovered this oil?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And his instructions, as I understand your testimony, was to get rid of it?

A. To discontinue the handling of it.

Q. Did you make any further purchases of Quaker State oil?

A. I made one purchase after that.

Q. And when was that purchase?

A. That was in March, approximately the 15th.

Q. How long after this visit would that be?

A. Well, approximately a little over a month.

Q. Was anything further said to you with respect to handling Quaker State oil?

A. Yes.

Q. When?

A. Well, during the visit in February, the fourth or fifth.

Q. I asked you if any further instructions were given [fol. 876] to you. You testified as to a conversation in February and then you testified to a purchase of oil in March.

A. That is right.

Q. Was anything said to you after that purchase in March?

A. There was.

Q. By whom?

A. By Mr. Westbrook.

Q. Where?

A. In my station, in the office.

Q. When?

A. Well, approximately the 18th—well, approximately the 20th day of March, shortly after I had made my purchase.

Q. Were there any other parties present?

A. Well, employees was in and out of the office. They wasn't present during the entire conversation.

Q. What happened and what was said?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Well, after an inspection of my station by Mr. Westbrook he found approximately six cases of Quaker State oil partially hid in my lubrication room and immediately come to my office, called me into my office, rather, and said,

"Mr. Stepheus, I wasn't kidding you last month when I was out here about discontinuing the handling of Quaker" [fol. 877] —first, he said, asked me if that was still part of the oil from February that he had seen; and I told him, no; it was an additional purchase. And he told me that he wasn't kidding me when he told me to discontinue the handling of Quaker State and competitive oils. He mentioned the fact that it was a violation of my agreement and it wasn't the Standard Oil's policy, or against the Standard Oil's policy.

Q. And did you thereafter comply with the admonitions given to you?

A. I did.

Q. And did you thereafter have any further salesmen come from McQuay Supply Company to sell you oil?

A. I did.

Q. Did you have salesmen from any other companies there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were some of them?

A. Well, Pennzoil, Havoline—well, IsoVis, Valvoline, a number of different ones that I can't recall at this present time. I remember the MacMillan oil and the Pennzoil and the Havoline and the Valvoline. There was dealers who wanted to sell refined oil which I faintly remember that they were in the station trying to make a sale.

Q. On the customer end of this did you have any request for competitive oils?

A. Very much so.

[fol. 878] Q. And with respect to the Quaker State oil which you did handle in your station did you have a number of customers who requested that oil?

A. I did.

Q. After you discontinued selling Quaker State oil did these customers again request oils, any of them?

A. They did.

Q. What happened with respect to your sales after that to these customers on oils?

A. My lubrication sales——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That calls for a conclusion of the witness, no proper foundation laid.

Mr. Somerville: I will withdraw the question and frame another one.

Q. Did you thereafter sell these customers oils?

A. No.

Q. Did you sell them gasolines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was Standard gasoline?

A. Standard gasoline; that is right.

Q. Directing your attention now to tires, tubes, batteries, and other accessories, did you handle these items for sale to the motoring public?

A. I did.

Q. Did you receive any instructions from Standard Oil [fol. 879] supervisors concerning the sale of these items?

A. I did.

Q. When, where, and by whom did you receive these instructions?

A. Well, there was several calls made by Mr. Westbrook, who was the district manager, and I can't recall the last name of his associate there. Phil was the only name that I recall, was his first name, who occasionally come in the station with Mr. Westbrok. He was handling the salesmen's service on accessories and so forth.

Q. Can you fix an approximate time of one of these visits?

A. Well, approximately the 15th day of August, 1946 was the first time it come to my attention, that Mr. Westbrook called on me.

Q. Were any parties present other than Mr. Westbrook and the gentleman whose name you can't fill in?

A. No.

Q. And what were the instructions you received?

A. That now that the accessories, tires, batteries and so forth were becoming more avaliable at the TBA supply house, it was suggested by Mr. Westbrook or requested by Mr. Westbrook and Phil that I make all purchases of these items that I could possibly use.

Q. Did you comply with these instructions?

[fol. 880] A. I purchased as much as Standard Oil would send me.

Q. Did you stock competitive tires at the same time that they were able to supply you with Atlas tires?

A. I stocked them—I didn't stock them, no; but I obtained them for my customers.

Q. Did you have customers that requested brands of tires, tubes, and batteries other than Atlas?

A. I did.

Q. What would you do with respect to their requests?

A. I would make a special trip in to Las Vegas to obtain these here different tires and tubes and batteries for my customers.

Q. And where would you make delivery of those items?

A. Well, I would install them on the car in my station.

Q. Oh, you would mount them on the car?

A. That is right.

Q. And they would roll away with them?

A. That is right.

Q. Were you ever caught handling any competitive tires in your station by any representative of the Standard Oil Company?

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute, if the court please. That is calling for a conclusion of the witness, no proper foundation laid, incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Well, I think it is a preliminary question to [fol. 881] be followed by his statement.

Mr. Somerville: It is a preliminary question.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Hall: What does he mean by "caught"?

The Court: I presume he means caught in the act of something. Go ahead; you may answer.

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When did this event occur?

A. The early part of June, approximately the 7th of June, 1947.

Q. At your station?

A. That is right.

Q. And who appeared there?

A. The new manager, whose name was Cles Turner.

Q. And were any other parties present at the time?

A. Not to my recollection.

Q. And what did Mr. Turner do? Did he inspect your station?

A. That is right.

Q. And what did he say?

A. Well, he found two tires hid back in the back part of my stock room.

Q. What kind of tires were they?

A. Diamond tires.

Q. Where did you receive those tires?

[fol. 882] A. I received those from the House of Price Tire Company.

Q. Where is that located?

A. Well, it is located just about a half a mile from my station, down on the Boulder highway.

Q. What did Mr. Turner say with respect to these tires?

A. He asked me what the tires was doing in there and I told him I had a chance to purchase them, since the Standard Oil was unable to supply me with them and I had a number of calls for that type of tires; so I purchased them and put them back in the stock room.

[fol. 883] Q. And did he give you any instructions as to stocking these competitive tires?

A. He gave me quite a balling out about it, and told me to discontinue it.

Mr. Hall: I move to strike the answer of the witness.

The Court: "Balling out" may go out. He told you to discontinue it?

The Witness: He told me to discontinue handling any competitive accessories, as at the present time there was plenty of their merchandise available at the Standard Oil TBA supply houses.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. This happened in June, 1947?

A. That's right.

Q. How long did you continue to operate the Chevron station?

A. Until August 1st, 1947.

Q. Then what happened?

A. I was kicked out of the station at that time.

Q. Your agreement terminated at that time?

A. That's right.

Q. This was prior to the expiration of the agreement?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. May I have the question read, please?

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Court: That is a mere statement of fact. I will strike [fol. 884] the question.

Mr. Somerville: I am sorry. That will be all.
The Court: Cross-examine.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

—. Did you say these documents were in evidence, Mr. Somerville?
Mr. Somerville: Yes. I believe I said 46. It was 43.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. You recall a conversation that you have testified to that occurred sometime in February, 1946, when Mr. Westbrook was present?
A. That's right.
Q. What date in February was that?
A. Approximately the 4th or 5th.
Q. How do you place that date?
A. It was shortly after my purchase of oil that I made.
Q. How do you fix it as the 4th or 5th of February instead of the 15th of February?
A. I said approximately the 4th or 5th.
Q. It might have been the 15th?
A. Sir?
Q. It might have been the 15th of February?
A. It could have been the 15th, yes.
Q. Could it have been the 25th of February?
A. No.
[fol. 885] Q. How do you know that?
A. Because it wasn't that far along in the month.
Q. What was it Mr. Westbrook said on that occasion?
A. He asked me what I was doing with the Quaker State oil, and I told him that I had quite a number of calls for Quaker State oil, and also Pennzoil, and he said I should only try to make sales of RPM oil, and Standard products; that the Standard Oil had quite a bit of expensive advertising, and so forth, and it wasn't fair to them for me to handle other types of oil. He asked me to discontinue handling Quaker State, or told me to discontinue.
Q. When was your next conversation with Mr. Westbrook?
A. It was in March; approximately the 15th.

Q. During the time that you were operating the station in Henderson, Nevada, were you operating any other business?

A. No.

Mr. Somerville: May I have the question read?

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Witness: May I add to that?

The Court: Yes, you may.

The Witness: I had invested in another business, but was not active in this here business.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What was the other business?

A. It was the starting of the Nevada Wholesale Meat business.

[fol. 886] Q. Where was that place of business?

A. That place of business was located at the BMI plant, Henderson, Nevada.

Q. What do those initials stand for?

A. Basic Magnesium, Incorporated.

Q. As a matter of fact, the service station you have been talking about at Henderson, Nevada is located upon Government property, isn't it?

A. That's right.

Q. I think you testified that you were kicked out of the station by the Standard Oil Company. Is that your testimony?

A. That's right.

Q. Who kicked you out?

A. The Standard Oil Company.

Q. What person?

A. A representative of the Standard Oil Company.

Q. He did not actually kick you, did he?

A. No.

Q. He said something to you, didn't he?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he say to you at the time this occurred, this kicking out?

A. In the early part of July was when he came into my station.

[fol. 887] Q. Let us start right at the beginning, and get the whole story from you.

A. Well, he came into my station approximately the 9th day of July, 1947.

Q. How do you remember those dates so accurately?

A. I said approximately the 9th.

Q. Approximately the 9th? How do you fix that?

A. I remember definitely it was the 9th of July on this particular incident.

Q. Who was he—he came in?

A. Cles Turner.

Q. Was anybody else present besides you and Cles Turner?

A. One of my employees, in the tire shop.

Q. What is his name?

A. Archie Walters.

Q. What was said?

A. He got out of his car and walked up to me and says, "Russ, I want to talk to you," in a very gruff voice. I says, "What's the trouble?" He says, "I don't like the way you are running this station. We are putting a new manager, a new operator in here." He says, "Do you want to resign your operation here voluntarily, or do we have to throw you out?"

I says, "What seems to be the trouble here?" Well, he [fol. 888] mentioned something about gallonage dropping off. That was the only statement that he had.

Q. You are sure of that?

A. That's right. That was the only statement that he made to me.

Q. All right. What else was said?

A. I told him I was not prepared to give him an answer on such short notice. He says, "I will be back tomorrow to get the answer." And the next day he come back, and he had Phil with him.

Q. Who?

A. This Phil. I can't think of the last name. He was in charge of the sales and service out of Las Vegas branch office.

Q. When was that, the next day?

A. This was the following day, yes. And it was in my office, in the service station proper. And he said, "I come out to get your answer."

I told him I had not had time to consult an attorney, and therefore was not prepared to give him no answer. He told me it wouldn't do no good to see an attorney; that the Standard Oil Company retained the right, under the terms of the agreement, to give me 30 days notice to get out. My argument was that I had a considerable amount of money invested in equipment and inventory, and I would have to [fol. 889] make some kind of arrangement to dispose of it.

He says that was no concern of his. I told him, "If that's the attitude you take it is no concern of mine whether I give you an answer at this here date or not."

He said something about giving me ten minutes. I told him to get out of the station. I was not ready to give him no answer in ten minutes.

Q. Was that all of that conversation?

A. That was all of the conversation, yes, and he got in his car, and left.

Q. What equipment did you have at the station belonging to you?

A. I had grease equipment, tire equipment, tools for a small garage. I had made purchases of hoses and chucks, and so forth. There was two pressure grease equipment. One was stationary and one was portable, and various tires, equipment vulcanizers, and so forth. I had a large chest of tools. I had a large—approximately $350.00 worth of auto accessories, such as pumps and wheel bearings, fuel pumps, water pumps, and stuff of that sort.

The Court: That was new merchandise?

The Witness: That was new merchandise.

The Court: To use in repairing?

The Witness: That's right.

The Court: Did you have a regular repair shop back of [fol. 890] the garage?

A. I was using what was designed in the station as a wash rack, to make small minor repairs.

The Court: Minor repairs?

The Witness: That's right.

The Court: You did not have a shed or garage? It wasn't covered?

The Witness: Yes, it was covered, but it had no doors in the front.

The Court: One of those open sheds that they have back of the garage?

The Witness: Yes, it was joining my grease rack.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How much did the Standard Oil Company pay for the equipment?

A. Offhand, I don't recall. I don't have them figures with me.

Q. Your memory on that figure is not as good as on these various specific dates?

A. There is only one date I am specific on; that is on July 9th.

Q. Oh, no, your dates are very specific: February 4th or 5th.

A. Those are approximate dates.

Q. Just a minute. February 21, August 15, June 7, 1947, and then this more recent date you have testified to, when [fol. 891] negotiations occurred with Mr. Turner.

Mr. Somerville: If your Honor please, this is highly argumentative.

The Court: Cross examination may be argumentative.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. The Standard Oil paid you something, didn't they?

A. That's right.

The Court: They bought the equipment from you?

The Witness: They bought part of the equipment.

The Court: What did you do with the remainder?

By Mr. Hall:

Q. If I suggested to you that they paid you $1164.29 for the equipment that they took, would that sound about right to you?

A. The equipment, and part of the gas, oil, tires, and so forth.

Q. Whatever else they took?

A. That's right.

Q. Does that sound right to you?

A. That seems similar to it.

Q. Did you ever talk to an FBI man?

A. When?

Q. At any time.

The Court: Ever, at any time?

A. Yes, sir, I have talked to the FBI men.

The Court: About your testimony?

[fol. 892] The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How many times?
A. Twice.
Q. What?

The Court: Twice.
The Witness: Twice.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. When was the first time?
A. I don't remember the month, but it was in 1946.
Q. You cannot even remember the month of this?
A. No.
Q. When was the next time?
A. Well, it was in December, 1947.
Q. Where?
A. In my home.
Q. On the first occasion did you go to the FBI man, or did he go to you?
A. He come to me.
Q. Did he go to you on both occasions?
A. That's right.
Q. Did anyone ever tell you that a certain government official at Henderson had complained about the cleanliness of your station?
A. No.
Q. Nobody ever said that to you?
A. No.

[fol. 893] The Court: In what direction is Henderson from this place?

The Witness: It is southeast, halfway between Boulder City and Las Vegas.

The Court: It is on the way to Boulder City?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How far is Henderson from Las Vegas?
A. The road sign says 11 miles. My car registers 12 miles.

Q. Do you know a Mr. Ainsworth?
A. Not by name, no.

Mr. Hall: That is all.
The Court: Any redirect?

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Do you recall what the gallonage was at your station when you commenced operations in 1945?
A. The total gallonage for 1945?
Q. Yes, do you know the average monthly gallonage of gasoline?
A. It run approximately 30,000 gallons a month.
Q. Do you know anything about the gallonage prior to the time you took it over?
A. I do.
Q. What was the gallonage at that time?
[fol. 894] A. Between fourteen thousand and fifteen thousand gallons per month.
Q. Did your gallonage increase or decrease during the ensuing period?
A. It increased up to July and August, 1947. Well, the peak was in June, 1946.
Q. How much gasoline did you pump per month then?
A. From June?
Q. At your peak.
A. At my peak?
Q. Yes.
A. Approximately 41,000 gallons.
Q. Did anything happen after that period with respect to other service stations opening up in the area?
A. They did.
Q. What was that?
A. There was five additional service stations opened up just below me, within a radius of one mile.
Q. And did your gallonage drop?
A. It did.
Q. After the last visit of Cles Turner regarding the termination of your contract, at the time that you did not give any definite answer, were there any other visits by representatives of the Standard Oil Company?
A. There was.

[fol. 895] Q. When did that occur?

A. That occurred the latter part of July, 1947.

Q. Who called?

A. There was this Phil and a representative from Bakersfield; I can't recall his name at the present time.

Q. At that time did you work out a termination agreement.

A. We did.

Q. Do you happen to know who took over the station after you left?

A. I do.

Q. Who was it?

A. It was a brother of the district manager in Las Vegas.

Mr. Somerville: That is all.

The Court: Any further questions?

Recross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. On Thursday evening, May 6th, at a theatre in Las Vegas——

The Court: May 6th?

Mr. Hall: May 6th of this year, did you call Mr. Turner a son of a bitch, or a allude to him in those terms?

A. I did not.

Mr. Somerville: I object——

[fol. 896] By Mr. Hall:

Q. On that occasion did you state——

The Court: It is probably something to prove contradictory statements.

Mr. Somerville: This occurred after the event in question.

The Court: That does not matter. He may prove contradictory statements at any time when the witness is on the stand. You may show he said something different from what he has said now.

Mr. Somerville: That was just a preliminary question?

The Court: You did not give him a chance to develop what he meant to say. I anticipated, because I assume that is the object. Go ahead.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Did you on that occasion——

The Court: What is the answer?

A. Truthfully, I never saw Mr. Turner in a theatre of any type.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I say, did you say that concerning Mr. Turner?

A. No.

Q. Did you have a conversation on that occasion with an employee of the Standard Oil at Las Vegas, or anybody connected with the Standard Oil at Las Vegas?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. On the evening of May 6th of this year?

[fol. 897] A. I don't recall the date.

The Court: Fix the date first, and then ask what was said.

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Just before you came over here, wasn't it?

A. Yes, approximately ten days or two weeks ago.

Q. Had you been drinking on that occasion?

A. Sir?

Q. Had you been drinking on that occasion?

Mr. Somerville: I object to that question——

The Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. You did have a conversation?

The Court: Let us find out whether it was derogatory or contradictory before you charge him with drinking.

Mr. Hall: I will withdraw the drinking.

Q. You had a conversation with the Standard Oil man on that occasion, did you?

A. A man I knew previously had been an employee of the Standard Oil. I don't know whether he is still employed by the Standard Oil.

Q. What is his name?

A. Abbott, I believe the name is.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Abbott on that occasion that you were coming over to Los Angeles to give the Standard Oil Com-[fol. 898] pany a bad time?

A. I did not. I never even told him I was coming to Los Angeles. In fact, I merely spoke to the man and said, How do you do? We were at a snack bar, sitting in the theatre, and he asked me what I was doing, and I told him nothing.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Somerville: That is all. May the witness be excused?

The Court: All witnesses are excused unless they are instructed to the contrary.

(Whereupon, a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock p. m. of the same day.)

[fol. 899] Los Angeles, California, Thursday, May 13, 1948, 2:00 P. M.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will call Mr. Phil Polsky.

PHIL L. POLSKY, called as a witness by plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name please?
The Witness: Phil L. Polsky.
The Clerk: Spell your first name.
The Witness: P-h-i-l.
The Clerk: Your middle initial?
The Witness: L.
The Clerk: Your last name?
The Witness: P-o-l-s-k-y.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Polsky?
A. 2939 Northwest Cornell Road in Portland.
Q. With what company are you associated?
A. The Cristensen Oil Company.
Q. And what is your capacity?
A. General manager.
Q. What is the business of Christensen Oil Company?

A. The sale and distribution of lubricating oils, greases, [fol. 900] tires, batteries, and accessories.

Q. What brand name of grease do you carry and distribute and what is its source?

A. We distribute several brands. Our principal one, however, is the Battenfield Oil and Grease Company of Kansas City.

Q. And your lubricating oils?

A. We have many different varieties and brands. Amongst them are the Quaker State Real Penn; that is a Pennsylvania oil. We have several brands of our own.

Q. And what are the sources of those oil supplies?

A. Generally, we get some from Pennsylvania, West Virginia, California, are our principal sources of supply.

Q. And as to the tires what brand name tires do you use?

A. We represent the Miller Rubber Company of Akron, Ohio in Oregon and parts of Washington.

Q. And from where do you receive your supplies?

A. From Akron, Ohio and Los Angeles, California.

Q. And you testified, I believe, that you also sell and distribute batteries?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What brand name batteries?

A. We have several brands. We have two brands that originate in California. We represent Prest-O-Lite, which [fol. 901] is manufactured in San Francisco; International, that are manufactured in Los Angeles; and a brand name of our own that is manufactured in Oregon.

Q. Do you carry a line of miscellaneous accessories?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what line is that and where is its source?

A. One of the lines that we represent is the Hollingshead Corporation of Camden, New Jersey. Our source of supply is, they maintain warehouses in San Francisco, California and ship to us from there.

Q. What brand name does the Hollingshead Corporation use?

A. Whiz is the brand name.

Q. With respect to the area in which you represent various producers, refiners and manufacturers will you tell the court what area of distribution you have for the various products and in what state or states you sell them?

A. That varies with the different products. Do you want me to go and explain each product?

Q. If you will, please.

A. Quaker State oil we represent in Portland and vicinity and parts of Washington; Miller Rubber Company, tires, in Oregon and Washington, both; Battenfield grease, Oregon, Washington and Idaho; our own brands of oils, in all three states, Oregon, Washington and Idaho; Whiz [fol. 902] products in all three states.

Q. And the batteries?

A. In all three states.

Q. What is the general sales organization that the Christensen Oil Company maintains?

A. We have six men salesmen on our payroll and they call on the trade generally in these three states.

[fol. 903] Q. To what class does your organization distribute? What retail outlets do you sell to?

A. We try to sell practically any user of those products, but principally they are service stations, garages, and commercial users of these products, and motor car dealers.

Q. Will you please, Mr. Polsky, explain to the Court the method and the manner by which you order products that you distribute, and the method and manner of their distribution and flow from the source to you, and to the ultimate sales outlet that you sell to?

A. We have such a variety of products that it is sometimes difficult for us to really gauge the amount of inventory on these different products, so we order against our contemplated sales; in some cases where there has been a little shortage of products against back orders; also contemplated sales in the area we operate. That is how we operate against what we anticipate in sales in those territories.

Q. Are shipments, for example, of your products made directly from San Francisco to the retail outlets?

A. Yes, they have been, in several cases. The Miller Rubber Company will ship direct to some of our customers. The Whiz products likewise, and the Prestolite batteries, they will do the same.

Q. As to the products that you receive in your organization and redistribute, how is that done?

[fol. 904] A. Through the efforts of our sales organization.

Q. Are they shipped by rail or by motor carrier or truck, or do you maintain a mobile sales force?

A. I can say both. We have our own fleet of trucks which makes deliveries generally within an area of 100 miles of Portland; but we also have a large truck that runs to Seattle and other areas, and then we use common carriers to a very large extent.

Q. How long have you been engaged in the business of distributing automotive products and accessories?

A. Are you referring to this company I am presently with?

Q. No, Mr. Polsky, your experience altogether?

A. 23 years.

Q. How long have you been with the Cristensen Oil Company?

A. About four and a half years.

Q. Are you familiar with the various automotive products of the kind that the Christensen Oil Company sells and distributes, as to their comparability or competitive quality to those sold and distributed by Chevron dealers selling the products of the Standard Oil Company?

A. Generally yes, I would say that I am.

Q. Are your products comparable to and competitive with those of the Standard Oil?

[fol. 905] A. I would say in quality they are comparable and in price comparable also.

Q. I understand your testimony to be then that they are entirely competitive with those of the Standard Oil Products?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With respect to your source of supply, and the total volume of business which you do, do you have an adequate supply to meet all of your marketing requirements and needs?

A. Yes, sir, we do have at this time. The past couple of years there have been two items that we have been short of a number of times; that is, tires and batteries; but our supply of lubricating oils and greases has been continuous at all times.

Q. When, specifically, were you short of tires and batteries, and what, if you know, was the cause of that?

A. There was a general shortage which existed throughout our country. Other companies were in the same position we were. There was a larger demand than the manufacturers were able to supply.

Q. Was that during the years 1943 and 1944, or when?

A. I would say the shortage existed to a slight degree in 1947—slightly. We had very little trouble, though, during the year.

Q. Do you have an adequate supply now to meet your [fol. 906] marketing requirements?

A. Yes.

Q. You testified, I believe, among other sources of outlets you sought to develop were service stations. Did you include the service stations that are known as Chevron stations operated by dealers of the Standard Oil Company?

A. Yes, sir, we have solicited their business.

Q. Have you been successful in placing your products with them?

A. I can only say this: Personally I have not solicited any of those stations. I can only say that I get reports that my sales department have given to me, and that is, we have had great difficulty.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is objected to. Any reports of the salesmen would be hearsay.

The Court: Yes. The portion in which he relates what the salesmen told him is stricken.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. As a part of your duties and responsibilities in the position that you occupy with the Cristensen Oil Company, do you receive regular reports from the salesmen?

A. Every morning I have a report given to me, which shows each of the sales he makes the previous day.

Q. And based upon those reports, are they successful in selling the so-called Chevron stations operated by dealers [fol. 907] for the Standard Oil Company?

Mr. Hall: That is objected to as hearsay; no proper foundation laid, and not the best evidence.

The Court: This falls under the same rule I declared before; unless you have the reports you cannot give a summary. He has already stated, I think, that they have not succeeded in getting any custom from those stations. You will have to be satisfied with that, because he can't give any more details, except by a summary of the reports, and the reports aren't here to be checked.

Mr. Driscoll: Very well, your Honor.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Driscoll: You may examine.

Mr. Hall: You may step down. No examination.

The Court: Call your next witness.

JOSEPH L. DONIGAN, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Joseph L. Donigan.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Donigan?

A. 3027 Northeast 60th Avenue, Portland.

Q. Portland?

[fol. 908] A. Portland, Oregon.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. Salesman.

Q. For whom are you salesman?

A. The Cristensen Oil Company.

Q. How long have you been employed by the Cristensen Oil Company?

A. Two and a half years.

Q. How long?

A. Two and a half years.

Q. Generally, what are your duties, Mr. Donigan, as a salesman for them?

A. Calling on service stations, garages, and commercial accounts.

Q. What area or territory is assigned as yours, or are you assigned any particular territory?

A. The west side of Portland, down town area, and surrounding small towns.

Q. In the course of your duties in calling on the trade, have you called on a service station called Laurelwood Chevron Service Station, near Gaston, Oregon?

A. Yes.

Q. What type of station is that? Whose products do they sell?

A. Standard Oil, Chevron station.

[fol. 909] Q. When did you first call on this service station?

A. About February of 1946.

Q. Do you know the name of the person who operates it?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Has it always been the same person that you have called on there?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what his duties or responsibilities are?

A. He runs a grocery store, and has two gas pumps dispensing gasoline and lubricating oil.

Q. At the time that you called on him, in June, of 1946, was it, did you offer him wares of the Cristensen Oil Company, its products?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you successful in selling him any products?

A. No.

Q. Did you call on him at a later period of time?

A. Yes.

Q. Will your state approximately when you called on him, or how frequently?

A. I called on him again around February of this year.

Q. At the time that you called on him in June, 1946, did you have any conversation with him respecting the products of the Cristensen Oil Company?

A. Yes.

[fol. 910] Q. Did you have any conversation with him respecting the products of the Cristensen Oil Company?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: Pardon me. I think he said February, 1946.

Mr. Driscoll: I am sorry.

Mr. Hall: Did you intend to put that in your question?

Mr. Driscoll: Let us clear it up. When did you first call on him?

A. It was sometime after the first of the year. It was in the first quarter of 1946.

[fol. 911] By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Now at that time, Mr. Donigan, what was the physical layout of the service station?

A. It was a Mobil at the time, and he stated that he was moving into a new setup; he was putting in a new building and grocery store and service station and was changing over.

Mr. Hall: I move to strike the answer of the witness as hearsay and as not responsive to the question, stating facts, your Honor, as a part of his hearsay statement.

The Court: What was the question?

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Court: I will strike the answer. It calls for configuration, not what the man told you. If you saw any change being made or rebuilding, you may state it.

A. There was a new building being built.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. What of your products did you try to sell to him at that time, if any?

A. Quaker State.

Q. When you next called on him in February of 1948, I think you testified, what products was he then handling and what was the physical layout of his station?

A. Chevron gasoline and RPM motor oil.

Q. Did you offer him your products at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you have any conversation with him at the time of this call relative to his taking on any of your [fol. 912] products?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was present at that time?

A. I and the store operator.

Q. Pardon?

A. I and the owner of the store.

Q. And whereabouts did the conversation take place?

A. In the store.

Q. What, if anything, did he say as to carrying a line of your products?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

A. He said that——

The Court: Overruled.

A. He said that he would like to handle our products but he was under a Standard Oil contract and could not.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Did you call on him thereafter?

A. No.

Q. Are you acquainted with a service station at Beaverton, Oregon, operated by Schuld & Sweatland?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first call on that station?

A. October of '47.

Mr. Hall: I didn't get it. Will you speak a little louder, please?

A. October of '47, approximately.

[fol. 913] Mr. Driscoll: At this time the Government asks to have marked for identification the documents produced by the defendants as item 18 of subpoena No. 1.

The Clerk: Government's 57 marked for identification.

Mr. Driscoll: Mr. Reporter, will you please read the last answer?

(Answer read by the reporter.)

Q. Whose products was this service station selling at that time?

A. Chevron gasoline and Standard oil.

Q. Did you attempt to sell them some of the products of Cristensen Oil Company at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. What products, specifically?

A. Quaker State.

Q. And were you successful or unsuccessful?

A. I was successful.

Q. Did you call on them at a later time?

A. Yes.

Q. Approximately when or specifically when, if you know?

A. Approximately about three weeks later.

Q. And did you attempt to sell them your products at that time?

A. Yes.

[fol. 914] Q. And were you successful?

A. As to the tires, a few tires and some batteries.

Q. At that time did you have a conversation with either Mr. Schuld or Mr. Sweatland, and which one, or both?

A. Mr. Schuld.

Q. Was anyone present besides you and Mr. Schuld?

A. No.

Q. Where did this conversation take place?

A. In the office of the service station.

Q. At that time what did the conversation that you had with Mr. Schuld consist of? What was said and who said it?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Driscoll: You may answer.

A. I asked him about taking on our tires as a regular line, and at that time there was a slight shortage of tires coming in and he took on a few of them at that time, and stated that when Standard Oil got their tires in he would have to discontinue it.

Q. Have you called on him or them since that time?

A. Yes.

Q. When was your last call?

A. About two weeks ago.

Q. Did you attempt to sell them any of your products at that time?

[fol. 915] A. Yes.

Q. What products?

A. Quaker State.

Q. Pardon?

A. Quaker State.

Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful?

A. I was unsuccessful but he still had some supply left.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him at that time as to taking a line of your products?

A. Yes. I talked to him on tires and batteries again.

Q. And what——

A. He told me he couldn't on account of his Standard Oil contract.

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute, wait a minute. I object to the conversation as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Driscoll: You may answer.

The Court: He has already answered.

Mr. Driscoll: I am sorry. Will you read it, Mr. Reporter?

The Court: He answered that he could not because of the Standard Oil Company, is that correct?

The Witness: That is correct.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. With respect of the tires and products that you testi- [fol. 916] fied you sold him, when and where did he place them for resale, if you know.

A. He placed the batteries under the counter out of view of the public. The oil was place- in an air compressor room off to the side of his lubrication room out of the sight of the public.

Q. Were there any other products?

A. And the tires were kept in the compressor room.

Q. Did the Cristensen Oil Company as distributors of these various products supply their retail outlets with advertising media?

A. Yes; we have signs, banners, pamphlets, and a lot of its national advertising.

Q. Did these service station operators accept some of your advertising media?

A. No.

Mr. Driscoll: At this time, if it please the court, the Government will move the admission into evidence of Exhibit marked for identification 57.

Mr. Hall: Defendants object to each and all of the documents offered on the grounds that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Driscoll: I will call the court's attention to the dealer agreement TBA which is substantially that submitted by the defendant as exhibit 4, under date of February 14, 1946, [fol. 917] and a sublease of the same date, which is the defendants' production of Exhibit No. 5.

The Court: Overruled. It may be received.

The Clerk: 57 in evidence.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Are you acquainted, Mr. Donigan, with a service station, a Chevron station which is located at St. Helens, Oregon in that part of the town called Station A?

Q. Do you know the name of the operator there?

A. No; I don't.

Q. Has it always been the same man there or have there been several?

A. Well, to the best of my knowledge it has been the same man. I have called there four times.

Q. Do you know what capacity he had in connection with the station, what his job was?

A. Well, he is the operator of the station.

Q. When did you first call on the station?

A. November of '46.

Q. And at that time what petroleum products and accessories, if any, were they selling?

A. Anti-freeze.

Q. I think you misunderstood me, Mr. Donigan. At the time you first called on them what petroleum products, [fol. 918] greases and oils, was this service station handling?

A. Chevron gasoline and Standard oil.

Q. Did you offer them the products of the Cristensen Oil Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful?

A. Unsuccessful.

Q. Have you called on them since?

A. Yes.

Q. How many times?

A. Oh, about four times.

Q. And have you been successful on any of these calls?

A. No.

Q. Upon any of your calls at this service station have you had any conversation with the operator as to taking on the line of your products?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall the date of any of these conversations?

A. Well, the last time was in November of this last year, of '47.

Q. Who was there besides yourself and the operator?

A. Just myself and the operator.

Q. Where did it take place?

A. It took place in the station.

Q. Will you relate what that conversation was?

[fol. 919] Mr. Hall: Well, now, just a minute. That is objected to as hearsay, and on the further ground that no foundation has been laid. We do not even know the name of the operator. We do not know the authority of the operator to bind anybody.

The Court: All right. You had better lay a foundation.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. The man that you called on at this station, you called on him regularly, did you?

A. I called on him regularly for four times.

Q. What, if you know, was his responsibility in connection with the station?

A. I asked for the manager and that is who he said he was.

Q. Have you ever sold him any of your products?

A. No.

Q. Do you know his name?

A. No; I don't.

Q. Where is the location and address of this station?

A. It is Station A, St. Helens.

Q. And when, approximately, if at any time, have you had a conversation with him relative to the purchase of your wares?

A. In November of '47.

Q. Where and who was present at that conversation?

A. The station operator and myself, in the station [fol. 920] office.

Q. Will you relate to the court what that conversation was about, what was said relative to the purchase of your products by this operator?

Mr. Hall: Now, I press my objection, your Honor, that I made before, that this is hearsay and that no proper foundation has been laid; and, on the further ground that there is no showing that there was any contract involved with this operator. I take it that none of this evidence is material with respect to a station with which there is no contract.

Mr. Driscoll: The foundation as to identity, your Honor, of the operator whom this witness testified he called upon, whose conduct and actions were in every respect consistent with being the manager and the operator of the station. He does not happen to know his name.

Mr. Hall: Counsel misses the point, I think. Unless there was some contract with the Standard Oil Company, between Standard Oil Company and this operator, then the entire evidence is irrelevant and immaterial. We were not preventing him from selling anything to anybody. And the operator's own opinion or statement as to the reasons for not selling would be entirely immaterial.

The Court: Well, I think, beyond actual contract, if despite the absence of a written contract, the designation of [fol. 921] the station as a Chevron station, the result of the fact in an understanding that the person who was using that name was required to deal exclusively with the Standard Oil products, we have the situation adverted to in the Salt case, that we are dealing with a possibility and understanding resulting in that having the result of restraining trade.

Mr. Hall: Yes; but he is asking for the statement of the dealer. If the dealer gives his opinion, as your Honor has ruled that he may——

The Court: That is right.

Mr. Hall: —to show his motive——

The Court: That is right.

Mr. Hall: —that would be immaterial in this case where there is no contract or agreement with Standard Oil Company. On the other hand, if the dealer says, "I did not buy their products because I had an agreement with Standard Oil Company," then that trespasses upon your Honor's ruling that the dealer may not state the facts and that the facts of that case would be hearsay.

The Court: Well, perhaps we are talking at cross purposes.

Mr. Driscoll: May I be heard?

The Court: If the fact be established that this was a Chevron station, limiting the inquiry to the same situation, you have a right to ask the question, first, as to whether [fol. 922] the man refused to deal; and second, what reason he gave for the refusal to deal, not as establishing the fact but as establishing a motive for not dealing, regardless of the contract. I will overrule the objection.

Mr. Driscoll: Will you read the question to him, Mr. Reporter?

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. I tried to interest him in Quaker State motor oil. He said he had calls for it but that he couldn't buy on account of his Standard Oil contract.

Mr. Hall: Now, if the court please, that does give point to my objection. He said that he could not buy because of the Standard Oil contract. Now, there we are bringing into hearsay a fact which should be proved in another way, namely, that there was a contract, and the basis has not been laid.

The Court: Let us see if this is preliminary or whether he can establish there was a contract.

Mr. Driscoll: If your Honor please, the Government subpoenaed from Standard Oil Company Service Station A documents at St. Helens, Oregon, and Standard Oil Company returns three stations' documents with Standard Oil Company at St. Helens, Oregon, none of them identified as Station A. We now have a contract which I propose to have marked for identification, and submit from the address [fol. 923] and testimony to be adduced from this witness that this is the service station, but he does not know the name of the contractor.

Mr. Hall: Have you got the address on that document?

Mr. Driscoll: Route 1, Columbia County, St. Helens, Oregon. May I have that marked?

The Court: I happen to know St. Helens, Oregon. When I sat in Oregon in 1942 I used to spend week-ends at a big ranch, a big cattle ranch right above it that a Los Angeles man owned at the time, Mr. Crowell, and the place is rather small to have a large number of stations. I think it might be possible to identify it.

The Clerk: Government's 58 for identification.

Mr. Hall: I still press my motion to strike the answer of the witness, your Honor.

The Court: I beg pardon?

Mr. Hall: I press my motion to strike.

The Court: I will deny it, or I will reserve a motion to strike later on if there is no identification of the station.

Mr. Driscoll: As to counsel's argument on the contract feature, before your Honor rules at any event on that, I should like to be heard about it.

The Court: I have already indicated that once it was shown there is a station, for the same reason, that whether the contract is absolutely produced or not, there can be a lower understanding. The Government is not bound by any [fol. 924] allegations in the complaint here to prove the existence of a contract in every case. There is a tacit understanding which follows from the designation of the station as a Chevron station that may be inquired into.

[fol. 925] The Court: What are we waiting for, gentlemen?

Mr. Hall: We are examining the documents which counsel had marked, and intend to offer.

Mr. Driscoll: I will continue. I will ask to have marked for identification the documents produced by the defendants under Subpoena No. 1, Item 20.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 59 marked for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Mr. Donigan, are you acquainted with the service station operated on Columbia Boulevard in St. Helens, Oregon?

A. Yes.

Q. A Chevron station?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know the name of that operator?

A. No, I don't.

Q. When did you first call on him?

A. I called on him in November, of 1946.

Q. When you called on him, did you notice any of his markings or any advertisements that are displayed there?

A. Yes, Chevron.

Q. Did it display for sale any advertisements of particular lines of motor accessories?

A. It had the Dupont line, Atlas tires and batteries, and Standard Oil.

[fol. 926] Q. When you first called on that station did you offer, or attempt to sell them some of your products?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you successful?

A. No.

Q. Did you subsequently call on them?

A. Not on my regular calls. I stopped maybe every fourth or fifth trip down there.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What was the last station?

A. Columbia Boulevard in St. Helens, Oregon.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. At any of the calls that you made on this Chevron station on Columbia Boulevard at St. Helens, did you have a conversation with them as to any of your products?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall the date of the first such conversation with them?

A. On my first call.

Q. When was that?

A. November of 1946.

Q. Who was present at this call? Where did it take place?

A. It took place in the station office.

Q. What, if anything, was said by the operator relative to the taking of your line of products?

[fol. 927] Mr. Hall: Just a minute. I object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial; no proper foundation laid; and hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: At that time there was a slight shortage in Pennsylvania oil. I tried to sell him real Penn motor oil. He was out of Pennsylvania. He said he could not buy it on account of his Standard contract.

Q. With respect to the station you have testified to being located as Station A, St. Helens, did you observe whether or not it carried any particular advertising of automotive products?

A. Yes, it carried your Atlas line and your Chevron gasoline, and your Standard Oil, all over the station.

Q. I hand you what has been marked Government's Exhibit 58, consisting of petroleum products and equipment, dealer agreement TBA, between Iris Wolfe and the Standard Oil Company of California, and an assignment from Warren Guyer to Iris Wolfe of lease, sublease and dealer agreement and distributor at the address Route 1, Columbia County, St. Helens, Oregon, and ask you whether or not——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute before you show that to him. Don't show it to him yet. I have an objection as soon as you finish your question.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Whether or not you recognize the address as being the station to which you testified is Station A.

[fol. 928] A. Route 1 is a highway going through Station A, St. Helens, that is right.

Q. To the best of your knowledge is this the distinction that you make when you testified you attempted to sell, and the conversation you had regarding your products with the operator at Station A?

A. Yes.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will move the admission of Exhibit 58 for identification.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. May I take the witness on voir dire before the ruling is made?

The Court: I don't usually do it, but I will allow you in this case, because it is a question of identifying a particular locality.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How many pumps did this Station A you refer to at St. Helens have?

A. That I can't say for sure.

Mr. Hall: What is your best recollection?

A. My best recollection is, three pumps.

Q. Your best recollection is three pumps?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: I object to the offer of the document in evidence upon the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial; that no proper foundation has been laid, and [fol. 929] that this document itself indicates that the station referred to in the document has two pumps instead of three pumps.

The Court: The objection will be overruled.

The Clerk: Exhibit 58 admitted in evidence.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. The Government will move the admission in evidence of Exhibit 59 for identification, consisting of dealer agreement, with the typed modification, substantially the same as that submitted by the defendant as Exhibit 4, dealer agreement, TBA, under date of April 25, 1947, from Edward E. Brown and the Standard Oil Company, with respect to the property at 15th and Columbia Boulevard, St. Helens.

Mr. Hall: Objection is made upon the ground that each and all of the documents are irrelevant and immaterial and incompetent, and that no proper foundation has been laid.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: 59 in evidence.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will have marked for identification the document produced by defendant under subpoena No. 1, Item 21.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 60 marked for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Are you acquainted, Mr. Donigan, with a garage called Carlson's Garage, Oswego, Oregon?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you called on it and offered your wares to them?

[fol. 930] A. Yes, sir.

Q. About when was your first call on them?

A. February of '46——'47, rather.

Q. And at that time what petroleum products were they handling, if you know?

A. They were handling Chevron gasoline, and Standard Oil, Atlas batteries and tires.

Q. Did you offer to sell them any of your products?

A. Yes.

Q. What items?

A. Batteries, tires and oil.

Q. Were you successful?

A. I was successful in selling him oil.

Q. How much oil did you sell him?

A. I sold him about, the first time, around 50 gallons.

Q. Where, if you know, did they store and display this oil?

A. He stored it in a store room off of one end of his garage, out of sight.

Q. Will you explain to the Court the layout of the service station, and the garage, and the operation he has there?

A. It is a super service station, with gas pumps in front, and the motor dealer connects onto one end of it, and a [fol. 931] garage is on the other end of it: a body and fender works.

Q. Did you call on him at a later date?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you successful on this later call in selling him you products?

A. No. I sold him batteries later, but he had to discontinue them.

Q. Do you know what he did, or where he displayed the batteries that you sold him?

A. He put those in a store room back of his office.

Q. Upon any of these times that you called upon him, to sell him your products, did you have any conversation with him about taking on your line?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall the date of any such conversation?

A. In February, of this year.

Q. Where did this take place, and who was present?

A. Mr. Wid Hunter, the Quaker State Refinery representative was present along with Mr. Carlson and myself, and it took place in the garage.

Q. About what date was the last time you were successful in selling him the oils that you spoke about?

A. I sold him the oil once, and that was all.

Q. Will you relate the conversation that you had with Mr. Carlson at the time and place and persons presents [fol. 932] that you testified to, and what it was——what the conversation consisted of?

Mr. Hall: Objected to a hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. We talked to him on Quaker State, and the taking on of our regular line of tires, and he stated at the time he had too much to risk under his Standard Oil contract.

Mr. Hall: May I have the answer read?

(Answer read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Have you called on him since that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you been successful in selling him any of your products?

A. No.

Q. Have you called on a service station or garage located at 1st and A Streets in Oswego, Oregon?

A. Yes, Bender Motors.

Q. What is the name of it?

A. Bender Motors.

Q. What petroleum products did it sell?

A. Standard Oil.

Q. When did you first call on Bender Motors?

A. It was the early part of '46.

Q. Do you know the name of the man that was in charge [fol. 933] of the operation there?

A. Mr. Bender.

Q. At that time were you successful in selling him any of your products?

A. Yes, Quaker State.

Q. How much did you sell him, if you remember?

A. Five cases.

Q. Do you know what, if anything, he did as to displaying it or storing it?

A. He did not display it. He stored it in his parts room.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. He stored it in his parts room.

Q. In his parts room?

A. Yes.

Q. How do you mean? Is that separate?

A. He has a motor parts department there. He stored that in there. He is a motor dealer.

Q. Did you call on him at any subsequent time?

A. Yes.

Q. When was the next time you called on him?

A. I called on him about three weeks later.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will ask to have marked for identification on Item 22, produced by the defendant under Subpoena No. 1.

[fol. 934] The Clerk: That is Government's 61 for identification.

Mr. Driscoll: Consisting of petroleum products equipment agreement between Bender Motors, dated March 9, 1946, and the Standard Oil Company, miscellaneous products.

Q. Upon this second visit did you attempt to sell Mr. Bender further products?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you successful?

A. No, he told me he had to discontinue, because he had signed the contract with the Standard Oil Company.

Q. Did you call on him subsequently?

A. I have called on him since, and have gotten the same story.

Mr. Hall: I move to strike the last part of the answer of the witness as to what Mr. Bender said, on the ground that it is hearsay. I had no opportunity to object before the question was answered.

The Court: Yes. The objection will be considered as made before, and it is overruled.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Since the first call, and sale of oil to Mr. Bender, to which you have testified, have you at any time subsequently been successful in selling him further products?

A. No.

Q. Are you acquainted with a service station called the [fol. 935] Haynes Service, on Northwest Thurman Street in Portland?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first become acquainted with them?

A. In November of '46.

Q. When?

A. Around November of '46.

Q. What petroleum products were they selling at that time?

A. Standard Oil, Chevron gasoline.

Q. At that call were you successful in selling them some of your products?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you sell them, what item?

A. I sold him a barrel of real Penn motor oil.

Q. Do you know what, if anything, he did as to its storage and display?

A. He stored it out in back. His service station is a large station with a parking lot clear around it. They drive around it. He has a repair shop to the rear, and a store room, and he stored it in that store room in the rear of the station.

Q. Have you called on him since that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you call on him regularly?

A. I haven't called on him regularly for about six months. [fol. 936] I hit him intermittently.

Q. Have you continued to sell him oil or any other products of the Cristensen Oil Company?

A. I have sold him batteries.

Q. When did that sale occur, if you remember?

A. That was in the latter part of 1947.

Q. Does he still continue to buy oil from you?

A. No.

Q. When did he discontinue, if you remember?

A. After the first barrel.

Q. Do you recall when, approximately, or specifically, if you can remember, was the first time that you called and he declined to purchase oil?

A. About three weeks after I had sold him the first barrel in November. In other words, in December.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him that time as to furture purchases?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was present, and where did this conversation take place?

A. The conversation took place in his office, in front of the station.

Q. Was there anyone else besides you and he there?

A. No, just I and Mr. Haynes.

Q. What was said, if anything, by him?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

[fol. 937] The Court: Overruled.

A. I asked him if he would not continue handling the Real Penn motor oil. He said Standard Oil was getting their Pennsylvania oil back in again, and he would have to discontinue, on account of his contract.

Q. Have you been successful in selling him since that time?

A. No oil.

Q. Have you sold him any further batteries?

A. No.

Q. When did he discontinue buying from you?

A. The latter part of this last year, '47.

Q. At the time he discontinued or declined purchasing batteries from you, did you have a conversation with him?

A. I had a conversation with him just about four days ago in regard to batteries and tires.

Q. When?

A. Four days ago.

Q. Where did that conversation take place?

A. In his lot, in front of the station.

Q. Who was there?

A. Mr. Haynes and myself.

Q. What was said by Mr. Haynes at that time, if anything, as to taking tires and batteries?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

[fol. 938] The Court: Overruled.

A. He said he could not handle our products on account of his Standard Oil contract.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Was anything further said by him as to your products?

A. No.

Q. Did he express any dissatisfaction with them?

A. He said he would like to handle the products.

Q. With respect to any of these conversations that you have testified to with dealers discontinuing your products, have any of them expressed dissatisfaction with your products?

A. With our products? No.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will ask to have marked for identification, the documents submitted by the defendants as Item 24, Subpoena No. 1, consisting of dealer agreements, assignments, distributor agreements, and lease, between Frank W. Haynes, 2429 Northwest Thurman Street, Portland, and the Standard Oil Company, under date—the dealer agreement October 1st, 1945, substantially, with the typewritten alterations, the same as Government's Exhibit 4.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 62 for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Are you acquainted with a service station located at Scappoose, Oregon, called the Hal Gilbert Chevron service station?

[fol. 939] A. Yes.

Q. When did you first become acquainted with that business?

A. When it was the Jacobson service station, in October of last year.

Q. The Jacobson service station?

A. Yes.

Q. Since that time has it changed hands?

A. It has changed hands, yes.

Q. When you first called at that address, that station, state whose products they were handling?

A. Chevron gasoline, Standard Oil, Dupont accessories, and Atlas batteries and tires.

Q. Were you successful in selling the Jacobson station any of your products?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you sell them?

A. I sold him ten batteries.

Q. Anything else?

A. Not at that time.

Q. When was the next time you called on him, if you called again?

A. I called again in November, and it had changed the latter part of November.

Q. Do you know who the new owner was?

[fol. 940] A. Hal Gilbert.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will ask to have marked for identification documents submitted by the defendants as Item 25, of Subpoena No. 1, consisting of dealer agreement between Hal S. Gilbert and the Standard Oil Company of California, dated November 26, 1947.

The Clerk: Government's 63 marked for identification.

Mr. Driscoll: That TBA dealer agreement is the same as that which is in evidence as Exhibit 4, with slight modifications.

The Court: You are not offering it right now?

Mr. Driscoll: No.

Q. At the time of your first call on Mr. Gilbert, when he had taken over the operation of this station, did you attempt to sell him your products?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you successful in selling him?

A. I sold him a case of Motor Rhythm, motor tuning up oil.

Q. About when was that, if you recall?

A. That was the latter part of November.

Q. And at that time did you have any conversation with him as to other lines or that line?

A. Yes, I talked to him on Quaker State tires and batteries.

[fol. 941] Q. Who was present when you talked to him, and where did this take place?

A. In Mr. Gilbert's own office.

Q. What was said by him relative to taking your wares?

A. He told me he could not handle our products on account of his Standard Oil contract.

Q. Did he say anything else with respect to the oil?

A. The valve oil——

Mr. Hall: I object to that as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. The valve oil was not available from Standard Oil: that type of valve oil.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Have you called on him since that date?

A. Yes.

Q. When was your last call?

A. The last call was in March of this year.

Q. This year?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you successful in selling him any of your products on that call?

A. Yes, I sold him a case of Zorbit.

Q. Did you attempt to sell any tires?

The Court: Explain what that is.

The Witness: That is a chemical used for taking water [fol. 942] out of gasoline, that gets into the gasoline.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Did you attempt to sell him any tires, batteries, or your lubricating oil?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you say this was?

A. This was in March.

Q. Did you talk to him at that time, or have some further conversation about taking your line?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was present, and where did it take place, and what was said?

A. In his office. Mr. Gilbert and I only were present. He told me he could not handle our other lines because the batteries and tires were available under his contract with the Standard Oil.

Q. Are you acquainted with a service station at 1205 Southwest Tenth Street, Portland, Oregon, the Bramwell's Service?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first call on this station?

A. I first called about two years ago on Mr. Bramwell. That would be March or June; somewheres around in there, 1946.

Q. At that call did you attempt to sell him your line of merchandise?

[fol. 943] A. Yes.

Q. Were you successful?

A. No.

Q. When was the last time you called on Mr. Bramwell?

A. Four days ago.

Q. Since the date of your first call and this last call have you attempted to sell him frequently or infrequently?

A. I have been selling him frequently on oil, Quaker State, and some bulk oil, and his tires and batteries, he has discontinued.

Q. When did you first sell him oil or tires or batteries?

A. I first sold him oil last summer, the summer of '47.

Q. When did you first sell him tires?

A. I first sold him tires about November of '47.

Q. At that time, the summer of '47, when you sold him oil, did you have any conversation with him relative to taking your oil?

A. Give me the question again, please.

Q. Will you read it, Mr. Reporter?

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. Yes.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Who was present, and where did it take place?

[fol. 944] A. It took place in his station?

Q. Who was there?

A. Mr. Bramwell and myself.

Q. What was said?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. He told me he had calls for Quaker State, and would handle it, but he had to keep it out of sight; he could not advertise it. He has cabinets, and he puts it in underneath the window sills, in the station.

Q. At the time that you first sold him tires in November of '47, what, if anything, was said by him, and who was present, and where did the conversation, if any, take place?

A. The conversation took place in his station, and at that time some of the sizes of tires were not available from Standard Oil, and he took a dozen tires from me.

Q. At the time of your last call, four days ago, did you attempt to sell him further of your products?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you successful?

A. No, he was still supplied from the last time I was there.

Q. I did not hear.

A. He still had an adequate supply.

[fol. 945] Q. What kind of tires were they?

A. Miller tires.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him at that time as to your line of products?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did he have these Miller tires? Did he have them displayed?

A. He had them up on a rack. They were not on display, like the display of his Atlas. He has those up in the window. These were up in the tire rack, next to the ceiling.

Q. Did he have Atlas tires too?

A. Yes, some sizes.

Q. Where did your conversation with him take place, and who was present?

A. Four days ago, we had our conversation. He was washing a car back of the station. It took place in the parking lot.

Q. Was anyone else there?

A. No.

Q. What was said by him as to continuing or discontinuing your line of merchandise?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. He said he would have to discontinue our tires and [fol. 946] batteries, due to the fact that he had too much invested, and did not want to get kicked out.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government moves the admission of Exhibit 63 for identification, being dealer's TBA agreement between Hal Gilbert, and the Standard Oil.

Mr. Hall: Objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: The objection will be overruled. I will admit it.

The Clerk: 63 in evidence.

(Short recess.)

[fol. 947] By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Now, Mr. Donigan, in the course of your duties selling for Cristensen Oil Company did you call on a Chevron service station at 13th and Salmon, Portland, Oregon?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first call on this station?

A. Just prior to the first of the year—about November, October or November of this last year, '47.

Q. 1947?

A. Approximately.

Q. Do you know the name of the man who was then operating that station?

A. No; I don't.

Q. Did you call on him more than once?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you always contact the same man?

A. Yes.

Q. Who did you talk to there?

A. I talked to the operator of the station.

Q. When you first called on him did you attempt to sell him your tires, batteries, and tubes?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you successful?

A. No. I did sell him some Quaker State, though.

Q. What, if you know, did he do with the Quaker State? [fol. 948] A. He put it in his store room out of sight of the public.

Q. How long afterwards did you call on him again, if you called on him again?

A. I called on him again in about three weeks after the first time.

Q. Did you attempt to sell him any more of your products?

A. Yes.

Q. What products?

A. Quaker State tires and batteries.

Q. Did he buy any of them?

A. No.

Q. At the time of this call did you have a conversation with respect to your line of goods?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did that take place and who was present?

A. Just I and the station man himself. It took place in his lube room, and he told me he would have to discontinue——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. I move to strike the last part of the answer of the witness to give me an opportunity to object.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Hall: I object—are you going to ask him for conversation?

[fol. 949] Mr. Driscoll: I am going to ask him a question, and then you may object, Mr. Hall.

Q. What conversation did you have with him and what was said by him?

Mr. Hall: Now that is objected to as irrelevant and immaterial, incompetent, no proper foundation laid, and hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Driscoll: You may answer.

A. He told me that he could not handle the Quaker State any longer because he was risking what his investment was in the station due to his Standard Oil contract.

Q. Did he say anything relative to your tires and batteries?

A. He said he could not handle them.

Q. Have you called at that address since that time?

A. Yes. I called there two weeks ago.
Q. Has there been any change in the station?
A. That station has changed to a Shell unit now.
Q. Do you know who now operates it?
A. Plogge & King.
Q. Who are Plogge & King?
A. They have a series of parking lots in downtown Portland, and they have an associated lot just across—around the block, rather, from the Standard or ex-Chevron sta[fol. 950] tion.
Q. Do you sell Plogge & King your products?
A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is objected to as irrelevant and immaterial, no proper foundation laid.
The Court: Overruled.
A. Yes.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government now moves the admission of Exhibits 60 marked for identification, consisting of a TBA agreement dated August 1, 1945, between Standard Oil of California and Ralph B. Carleson, service station at Oswego, Oregon; Exhibit 61 marked for identification, consisting of a petroleum and equipment agreement substantially the same as that which is Government's Exhibit 3 already in evidence, and containing a provision for a bill of sale of the installed property providing the operator Bender abstains from the sale or handling of any products except Standard Oil; Exhibit 62 marked for identification, being a TBA agreement dated October 1, 1945, between Standard Oil and Frank W. Haynes for the service station at 2429 N. W. Thurman Street; and a distributor agreement dated October 5, 1941 between one Hannahs and the Standard Oil, the assignor of the present operator Haynes.
Mr. Hall: Each and all of the documents in each and all the offers are objected to on the grounds that they are [fol. 951] irrelevant, immaterial, and that no proper foundation has been laid.
The Court: Overruled.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Now, Mr. Donigan, at the time of your—
The Court: Just a moment until I look at these.

Mr. Driscoll: Excuse me, your Honor.

[fol. 952] The Court: All right; the objection is overruled. They may be received and marked——

The Clerk: 60, 61, and 62 in evidence.

The Court: 60, 61 and 62.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Mr. Donigan, with respect to all of these various service stations that you have testified to and the conversations that you have had with the operators, at any time has any of them expressed any dissatisfaction of the products that they have purchased from you or which you have offered to them?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as no proper foundation laid and too general.

The Court: Overruled.

A. No.

Mr. Driscoll: You may cross examine, Mr. Hall.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How many separate retail outlets did you solicit for the sale of your merchandise in the year 1946?

A. Well, to the best of my knowledge I have about 300 accounts.

Q. Now, I am asking you the number of separate outlets that you solicited. I am not asking you whether you sold them or not, but I am simply asking for the ones that [fol. 953] you solicited.

A. I solicited every station in town.

Q. Well, how many was it?

A. That number, sir, I can't give you.

Q. Well, approximately?

A. Approximately 20 calls a day.

Q. 20 calls a day?

A. Yes.

Q. Approximately how many separate service stations did you solicit during the year?

A. I would say, oh, roughly 2500.

Q. How many did you sell?

A. That is counting repeats.

Q. What?

A. That is counting repeat calls.

Q. No; that is not what I asked you. How many separate and distinct retail outlets, approximately, did you solicit during the year 1946?

A. Oh, approximately 500 stations I would say.

Q. And how many did you sell?

A. Well, I got 300 regular accounts.

Q. And during the year 1947 how many separate retail outlets did you solicit?

A. Approximately the same amount.

Q. And how many did you sell?

[fol. 954] A. Approximately the same.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will call Mr. William Smith.

William E. Smith, called as a witness by and on behalf of the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please.

The Witness: William E. Smith.

The Clerk: How do you spell your last name?

The Witness: S-m-i-t-h.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Smith?

A. 7833 Southeast 36th Avenue, Portland, Oregon.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. Territorial salesman for the Pennsylvania Tire & Rubber Company at the time that I was subpoenaed. At the present, I am not.

Q. What is your present occupation?

A. I am now territorial representative for the Seiberling Rubber Company located here in California.

Mr. Hall: Pardon me a minute. What was the name of that rubber company?

[fol. 955] The Witness: Last one, sir?

Mr. Hall: No; the first one.

The Witness: The Pennsylvania Rubber Company.

Mr. Hall: Thank you.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. What is the business of the Pennsylvania Rubber Company?

A. Their business is the manufacturing and selling of tires of their own manufacture and of batteries that they buy and sell as a jobber.

Q. How long have you been in the business of selling tires and batteries?

A. Approximately 23 years.

Q. Has all of that time been with the Pennsylvania?

A. No, sir.

Q. At the time that you were factory representative of the Pennsylvania Rubber Company of Portland what territory did you have supervision over?

A. Oregon, Washington, the western half of Montana and the Panhandle of Idaho.

Q. What brand name are your tires distributed and sold under?

A. Under the Pennsylvania name, Pennsylvania Rubber Company.

Q. And where are they manufactured?

A. In Jeannette, Pennsylvania.

[fol. 956] Q. About how many distributors do you have in the territory which you have testified to?

A. Pardon me a second. Seven.

Q. How were they distributed; how were they disposed over the territory?

A. I had one in Portland who covers about practically the entire State of Oregon and the southern half of Washington; one located in Yakima, covering the trading area around within an area of about 75 miles of Yakima; one in Wenatchee, covering two counties; one in Spokane, covering about five counties of Washington and the Panhandle of Idaho; one in Missoula, Montana; and one in Kalispell, covering the immediate trading areas.

Q. What level of trade or distribution does the Pennsylvania Rubber Company and/or its distributors seek as outlets for its products?

A. The distributors seek to sell their merchandise from a wholesale standpoint to service stations, garages, and any other type of an outlet that would be selling again to the retail trade.

Q. Are you familiar with the manner in which those distributors solicit or canvass business, place their orders, and with respect to which orders they are billed and shipped to them?

A. Our distributors, my distributors that I would sell [fol. 957] would place their orders with me, based upon their inventory and their automobile sales, both, from a commercial, wholesale and retail standpoint for the current buying season, meaning by that, figuring about a sixty-day turnover.

Q. What would you do with those orders?

A. They would be mailed to my branch in Los Angeles for shipment.

Q. How are the shipments made from the branch or factory?

A. In some cases the shipments are made from our Los Angeles branch; in other cases it would be direct from the factory, depending upon the size of the order; in some cases from a warehouse deal we would have located in Portland, Oregon. That would depend entirely upon the size of the order.

Q. And upon the receipt of any tires by you at Portland what do you do then with them?

A. In turn those tires were delivered to our distributors.

Q. Do you of your own knowledge know whether or not your distributors solicit service stations called Chevron service stations operated by dealers selling the petroleum products and other products of Standard Oil of California?

A. I would say that the distributors solicit business [fol. 958] from all types of stations, among which would be Chevron stations.

Q. Do you of your own knowledge know whether or not they are successful or unsuccessful in selling this market?

A. To my knowledge, in my territory, there isn't any Chevron stations handling any Pennsylvania products of any kind.

Q. And by Pennsylvania products you mean?

A. I mean tires, tubes, and our batteries, which are our main products.

Mr. Driscoll: That is all. You may cross examine, Mr. Hall.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Your territory included Oregon, Washington, Idaho and what else?

A. Oregon, Washington, the Panhandle of Idaho; that includes Lewistown, Idaho north to the Canadian line a little strip there between Washington and Montana, and the northwest part of Montana, including Missoula and Kalispell.

Q. How many years were you in charge of that territory for Pennsylvania Rubber Company?

A. Six months.

Q. Six months?

[fol. 959] A. That is correct; yes, sir.

Q. What was your position before that six months period?

A. 11 years with the American Tire Machinery Company.

[fol. 960] Q. With what?

A. The American Machinery Company.

Q. So that your testimony with reference to the solicitation of service stations has to do with that six months' period, is that correct?

A. At the present time, yes. But prior to the American Machinery Company I was with the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company. That's been better than eleven years ago.

Q. How many years were you with Goodyear?

A. Nine years.

Q. In what position?

A. The same type of work, territory salesman.

Q. Was it the same territory?

A. No, it was seven counties in the middle part of the State of Washington, with headquarters in Wenatchee, Washington.

Q. You do your business for the Pennsylvania Rubber Company entirely through those seven distributors?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did the distributors purchase the goods from you, or do they act as your agents?

A. I purchased no merchandise from the factory upon solicitation of orders by me.

Q. During the six months' period, and in that area, how many retail outlets, separate retail outlets were solicited [fol. 961] under your supervision for the Pennsylvania Rubber Company?

A. I don't quite understand your question. Do you mean as distributors or dealers, for my distributors?

Q. I am talking now of retail dealer outlets.

A. I could not give you a very definite answer, because I do not work that often with my distributors to know how many calls they would make in separate outside dealer locations.

Q. Can you tell me approximately?

A. No, that would be pretty hard to answer also.

Q. How many dealer outlets did you sell Pennsylvania tires to while you were with the Pennsylvania Rubber Company?

A. I only sold to distributors; I sold the seven distributors.

Q. How many outlets did they distribute to?

A. That again I cannot answer definitely for you, on account of in Walla Walla we had approximately four, where we carried Associate dealers. The Spokane distributor had approximately three of these Associate dealers. I can't tell you what my distributor in Portland had. I don't know. He had a great many. I couldn't say offhand how many.

Q. You say he had a great many?

A. Quite a few, yes, sir.

Q. While you were with the Pennsylvania Rubber Com-
[fol. 962] pany didn't you keep any records showing the volume of tires or Pennsylvania Rubber Company products that were sold to these distributors?

A. Yes, I have my dollar volume.

Q. What did the dollar volume amount to during this six months you were with the Pennsylvania Rubber Company?

Mr. Driscoll: The Government objects to that as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: No, I think he may answer.

A. Approximately $300,000, with tires, tubes and batteries.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Within the six months' period?

A. That would be the total, yes, in dollar value.

Q. What would it be for the year 1946, would you suppose?

A. That I would not know. I was not with them at that time, and had no access to the records.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

If your Honor please, I would like to ask the witness two questions on redirect.

Q. What is the source of the batteries that you sold and distributed? Who makes them?

A. So far as I know, the batteries are made by the National Battery Company, and I believe they have a source [fol. 963] of manufacture in Salem, Oregon.

Q. Are they shipped from there and distributed in your territory in the same manner that you have testified with respect to the tires?

A. They are shipped from both the factory and our Los Angeles warehouse.

Q. From your experience in the tire business, and batteries, you are familiar with the various brands of tires sold to the motoring public, and those which are sold and sponsored and distributed through the Chevron stations, under the sponsorship of the Standard Oil Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are the tires and batteries of the Pennsylvania Rubber Company comparable and competitive to the Atlas Brand distributed and sold by the Chevron stations?

A. I would say they were, yes, sir.

Mr. Driscoll: That is all.

Recross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What are the brands of tires that are comparable with the Pennsylvania tires that you have referred to?

A. There are a great many of them.

Q. Give me a good big list.

A. Goodyear, Firestone, Fisk, Mohawk, United States, General, Gates, Federal, Mobile, Montgomery Ward, Sears [fol. 964] Roebuck.

Q. That's a fine list. Are those all sold in this area that you speak of, California, Washington, Idaho area?

A. Yes.

Q. They have been sold there for a number of years, so far as you know, haven't they?

A. Yes.

Q. I want to be perfectly sure of one thing before you leave the stand. In your testimony about soliciting business from stations, did that have to do with the solicitation of stations for these Pennsylvania Rubber Company products?

A. Tires, tubes and merchandise that we sold, and batteries, that is correct.

Q. The Pennsylvania Rubber Company products during this six months' period?

A. That is correct.

Q. One other question: Does the Pennsylvania Rubber Company give a guarantee with its tires?

A. We give a lifetime warranty guarantee guaranteeing the tires against defects and workmanship and material.

Q. That is the extent of the guarantee?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will call Mr. Edward W. Peck.

[fol. 965] Edward W. Peck, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Edward W. Peck.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Peck?

A. 3143 Northeast 32nd Place, Portland.

Q. What is your occupation or business?

A. President of Peck Brothers.

Q. What is the business of Peck Brothers?

A. Distributing automobile tires and batteries and automotive accessories.

Q. What tires and brand name of tires do you represent?

A. Pennsylvania tires and Armstrong tires.

Q. What is the source of the Pennsylvania tires?

A. Some shipments were received from the factory at Jeannette, Pennsylvania, and some from Los Angeles.

Q. Those tires which are manufactured by the Armstrong Rubber Company, what is the source?

A. Three different sources: Westhaven, Connecticut, Natchez, Mississippi, and Des Moines, Iowa.

Q. Do you have any other automotive accessories?

A. We handle Willard batteries, and Winslow filterers.

[fol. 966] Q. Where do you get the Willard batteries?

A. Either at Cleveland, or the factory in Los Angeles. They now have a factory at Portland, Oregon.

Q. When was the factory at Portland, Oregon established?

A. Along in the fall of 1947.

Q. And the filterers?

A. From Oakland, California.

Q. What is the territory with respect to these items of merchandise? Is it practically the same territory?

A. Yes, we cover the State of Oregon, and Southwestern Washington.

Q. Will you explain to the Court your sales organization, and your system of acquisition of sales accounts in the sales of your products and their shipment and distribution?

A. We have approximately 15 to 18 salesmen. Our main office is located in Portland, Oregon. We have branch warehouses in various towns in Oregon and Southern Washington, Salem, Eugene, Roseberg Medford, Oregon, Longview, Washington; and our salesmen operate out of those branch warehouses, soliciting the accessory, tire and battery business from service stations, garages and automobile dealers.

Q. When an order is taken how is it processed? Where is is placed, and how are the goods distributed?

[fol. 967] A. Some items are distributed from trucks we operate out of the branch warehouses; other items are shipped either from Portland or in rare cases direct from the factory.

Q. To the retail resale outlets?

A. That's right.

Q. And that is true with respect to all of the products which you have testified to?

A. With the exception of tires, and they are all handled at our various branch warehouses, and shipments are made from there.

Q. As to tires, do you include in your testimony with respect to tires and tubes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As well as casings?

A. That's right.

Q. With respect to tires, either Pennsylvania tires—by the way, what brand name are they distributed under?

A. Pennsylvania.

Q. What brand name are Armstrong Rubber Company tires distributed?

A. Armstrong.

Q. With respect to those two items which you distribute, are you familiar with the tires that are sponsored by the Standard Oil Company of California, and sold through their Chevron service stations?

A. I think so.

[fol. 968] Q. Are your tires in all respects comparable and competitive with them?

A. Yes.

Q. Do your salesmen solicit the service station trade, those service stations operated by Chevron dealers handling the products and tires and batteries and accessories of the Standard Oil Company?

A. They are instructed to solicit business from all retail outlets.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge whether or not in soliciting the Chevron stations of the Standard Oil Company your salesmen have been successful or unsuccessful in selling through those outlets?

A. I only know of one Chevron station that we have, of my personal knowledge. There may be others, but that is the only one that I know of.

Mr. Driscoll: You may cross examine.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How long have you been president of Peck Brothers?

A. About ten years.

Q. During the year 1946, how many separate retail accounts did your salesmen solicit in the area that you serve?

A. I couldn't answer that.

Q. You have been pretty specific in stating that they [fol. 969] did not sell Chevron accounts, so you must have some knowledge of what they do solicit, and what they sell.

A. No, as a matter of fact, I do not know how many they do. I don't come in direct contact with the sales organization myself, so to answer the question, I believe that I cannot specify of my knowledge as to whether we have other Chevron stations or not. I know of only one myself.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. From a merchandising standpoint, with respect to this guarantee or warranty, your tires and batteries are competitive with the Atlas brand?

A. So far, as to all of them, with the exception of the warranty. My understanding is that the Standard Oil tires are guaranteed on a road hazard guarantee. Pennsylvania tires are not guaranteed on that basis. However, Armstrong are.

Mr. Driscoll: That is all.

Willard H. Snow, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Willard Snow.

[fol. 970] Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. What is your business or occupation, Mr. Snow?

A. I am sales representative for the Kelly Springfield Tire Company.

Q. What is your address? Where are your headquarters located?

A. My home address?

Q. Yes.

A. 1617 Major Street, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Q. And your business headquarters?

A. 520 West 2nd South, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Q. What territory do you have?

A. Utah, Southern Idaho, Ely and Elko, Nevada, Rock Springs, Wyoming.

Q. What are your duties and responsibilities as sales representative?

A. Calling on established Kelly Springfield accounts, soliciting competitive accounts, in the territory or area where we need distribution.

Q. What is the source where Kelly Springfield tires are manufactured?

A. Coburn, Maryland.

Q. Will you explain to the Court the method and manner of shipment and filling orders by the Kelly Springfield [fol. 971] Tire Company?

A. The orders taken by me are forwarded to our Salt Lake warehouse, and shipped in cars to the San Francisco or Los Angeles area or territory from there. Occasionally we may ship shipments direct from the factory to the dealer.

Q. Those shipments are with respect to all of the territory you represent?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, a part of Idaho and Washington?

A. Yes.

Q. As well as Utah and Nevada?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What type or class of trade do your distributors or sales representatives solicit for the sale of Kelly Springfield tires?

A. Our distributors contact service stations, automobile dealers, and commercial accounts, as well as retail trade.

Q. Do you have any other products besides tires?

A. Tires, tubes, batteries, and tire material, such as Camelback and vulcanizing cement.

Q. What is the brand name of the batteries, do you know?

A. Kelly Springfield.

Q. Where are they manufactured?

A. They are manufactured by the National Battery Company.

[fol. 972] Q. What is the method of distribution of those batteries?

A. The batteries are either shipped from Salem, Oregon, or San Francisco, California, in our territory.

Q. What territory is what?

A. Utah, Southern Idaho, and in Nevada and Wyoming.

Q. Are some shipments directed to retail outlets in that area?

[fol. 973] A. Mainly to our own dealers, all of our own dealers.

Q. Do you have any shipment to your warehouse in Salt Lake City, any batteries?

A. Only on one occasion, which was a back order which the dealer refused, and it was taken into our Salt Lake warehouse.

Q. Otherwise they are shipped directly to the retail outlets?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you know whether or not your distributors solicit the service stations that are operated by dealers under the name of Chevron stations, for the Standard Oil Company?

A. Well, I think they do in some cases; yes.

Q. Have you solicited yourself, business from some of those stations?

A. The Associated dealer, do you mean?

Q. Withdraw the question. Have you made any attempts yourself personally to sell any Chevron outlets?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Are you familiar with the service station operator at Roosevelt, Utah?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you familiar with the tires and batteries that are sponsored by the Standard Oil, and sold through their Chevron stations under the Atlas brand?

[fol. 974] A. Yes.

Q. Are your Kelly Springfield tires and batteries comparable in grade, quality, price and merchandise attributes to those products?

A. I would say so, yes.

Q. Coming back to Roosevelt, Utah, you are acquainted with the Chevron operator there, under the style name of Snow Machinery Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you sold him some of your tires?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell the court the physical layout of his place of business?

A. Well, he has a rectangular shaped building, the length going from the street to the back. He has a drive-in station, with a canopy over it. In this building he operates he has a small service station, a place where he displays small accessories and fan belts, and he also has part of it partitioned off, and stores farm machinery, Ford tractors and equipment. In the rear building he has a retreading plant.

Q. With respect to Kelly Springfield tires that you have, do you supply your retail outlets and your distributors with advertising media and sales aids?

A. Yes.

[fol. 975] Q. Did Mr. Snow, in his place of business, make use of your advertising aids?

A. He hasn't as yet.

Q. Where did he take these tires, and things he bought from you,—where did he display them, or put them?

A. He displayed them in the room where he displayed his Ford tractors.

Q. That is the room you have testified is partitioned off, separate and apart from the service station?

A. Yes, that is the part where he takes his cash, and has his fan belts.

Q. What tires, tubes and batteries does he have in the Chevron station?

A. Atlas.

Q. When did you last call upon Mr. Snow?

A. April 6th.

Q. Is he any relative or kin of yours?

A. He is— I don't know how close, though. We just mentioned it, and talked about it.

Q. When did you first become acquainted with him?

A. I think it was in February of this year.

Q. At the time you last called on him, April 6th, did you meet a man by the name of Mr. Reynolds?

A. Yes.

Q. What is Mr. Reynolds' business, if you know?

[fol. 976] A. I understand he is sales representative of Standard Oil, who takes orders for tires, batteries, fan belts and spark plugs.

Q. Where did you meet him?

A. I met him in the room where they store the tractors of the Snow Machinery.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him?

A. Yes.

Q. Who else was present?

A. Just he and myself.

Mr. Hall: Is this the Standard Oil Snow, or the witness Snow?

Mr. Driscoll: This is the Standard Oil Reynolds, the sales representative of the Standard Oil Company.

Mr. Hall: I was wondering who he was talking about.

The Court: He is talking about Reynolds.

The Witness: I was talking about Reynolds.

The Court: He is a cousin several times removed, you say?

The Witness: Yes.

The Court: You were talking of Reynolds?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. What if anything was said by Mr. Reynolds as to your sale of tires to Mr. Snow, and his having them in the tractor place?

[fol. 977] A. Well, he mentioned——

Mr. Hall: That is objected to; no proper foundation has been laid; and it is calling for hearsay.

The Court: I think you had better lay a better foundation: The hearsay objection is overruled.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. When did this conversation take place?

A. April 6th.

Q. Where?

A. In the room where he stores his Ford tractors and equipment.

Q. Who was present?

A. Just Mr. Reynolds and myself were talking in that room.

Q. What was your conversation?

Mr. Hall: That is objected to on the ground that no proper foundation has been laid, and it is hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: Shall I go ahead?

The Court: Yes.

A. He said he would like to keep his Atlas tires separate from the Kelly Springfield tires; also, that he had just purchased some Richmond tires, and he was a little bit upset about it. He told me he preferred to keep his Atlas tires separate in the Chevron station, apart from the [fol. 978] machinery equipment. However, at the time of the conversation, he told me, "We do not permit a Chevron station handling Atlas products to handle other than Atlas products, or we will take their franchise away from them."

Mr. Driscoll: Cross examine.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How long have you been sales representative for the area you have referred to?

A. I started April of last year.

Q. What were you before that?

A. Five years prior to that I was with the United States Government, approximately four years in the Army Air Forces, and one year with the War Assets Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Q. Prior to April of last year you had been in the tire business?

A. Yes.

Q. When?

A. Kelly Springfield from 1926 to, I believe, 1941.

Q. In this same area?

A. Yes, as an operating man; not as a salesman.

Q. What was the Kelly Springfield dollar volume sale in that area during 1946?

A. I don't know, sir.

[fol. 979] Q. During 1947?

A. Well, I don't have the exact figure. I can say approximately.

Q. Approximately?

A. Approximately about $375,000.

The Court: Do all the sales go through you?

The Witness: They do, for that area.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How many accounts do they represent?

A. Approximately again, I would say, probably approximately 42.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Mr. Snow, do you have an adequate supply of tires, batteries, to meet your merchandising requirements?

A. Yes.

Q. You are anxious to develop all the markets you can?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Driscoll: That is all.

Clarence Burt Baldry, called as a witness by and on behalf of the plaintiff, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Clarence Burt Baldry.

[fol. 980] Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where is your home, Mr. Baldry?

A. 1406 Blane, Salt Lake City.

Q. What is your business or occupation?

A. District manager of the Gates Rubber Company.

Q. What is the territory that you represent for the Gates Rubber Company?

A. Utah, two counties in Wyoming, all of Idaho, excepting the Panhandle, one town in Oregon, and from Reno and back to Salt Lake.

The Court: What town in Oregon?
The Witness: Nyssa.
The Court: At the extreme end?
The Witness: Nyssa, Oregon is in the east end of Oregon.
The Court: Beyond Pendleton?
The Witness: This side of Pendleton; just across the line.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Do you have a line of batteries?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is the brand name of your batteries, and the source of their manufacture?
A. The brand name is Gates; the source of supply is the National Battery Company, I believe of Los Angeles and 'Frisco.
[fol. 981] Q. Where are the Gates tires manufactured?

The Court: You can't go along in California, and talk about San Francisco as 'Frisco.
The Witness: San Francisco.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where are the Gates tires manufactured?
A. Denver, Colorado.
Q. Will you just describe for the court the method of operation of Gates Rubber Company in the district in which you represent them with respect to filling orders and the shipment and distribution of their products?
[fol. 982] A. I take the orders; they are filled by me from my dealer. We do not have distributors; direct dealer basis. My orders are taken and sent by me as I call on them to my warehouse. My warehouse manager has to

The Court: Tell us where the warehouse is.
The Witness: Salt Lake City.
The Court: Salt Lake City, all right.
The Witness: And he distributes them to the dealers.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. And where are these dealers located?

A. In the territories that I just mentioned of Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, Nevada, and Oregon.

The Court: Does he ship them by freight or do you have a truck delivery?

The Witness: No; freight, truck or train.

The Court: Not your own?

The Witness: No, not our own.

The Court: You are using the common conveyance?

The Witness: That is right.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Are they sometimes filled and shipped from San Francisco?

A. No.

Q. Or from Denver?

A. From Denver, certain shipments; yes, sir.

[fol. 983] Q. Direct to the dealers in these various states that you testified to?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What type of retail or resale outlets do your distributors contact?

A. We have no distributors. We are direct factory-warehouse to dealers themselves.

Q. What type of dealers do you have, what with respect to their business?

A. Service stations, garages, tire shops, wherever the tires are handled in regards to automotive outlets.

The Court: In other words, you are the only intermediary between the company and these individual dealers?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: Is that correct?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: Do you have any solicitors under you?

The Witness: No, sir.

The Court: You do it all?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: What do you do, travel from place to place?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: By automobile?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: I see. All right.

[fol. 984] By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Are you familiar with the batteries and tires that are sponsored by the Standard Oil Company and sold through Chevron dealers under the branding of Atlas?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are tires and batteries that your dealers or representatives sell in which the Gates Rubber Company either manufacturers or has manufactured and distributed—are they in all respects comparable and competitive merchandise-wise and otherwise with the Atlas brand?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you ever call on service stations yourself?

A. Yes, sir; I am the only one that does out of our office.

Q. Are you acquainted with the service station operated by one Carl Cobia at Snowville, Utah?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you first become acquainted with him?

A. Before the war.

Q. Pardon?

A. Before the war.

Q. About what year?

A. I think it was the latter part of 1940 or '41.

Q. How did you happen to get acquainted with him then?

[fol. 985] A. By calling on him to handle our products.

Q. What kind of service station was he running then; what petroleum products did he handle?

A. Continental Oil.

Q. At that time were you successful at that call in placing some of your products with him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Both tires and batteries?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you thereafter continue to sell him?

A. Up until the war and then he left for war effort, and after the war, why, he came back.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will ask to have marked for identification documents produced by the defendants as item No. 33, paragraph 1 of the second subpoena.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 64 marked for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Immediately after the war—you testified that he went to war—at the conclusion of the war period when did you next see or become acquainted with Mr. Cobia?

A. I believe it was in November of 1945.

Q. And what was his business and where, if he had one at that time?

A. He was still handling Continental products at Snow-
[fol. 986] ville, Utah.

Q. Did you resume your sales of Gates tires and batteries to him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And thereafter did you continue to sell him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you sell him your products today?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 987] Q. When did he discontinue buying from you?

A. I believe it was in—it was either in the spring or the summer of 1947.

Q. Did you call on him at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of a service station with respect to the make of petroleum products and other products was he operating at that time?

A. He then had at that time Chevron gasoline.

Q. What colors were his station painted?

A. I believe it is a kind of a yellowish brown and a purple, I would call it.

Q. Did he have any advertising of tires and tubes and batteries around the place?

A. He had Atlas; yes, sir.

Q. Did you solicit him for further sales of your Gates tires and batteries at that call?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful in selling?

A. Unsuccessful.

Q. And at that call did you have a conversation with him as to continuing to buy your tires and batteries?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did that take place and who was present?

A. In his station, and Mr. Cobia and myself were there [fol. 988] alone.

Q. Will you relate what that conversation was?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled. You may answer.

A. I went in the station and said, "Mr. Cobia, I see you have changed to Chevron." He said, "Yes." And I said, "Well, I presume you are going to continue with our line of tires." He said, "Well, I don't know." And I said, "Well, you know you can handle them if you wish because we don't have an outlet here and we still would like to have you represent us." He said, "Yes; I would like to, but," he said, "due to the fact that I am purchasing the Atlas products and due to all bonuses which I get on all accessories, it would pay me to stay with Atlas."

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Do you recall the period of the fall of '45 after he had come back from the war and resumed his business what your volume of sales of tires and batteries to him were, the dollar volume?

A. In '46 I believe the total year was $900.00.

Q. Do you know how much your sales during the spring of '47 amounted to with him?

A. I think close to $620.00, close to that.

Q. Subsequent to the call and the conversation you have just testified to have you been successful in selling him any further products?

[fol. 989] A. No, sir.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government moves the admission of Exhibit 64 for identification, which consists of a lease, a dealer agreement TBA between the Standard Oil Company and Carl Cobia, dated February 26th, 1947.

Mr. Hall: Each and all of the documents are objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: 64 in evidence.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Driscoll: That is all, Mr. Hall. You may cross examine.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How many dealers did you solicit—I mean separate retail outlets did you solicit during the year 1946?

A. Oh, I imagine about 75 in the full year, maybe a hundred, outside of my regular accounts.

Q. Well, I am asking you how many. I am asking you the total number of separate retail outlets that you solicited during that year whether you sold it or whether you did not.

A. Well, I would say about 1500, then.

Q. How many of those 1500 did you sell during that year?

[fol. 990] A. About 1300, I think.

Q. What was the total number that you solicited during 1947?

A. Approximately the same. It may vary a little bit.

Q. And what was the number you sold during 1947?

A. I would say about the same; yes, sir.

Q. Gates tires do not have any road hazard guarantee, do they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you a copy of that guarantee with you?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: All right. Any redirect?

Mr. Driscoll: No, your Honor.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Driscoll: We have Mr. Ray Read of Ogden, Utah.

The Court: Pardon?

Mr. Driscoll: We have Mr. Ray Read of Ogden, Utah.

The Court: Do you have another one? I thought you just had two. That makes three.

Mr. Driscoll: I did, too, but I neglected to remember that my co-counsel had one from Ogden.

The Court: All right. Where is he from?

Mr. Driscoll: Ogden.

[fol. 991] The Court: Ogden. All right.

Mr. Driscoll: But before I conclude, I would like to ask Mr. Hall, and through Mr. Hall of the Standard Oil Company. We have been unable to find the contract with the Snow Machinery Company at Roosevelt, Utah, with respect to which another Mr. Snow testified, and which we subpoenaed as Item 34 of the second subpoena. We would like to have them check their records and if they do not have that contract, to see if they can find it.

The Court: All right. I think Mr. Hall will be as accommodating as he has been throughout and have it by next Monday.

RAYMOND E. READ, called as a witness by and on behalf of the plaintiff, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?
The Witness: Raymond E. Read.
The Clerk: Your middle initial is what?
The Witness: E.
The Clerk: And the last name is?
The Witness: Read, R-e-a-d.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What is your residence address, Mr. Read?
A. 452 12th Street, Ogden, Utah.
[fol. 992] Q. By whom are you employed?
A. I am employed by the J. G. Read & Brothers Company of Ogden.
Q. And what business is J. G. Read & Company engaged in?
A. They are in the wholesale and retail business. Among other things is tires, automobile accessories.
Q. Does your company handle tires, tubes and fan belts?
A. That is correct.
Q. From what source do you receive those fan belts?
A. Dayton; Dayton, Ohio.
Q. Who is the manufacturer?
A. The Dayton Rubber Company.
Q. And is that true of tires and tubes also?
A. That is true.
Q. Do you have a distributor's franchise for Dayton tires, tubes, and fan belts?
A. Yes.
Q. Does your company sell directly to the service station and garage trade?
A. That is right.
Q. What does your franchise cover with respect to direct sales by your company, what area?

A. Roughly, all of Utah, southern Idaho, eastern Wyo[fol. 993] ming, and eastern Nevada.

Q. Does your company also act as a distributor for Dayton Rubber Company in a supervisory function with respect to other distributors?

A. Yes; more or less in the nature, I guess you would call it, of a manufacturer's agent, to certain points, usually those that are a little more far distant.

Q. Does your franchise arrangement with Dayton cover this situation:——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is objected to as calling for that which is not the best evidence.

Mr. Somerville: All right. I will reframe that, Mr. Hall.

Q. With respect to the supervisory work in which you act as an agent of Dayton Rubber Company what areas are involved?

A. Well, just certain key points I would say.

Q. What cities or distributors are involved in this supervisory work of yours?

A. There is Twin Falls, Idaho, Pocatella, and Idaho Falls, Idaho, Boise, and Salt Lake City falls in that category too.

Q. And do those distributors at those cities distribute to the service station and garage trade?

A. That is correct.

Q. And are shipments made to those distributors?

[fol. 994] A. Direct from the factory at Dayton, Ohio.

Q. For the supervisory work that you do do you receive compensation, your company receive compensation?

A. That is correct.

Q. From the Dayton Rubber Company?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you yourself, Mr. Read, contact the service station trade?

A. Occasionally.

Q. Have you at any time contacted a Chevron service station?

A. Yes; I have.

Q. Calling your attention to the service station operated by Carl Cobia in Snowville, Utah, have you called on his service station?

A. Yes.

Q. And have you been successful or unsuccessful with respect to selling tires or fan belts?

A. Unsuccessful.

Q. When did you call on this service station?

A. As I remember it, it was in the summer or fall of 1947.

Q. And at that time was it a Chevron station?

A. No; it was not.

Q. Do you recall what kind of a station it was?

[fol. 995] A. I believe it was Continental Oil.

Q. Did you have any conversations with Mr. Cobia at that time concerning his putting in a stock of Dayton tires and tubes?

A. Yes.

Q. Where was this conversation, at his service station?

A. Yes.

Q. Who were present?

A. Myself, Mr. Cobia and a Mr. Brown.

Q. What was said?

Mr. Hall: Well, now, that is objected to, if the court please. That is hearsay and it is not even shown that the station was a Chevron station.

The Court: I beg your pardon?

Mr. Hall: I think at this time the station was not a Chevron station.

The Court: Well, let us find out. Was it a Chevron station?

The Witness: Not at this time.

The Court: Well, that is all right; I will overrule the objection. Go ahead. I assume that he will testify it was later; if not, we will strike it out. All right; you answer the question.

Mr. Soumerville: You may answer.

[fol. 996] A. Mr. Cobia said—he said, "I might as well be frank with you. Standard Oil is going to build me a new station here and I will not handle your tires."

Q. Calling your attention to a service station in Salt Lake City known as Vern's Serve-all, located at 4th and Second West Streets, have you ever called upon this service station?

A. Yes.

Q. And have you attempted to sell Dayton tires and tubes to this station?

A. Yes.

Q. And when did you call on the station?

A. I have called several times from February of this year to April of this year, during that period.

Q. Refer to your call in February; did you hold any conversation with the operator of this station concerning handling Dayton products, Dayton tires and tubes?

A. Yes.

Q. And with whom did you hold these discussions?

A. With Mr. Vern Bowdle.

Q. At the service station?

A. At his station.

Q. And who were present?

A. Mr. Bowdle, myself, and Mr. Brown.

Q. And what were the nature of the discussions?

[fol. 997] Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I was attempting to line up Mr. Bowdle as one of these distributors, who would receive his tires directly from the factory to Salt Lake City. And he said he was quite interested in my proposition. He said, "I will have to check with Standard Oil to see that there is no interference with my present setup with them."

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. And were any further discussions held at that time?

A. No. We just went into the details of the——

Q. And did you again call upon Mr. Bowdle concerning this proposition?

A. Yes, I called back several times.

Q. In April did you call upon Mr. Bowdle?

A. I don't remember the exact dates, but I am sure I called on him during the month.

Q. At his service station again?

A. That is right.

Q. And who were present?

A. The same three men.

Q. And what, if anything, further was said concerning the proposition you have testified to?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled. Go ahead.

[fol. 998] A. Mr. Bowdle informed me that—he said, "I won't be able to line up with you unless I can put the account in the name of my father who is also an employee here, and I will not identify—that is, use advertising on this place, this property here." He says, "I do own the adjoining property and I would be willing to identify there, but I will not identify here."

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. And, as a result of that?

A. I said that that was a little irregular on the deal that I was talking to him about, but I would ask the Dayton factory if they would okay it.

Q. And did they okay it?

A. No; they refused.

The Court: Did you communicate that to him later on?

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Did you communicate that to Mr. Bowdle?

A. No, sir.

The Court: You did not go back, did you?

The Witness: No, sir.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. That was in April, that last conversation?

A. That is right.

The Court: You did not hear my question. Did you go back at all?

The Witness: No, sir. I came down here instead.

The Court: All right.

[fol. 999] Mr. Somerville: At this time, your Honor, we would like to have marked for identification those documents produced under Paragraph I, item 38, of subpoena 2, which are documents relating to the service station located in Salt Lake City operated by Vern Bowdle.

The Court: All right; they may be so marked.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 65 for identification.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Mr. Read, calling your attention to service station operated by Olin Baker in Malta, Idaho, have you ever made any calls on that station?

A. Yes.

Q. When did these calls occur?

A. I have called on him occasionally during 1946 and 1947.

Q. And have you made any sales?

A. Not of tires and tubes nor fanbelts; no.

Q. During any of these calls have any conversations been held concerning stocking Dayton tires and Dayton fanbelts?

A. Yes; I have tried to sell him at each call.

Q. When was one of those conversations held?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Approximately?

A. I can only say that I called on him three or four times during the year 1947, and probably twice during [fol. 1000] 1946. That is as near as I can remember.

Q. And each time was the call made at his service station?

A. That is correct.

Q. And each time was Mr. Baker and yourself engaged in conversation?

A. That is right.

Q. Anybody else?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. And what did he tell you concerning your request that he stock your products?

Mr. Hall: That is objected to as hearsay.

A. He said, "No; I cannot stock—buy your——

Mr. Somerville: Wait.

The Court: Overruled.

A. "No! I cannot buy your tires. I am Atlas, or I have signed up with Atlas," or words to that effect.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Calling your attention now to service station operated by Jack Christenson at Spanish Fork, Utah, have you ever called upon this station?

A. Yes.

Q. When?

A. The last time I called on the station was in 1946, the early part of '46.

Q. Have you made any sales to this station?

[fol. 1091] A. Yes. You mean personally or through our salesmen?

Q. Are you familiar with the records of your company which would show sales to Mr. Christenson?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know whether any sales were made in 1946?

A. Yes. The sales to him in 1946 were, roughly, between $1,400 and $1,500.

Q. Do you know whether any sales were made in 1947?

A. In '47 they were about a thousand dollars higher. They would run about between fifteen and sixteen hundred dollars.

Q. Did you make any sales in 1948?

A. Sales in 1948 were about $20.00 only, in 1948.

Q. Does this represent sales or adjustments?

A. That represents adjustments only.

Q. When was the last order placed by Mr. Christenson?

A. September or October of 1947.

Q. Did you thereafter call upon Mr. Christenson with respect to further sales?

A. Yes; he has been called upon regularly.

Q. Were any conversations held with respect to his continuing to stock Dayton tires and fanbelts?

A. Calls at his place of business were made by our salesmen only.

Q. Were any conversations held between you and Mr. [fol. 1092] Christenson concerning this matter? Yes or no?

A. Yes.

Q. Where?

A. My first conversation was with him in the early part of '46, when he mentioned to me that he was——

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. No foundation laid.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. I am talking now, Mr. Read, about the time after the sales were discontinued.

The Court: Was there any conversation after? We are not interested while you were selling him.

The Witness: Mr. Christenson was at our place of business in Ogden approximately a month ago or two months ago.

The Court: All right.

The Witness: And at that time——

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. We will object to any conversation as hearsay.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Were any other persons present at the time?

A. I don't recall.

The Court: All right. Overruled.

Mr. Somerville: You may answer.

The Court: You may answer. You may state what you said and what he said.

A. I naturally asked him——

The Court: Not "naturally." What did you?

[fol. 1003] A. I asked him to purchase some tires.

The Court: All right.

A. And he said, "Standard Oil is building me a new super service station just about a block or two south of my present location." That is about as far as he went there. But he did say, "I have a truck account that I am going to turn over to you people, that is, I am going to let you sell them direct. I have a truck account that I have been serving and I will turn that over to you direct."

[fol. 1004] Q. Do you know whether or not Mr. Christenson operates a Chevron station, to your knowledge?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever observed whether Atlas tires are stocked at that station?

A. Yes.

Q. Does the station bear the legend: Atlas Tires, Tubes and Batteries, or something of that sort?

A. That is correct.

Q. Was that true also of the Olin Baker service station?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Christenson express any dissatisfaction of Dayton tires?

A. No.

Q. Are you familiar with the various competitive brands of tires, tubes, and fan belts?

A. Yes.

Q. Are Dayton tires, tubes, and fan belts comparable to other brands, including the Atlas brand?

A. Yes.

Mr. Somerville: That will be all.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How many years have you been a salesman calling [fol. 1005] on the trade for Read Brothers Company?

A. That is only a part of my duties, but it has been since December, 1945.

Q. How many separate retail accounts did you call on in the territory that you have referred to, exclusive of Wyoming, during the year 1946?

A. That I have called on personally?

Q. That you have called on, yes.

A. For the year 1946?

Q. Yes.

A. That is a hard question to answer. I have an idea.

The Court: If you have an idea, state approximately.

A. Two or three hundred.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How many of those did you sell?

A. Two-thirds of them.

Q. How many did you call upon in the year 1947?

A. Perhaps a little less.

Q. How many of those did you sell?

A. About the same proportion.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Somerville: I will offer into evidence, Exhibit 65 for identification.

Mr. Hall: Each and all of the documents there are objected to upon the ground that they are irrelevant and [fol. 1006-1007] immaterial.

The Court: Objection overruled.

The Clerk: 65 in evidence.

The Court: Does that take care of all the exhibits you have identified?

Mr. Driscoll: Yes.

Whereupon, an adjournment was taken until Monday, May 17th, 1948, at 11:00 o'clock a.m.)

[fols. 1008-1009] IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES IN AND FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, CENTRAL DIVISION

Honorable Leon R. Yankwich, Judge Presiding

No. 6159-Y—Civil

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff,

vs.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA and STANDARD STATIONS, INC., Defendants

REPORTERS' TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS

Monday, May 17, 1948.
Los Angeles, California,

APPEARANCES:

(As heretofore noted.)

[fol. 1010] Los Angeles, California,
Monday, May 17, 1948, 1:30 p. m.

Mr. Hall: May the record show that at an earlier session we were requested to produce certain documents relating to the Snow Machinery Company and that we now tender those documents to plaintiff's counsel?

The Court: All right, gentlemen. Were you waiting for me?

Mr. Dixon: That is right, your Honor.

The Court: I am ready.

Mr. Thody: The Government wishes to call Mr. Arthur A. Haven.

ARTHUR A. HAVEN, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Arthur A. Haven.

The Clerk: Arthur A., and the spelling of the last name?

The Witness: H-a-v-e-n.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Haven?

A. In Big Tujunga Canyon, C-144, Big Tujunga Canyon. That is a rural route box number.

[fol. 1011] Q. In what city?

A. Tujunga, California.

Q. What is your occupation or by whom are you employed?

A. I am in the wholesale auto supply business.

Q. What is the name of that business?

A. I operate under my own name, Arthur A. Haven Company.

Q. In what capacity do you serve with that company?

A. General capacity.

Q. What?

A. Operate the business, purchase, sell, and supervise other people at work with me.

Q. Are you also your own general manager?

A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been in this business?

A. 15 years.

Q. What has been your previous experience, business experience?

A. I was in the business of jobbing lubricating oils for five years prior to entrance——

Q. What products does Arthur A. Havyn Company sell?

A. Tires, tubes, general line of auto supplies.

Q. In what sales area or territory do you sell these products?

A. We sell tires and tubes in the nine southern coun-

[fol. 1012] ties of California, and Clark County, Nevada; and then we operate all over the United States, the Hawaiian Islands and Alaska in the auto supplies.

Q. What brand of tire do you sell?

A. Armstrong.

Q. What source do you receive your requirements of Armstrong tires from?

A. From the Armstrong plants.

Q. Where are they located?

A. One is in West Haven, Connecticut; the second in Des Moines, Iowa; and the third is in Natchez, Mississippi.

Q. Do you do your own ordering?

A. Yes; I do.

Q. Are you acquainted with the manner in which these tires are received?

A. Yes.

Q. How are they received?

A. We receive some shipments by rail and some by rail and water.

Q. Do you receive all the shipments yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you redistribute those?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have any tires which are sent on drop shipments to your customers?

[fol. 1013]. A. I think on two occasions we had a partial car of drop shipment en route.

Q. With reference to these Armstrong tires, through what type or class of trade do you generally sell this merchandise?

A. Service stations, garages, auto supply stores, car dealers.

Q. What method do you employ in making your sales to this type of trade?

A. Personal solicitation.

Q. Do you have salesmen?

A. Yes.

Q. How many?

A. 12.

Q. And do they sell completely in the area described by you previously in your testimony for the sales of tires?

A. No. We have one man who represents us in Utah, one in Arizona, and a third man that works in New Mexico and west Texas. They do not sell tires. The balance of our salesmen, the nine other men, sell tires.

Q. Directing your attention to these other lines of accessory products described by you other than tires, could you describe specifically what items they include, what other items of accessory products?

A. They include several hundred items, such as tire re-
[fol. 1014] pair materials, fanbelts, radiator hose, accessories, spotlights, fog lamps.

Q. Do you order that merchandise?

A. Yes; I do.

Q. From what source?

A. From various manufacturers. Usually one manufacturer makes one product and we buy from several hundred.

Q. Where are those manufacturers located?

A. Well, they are located at various points in the United States, many near Chicago, many in the east, in New York and Connecticut, and scattered through Ohio and Pennsylvania. They are pretty well scattered throughout the middle west and east.

Q. Are these the products that you sell throughout the United States?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you sell throughout the states of California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Nevada, Utah, and Arizona, which, in this particular action, Mr. Haven, we refer to as the western area?

A. Yes.

Q. What sales methods do you generally employ in selling these automotive accessories throughout the western area?

A. We use personal solicitation in California and Arizona; and then we use direct mail advertising in California [fol. 1015] and Arizona and the other five states you mentioned.

Q. To what class of trade or type of trade do you have your actual contacts with?

A. Car dealers, auto supply stores, service stations, and garages.

Q. Will you describe this mail order merchandising system that you referred to? What type of trade do you solicit with reference to that type of merchandise?

A. Well, we solicit the same types of trade with both methods, direct mail and personal solicitation.

Q. Do you do any selling personally now?

A. Yes; I do.

Q. What selling do you do?

A. Well, there are a few accounts that I still call in myself, and one or two in Arizona and some up in the San Joaquin Valley.

Q. Is it your policy to open up new accounts and develop new business wherever possible?

A. Yes.

Q. Through the various methods that you have described, your personal contact work, your sales by mail solicitation, approximately how many solicitations per year of service stations and garages do you make? Take the year 1947, can you make an approximation in the seven western states?

A. Well, we solicit at least once and, in most cases, [fol. 1016] from three to three or more times. There would rarely be an occasion where we solicit only one time. But we solicit slightly over 17,000 accounts in that area.

Q. And these products that you have referred to: First, the Armstrong tires, is that a type of tire that is generally used by motorists for their automotive needs?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that generally comparable with other types and classes of tires which are purchased by motorists?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it the type or class of tire that is generally comparable with the Atlas tire?

A. Yes.

Q. And with your line of accessory merchandise, generally, is that the type that is generally purchased by the motoring public for their needs on automobiles?

A. Yes. We cover fairly well the items that are generally purchased, and then we carry other items that are not generally purchased.

Q. Which items are the ones that you say are generally purchased?

A. Well, the things that go on an automobile, used by motorists in conjunction with the use of their car.

Q. Are the items which you have previously described, the battery, the battery cables, fanbelts, and so on, the [fol. 1017] items you have generally referred to as the items generally purchased?

A. Yes.

Q. Are those comparable to the types that are purchased by the motorists?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you acquainted with the type of merchandise shown in Chevron stations under the Atlas brand name?

A. Yes; not intimately, because I have not personally called on Chevron stations myself for several years.

Q. Is your accessory line, so far as you know, generally the same or comparable to that line?

A. Yes.

Mr. Thody: That is all, Mr. Hall.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. You said, Mr. Haven, that you solicited about 1700 service stations and garages during 1947?

A. 17,328.

Q. That was 17,128?

A. 328.

Q. Now, those are separate establishments, are they?

A. Yes.

Q. How many did you sell?

A. It would be an estimate. I couldn't give the exact [fol. 1018] figures.

Q. Well, what is your best estimate?

A. Approximately 7,000.

Q. How many establishments of that character did you sell during the year 1946, approximately?

A. Well, it was much smaller. As close as I could estimate, I would say it was probably half that number, 3,500.

Q. And you understand that in talking about these figures we are talking about the seven western states?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: That is all. Thank you.

Mr. Thody: The Government now wishes to call Mr. Ralph Plecher.

Ralph W. Plecher, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?
The Witness: Ralph W. Plecher.
The Clerk: How do you spell the last name?
The Witness: P-l-e-c-h-e-r.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Plecher?
A. 1120 South Plymouth Boulevard, Los Angeles.
[fol. 1019] Q. What is your occupation?
A. I am a salesman.
Q. For whom?
A. Arthur A. Haven Company.
Q. How long have you been employed with the Arthur A. Haven Company?
A. My 11th year.
Q. What was your previous experience?
A. Wholesale petroleum products.
Q. As a salesman for the Arthur A. Haven Company is there a general territory or area assigned to you?
A. That is right.
Q. What is it?
A. Outside of the City of Los Angeles, starting in Altadena, to Point Firmin in San Pedro; at the present time, east to Banning, including Long Beach.
Q. Have you had previous sales territories prior to this assignment?
A. Well, I have had additional territory including this, which I do not operate at the present time.
Q. What products do you sell for the Arthur A. Haven Company?
A. A complete line of automotive products.
Q. Do you sell tires?
A. I do.
[fol. 1020] Q. And do you sell a general line of auto accessories?
A. I do.
Q. To what class of retail outlets do you generally merchandise these products?
A. Service stations, garages, car dealers and that sequence.
Q. Would you describe briefly, Mr. Plecher, to the court the manner employed by you in the selling of this merchandise to these outlets?

A. Well, the account is approached with a complete line of merchandise that we feel they would be interested in purchasing, backed up by catalog, price sheets, and samples.

Q. Do you visit these by personal automobile?

A. Yes, indeed.

Q. Approximately how many stations do you visit each day?

A. Well, it will run from eight to 12, depending on the type of station and the number of lines that I feel that they are apt to be interested in.

Q. How do you follow up on these calls? Do you get out of your car?

A. Yes.

Q. Go into the office?

A. That is right.

Q. And do you talk to the manager or the proprietor?

[fol. 1021] A. Very earnestly.

Q. Have you called upon the station located at 745 East Colorado Boulevard in Pasadena, California?

A. I have.

Mr. Thody: The Government at this time wishes to have marked for Government's identification the dealer agreement TBA between Standard Oil Company and Oswald Cossette, dated May 28, 1945, and the accompanying papers attached thereto. And may the record show these were produced in response to subpoena No. 1, item 26?

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 66 for identification.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. When did you first call upon this station?

A. In December, 1945.

Q. Did you initially solicit this account at that time?

A. No. The inquiry came through the mail in answer to an advertisement that we had in a trade paper.

Q. What was your advertisement?

A. Regarding an automatic cigar or cigarette lighter for the Christmas trade.

Q. Did you later visit the station?

A. On my next trip to Pasadena; yes, sir.

Q. Did you make any sales?

A. I did.

Q. What did you sell?

[fol. 1022] A. Well, at that time I was able to interest this merchant in some chromium-plated exhaust pipes, extension tips, exhaust reflectors, and some certificate holders, I believe.

Q. Did you call upon this station at any subsequent time?

A. I did the following month.

Q. When would that be?

A. That would be in February, 1946.

Q. Did you make any sales at that time?

A. I was unable to make a sale.

Q. Did you have any conversations with anybody at that time as to the reasons for your failure to make a sale?

A. I did.

Q. And when did these conversations take place?

A. Approximately the first week in February of 1946 at—

Q. And where did these conversations ensue?

A. At 1221 East Colorado Street in Pasadena.

Q. And who was present?

A. Mr. Cossette and myself.

Q. And what were these conversations?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. What were the conversations?

[fol. 1023] Mr. Thody: Yes.

A. Well, I proceeded in my usual manner of laying out my order book and my sample case and removing some articles therefrom to discuss, at which time I was invited to put it back in the box because he was unable to buy any further items from us.

Q. Have you made any calls upon the service station located at 4th Street and Niland Avenue in Niland, California?

A. I have.

Mr. Thody: At this time, your Honor, the Government wishes to have marked as Government's Exhibit for identification dealer agreement TBA dated November 1, 1945, between Standard Oil and James R. Gordon, and the assignment of that agreement to Omar L. Bowen, dated February 1, 1947. These agreements were furnished in response to subpoena 1, item 27.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 67 for identification.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Calling your attention for just one moment, Mr. Plecher, to your conversations which you have related with Mr. Cossette—

A. Yes.

Q. Was there ever any dissatisfaction expressed as to your products at that time?

A. No, there was not.

Q. And what was the reason stated by you?

[fol. 1024] A. He was required under the terms of his agreement with the Standard Oil Company to make purchases of like items from the company.

Mr. Thody: The Government now moves, if the court please, to have the Government's Exhibit for identification No. 66 be admitted into evidence.

Mr. Hall: Each and all of the documents so offered are objected to on the grounds that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: 66 in evidence.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Where is Niland, California, this location of this station you have referred to?

A. Well, Niland, California is along the eastern shore of Salton Sea, a short way from the Arizona-California line, directly north of Brawley.

Q. Is this a more or less secluded place or is it—

A. It is a very isolated section.

Q. And when did you call on that station?

A. I first called on that station in 1945.

Q. And who was operating the station at this time?

A. Durard Harris.

Q. What is the name?

A. Durard Harris, D-u-r-a-r-d.

Q. Did you make any sales to him?

[fol. 1025] A. I did.

Q. What did you sell him?

A. Practically our complete line.

Q. Did you make any further calls on that station?
A. Every month for a considerable period.
Q. For what period of time?
A. Well, I believe I could say from 15 to 18 months.
Q. Did you make any sales?
A. Every trip.
Q. And who did you contact?
A. Mr. Harris.
Q. Mr. Harris. Did you contact any other person?
A. Later on, he sold his station out to Gordon.
Q. Mr. Gordon?
A. Gordon.
Q. Did you make any sales to Mr. Gordon?
A. I did.
Q. When?
A. Well, from approximately the middle of 1946 through until shortly after the first of 1947, when he sold.
Q. Did you ever have any conversation with Mr. Gordon concerning his agreement with Standard Oil Company?
A. Yes. I was able to—
Q. Just answer yes or no.
A. Yes.

[fol. 1026] Q. And when did these conversations take place?
A. Two or three conversations took place the last quarter of 1946.
Q. And where did these conversations take place?
A. At his place of business at Niland.
Q. And who was present?
A. Mr. Gordon and myself.
Q. And what were these conversations?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. The conversations were that I was a little bit amazed at the amount of business that I was able to get from time to time, and he outlined to me that due to his location he was not favored with much attention from the company and he had difficulty in getting these things which I was able to serve him with.

Q. Did you continue to call on this station after this conversation?
A. I did.

Q. Who did you see at that time?

A. Well, after Mr. Gordon left it was taken over by a chap by the name of Bowen.

Q. Did you ever make any sales to him?

A. I was unable to make any sales to Mr. Bowen.

Q. Did you ever have any conversations with Mr. Bowen [fol. 1027] concerning it?

A. I did.

Q. And where did these conversations take place?

A. At the same place of business in Niland.

Q. And when did they take place?

A. Well, they took place January and February and March in 1947.

Q. And what were these conversations?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. That I couldn't seem to get any business and I was rather surprised, as I had enjoyed business there in the past; and he told me that he was unable to buy outside the Standard Oil Company's source of supply.

Q. Had either Mr. Harris or Mr. Gordon ever expressed any dissatisfaction with the products which you had sold to them?

A. They never did.

Q. Have you ever called upon the station located at 1221 East First Street in Santa Ana, California?

A. I have.

Mr. Thody: The Government wishes at this time to have marked as Government's exhibit for identification the dealer agreement TBA with Mr. Hubert B. Riggan dated January 18, 1046, and the sublease with Mr. Riggan dated [fol. 1028] April, 1941. These documents were produced in response to subpoena No. 1, item 28.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 68 marked for identification.

Mr. Thody: And the Government moves at this time, your Honor, that Government's Exhibit 67 for identification be admitted into evidence.

Mr. Hall: Each and all of these documents so offered are objected to on the grounds that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.
The Clerk: 67 in evidence.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. When did you call upon this station located at 1221 East First Street, Santa Ana?
A. 1945.
Q. Did you sell them any products?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What did you sell them?
A. Well, several lines of automotive accessories and some inner tubes.
Q. What brand of inner tubes did you sell them?
A. Armstrong.
Q. Have you called upon that station since that time?
A. I have.
Q. How often?
[fol. 1029] A. Once a month.
Q. Do you now sell this account?
A. I do not.
Q. Have you ever had any conversation—to whom did you talk at that station?
A. Mr. Riggan was the proprietor.
Q. Have you ever had any conversation with Mr. Riggan concerning the fact that he had previously bought from you and that he has now discontinued your line?
A. I have.
Q. And when did those conversations take place?
A. About August, 1947 was the date in my mind.
Q. What part of it?
A. Well, I would say the latter part of August, possibly—it is kind of hard to remember just exactly the time of month.
Q. Well, where were you at the time these conversations took place?
A. In his office at 1221 East First Street.
Q. Who was present?
A. Mr. Riggan and myself.
Q. And what were those conversations?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as irrelevant.
The Court: Overruled.

A. The conversation was that certain items that I [fol. 1030] had been able to furnish him in the past he now would be required to purchase from the Standard Oil Company.

Q. Have you visited any other Chevron stations which advertised the sale of Atlas tires?

A. I have.

Q. Can you name any such station?

A. Well, I have one in mind, the S. M. McCabe at 6th and Circle in Corona.

Q. Have you sold this station any of your products?

A. I have.

Q. Do you sell him now?

A. I do.

Q. What items do you sell him now?

A. Well, at the present time I am selling him items other than what are known as sundries or automotive items, such as light bulbs, battery cables, tires, radiator caps, et cetera.

Q. Do you sell him any tires?

A. No.

Q. Do you sell him any batteries?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever discuss with Mr. McCabe the reasons why you did not sell him these items?

A. I have.

Q. And when did you have such discussions?

[fol. 1031] A. Practically every 30 days from about the middle of 1946.

Q. When is the last time you discussed this?

A. 30 days ago.

Q. And where were you at that time?

A. In their station at 6th and Circle in Corona.

Q. And who was present?

A. Mr. McCabe and myself.

Q. And what were those discussions?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. The discussion was that certain items that he had been purchasing from us in the past he would be required to purchase from the Standard Oil Company.

Mr. Thody: The Government now wishes or moves to have admitted into evidence Government's Exhibit No. 68 for identification.

Mr. Hall: Each and all of the documents so offered are objected to on the grounds that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Thody: You may have the witness, Mr. Hall.

The Clerk: 68 in evidence.

[fol. 1032] Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. When was it that anyone first mentioned the fact that you might be a witness in this case?

A. When was it?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, approximately 60 days ago.

Q. Who was it?

A. I believe it was Mr. Haven.

Q. At the time you had the conversation with Mr. Cossette what articles were you offering for sale at his station?

A. At the time of my last conversation?

Q. Well, at the time of the conversation you related.

A. Well, I was offering him additional supplies of the exhaust extensions and exhaust reflectors that I had sold him; also flash lights, gas caps, radiator caps, other supplies, certificate holders, lamp bulbs, fuses, battery cables, battery bolts, shims, tire repair materials for use or for resale, valve stems, cores, caps.

Q. Anything else?

A. Tires and tubes.

Q. Let me understand you: You had made an offer to him or specifically in your conversation referred to all those articles before he told you that he could not buy them [fol. 1033] from you?

A. Well, perhaps I didn't make myself clear. As I say, when I go in, I take my sample case which is a box of approximately that length, this high, and about the same width, and I have numerous articles that I feel are timely or seasonable, and this is laid out on the man's desk and the top is taken off, the front drops in front, and all these are exposed to view. And, as a rule, he may be busy, maybe, waiting on a customer, and I take that time to set out the items that I want to open the conversation with.

Q. Samples of items?

A. That is right.

Q. Samples?

A. The others that I don't have in the—

Q. Pardon me a minute, sir. Did you say "samples"?

A. Samples, yes.

Q. You don't carry tires in that case, do you?

A. No. But I have tires and the larger items on the price sheets and the catalog sheets that I also carry.

Q. Then you show him something besides samples?

A. That is right.

Q. What were you offering Gordon at the time you had the conversation with him to which you have testified?

A. Well, the list would be practically identical in every account that I call on.

[fol. 1034] Q. And would the same be true of Riggan at the time you had the conversation with him?

A. That is right.

Q. And would the same be true of McCabe at the time you had the conversation with him?

A. That is right.

Q. Your answer is yes?

A. That is right?

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Thody: That is all. The Government now wishes to call Mr. Nate Katzev.

Nathan Katzev, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Nathan Katzev.

The Clerk: Will you speak louder, please. That is spelled how?

The Witness: K-a-t-z-e-v.

Mr. Hall: What was the spelling of the last name?

The Witness: K-a-t-z-e-v.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Katzev?

A. 360 North Orange Grove Avenue, Los Angeles.

[fol. 1035] Q. What is your occupation?

A. I am the manager of the tire division for the J. N. Ceazan Company.

Q. In what business is the J. N. Ceazan Company engaged in?

A. They are wholesale distributors of tires, tubes, batteries and electrical appliances.

Q. And what brand or brands of tires and tubes do you sell on a wholesale basis?

A. Dayton.

Q. How long have you been associated—

Mr. Hall: Pardon me a minute. What was that last name?

The Witness: Dayton Thoroughbred.

Mr. Thody: Will you kindly speak up, Mr. Katzev?

Q. How long have you been associated with the J. N. Ceazan Company?

A. Approximately 15 years.

Q. Have you had any experience in the marketing and selling of tires?

A. No, no.

Q. What is the sales territory covered by the J. N. Ceazan Company in its marketing of tires, tubes and batteries?

A. California, Arizona, and Nevada.

Q. Do you have any sort of a franchise or distributor arrangement with the Dayton Company for the sale of [fol. 1036] tires to these areas?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you explain what this arrangement is?

A. Well, the best way I can explain it is that they sell us the tires at one price and we resell them at another price.

Q. For sale in these three states?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you acquainted with the method whereby these tires and tubes are ordered?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you do any of the ordering yourself?

A. Well, very seldom. We have a purchasing agent that does the buying.

Q. From what source do you order tires?

A. Direct from the Dayton Rubber Company in Dayton, Ohio.

Q. And from where are shipments made?

A. Directly from the Dayton factory in Dayton, Ohio.

Q. How are they sent to you?

A. By rail and also by water.

Q. Do you have any central distribution points or warehouses that receive those articles?

A. Our own stores. I mean where we are located is our warehouse.

[fol. 1037] Q. Where are those stores located?

A. One in Los Angeles, one in San Diego, and one in San Francisco.

Q. Now, can you describe the method and manner employed by your company in the selling of these products in these three states?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you so describe?

A. Well, we have salesmen that call on gas stations, tire stores, trucking companies, what you call commercial accounts.

Q. How big is the sales force you speak of?

A. Well, in our Los Angeles store we have, I believe, nine salesmen, eight or nine—I forget which.

Q. In your San Francisco store how many?

A. Approximately the same amount.

Q. And your San Diego store?

A. Three.

Q. What is the area, the marketing area, supplied by your San Francisco store?

A. They come as far south as Fresno.

Q. And in an easterly direction how far do you sell?

A. Let me get my geography now. We go as far north as the northern border of California.

Q. Do you or do you not sell into the State of Nevada [fol. 1038] from your San Francisco store?

A. The northern part of Nevada is covered by our San Francisco store, and we cover Las Vegas and Boulder City and that area.

Q. Directing your attention to sales in northern Nevada how are shipments made to your customers located in that area?

A. From our San Francisco store.

Q. Do you ever make any shipments direct from the Dayton factory that you have referred to?

A. On rare occasions, unless it be a rush order.

Q. What is the area, sales area, covered by your Los Angeles store?

A. We go as far as Fresno.

Q. Do you cover any part of Nevada?

A. Yes. I said, Las Vegas, Boulder City and that particular area.

Q. How are shipments made to the Nevada accounts serviced by your Los Angeles store.

A. From the Los Angeles store.

Q. And what is the area serviced by your San Diego store?

A. They go as far as Imperial Valley and up as far as Oceanside.

Q. Now, these salesmen you have described who operate [fol. 1039] these various stores, to what type or class of trade do they normally call?

A. The major portion of the business is gas station business.

Q. Do they or do they not have freedom in the selection of customers?

A. Yes, they do.

Q. Do you or do you not encourage them to develop new accounts?

A. Certainly.

Q. Do you normally furnish any advertising media to your accounts?

A. We offer them an advertising program.

[fol. 1040] Q. What is that advertising program?

A. We pay—we offer to pay 70 per cent of the cost of their advertising.

Q. Of any or all types?

A. Of any advertising pertaining to the Dayton Tire that is in line with the Dayton program.

Q. Do your salesmen explain this advertising program at the time they make their contact?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you furnish any displays or signs?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are they?

A. We have metal signs, tire stands, inserts to put in the tire. We furnish that free of charge.

Q. Do you know, Mr. Katzev, for the year 1946 what your volume of business was for sales of tires and tubes in the States of Nevada, California, and Arizona?

A. I would say it would be approximately close to a million and a half dollars.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What year was that you mentioned the million and a half for?

[fol. 1041] A. I think in 1946.

Q. What was it in 1947?

A. I am not certain, but I think it was just a little higher than '46.

Q. Who first discussed with you the prospect of your appearing as a witness in this case?

A. Well, I will put it this way: the first thing I knew there was such a case was when the F.B.I. walked in our office and wanted to know if we knew of any cases where we couldn't sell tires to the Standard Oil Company, and that was the first time.

Mr. Hall: That is all. Thank you.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Mr. Katzev, are you acquainted generally with the type of tires bought by the motoring public generally for use on passenger cars?

A. Yes.

Q. Is your Dayton tire comparable in quality and price generally with other types of tires so purchased?

A. It is.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Thody: The government now wishes to call Mr. Ralph A. Winchester.

[fol. 1042] RALPH A. WINCHESTER, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: Take the stand, please, sir. What is your name, please?

The Witness: Ralph A. Winchester.

The Clerk: The spelling is W-i-n-c-h-e-s-t-e-r?

The Witness: Right.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. What is your residence, Mr. Winchester?

A. 218 Olive, Inglewood.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I am a field representative for the tire division of J. N. Ceazan Company.

Q. Do you have any territory that is assigned you by the J. N. Ceazan Company for the sale of its products?

A. I do.

Q. What is that territory?

A. I have some accounts in different parts of Los Angeles City proper. I have San Bernardino and Riverside Counties, and Arizona, and a portion of the Imperial Valley.

Q. What type or class of retail outlets do you generally contact in the selling of your products?

A. Well, I call on service stations, some car dealers [fol. 1043] or auto supplies stores and tire dealers.

Q. Do you go out every day and attempt to sell your merchandise?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Approximately how many customers do you solicit each day?

A. Well, that varies somewhat on my ability to get to talk to them right away, but on an average about 8 or 10—8 to 10.

Q. Describe generally what your method of operation is in soliciting these accounts?

A. Well, of course, I have the regular established accounts that I merely call on, and I try to contact three or four new accounts each day. You can't always do that, but the general procedure is to get ahold of the man who does the buying and present my line to them, and if they are a new account ask them to take on the Dayton line of tires and tubes.

Q. Do you visit them by automobile?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you get out of your car?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Do you go into the service station office?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you any idea approximately how much time you spend with each prospective account?

[fol. 1044] A. Well, that depends a little on the reception I get.

Q. On an average how much?

A. I spend sometimes two hours and a half, and other times 30 minutes.

Q. Now, do you furnish advertising to your established accounts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you explain this advertising feature at the time you solicit new accounts?

A. I do, if there is a possibility of selling them.

Q. Well, what do you mean by that?

A. I mean by that if the door isn't closed immediately on the possibility of a sale, then I go into the entire program I have to offer them.

Q. Do you have any other features which you describe to these prospective accounts?

A. Well, we have the features of the tire line that are distinct to the Dayton line, we have the newspaper advertising program, we have the sign program and we have the guarantee program.

Q. What is the sign program you refer to?

A. Well, we have a program where if a man wishes to paint his building with a sign of the Dayton Company we will pay 70 per cent of that on his furnishing us an estimate.

Q. Do you also furnish neon signs?

[fol. 1045] A. We do.

Q. What do you charge for furnishing neon signs?

A. Well, we have a 9-foot neon sign that if a man signs a franchise with us we will furnish him this sign without cost, provided he agrees to erect it and keep it burning.

Q. What is the warranty proposition that you referred to?

A. That is a road hazard warranty.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. The road hazard warranty is a guaranty by the company that the tire bearing the Dayton name and serial number sold him will be guaranteed so many months against road hazards. We have two tires, of course, and they carry different warranties.

Q. What guarantees do you carry?

A. The standard or what is known as the 100 level tire, what is known in our category as the Dayton Thoroughbred, carries a one-year warranty against road hazards and tread wear.

Q. Now, do you also sell batteries?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What brand of batteries do you sell?

A. We sell Prest-O-Lite, and another battery known as the Dayton battery.

Q. Have you in your solicitations called upon the service station located at 3985 Whittier Boulevard in Los [fol. 1046] Angeles, California?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Thody: The government wishes at this time to have marked as a Government's Exhibit for identification the agreement, the dealer TBA agreement, executed by Mr. C. E. Peterson, which was produced in response to subpoena No. 1, paragraph No. 1, subparagraph 44.

The Clerk: That is Government's Exhibit 69, marked for identification.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. When did you call on the station located at this address?

A. Approximately the week of March 25th.

Q. I am sorry. I didn't get that.

A. About March 25th this year.

Q. With whom did you talk?

A. Mr. Peterson.

Q. Did he purchase any of your merchandise?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have any conversations with Mr. Peterson at this time concerning the reasons he did not purchase your merchandise?

A. I did.

Q. Where did the conversations take place?

A. In his station on Whittier Boulevard.

Q. When was this?

[fol. 1047] A. As I say, I believe it was about the 25th of March.

Q. Who was present?

A. Mr. Peterson and myself.

Q. What reason did Mr. Peterson give for not purchasing your merchandise?

A. Mr. Peterson said because he was a Chevron station it would be pretty hard for him to handle any line of tires except Atlas. He was a little evasive as to just exactly why he couldn't except to say that the company could make it pretty rough for him if he didn't play along with the program.

Q. Did you make any subsequent calls to this station?

A. I did not.

Q. Have you ever visited the station located at 3202 Ramona Boulevard in Los Angeles, California?

A. I have.

Mr. Thody: The government wishes to have marked for identification the agreement, dealer agreement TBA, dated May 20, 1946 with Standard Oil Company of California and Mr. James S. Williams and the supporting papers which are attached thereto, all of which documents were received from defendants in response to subpoena 1, paragraph 1, No. 46.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 70 for identification.

Mr. Thody: And the government wishes at this time, your Honor, and moves that Government's Exhibit 69, for [fol. 1048] identification, be admitted into evidence.

Mr. Hall: Each and all of the documents so offered are objected to on the ground they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: 69 in evidence.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. When did you call on this station, Mr. Winchester?

A. About the middle of March, 1948.

Q. Did you sell any of your tires, tubes and batteries?

A. No, sir.

Q. To whom did you talk?

A. To Mr. Williams.

Q. I am sorry. I didn't get that.

A. Mr. Williams.

Q. Did you have any conversations with him as to the reasons he didn't purchase your merchandise?

A. He said he was—

Q. No, just answer "Yes" or "No."

A. Yes.

Q. When did those conversations take place?

A. About the middle of March, 1948.

Q. And who was present?

A. Mr. Williams.

Q. What were those conversations?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

[fol. 1049] The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: Mr. Williams said that the only way he might be able to handle any Dayton batteries would be on the—to use his exact words—on the Q.T. He said he wouldn't be able to display them and if he sold any he would have to keep them out of sight.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Did you call back?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why didn't you?

A. Well, that type of a dealer is not the type of dealer—

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That calls for a conclusion of the witness, if the court please.

The Court: Sustained. That is not material.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Have you called upon the station of Mr. A. A. Lamb, located at Olympic and Central Avenue in Los Angeles?

A. I have.

Q. When did you call on that station?

A. I called on Mr. Lamb about the 1st of February—or the first of March, 1948.

Q. Did you explain to Mr. Lamb the advantages of your merchandise, as you have described to the court?

A. I did.

Q. Did you sell him?

[fol. 1050] A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have any conversations with him as to the reasons why you did not sell him?

A. I did.

Q. When did these conversations take place?

A. About the 1st of March.

Q. And where?

A. In his station. At the station at 9th, or Olympic and Central Avenue.

Q. Who was present at that time?

A. Mr. Lamb.

Q. And what were these conversations?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court; Overruled.

The Witness: Mr. Lamb said he had a full stock of Atlas tires and batteries, and it would be pretty hard for him to carry any other line of tires or batteries in his station and sell them for us.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Did you explain your advertising program to him?

A. I asked him—I did, yes, sir.

Q. Did he make any comment at that time regarding your advertising program?

A. He did.

Q. What type of tires did you try to sell him?

[fol. 1051] A. Dayton tires.

Q. Did you discuss your price with him at this time?

A. I did.

Q. Did you discuss whether it was comparable with the price of tires he was then purchasing?

A. I did.

Q. Did he have any comments concerning that?

A. He said it was a good price for the reason that we had a very special deal on at that time, and that was what I was trying to interest him in.

Q. What was your special deal?

A. We had a deal at that time on our Autocrat tire, which is a high-priced, premium-priced tire, at regular 4-ply prices.

Q. Do you sell any Chevron stations which advertise Atlas tires?

A. I do.

Q. What is the name of the station or stations to which you sell your products which fit this description?

A. I sell one station known as the Indio Truck Center at Indio, California.

Q. Do you happen to know who operates that station?

A. There are two partners there, Mr. Kendry and Mr. Soronson.

Q. Does this station advertise Atlas tires?

[fol. 1052] A. They do. It does.

Q. When did you first call on this station?

A. I called upon them about a week after I went to work for the J. N. Ceazan Company last September.

Q. Well, did you sell them at that time?

A. I did.

Q. What did you sell him?

A. I sold him Dayton tires and tubes.

Q. Do you now sell him Dayton truck tires and tubes?

A. I do.

Q. Have you sold him any tires other than truck tires and tubes?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you tried to sell him any passenger car tires at any time?

A. I have.

Q. Have you had any conversation with him as to the reasons why you couldn't sell him or you did not sell him passenger tires?

A. I have.

Q. When did such conversation take place, approximately?

A. About the middle of February.

Q. Of what year?

A. This year.

[fol. 1053] Q. Where did such conversations transpire?

A. In his station at Indio.

Q. Who was present?

A. Mr. Soronson.

Q. What were those conversations?

A. Well, I asked him—

Mr. Hall: That is objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: I asked him to take the entire line, and he said, well, after all, he had to buy some stuff from Standard, but that he would buy the truck tires because he liked them and could sell them.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Now, how many years have you been in the tire business, Mr. Winchester?

A. Since 1946.

Q. How many years have you been a salesman for tires, automobile tires?

A. Since 1925.

Q. How long have you been associated with the J. N. Ceazan Company?

A. I went to work for them the 23rd of September, 1947.

Q. What company were you previously connected with?

A. I was with the Charles Morgan & Son Company, 1038 East Olympic.

Q. For how long?

[fol. 1054] A. Since—from May '38 until August '46.

Q. How many Chevron accounts which sell Atlas tires do you now sell?

A. One.

Q. How many Chevron stations of the type that sell Atlas batteries do you now sell?

A. None.

Mr. Thody: You may have the witness, Mr. Hall. Oh, pardon me just one moment.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. In each of the cases I have referred to, the Peterson case, and the Ramona Boulevard, and Lamb on Olympic, and the Indio station, which we have discussed, has there been at any time any dissatisfaction expressed on the Dayton tires——

A. No, sir.

Q. By those people?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Thody: The government moves at this time, your Honor, that Government's Exhibit 70, for identification, be admitted into evidence.

Mr. Hall: Each and all of the documents are objected to on the ground they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: Exhibit 70 in evidence.

Mr. Hall: Are you done, Mr. Thody?

[fol. 1055] Mr. Thody: Yes.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Will you describe this advertising program which you say is offered to the dealers handling Dayton tires?

A. Yes. If the dealer wishes to advertise Dayton tires over the firm name in a newspaper, a local newspaper, on presentation of that tear sheet, accompanied by his paid bill, we will pay 70 per cent of it either in a check to him or a credit to his account.

Q. That applies to local advertising only?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any top limit on what the company will pay?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you do that for all dealers handling Dayton tires, if they want it done?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you spoke of a painting of dealers' buildings, and I understand you to say that was done sometimes?

A. I may not have been clear. I mean a painting of a sign on his building.

Q. Oh, a painting of a sign on the building?

A. Yes.

Q. That would be a Dayton sign?

[fol. 1056] A. Dayton sign, yes, sir.

Q. How large would that be?

A. There is no limit set on that.

Q. I beg pardon?

A. No limit.

Q. Well, that would be done only for a dealer that sold your Dayton tires, would it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If he was selling some other type of tires he wouldn't get it done by your people?

A. If he was selling enough Dayton tires to warrant paying 30 per cent of it, he would.

The Court: In other words, that does not apply to exclusive dealers only?

The Witness: No, sir.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What is this franchise you spoke of, the Dayton franchise?

A. That is merely a written provision, a printed franchise, filled out with the dealer's name, setting forth the terms under which we would like to have him operate as a Dayton distributor; in other words, specifying that he give adequate tire service and that we will furnish him with certain advertising.

Q. Is that franchise put out by the Dayton Company or by the Ceazan Company?

[fol. 1057] A. By the Dayton Company.

Q. What does the dealer have to promise in order to get one of those franchises?

A. All he has to promise is to identify his place as a Dayton distributor, and to render adequate tire service and to maintain reasonable stock.

Q. A reasonable stock?

A. That's right.

Q. Is it common for a dealer to have one of those Dayton franchises and handle other competitive lines of tires?

A. It is not.

Q. It is not, you say?

A. No, sir. May I add a comment to that?

Q. Surely.

A. I might say in conjunction with the franchise, a franchise is offered to a dealer who asks for it. It is not mandatory on anyone's part.

Q. I can hardly hear what you say, Mr. Winchester. Will you speak a little louder, please?

A. It is not mandatory that he sign a contract with us. I mean we wouldn't force him to sign a contract. He may have it if he wishes.

Q. Yes. But when he gets it, he usually is an exclusive dealer for Dayton products?

A. Nothing is said about exclusive.

[fol. 1058] Q. I didn't ask you that. I asked you what the practice was. Does he handle other tires?

A. He can, but he doesn't.

Q. I am asking what he does. He doesn't usually handle other tires?

A. That's right.

Q. And isn't that for the reason that in handling an adequate stock he doesn't have the room or the financing to handle any other type of products?

Mr. Thody: That is objected to.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: No, sir, it isn't.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I am not correct?

A. No, sir.

Q. What do you say is the reason why he doesn't handle another line of competitive products when he has one of these franchises?

A. Because he makes more money with Dayton.

The Court: That is a plug for your products, isn't it?

Mr. Thody: In the—

Mr. Hall: Just a minute.

Mr. Thody: I am sorry.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Does the Ceazan Company sell or consign merchandise?

A. Sell.

[fol. 1059] Q. Do they ever consign?

A. Have they ever or do they ever?

Q. Do they ever?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you with you one of those franchises you have spoken of?

A. I have one in my car across the street. I don't have one with me.

Q. Will you bring it in and produce it a little bit later?

A. I will be glad to.

Q. Do you have an agreement that you use when the dealer paints his station and gets a part of the paint costs from you people?

A. Nothing other than the sign, the Dayton sign.

Q. Well, do you sign any kind of an agreement with him when that arrangement is carried out?

A. No, sir. We do on the electric sign, but not on the paint job.

Q. Now, it is only a dealer that sells a certain quantity of your goods that gets one of these neon signs, isn't it?

A. No, sir.

Q. What is the arrangement on the neon sign?

A. We use our own judgment on that. If he looks like [fol. 1060] he has potential possibilities there, and he has a good spot, it is to our advantage to have that sign up there as much as him, so we use our own judgment as to the location of the sign. If it is good enough, we will give it to him.

Q. Are there any of those signs up in cases where the dealer is handling competitive tires?

A. I can't answer that question. There is none in my territory.

Q. There is none in your territory?

A. No, sir, that is, not that I know of. There may be some in the city. I don't know.

Q. What does the dealer have to pay when a neon sign is put up towards the upkeep of the neon sign, if anything?

A. The sign is sent to him prepaid. All he agrees to do, he signs a lease agreement on that, that he will erect the sign and maintain it as long as he sells our product.

Q. He pays the maintenance of the sign?

A. The electric power, yes, sir.

Q. The cost of operation?

A. That's right.

Q. Have you got one of those neon contracts in your car?

A. No, sir, I do not have.

Q. You have one available, haven't you?

A. At the office.

[fol. 1061] Mr. Hall: All right. Will you produce one of those?

Mr. Thody: That is objected to.

Mr. Hall: I want the franchise from the Dayton people and I want the neon sign agreement.

Mr. Thody: I object, your Honor, to the production of these documents as certainly irrelevant and immaterial and outside the scope of the pleadings in this case.

The Court: I can't tell until I see them whether they have any relevancy. They are not being offered in evidence now.

He is asking the man to produce them and the man is willing to produce them.

Mr. Hall: I assume the gentleman would rather produce them now than be subpoenaed at a later stage of the proceedings. We can, of course, do that.

The Court: If he has them available, he can bring them in.

I am about to declare a recess when you have finished with him. Have you finished with him?

Mr. Hall: I have finished with him, yes, your Honor.

The Court: Any redirect?

Mr. Thody: Just one question.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Mr. Winchester, in connection with your sale of the Dayton tires to the Indio station, did you furnish or did [fol. 1062] you not furnish any advertising?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you attempt to furnish advertising?

A. We offered it.

Q. Was it accepted or declined?

A. Declined.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

The Court: All right. Step down.

The Witness: Shall I bring that in?

The Court: Yes, you bring it in and show it to counsel.

Gentlemen, I will now declare a short recess. I forgot to call a matter that was set for 2:00 o'clock and counsel are here. You may be excused for a few minutes.

(A short recess was taken.)

[fol. 1063] Mr. Thody: May the record show, your Honor, that during the recess period Mr. Winchester obtained a copy of the document entitled "Dayton Franchise" as requested by counsel for the defendants?

Mr. Hall: Did he obtain the Neon agreement, Mr. Thody?

Mr. Thody: He did not, but he has an explanation for that, Mr. Hall, which I will let the witness give to you.

Q. Were you able to obtain, Mr. Winchester, a copy of the Neon sign lease agreement that you referred to in your earlier testimony?

A. No, sir; I was not. I did not have one in my car. I would have to get that from the general office.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I show you a document, Mr. Winchester, bearing at the top the words "Dayton Franchise." Is that the franchise that you have referred to in your previous testimony?

A. It is.

Mr. Hall: I ask that the document be marked as an exhibit for identification only.

The Court: All right. Is this the first exhibit for the defense?

The Clerk: Apparently, sir. Defendants' A marked for identification.

The Court: A.

Mr. Thody: Are you through with him, Mr. Hall?

[fol. 1064] Mr. Hall: Yes.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Mr. Winchester, calling your attention to your testimony concerning the Dayton franchise, can dealers or distributors operating under this franchise handle other tires or tubes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can they handle other batteries other than manufactured by Dayton?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: Well, wait a minute, wait a minute. That calls for an interpretation of the document itself, your Honor, and I move to strike the last answer of the witness, and object to this question on that ground.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: All right, call your next witness.

Mr. Thody: The Government now wishes to call Mr. Hugh Hall.

Hugh Hall, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Hugh Hall.

The Clerk: That is H-u-g-h, and the spelling of the last [fol. 1065] name?

The Witness: H-a-l-l.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Hall?

A. 1026 East Polk Street, Phoenix, Arizona.

Q. By whom are you employed or what is your occupation?

A. I am a salesman with the Motor Supply Company.

Q. How long have you served with the Motor Supply Company?

A. About seven years, broken service.

Q. And where is the Motor Supply Company located?

A. 315 North Central Avenue, Phoenix.

Q. Are you acquainted generally with the products sold by the Motor Supply Company?

A. I am?

Q. Can you describe the nature of those products to the court at this time, please?

A. A complete line of automotive parts and accessories, tires, batteries, and oil.

Q. Are you acquainted with the brands of these various products?

A. I am.

Q. What brand of oil does the Motor Supply Company sell?

[fol. 1066] A. Pennzoil.

Q. What brand of tire?

A. Fisk.

Q. And what brand of tubes?

A. Fisk.

Q. What brand of batteries?

A. Auto-Lite.

Q. And what brand or brands of automotive accessories does your company sell?

A. Numerous ones.

Q. Can you describe some of them?

A. Gates fanbelts, McQueen-Norris engine parts, Velva-Touch metallic lining.

Q. Can you speak louder?

A. Velva-Touch metallic lining, Thermoid lining, asbestos.

Q. Do you have a line of polishes and waxes?

A. Yes; we have the color-glow line.

Q. Do you have a brand of chemicals?

A. Yes; we have the Circo line.

Q. Do you have a territory or a sales area which you cover for the Motor Supply Company?

A. I do.

Q. Can you describe where this territory is?

A. It is a portion of Phoenix, Central Avenue and [fol. 1067] Tempe, and Van Buren to South Manhattan.

Q. Have you had any previous territories, previous assignments?

A. Yes.

Q. Where were they?

A. Tempe, Chandler, Mesa, Scottsdale and surrounding area.

Q. What type outlets do you sell your products of Motor Supply Company to?

A. Service stations and garages.

Q. How do you operate generally?

A. By schedule of—I have tried to route my territory, covering my service stations the first part of the week and the garages the latter part of the week.

Q. Do you make personal contacts.

A. Yes; I do.

Q. Do you know of your own personal knowledge how many salesmen are now employed by the Motor Supply Company?

A. In Phoenix?

Q. Well, first, in Phoenix; yes.

A. 10.

Q. Do you know of your own personal knowledge the area that is sold by the Motor Supply Company?

A. Arizona.

Q. Is that the entire state of Arizona?

[fol. 1068] A. The entire state of Arizona.

Q. Do you know of your own personal knowledge how many salesmen the Motor Supply Company has operating in the State of Arizona?

A. Yes.

Q. How many?

A. 18.

Q. Do or do not these salesmen operate more or less in the same manner that you do?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have instructions from your company as to the method under which you should operate?

A. Yes.

Q. Approximately how many calls do you make on service stations, garages and so on per day?

A. Oh, six to 10.

Q. Do you go out and sell or attempt to sell your products each and every day?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you visited a service station located on the southeast corner of Washington and 32nd Streets in Phoenix, Arizona?

A. Yes.

Q. By whom is that operated?

A. Gene Howard.

[fol. 1069] Mr. Thody: At this time the Government wishes to have marked as Government's exhibit for identification dealer agreement TBA dated November 14, 1947, and the accompanying documents attached thereto, executed between the Standard Oil Company and E. R. Howard.

The Clerk: Government's 71 for identification.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. When did you call upon this station, Mr. Hall?

A. Approximately February of this year.

Q. Did you attempt to sell your product at that time?

A. I did.

Q. Which products did you attempt to sell?

A. Pennzoil, Fisk tires, Auto-Lite batteries, Gates fanbelts.

Q. And to whom did you talk?

A. Mr. Gene Howard.

Q. Did you sell your products at the time of this visit?

A. No; I did not.

Q. Did you have any conversations as to why you could not sell your products?

A. I did.

Q. Where did such conversations take place?

A. At his place of business, 32nd and East Washington.

Q. And when did you say that was?

[fol. 1070] A. In approximately February.

Q. When in February?

A. The early part of February.

Q. And who was present?

A. Myself, Gene Howard, a gentleman from the Gates Rubber Company, Mr. Jesperson and Bill Fouts, our Pennzoil salesman and truck representative.

Q. What was said at this time?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Thody: You may answer.

The Witness: I don't catch you.

Mr. Thody: You may answer. What was said at that time?

A. Well, we presented our story of Pennzoil to Mr. Howard and asked him if he thought he could use Pennzoil, and he said he had had calls for it in the past but that he was unable to handle the product due to an agreement in his contract.

Q. Was there any mention at that time on the reasons why you could not sell your tires and tubes?

A. Later in the conversation we asked him about his tires and tubes and batteries, and he said, "Well, the same setup applies to them," referring to his contract.

Q. You mean the same setup as what?

A. As the oil; he couldn't handle it.

[fol. 1071] Q. Did you have any discussion with reference to any of your other products?

A. Yes; we talked about our Gates fanbelts.

Q. What was said about the Gates fanbelts?

A. Well, he seemed to be a little doubtful as to whether it was all right for him to handle Gates fanbelts or not at the present time. That was when we were talking to him. But he did agree for us to go ahead and put up the racks upon which they hang the fanbelts, and if we would check with him later, maybe he could buy the belts from us.

Q. Have you supplied him with any fanbelts?

A. No.

Q. Does he still have your rack?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever called upon the Cox Garage located at Central and Madison Streets in Phoenix?

A. I have.

Q. Have you sold him any products?

A. Yes.

Q. What products have you sold?

A. I sold him two tires.

Q. And when did you sell the tires?

A. Oh, approximately January, '46.

Q. Do you sell him any tires now?

A. No.

[fol. 1072] Q. Have you tried to sell him anything since 1946?

A. Yes.

Q. How often?

A. Oh, every two months, approximately.

Q. Have you ever talked to him about the reasons why you could not make future sales?

A. I have.

Q. When did you talk to him about this?

A. On numerous occasions. The last was approximately January of this year.

Q. Approximately when in January?

A. Well, the 15th.

Q. Where did this conversation take place?

A. At Wayne's Midway Inn in Phoenix.

Q. And what is the Wayne's Midway Inn?

A. Well, he is—the gentleman we are speaking of, Mr. Sammy Kroll (?) has an orchestra he conducts nights and—

Q. Well, first of all, who is this Mr. Sammy Kroll?

A. He is the partner in this Cox Service, this Cox Garage that we are talking about.

Q. Is he the party with whom you have been dealing previously?

A. Yes.

Q. And he is the party who has purchased your tires on the previous occasions?

[fol. 1073] A. Yes.

Q. And who was present at that conversation in the night club?

A. Mr. Kroll and myself.

Q. How did you happen to speak to him then?

A. Well, we are friends outside of business.

Q. Were you attempting to solicit him at that time personally?

A. Not when we struck up our conversation; no. The conversation led to the business point.

Q. And when was this?

A. January 15th, I would say, or thereabouts, this year.

Q. Did he ascribe any reasons as to why he did not purchase further Fisk tires from you?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. What were those conversations?

A. He said that he couldn't buy tires from us; that he has Atlas tires, lots of them.

Q. He said he had lots of them. Did you ask him to purchase further Fisk tires at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you mean he had lots of them?

[fol. 1074] A. Well, the way I understand it, he cannot buy tires—

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute.

The Court: No; you can't state that.

Mr. Hall: We object to the understanding.

[fol. 1075] By Mr. Thody:

Q. Did he have lots of Atlas tires in January, 1946 when he made his initial purchase from you?

A. No.

Q. Did he have any Atlas tires that you could see in his station at that time?

A. No.

Q. Have you continued to solicit this account since that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you sold any further merchandise?

A. No.

Mr. Thody: At this time, your Honor, the government moves that Government's Exhibit No. 71, for identification, be admitted into evidence.

Mr. Hall: The defendant objects to each and all of the documents so offered on the ground they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 71 in evidence.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Mr. Hall, was there ever any dissatisfaction expressed by you as to the Fiske tires which you supplied to Sammie Kroll?

A. Yes.

Q. There was dissatisfaction?

A. Satisfaction. Oh, no dissatisfaction, no. I didn't [fol. 1076] understand you.

Q. Was he perfectly happy or unhappy?

A. Definitely satisfied.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: Step down. Call your next witness.

Mr. Somerville: The government calls Kenneth Smith. Your Honor please, we are putting Mr. Smith on a little out of order because he has a medical problem and his home is in Seattle, so we want to dispose of him this afternoon.

The Court: Very well.

Kenneth Senior Smith, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

The Clerk: Take the stand, please. What is your name, please?

The Witness: Kenneth Senior Smith.

The Clerk: How do you spell your middle name?

The Witness: S-e-n-i-o-r.

The Clerk: How do you spell your last name?

The Witness: S-m-i-t-h.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Smith?

[fol. 1077] A. Everett, Washington.

Q. What is your occupation or employment?

A. Salesman for Largent & Moorman, Service Station Supplies, and a Chevron station operator.

Q. And a Chevron station operator?

A. That's right.

Q. Where is your Chevron station located?

Mr. Hall: I thought he said he was a salesman for somebody.

Mr. Somerville: He did, and he said a Chevron operator also.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Where is your station located?

A. 7515 U. S. 99 South, Everett, Washington.

Q. In response to a subpoena did you produce documents covering your service station?

A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Somerville: The government asks that these documents entitled Petroleum Products and Equipment Agreement, dated September 5, 1944, between Standard Oil Company of California and Fred Erickson, and an accompanying document which is an assignment to Kenneth S. Smith from Emil Bovela of certain agreements, including a Petroleum Products Equipment Agreement dated September 5, 1944, and this document appears to bear no date, but it is effective as of March 1, 1948—I would like to have these marked for identification.

[fol. 1078] The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 72, for identification.

Mr. Somerville: I would like as a part of that same exhibit an additional document which appears to be a receipt for equipment dated 3-19-48.

The Clerk: So marked.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When did you take over the operation of this service station, Mr. Smith?

A. The 20th of February.

Q. What year?

A. 1948.

Q. And do you own the property?

A. That's right; buying it on contract.

Q. Of what does the service station consist?

A. Gasoline pumps and oil, and the front is a grocery store.

Q. You don't have any lubricating equipment?

A. No, no lubricating.

Q. When did you commence to dispense gasoline at this station?

A. On the 18th of February, two days before.

Q. At any time preceding the execution of the agreement which you have produced, or thereafter, were any instructions given you with respect to the handling of competitive petroleum products?

A. Yes, I was told—

[fol. 1079] Mr. Hall: Just a minute. Just the word "Yes" is all that is called for.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When were these instructions given you?

A. Well, approximately within 30 days; sometime in the first 30 days.

Q. 30 days after signing the agreement?

A. No, in between there, and also afterwards.

Q. And where were these instructions given you and by whom?

A. In the Standard Oil Company office.

Q. In Seattle?

A. In Everett.

Q. And who were present?

A. Mr. Shaw.

Q. And who is Mr. Shaw?

A. He is a company representative for the territory north of Seattle.

Q. Were there any further representatives present?

A. I don't remember. At the time I doubt if there were.

Q. What, if any, conversations were held at this time with respect to your handling of petroleum products?

A. Well, I hadn't signed the contract at that time, and I was considering a change. I wanted to break the contract [fol. 1080] and take some other, and he explained to me that the contract covered all petroleum products on that property, and I couldn't handle any other, and, of course, the contract—for all I hadn't signed it—was supposed to be binding because I had bought the property and I suppose the contract with it.

Q. So far as you were concerned, the contract represented the gasoline pumps, is that it?

A. That's right.

Q. You subsequently signed the contract, as the record shows?

A. Yes, later I did.

Q. And have you handled competitive oils?

A. I have handled competitive oils in the station, yes.

Q. Have you received calls for competitive oils?

A. That's right. Yes, I have.

Q. What brands of oils were called for by your customers?

A. Well, Pennzoil in particular. I use that in my own car. That's why I have it there, so maybe that's why—

Q. You don't stock that oil for your customers?

A. No, not for that, no.

Q. Calling your attention to your duties as salesman for Largent & Moorman, how long have you been a salesman for this company?

A. Two years.

[fol. 1081] Q. And what business is this company engaged in?

A. Service station supplies and equipment.

Q. What are some of the items that are handled by this company?

A. Tires, batteries, fan belts, oil filter elements, oil filters, brake fluid.

Q. Do you happen to know what brand of tires and the source of the tires that are handled?

A. Miller tires, from the Miller Rubber Company in Los Angeles.

Q. And what type of batteries?

A. National batteries.

Q. From where are those received?

A. Salem, Oregon.

Q. What brand of oil filters are handled and from where are they received?

A. The Purolator and Fram's.

Q. And what brand of fan belts?

A. Gates from Denver, Colorado, and Crown—I don't know where they are from.

Q. What is the area to which your sales efforts are confined?

A. The University district, the north end of Seattle.

Q. And what class of trade does Largent & Moorman attempt to sell?

[fol. 1082] A. Service stations, practically exclusively.

Q. Does that include service stations at which Standard Oil products are dispensed, the Chevron stations?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Do you yourself make calls on Chevron stations?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Have you at any time called on a service station operated by John Scholtens at 95th and 35th Avenue Northeast, Seattle, Washington?

A. Yes.

Mr. Somerville: At this point, your Honor, we would like to have marked for identification a lease dated August 20, 1946, between John Scholtens and Louise Scholtens, his wife, lessor, and Standard Oil Company of California, lessee; a sublease dated August 20, 1946, between Standard Oil Company, lessor, and John Scholtens and Louise Scholtens, his wife, lessee; a letter agreement concerning this property dated August 19, 1947, addressed to John Scholtens and Mrs. Louise Scholtens, and signed by W. G. Watson, Attorney-in-fact for the Standard Oil Company; and a dealer agreement TBA dated August 20, 1946, between Standard Oil Company of California and John Scholtens, and certain other documents also covering this property.

The Clerk: That is Government's Exhibit 73, marked for identification.

[fol. 1083] Mr. Somerville: The government offers in evidence Government's Exhibit 72 for identification.

Mr. Hall: Objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: Exhibit 72 in evidence.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When did you first call on this service station operated by Mr. Scholtens in approximately August, 1947?

A. Maybe it was September. It was around August or September.

Q. At this time did you sell him any products?

A. I sold him some equipment. He was just opening up his station, or was getting ready to open it up.

Q. By "equipment" do you mean equipment for resale or for his own use?

A. No, equipment for his own use, for the station.

Q. Did you at this time attempt to sell him for resale any tires, batteries or miscellaneous accessories?

A. No.

Q. Did you call on Mr. Scholtens subsequently?

A. Yes, when he opened the station a month or so later, I called on him.

Q. At that time did you make an effort to stock your products in that station?

A. Yes, I did.

[fol. 1084] Q. Were you successful?

A. On some. Just on a part of the stock, on certain things he was unable to get from Standard.

Q. Were any conversations held with respect to his maintaining a regular stock of some of the items handled by your company?

A. Yes. They were—

Q. Where were these conversations held?

A. In his service station.

Q. Were any other parties present?

A. No.

Q. With respect to the time involved, how long was this after your first call in August?

A. Well, I would say about a month later.

Q. What was the nature of the conversation?

A. He explained to me that certain things he had to buy from Standard—

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. I object to that conversation on the ground it is hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Somerville: You may answer.

The Witness: What am I supposed to say now? I don't get—

The Court: You are supposed to answer the question.

Mr. Somerville: If you will read the question back, please.

[fol. 1085] (The question and answer were read.)

The Witness: (Continuing)—and that when he couldn't obtain these things from Standard, he would do business with me, but he had—he was heavily in debt and had just opened up the service station, and he felt that it was kind of binding, that he couldn't—that he had to buy from them.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Heavily in debt to whom?

A. Evidently—I understood, or it was evidently to Standard, or they had helped him in building the station; probably signed the—gone good for it to the bank, I presume.

Mr. Hall: I move to strike the answer to the question because it appears therefrom that his answer is based on conclusions.

The Court: Yes, I will strike it, unless he told him that.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. You were unable to interest Mr. Scholtens in stocking as a regular matter your products?

A. That's right.

Q. Have you ever called upon a service station operated by James Nelson at 83rd and Greenwood in Seattle?

A. Yes.

Mr. Somerville: The government offers for identification dealer agreement TBA, dated October 14, 1947, between Standard Oil Company of California and James C. Nelson, [fol. 1085a] and an agreement of conditional sale between Standard Oil Company of California and James Nelson, covering property at 8301 Greenwood Avenue, Seattle.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 74, marked for identification.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When did you first call on Mr. Nelson?

A. Last October or November; November, I guess it was.

Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful in selling your products?

A. I sold him some tools.

Q. At that time did you endeavor to sell him resale items?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Were any conversations held with respect to his maintaining a regular stock of those items?

A. Yes.
Q. Where were these conversations held?
A. In his service station.
Q. Were any other parties present?
A. No.
Q. What was the nature of those conversations?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.
The Court: Overruled.

[fol. 1086] By Mr. Somerville:

Q. You may answer.
A. He stated that he couldn't stock my merchandise because he was tied up with Standard and had to stock their merchandise when it was available.
Q. At any time thereafter were you able to sell him any of your products?
A. Yes, I sold him some batteries.
Q. When did this occur?
A. I don't know. I sold those one or two weeks later; the next time I called on him, probably.
Q. These were the Autolite batteries?
A. The National batteries.
Q. The National batteries. At that time did you observe whether or not Atlas batteries of the same type or same sizes were handled at his station?
A. No. He told me at the time—
Q. Were any conversations held with respect to the handling of these batteries at that time?
A. Yes.
Q. Who was present?
A. Nobody.
Q. Except Mr. Nelson?
A. That's right. Mr. Nelson and myself.
Q. And these were also held in the service station?
A. Yes.
[fol. 1087] Q. What were those conversations?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.
The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: He stated or asked me to send certain sizes of batteries because he was unable to get that size from Standard at this time, and so he filled in his supply with National batteries of the size he was out of.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Thereafter did you attempt to make further sales of those batteries?

A. That's right, I did.

Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful?

A. I was unsuccessful.

Q. At that time was anything said with respect to whether or not supplies of Atlas batteries were available?

A. Yes, he—

Q. When did such conversations occur?

A. Oh, about a month later.

Q. Also at the Chevron station?

A. That's right.

Q. Were any other parties present?

A. No.

Q. What was said?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: He said, "No, I can't buy any of your [fol. 1088] batteries now. Standard has their batteries in stock, and I have to handle them."

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Are you familiar with the respective competitive qualities of Atlas batteries and other batteries on the market?

A. Yes.

Q. Are National batteries comparable to batteries handled under the Atlas brand name?

A. Yes, they are.

Q. Did Mr. Nelson express any dissatisfaction with the batteries that you sold him?

A. No, he didn't.

Q. And you have been unsuccessful in selling him any further batteries?

A. That's right.

Mr. Somerville: That will be all.

Oh, at this point I would like to offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 73, for identification.

The Court: It may be received.

Mr. Hall: The defendants object to each and all of the documents so offered on the ground they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: 73 in evidence.

Mr. Hall: Were you done with your examination, Mr. [fol. 1089] Somerville?

Mr. Somerville: Just a moment.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Mr. Smith, I would like to ask you a question or two with respect to the oil, the Pennzoil I think you testified to, which you handle at your station. Was this supply of oil maintained to satisfy particular customer demand other than your own?

A. In the first place, it was for my own use, until I had requests for other oil. One particular customer asked me if I had anything other than RPM or Standard Penn, and I said, "Yes, I have Pennzoil, which I use in my own car. I can let you have some of that." She said, "That's fine. That is the kind of oil I prefer, and that is what I use myself." So then I started handling it after that.

Q. Have other customers requested Pennzoil?

A. They have requested other oils. I wouldn't say definitely Pennzoil, but they have requested other oils.

Q. So far as you know, was this the only definite request for Pennzoil?

A. Yes, I think so. Probably that is the only request without seeing it. You get plenty of requests if you display it.

Q. You have testified to certain instructions that were given you with respect to this oil. You have never openly displayed any Pennzoil, have you?

[fol. 1090] A. No, that's right.

Q. Have you had salesmen for Pennzoil and other oil companies call at your station?

A. There has probably, but I am not there much because I am away selling, you see, on this other job, so I couldn't say on that.

Mr. Somerville: That is all.

The Court: Any questions, Mr. Hall?

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Did you say that you were the owner of the property where this station is located that is referred to in Exhibit 72?

A. At 7515 U. S. 99 South, Everett?

Q. I will show you Exhibit 72 and you tell me whether you are the owner of the property that is referred to in those papers.

A. Yes. You see, this address is changed since it used to be Route 3. It isn't any more.

Q. Now, you acquired that property the last of March, did you?

A. February the 20th.

Q. Now, from whom did you acquire the property?

A. Emil Bovela.

Q. Now, if I understood you correctly, you testified [fol. 1091] on direct examination that you didn't want to sign any papers with Standard Oil Company when you took over the property; is that right?

A. That's right. In fact, I told them before I took it over.

Q. Whom did you tell that to, Standard or Mr. Bovela.

A. Both. Mainly to Standard. I went down to the office personally to see about it.

Q. Why did you take over the property if you didn't want to take over the paper?

A. Because I believed the contract could be broken.

Q. You operate some other kind of business, do you, in connection with the service station?

A. A grocery store.

Q. A grocery store. How many pumps do you have there?

A. Two.

Q. Do you sell any tires, tubes, batteries or accessories in that service station?

A. A few. Not—a few, yes; not much in accessories. I sell a few tires once in a while.

Q. Atlas tires, or some other brand?

A. No. I wanted to sell Atlas. They told me I have to sign the TBA agreement or else I wouldn't be able to, so I called Firestone, and I buy my tires from Firestone.

Q. So you sell Firestone tires?

[fol. 1092] A. That's right.

Q. Now, what batteries are on the market up there in your area competing with the batteries that you sell for your firm?

[fol. 1093] A. Auto-Lite and Hobbs, all kind of them.

Q. Well, what are some of them? Name some of them.

A. Auto-Lite, Hobbs, Atlas, Mobil, Signals, States.

Q. Can you think of any others?

A. Olympic.

Q. Who first told you about this lawsuit?

A. Gosh! I don't know. You have got me there all right. I don't know.

Q. Who asked you to come here?

A. I was subpoenaed.

Q. Did you have some conversation with anybody about this lawsuit before the subpoena was served on you?

A. No; not about the lawsuit, not that there was any suit. I was questioned about my dealings with Standard Oil.

Q. Who questioned you, somebody from the FBI?

A. That is right.

The Court: That was in Everett you were subpoenaed?

The Witness: That was in Everett.

Mr. Hall: I am sorry. I could not hear the judge's questions.

The Court: I asked the witness if it was in Everett that they subpoenaed him.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. As I understand your testimony now, Mr. Bovela would not sell you the property unless you would take over the contract; am I clear about that?

[fol. 1094] A. No. It was nothing to Mr. Bovela whether I took over the contract or not. That was beside the point. I was just buying the property from Bovela. He did not care what I did with Standard Oil.

Q. Well, did somebody tell you you could not buy the property without signing up a contract with the Standard Oil Company?

A. No. They didn't say anything about buying property.

Q. Well, you wanted the property, didn't you?

A. I wanted the property; that is right.

Q. Yes. And you did not want the contract with the Standard Oil Company?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, why didn't you buy the property without signing up with Standard Oil Company?

A. I did. If you will notice, I didn't sign any contract until over a month afterwards.

Q. Why did you sign it then?

A. You want to know?

Q. Yes.

A. All right. They wouldn't put in any restrooms; they wouldn't do anything for me, and they said: Well, they would loan me $500 to put in restrooms but I would have to sign a contract before it could go to the home office to even be considered. So I signed the contract but I didn't [fol. 1095] get my restrooms.

Q. Oh, then, you wanted to sign up with the Standard Oil, is that right?

A. No; I didn't want to, but I wanted the restrooms in the place.

Q. Oh, you did, whether you signed with Standard or not, you wanted the restrooms?

A. That is right.

Q. Were there any restrooms in there before you took over the pumps?

A. No; there was not.

Mr. Hall: That is all

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Mr. Smith, was there a definite promise made to you to put in those restrooms before you signed this agreement?

A. No. It was only understood that—

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. Not what it was understood.

The Witness: All right.

The Court: He asked for what you know.

The Witness: It was said then it had to be submitted—

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute, wait a minute. If you are going into some conversation here I would like the foundation laid.

[fol. 1096] The Court: He is talking about the same thing. He has already laid the foundation. Go ahead.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What did they say?

A. Mr. Shore said in order to submit it to the office I would have to sign the contract first, and then I would have to take my chance on whether I got the restrooms or not.

The Court: That is all.

Mr. Somerville: I have one more question.

Q. So you did sign the agreement that you produced, Government's Exhibit 72?

A. That is right.

Q. But did not get the restrooms?

A. That is right.

Mr. Somerville: That is all.

The Court: Call your next witness.

Mr. Somerville: At this point the Government offers into evidence Government's Exhibit 74 for identification.

Mr. Hall: Objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: 74 in evidence.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will call Mr. Hal K. Tanner.

HAL K. TANNER, called as a witness by plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

[fol. 1097] The Witness: Hal K. Tanner.

The Clerk: Your first name is H-a-l?

The Witness: That is right.

The Clerk: Your middle initial?

The Witness: K.

The Clerk: Your last name, T-a-n-n-e-r?

The Witness: T-a-n-n-e-r.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where is your residence, Mr. Tanner?

A. 450 South Grand Avenue in Pasadena.

Q. And your occupation or business?

A. I am division manager of the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Corporation for Los Angeles.

Q. Where is their division office located of which you are the manager?

A. 3744 Fruitland Avenue, Maywood.

Q. What is the relationship of this division office—what is the business of the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Company?

A. The Dunlop Tire and Rubber Company manufactures automobile tires, and in fact most all kinds of tires, pneumatic tires and tubes.

Q. Do they have territory representation under some brand name?

A. Yes.

[fol. 1098] Q. Where is the factory of the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Corporation located?

A. Buffalo, New York.

Q. And what is the relationship, if you will explain, Mr. Tanner, of this division here to the corporation's manufacturing plant at Buffalo?

A. This division is called a branch warehouse, where we store merchandise for sale to dealers.

Q. You are a direct representation of the factory.

A. Yes.

Q. What territory do you represent the factory in?

A. Southern California from Santa Maria, Delano and Bishop south, the entire State of Arizona, and three counties in Nevada.

Q. So that we may be clear on your products, what brand names are the tires and batteries distributed and sold under?

A. Dunlop.

Q. Where are the batteries manufactured and purchased?

A. In Vernon, California.

Q. Will you just explain to the court, Mr. Tanner, the sales organization that you have and the method and means by which you sell and distribute the Dunlop tires and batteries in the area to which you have testified?

A. We have four salesmen who solicit business from [fol. 1099] service stations, garages, tire dealers and recappers, and from their orders we make delivery out of the local warehouse by the common carriers.

Q. And those deliveries are made into what territories?

A. To the territory aforesaid mentioned.

Q. Including Southern Nevada and Arizona?

A. Yes.

Q. Are any shipments made direct from the factory or orders filled directly by shipment from Buffalo?

A. We have in the past shipped carload lots to both Arizona and California.

Q. How long have you been with the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Corporation?

A. Five and one-half years.

Q. Have you had any previous experience in the tire and battery business?

A. I have been in the tire business 27 years.

Q. I see. Are you familiar with the quality, the grade and merchandising attributes of the batteries which are sponsored by the Standard Oil Company of California and sold through their service station outlets under the brand name of Atlas?

A. Yes.

Q. In your opinion is your tire and battery merchandise-wise comparable and competitive to that Atlas brand?

[fol. 1100] A. Yes.

Q. How many salesmen do you have?

A. Four.

Q. Are those salesmen or are they not instructed, among other things, to contact and to sell or attempt to sell service station outlets?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know if those instructions include sales or attempts to sell Chevron stations, dealer operated stations handling the petroleum products and the other sponsored products of Standard Oil Company?

A. The salesmen have reported calls on Chevron stations.

Q. Do you know whether they have been successful or unsuccessful in selling these outlets?

A. Very rarely.

The Court: You mean they are sold very rarely?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: Is that what you mean?

The Witness: Yes, your honor.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Do you have any other products that your division office is responsible for the sale and distribution of other than tires or batteries?

A. Tubes, of course; and we have a line of chemical goods such as polishes, wax and so forth.

Q. Tell us, if you please, where are those waxes and [fol. 1101] polishes manufactured, then?

A. They are manufactured in the east and I am not sure exactly where.

Q. And are they shipped to you here for redistribution or directly to the retail outlets?

A. Yes; they are shipped from Buffalo to Los Angeles.

Q. For redistribution by you?

A. Yes.

Mr. Driscoll: I think that is all, your Honor. You may examine, Mr. Hall.

The Court: Cross examine.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I think you said the area that your branch covers is Southern California south of Santa Maria, three counties in Nevada and the State of Arizona, is that right?

A. South of Santa Maria, Delano, and Bishop.

Q. And three counties in Nevada, and Arizona, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. How many accounts in that area did you sell in 1947?

A. Approximately 275.

Q. And how many did you sell in 1946?

A. Approximately 300 I would say.

[fol. 1102] Q. How many did you sell in 1942?

A. I don't know. I was not with the company until late in the year.

Q. Until what?

A. I joined the company in October, 1942, and I am not—

Q. How many did you sell in 1943?

A. Not being in my present position, I can't answer that.

Q. How long has this branch of the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Company been operating in Southern California?

A. 11 years that I know of, and I am sure they were here prior to that.

Q. What other batteries, to use counsel's expression, "comparable with and competitive with" your Dunlop batteries beside Atlas batteries?

A. Oh, Goodrich.

Q. The what?

A. Goodrich, the Goodyear, Firestone.

Q. Can you name some more?

A. Exide.

Q. Aren't there any others?

A. Willard.

Q. Well, go ahead and tell me some more.

A. That is about all I can think of right now,

[fol. 1103] Mr. Hall: That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Mr. Tanner, your factory is able to supply you with an adequate supply for your merchandising needs?

A. Yes.

Mr. Driscoll: That is all.

The Court: All right, step down.

[fol. 1104] Mr. Driscoll: Call Mr. L. A. Chamberlin.

Lester A. Chamberlin, called as a witness by and on behalf of the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Lester A. Chamberlin.

The Clerk: C-h-a-m—

The Witness: b-e-r-l-i-n.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where is your residence, Mr. Chamberlin?

A. At 140 North Bowling Green Way, Los Angeles.

Q. Your occupation?

A. Salesman for Dunlop Tire & Rubber Company.

Q. Do you work with the division branch? Excuse me; you heard Mr. Tanner's testimony?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you work with the Dunlop Branch that he referred to?

A. Yes, sir; I work out of the branch.

Q. What territory is assigned to you as a salesman?

A. I cover the cities of Los Angeles, Burbank, Glendale, Huntington Park, Lynwood and Maywood.

Q. How long have you been in your present position with the Dunlop Tire & Rubber Company?

[fol. 1105] A. Approximately three and one-half years.

Q. In the course of your duties as salesman have you called upon a station located at 4346 West Pico operated by one Gilbert Olson?

A. Yes; I have called on Mr. Olson.

Mr. Driscoll: If your Honor please, I will ask to have marked for identification a document produced by the defendants under Paragraph 1, Item 35, being a dealer agreement TBA dated October, 1946, between the Standard Oil and Gilbert Olson; and a sublease dated April 1, 1945, Standard Oil as lessor, Gilbert Olson as lessee.

The Clerk: This will be 75 for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. What kind of a service station does Mr. Olson operate with respect to brand name of petroleum products?

A. Mr. Olson seems to have a standard Chevron station in which he sells gasoline and tires and accessories.

Q. When did you last call on Mr. Olson?

A. I called on Mr. Olson in approximately six weeks ago.

Q. And did you offer him the products of the Dunlop Tire & Rubber Company?

A. I did.

Q. What products, particularly, if any?

A. Mainly, I was interested in selling him Dunlop [fol. 1106] tires.

Q. And were you successful in selling him the tires?

A. No; I was not.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him at the time you called?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. Where did that take place and who was present?

A. Mr. Olson was present and it took place in his station.

Q. Will you just relate the conversation and who said what as between you?

A. Mr. Olson told me—

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Mr. Olson told me that he was familiar with the Dunlop as being an old company and that he liked the looks of our tire, but due to the fact that he would have to more or less handle it under the counter, he could not stock them in the station; he did not feel justified in doing business with them at that time.

Q. Have you called on a station at 2333 East 4th Street in Los Angeles?

A. I have.

Q. Operated by Avakian and Dworkin?

A. I have.

[fol. 1107] Q. What kind of a service station do they operate?

A. They have a new type of building, I believe recently erected by the Chevron, or by Standard Oil Company, on the corner of 4th and Soto.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will ask to have marked for identification the documents produced by the Standard Oil under Paragraph 4, Item 37, being a dealer agreement TBA dated November 15, 1945, between the Standard Oil Company and Lawrence Avakian and Harry A. Dworkin.

The Clerk: Government's 76 for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. When did you first call on this firm?

A. I first called on Avakin and Dworkin in March of 1945.

Q. And at that time do you recall what petroleum products they were handling?

A. They were handling Chevron petroleum products.

Q. Did you solicit their business?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. Were you successful in selling them any of your

A. I sold them a few tires during the year of 1945. I don't recall that particular time.

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Chamberlin, who you contacted, who you sold?

[fol. 1108] A. Yes. I sold Mr. Dworkin.

Q. And has all of your dealing been with Mr. Dworkin?

A. Mainly with Mr. Dworkin, as he apparently has charge of the purchasing at the station.

Q. I see. And subsequent to that call in 1945 did you call again?

A. Yes.

Q. And solicit business?

A. Yes. I called approximately every thirty days from that time on.

Q. And did you meet with some continued success in selling them?

A. Yes. Of course, at that time there was a tire shortage and the sales did not amount to too much, but we sold tires to Avakian and Dworkin and a few batteries through a few months of that year of 1945, and '46, and a little in '47.

Q. Do you recall how much in dollar volume you finally built that account up to?

A. During the year of 1946 we sold them approximately $264.00 of merchandise; during the year of 1947, about $163.00; and in 1948 nothing.

Q. What portion of the year of 1947 did you sell him, or did you sell him through all of the year?

A. The sales in 1947 were during the first part of the [fol. 1109] year.

Q. Approximately what date is the date on which you made your last sale to Mr. Dworkin?

A. I called on Mr. Dworkin not more than three weeks ago. Oh, my last sale?

Q. Yes.

A. I would say, roughly, in March of 1947.

Q. And your next call on him?

A. I called on him about every thirty days from that time on.

Q. At the time that you called on him—I understood you to say he discontinued buying from you in '47?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him?

A. Yes. Along about the time in March, 1946, Mr. Dworkin—.

Q. Well, now, where did that conversation take place and who was present?

A. Mr. Dworkin was present and the conversation took place in the station building.

Q. Will you relate to the court what was said by him and by you in this conversation?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Mr. Dworkin told me that the Standard Oil Company [fol. 1110] was planning to erect a new building for them and that if he continued to buy our product he was afraid that it would jeopardize the new building. So he said that he wanted to delay temporarily any further purchases. And since that time he has purchased nothing from us.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Does a part of your territory, Mr. Chamberlin, include West Los Angeles?

A. Yes; it does.

Q. Are you acquainted with a man by the name of Brillhart?

A. Yes; I am.

Q. What business is he in and where is he located?

A. Mr. Brillhart has a Chevron station and tire shop located on the corner of Santa Monica and Bundy in West Los Angeles.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will ask to have marked for identification the documents produced by the defendants under Paragraph 1, Item 36, consisting of a lease dated April 3, 1947, and a sublease of the same date between the Standard Oil Company and H. L. Brillhart, together with a dealer agreement TBA dated April 3, 1947.

The Clerk: That is Government's 77 marked for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. When did you first call on Mr. Brillhart?

[fol. 1111] A. I first called on Mr. Brillhart in March of 1945.

Q. What petroleum products and accessories was Mr. Brillhart handling at that time?

A. Mr. Brillhart was carrying Hancock gasoline and several oils, including Ring Free. He also carried Kelly tires.

Q. Did you attempt to sell him your Dunlop products?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. Specifically, what products?

A. Tires.

Q. And were you successful?

A. Not at that particular call.

Q. Did you subsequently call upon him?

A. Yes; I called on Mr. Brillhart about every thirty days thereafter.

Q. And did you at any time sell him; and if so, when?

A. Yes; I first sold him in June of 1945.

Q. Was he still at that time handling the products of Hancock?

A. Yes.

Q. When is the last time that you have sold Mr. Brillhart any tires or other items of merchandise that you sell?

A. I sold Mr. Brillhart a small order approximately six weeks ago of, I believe, half a dozen tubes.

[fol. 1112] Q. Now, between the time that you first sold Mr. Brillhart and the last time that you sold him your tires could you state to the court what volume of business you had established with them?

[fol. 1113] A. During the remainder of the year, of the year 1945, we sold Mr. Brillhart approximately $260 worth of tires and tubes and batteries; we sold him $3300 worth in 1946; $1200 in 1947, and $85 so far in 1948.

The Court: $85?

The Witness: $85.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Now, the sales in March of 1947 were for what period of that year, or, were they over the entire year?

A. The total amount of $1200 was approximately in January and February. There was six hundred and some dollars in January, and five hundred and some in February, which would come close to the total amount for the year.

Q. I see. During the balance of 1947 you sold him nothing more?

A. Practically nothing more.

Q. At the time his volume dropped off, did you call on him?

A. Yes, I have continued to call on him regularly.

Q. About when was that?

A. My last call?

Q. Your call in 1947, at the time that you have testified his volume dropped.

A. That was sometime in April.

Q. And did you have any conversation with him at that [fol. 1114] time?

A. Yes. Mr. Brillhart told me—

Q. Just a moment.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Mr. Chamberlin, we will lay this foundation first. Who was present, and where did it take place?

A. It took place in the station building with Mr. Brillhart.

Q. Now, if you will just relate to the court what was said by Mr. Brillhart and by you in this conversation?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: Mr. Brillhart stated that he was taking on the distribution of Chevron or the sale of Chevron gasoline and petroleum products, and that the Standard Oil Company preferred that he did not have any identification on the tire shop. But he said due to the fact that the tire shop was a separate unit he could continue to display other advertising than Atlas or Standard Oil products. Therefore, we were unable to—or, he was unable to display our products in the station building, and only in the tire shop.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where is the tire shop located in reference, geographically or physically, to the service station?

A. The tire shop is located in the rear of the lot, [fol. 1115] on the side street.

Q. Now, at any time in your contact and sale of Dunlop tires and batteries, and the conversations to which your have testified relative to your products with service station operators, have they expressed any dissatisfaction?

A. No, they haven't.

Mr. Driscoll: That will be all, your Honor. You may examine, Mr. Hall.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Do any of your customers ever express dissatisfaction with the products that you sell?

A. Only in isolated cases, such as may happen to any product.

Q. In very rare cases?

A. Very rarely. We have dealers that have never had an adjustment on a tire.

Mr. Hall: That is all. Thank you.

The Court: All right. Step down.

Mr. Driscoll: The government moves the admission of Exhibits marked for identification as Nos. 75, 76 and 77.

Mr. Hall: We object to each and all of the documents so offered on the ground they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: The objections are overruled. The documents will be admitted.

[fol. 1116] The Clerk: 75, 76 and 77 in evidence.

Mr. Driscoll: The government calls A. H. Shafer.

The Court: Unless he comes from a great distance and you want to get him out of the way, I suggest we wait with him until morning. This has been a long day for us all, and much longer for me. I have gotten one reporter sick now, and I don't want to get another one. So unless it is somebody who comes from a distance—

Mr. Driscoll: He does not, your Honor.

The Court: How is that?

Mr. Driscoll: He does not come from a distance.

I would like, however, at this time to have marked for identification the documents produced by Mr. Hall at the government's request with respect to the Snow Machinery Company at Roosevelt, Utah. The request is related to the testimony at page 632 of the transcript and the documents are those connected with the Snow Machinery Company which the witness Smith on page 615 of the transcript testified to.

The Court: All right. They may be marked.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 78, for identification.

Mr. Driscoll: After marking I would like then to move their admission.

Mr. Hall: The objection is made to each and all of the documents on the ground they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Are they of a different type or the same as [fol. 1117-1118] the others?

Mr. Driscoll: They are the TBA agreement and I believe a lease—

The Court: Of the same type as those already passed on?

Mr. Driscoll: Yes. The same as Exhibits 2 and 5.

The Court: All right. They may be received. The objection is overruled.

The Clerk: Exhibit 78 in evidence.

Mr. Driscoll: The witnesses are to return at 10:00 o'clock?

The Court: Yes. The witnesses here under subpoena and who have not been excused will return tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 5:05 o'clock p. m., May 17th, 1948, an adjournment was taken until 10:00 o'clock a. m., Tuesday, May 18th, 1948.)

[fols. 1119-1120] In the District Court of the United States in and for the Southern District of California, Central Division.

Honorable Leon R. Yankwich, Judge Presiding

No. 6159-Y—Civil

United States of America, Plaintiff,

vs.

Standard Oil Company of California and Standard Stations, Inc., Defendants

Reporters' Transcript of Proceedings

Los Angeles, California
Tuesday, May 18, 1948

Appearances: (As heretofore noted).

[fol. 1121] Los Angeles, California
Tuesday, May 18, 1948, 10:00 a.m.

Mr. Driscoll: Call Mr. Alfred Shaffer.

ALFRED H. SHAFFER, called as a witness by plaintiff, having been first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Alfred H. Shaffer.

The Clerk: And the spelling of your last name?

The Witness: S-h-a-f-f-e-r.

The Clerk: S-h-a-f-f-e-r, right?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Direct examination

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where is your residence, Mr. Shaffer?

A. 4000 Hubert Avenue, Los Angeles.

Q. And your business or occupation?

A. Manager, Frank W. Dillon Organization, 2525 South Grand Avenue, Los Angeles.

Q. And what is the business of Frank W. Dillon Organization?

A. Manufacturers of storage batteries.

Q. Where is their factory located?

A. 2525 South Grand Avenue, Los Angeles.

Q. Into what area geographically, Mr. Shaffer, does the [fol. 1122] Frank W. Dillon Company distribute the batteries that they manufacture?

A. California, Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, Utah, and export.

Q. Do you have a brand name?

A. Yes; "Federal."

Q. Will you please, Mr. Shaffer, inform the court what type of sales organization you have, first; and then, in what manner you solicit orders for your business, how the orders are delivered in response to orders?

A. We employ salesmen that travel in various sections in the states mentioned, and they take the orders, they are turned in to the factory, shipment is made by common carrier to the customer.

Q. How many salesmen do you have?

A. Six.

Q. And how are they distributed with respect to territory?

A. Well, we have one man that travels everything outside of the State of California, the Arizona, New Mexico,

Nevada, and Utah area, and five men operating in California.

Q. To what class of trade or type of retail outlets or outlets for resale do your salesmen contact and solicit business?

A. We sell direct to parts jobbers and service [fol. 1123] stations and other retail outlets.

Q. And the orders that the salesmen will take, for example, in Utah, are shipped directly to that retail outlet by the factory?

A. They are.

Q. And so on in the balance of the territory in which you sell?

A. They are.

Q. How long have you been with the Frank W. Dillon Organization?

A. 15 years.

Q. Are you familiar with the grade and the merchandising qualities of the batteries that are sponsored and sold and distributed—sponsored by the Standard Oil Company of California and sold and distributed to their service station outlets under the Atlas brand name?

Mr. Hall: Just a moment. I object, if the court please, on the grounds that this is irrelevant, incompetent and immaterial, and not within the pleadings.

Under the complaint the only pleading of any competitors of Standard who are prepared to and who have attempted to sell their respective parts, but are not permitted to do so, is found in paragraph 26. Now, under that paragraph this is confined to "Numerous manufacturers and producers of petroleum products and automotive ac- [fol. 1124] cessories located in states outside the Western area."

This witness has shown that his business is located within the Western area; that his manufacturing plant is located in Los Angeles. Thus there is no pleading in this case that Standard contracts prevented any of Standard's competitors located within the Western area from selling their products; for there is no allegation that any such competitors located within the Western area were ever prepared to or attempted to sell their products to dealers handling Standard's products. Hence testimony that some concern located in the Western area was prepared to or attempted to sell its products to a dealer handling Standard's products is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and outside the issues framed by the pleadings upon which we have relied.

And I may say, in addition to that, that this is no new point to the Government; that in a memorandum that I handed in to the court last June in connection with motions argued at that time this specific feature of their pleading was pointed out.

26 is the only paragraph that describes these competitors who, it is alleged, were shut out, and those are competitors located outside of the Western area.

[fol. 1125] Mr. Driscoll: If the court please, one of the alleged effects of the operation of the contracts of Standard Oil which are here in question is the elements of competition between the defendants Standard and Standard Stations, Inc., and other producers and manufacturers of petroleum products and other producers and manufacturers of automotive accessories who sell and retail and distribute their products within the Western area.

Now, clearly this manufacturer and this producer of batteries is in competition with Standard of California and Standard Stations, Inc. in the distribution and sale of its products within the Western area.

Mr. Hall: Let us take paragraph 26.

The Court: Just a minute, Mr. Hall. The point that Mr. Hall is making is this, that under the allegations of paragraph 26 you lay down the limitation which he argued, because that paragraph says:

> "Numerous manufacturers and producers of petroleum products and automotive accessories located in states outside the Western Area other than those producers and manufacturers whose products are sponsored by defendant Standard, are prepared to and have attempted to sell their respective brands of petroleum products," and so forth, "to retail outlets [fol. 1126] acquired and controlled by said defendants within the Western Area. The said retail outlets, however, by reason of the obligations of their contractual," and so forth, "have not been permitted to purchase such products . . ."

In other words, his contention is that by this allegation you have limited the restraint to a flow of products outside of the area and into the area, and did not concern yourself with the monopolistic effects so far as dealers residing within the area are concerned.

Mr. Driscoll: That would be true, your Honor, insofar as the manufacture and the production of these accessories and their flow into commerce from outside of the Western Area is concerned in competition, and into the Western Area, in competition with the defendants, but in paragraph 34(b), as one of the alleged effects of the contracts, the competition, there is no reference to the source of the sponsor of the products in competition with Standard-sponsored products, "eliminating the competition between manufacturers and producers of defendants Standard's and Standard Stations, Inc.'s sponsored products and other manufacturers and producers of products of like utility and quality . . . in the Western Area."

We do not rely in this testimony upon paragraph 26 as being a producer and manufacturer outside of the Western [fol. 1127] Area shipping in commerce into the Western Area, but here is a local manufacturer and producer who is in competition with the sponsored products of Standard Oil and is being limited by the contracts.

Mr. Dixon: I might add this, your Honor: It is obvious in this——

The Court: Just a minute. I will allow you this time to do it——

Mr. Dixon: Pardon me.

The Court: —but I don't like more than one counsel on each side to argue a minor point. When it comes to a concluding argument it is different, if you divide your time, although yesterday you noticed the difficulty a judge has when he allows two counsel to argue on the same side and one happens to be a lady, so that you cannot contradict her with the same equanimity as you can a man. But on these matters I think it will be well to limit you one to a side.

Mr. Hall: May I add to my objection?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hall: For a long time in this case we were doubtful as to what the competition was that we were supposed to have lessened. When the government answered our interrogatories it was perfectly clear, and then for the first time learned that the competition that we were supposed to have shut out was the competition of other manufacturers and [fol. 1128] producers, other suppliers.

Now, we then turn to the complaint and we try to find some allegation in the complaint of who those suppliers, manufacturers and producers were who were ready, willing and able to sell, who wanted to compete, who tried to compete, and who because of these alleged restraints were shut out, according to the government.

The only allegation in the complaint is in paragraph 26. Nowhere else in the complaint is there any statement that any manufacturer or producer was ready and willing or tried to sell in competition with Standard Oil Company of California.

So when we look at paragraph 34 and it speaks of the effects, we naturally assume and have assumed that the producers and manufacturers referred to in paragraph 34 are the producers and manufacturers referred to in paragraph 26, and those are producers and manufacturers located outside the Western Area. As my very good friend, Mr. Cosgrove, frequently remarks, "the complaint in the case is the charter which the plaintiff must follow." And that is particularly true in a case of this character. This is no new point and no surprise to the government. They knew what we were relying upon, because we set it up in the brief filed with the court last June. We interpret the complaint in that way, and that is the only reasonable interpretation of the complaint, that we are not lessening the [fol. 1129] competition of suppliers located in the Western Area, because there is no allegation in the complaint that there were any suppliers who were trying to sell their products to our dealers and would have sold their products to our dealers but for these contracts, except the producers and manufacturers referred to in paragraph 26.

Mr. Driscoll: If your Honor please, in the first place, if there was doubt in your mind——

The Court: Just because you are standing up and because you are examining the witness does not mean you can deprive the defendant of the opening and closing argument. We can't have zigzagging here.

Mr. Driscoll: I would appreciate one further word, however, your Honor.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Driscoll: I should like to point out, in answer to the statement with respect to the surprise of the defendant, that at the time we answered their interrogatories we listed these manufacturers. This specific manufacturer, as well as many and numerous other manufacturers manufacturing within the Western Area were listed; and this being an effects case, certainly we should be allowed the latitude of offering all of the testimony that is available as to the effect of the operation of these contracts upon all of the competition with the sponsored products of Standard Oil.

The Court: All right. Now, I will let you have the last [fol. 1130] sentence, Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall: I think there certainly is surprise about this because while it may be true that in his answer to interrogatories counsel has listed certain suppliers in the Western Area, and I don't recall that that is the case, but if that be the case, I call the court's attention to this, that we were not furnished with these answers until the very eve of the trial.

The Court: All right. Gentlemen, if you were about to open an entirely new field I would be inclined to leave it out, but I am inclined to allow this to go in for two reasons. The first is the fundamental one which relates to procedure, and that is that this is a case in equity and it seeks a restraint upon future use of certain types of contracts; or, rather, restraint upon the use of certain conditions in certain contracts. And then because of that we have the firm rule in equity that a chancellor has the right to hear all of the evidence up to and including the time of the trial and the decision, whether set forth in the complaint or not. In other words, in equity it is not necessary to bring in supplemental complaints, which supplemental complaints recite facts which have occurred since that time, because the chancellor must decide the conditions as they existed as of the time. We have been confronted with that situation at [fol. 1131] all times. In a hearing that I had in the Northern Division in Fresno last Friday, an identical situation arose. I was supposed to hear an application for a preliminary injunction in a rent case. However, realizing that the issues could be determined upon a hearing upon the merits, I induced counsel to agree that that hearing of mine should be a hearing upon the merits, so that I would be spared the additional time or another judge would be spared the additional time of hearing the same matter over again and making two sets of findings. They agreed to that, and the situation was that the giving of a notice to tenants, which the government wanted to stop, was withdrawn. That was done subsequent to the filing of the complaint and was induced by the filing of the complaint. So I heard the matter on its merits, and I suggested that if counsel do that I would allow them time to file an answer pleading that particular occurrence, although it was not necessary.

So we have here the identical situation where, granting the full scope of the contention made, the court within reasonable limits, and not abusing its discretion has the power to allow matters which are not pleaded, but which, although occurring subsequent to the time, bear upon the matter and allow them to be testified to.

There is one other point, and that is prompted by the language of Mr. Justice Rutledge in the case of Mandeville Island Farms, Inc. v. American Crystal Sugar Company, [fol. 1132] decided on May 10, 1948, which arose from this District. Judge Rutledge mentions the fact, although decisions in some of the earlier cases are to the contrary, upon which great reliance was placed at the time, that whether a restraint or monopoly resulted it must be determined by a consideration of all of the facts relating to the matter, whether they are intrastate or interstate, in order to see whether they are a part of what the German psychology calls the Gestalt. There is no English word to express it exactly, but the best would be configuration—the configuration of the entire thing.

I will read this paragraph. You are probably both familiar with the opinion, which at the present time exists in what we call the official slip decisions, and I quote from page 13, where it is stated, "In view of this evolution."—it speaks of the evolution of the concept, the more recent concept, which abandoned that rigid distinction between intrastate and interstate activity, and the doctrine of stoppage, and the like, and which this opinion repudiates. Commencing with the quotation again:

> "In view of this evolution, the inquiry whether the restraint occurs in one phase or another, interstate or intrastate, of the total economic process is now merely a preliminary step, except for those situations in which [fol. 1133] no aspect of or substantial effect upon interstate commerce can be found in the sum of the facts presented. For, given a restraint of the type forbidden by the Act, though arising in the course of intrastate or local activities, and a showing of actual or threatened effect upon interstate commerce, the vital question becomes whether the effect is sufficiently substantial and adverse to Congress' paramount policy declared in the Act's terms to constitute a forbidden consequence. If so, the restraint must fall, and the injuries it inflicts upon others become remediable under the Act's prescribed methods, including the treble-damage provision.

"The Shreveport doctrine did not contemplate that restraints or burdens become or remain immune merely because they take place as events prior to the point in time when interstate commerce begins. Exactly the contrary is comprehended, for it is the effect upon that commerce, not the moment when its cause arises, which the doctrine was fashioned to reach.

"Obviously therefore the criteria"——

Well, that is not necessary. Then in the footnote he refers to that group of cases, the Industrial Association case, the [fol. 1134] Morrin case, the Local 167 case, and the like, and United States v. Hutcheson, in which the court distinguished between strictly local activities and the like, and the case of United States v. Frankfort Distilleries, 324 U. S. 293, in which the principle of those cases is reasserted.

[fol. 1135] Now the point that occurs to me is this: Granting that these were not pleaded specifically, they are clearly within the issue, although they may be local in character, because local practices, if they result in monopolizing the trade, may have an effect on the volume of the commerce which flows into the state.

As a matter of fact the labor union cases are clear illustrations of purely local activities which may affect the flow of commerce. In the case I decided many years ago, the Heating case, involving the agreement between contractors and labor unions not to work on equipment used in the installation of heating systems, I held—and, incidentally, the ruling decided the controversy, because, while the opinion I wrote at the time—I do not have it in front of me but it is easily obtained—as soon as I decided that it was a violation of the law the case ended on the pleadings.

But in that case the sole alleged restraint was an agreement to work only on certain products, and I held that the allegations of the indictment in that case were sufficient to show that although the agreement be local, its effect would be on stopping the flow of materials from the outside or lessening it because of the agreement not to work upon it.

That same principle was approved by the Supreme Court in what is known as the Lumber Products case. [fol. 1136] That was the case tried in San Francisco. That is not the title of the case in the high court. That case involved the agreement between the lumber workers and the lumber industry to work only on certain types of products. And the Circuit Court of Appeals, in an opinion written by Justice Denman, held that that Agreement was in effect a boycott on outside products and was within the limitation of the Statute. The case was reversed upon an instruction, but in the opinion itself the court reaffirmed the principle which really goes back to the Stone Cutters' case, way back 25 or 30 years ago, where the courts held that a refusal to work by stone cutters on certain products which originate outside the state, and where it was intended after the product was finished to return it into interstate commerce, was an interference and could be made a subject of injunctive relief against the union and a suit for damages.

I have taken more time than might seem necessary to explain this because I wanted to indicate that I do not intend to open up the flood gates, as it were, and allow matters which are not needed to come in, but to limit to the extent of showing in transactions such as these, I am willing to adopt a liberal attitude for the reasons I have indicated.

Mr. Hall: I did not want there to be any misunderstand- [fol. 1137] ing, your Honor, about our position. I was not raising an interstate commerce point here. It was purely a pleading point and a point showing prejudice to the defendants. If the Government should now change its course as mapped out by the pleadings, and say to us, not only not only were competitors located outside the Western area shut out but competitors located within the Western area shut out. In reply to that we say to the Government: You haven't said anything about competitors within the Western area. You haven't said that there were any within the Western area and, therefore, there is no proof to be offered with respect to competitors located within the Western area.

Now, I do not want to reargue the matter, but your Honor's reference to the Crystal Sugar case indicated that your Honor may have gained a misapprehension as to the purport of my point. It is simply that we are prejudiced now at this late stage by having the Government come in and say: "Oh, not only are the competitors outside the Western area that we are talking about, but we are claiming that there were competitors within the Western area."

The Court: All right. I think I have expressed my view fully. If you come to a question of pleading, I think the litigants in an action are chargeable with knowledge that the court in any equity case, may consider facts showing the conditions as they exist at the present time, [fol. 1138] whether they are pleaded or not.

Furthermore, I believe that as to local restraint evidence is not only permissible but flows from the very nature of the transaction, because if we assume that these agreements had the effect of restricting interstate commerce and restricting competition in the particular product, then of necessity that effect would apply also to competitors within the state; and if a monopolistic practice has that effect, then the mere fact that the restraint alleged expresses itself by curtailment of local activities does not matter; because, as this last case teaches and all the others teach, if it is a restraint of interstate commerce, then the monopoly may be rendered more unreasonable, to use the word referable to the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, by a showing that it closes the door to inquiry, whether they are local or whether they are on the outside; and if that is true, then we can receive testimony as to the effect of the practices.

Mr. Hall: Well, I have stated my position, your Honor.

The Court: So we have all stated it.

Mr. Hall: It is a serious point with me and may I, for the purpose of the record, designate the objection that I have made as "Standard Oil's objection No. 1," because it will save space in the record when I urge the same objection hereafter if that may be the term to so designate [fol. 1139] it?

The Court: That is all right. I have no objection to that being done.

All right, I will overrule the objection.

Now, Mr. Bargion, have you got the question?

The Reporter: Yes; I have it, your Honor.

The Court: All right, will you read it?

(Pending question read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Are you familiar with the grade and the merchandising qualities of the batteries that are sponored and sold and distributed—sponsored by the Standard Oil Company of California and sold and distributed to their service station outlets under the Atlas brand name?")

The Court: All right, you may answer.

A. I am.

Mr. Driscoll: I am sorry. What was the answer, Mr. Reporter?

The Witness: "I am." "I am."

Q. Is the battery that is manufactured and distributed by the Frank W. Dillon Organization under the Federal brand name comparable to and competitive with the Atlas brand sponsored and distributed and sold by Standard Oil Company?

A. It is.

Q. Do you distribute and sell your batteries to any [fol. 1140] jobber accounts within the area?

A. We do.

Q. Where are those jobber accounts located?

A. Well, we have jobbing accounts in California; we also have them in the various states that I have already mentioned.

Q. And the batteries manufactured here by you are distributed to them in much the same manner or the same manner as the retail outlets to which you testified?

A. The same manner as the retail outlets.

Q. Do you know, Mr. Shaffer, if any of the service station trade that you have testified your salesmen solicit are the stations which are operated by Chevron operators for the Standard Oil Company?

Mr. Hall: I interpose Standard Oil's objection No. 1.

The Court: Overruled.

A. We have sold some Chevron stations.

Mr. Driscoll: I think that will be all.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. In the area you have mentioned what other batteries compete with batteries beside Atlas batteries?

A. Well, Hobbs, States, National, Delco, Willard, Exide, Globe. That is about all.

Q. Is that all?

[fol. 1141] A. There may be some various ones I don't recall.

Q. And have those batteries that you have mentioned been competing with your battery for a number of years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To how many retail outlets did you sell your batteries in the states of California, Arizona, Nevada, and Utah during the year 1946?

A. I can give you that in percentage figures rather than dollar volume. In California, in 1946, approximately 47½ per cent were sold to service stations.

Q. What was the percentage in 1947 in California?

A. 33⅓ per cent.

Q. What number of service station outlets or garage outlets in the three states that I mentioned carried your products in 1946?

A. Without making a check of the records I couldn't give you that at this time.

Q. Well, give me approximately.

A. I would say that approximately 225 service stations are sold in the State of California.

Q. Well, I was asking you about California, Nevada, Arizona, and Utah.

A. Well, I have to break it down because my percentages are broken down in the same manner.

Q. Yes.

[fol. 1142] A. I would say in the other states that about five per cent of the business that is done in those three other states are done with service stations, the rest with jobbers.

Q. And in California your percentage to the service stations is what?

A. Our percentage of service stations in California was 47 per cent in '46—47½, and 35⅓ in '47.

Q. And that was percentage of your total business?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Do your jobbers sell to service stations also?

A. They do.

Q. And that would be true for the states you mentioned outside of California?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you have jobbers in California?

A. We do.

Q. And those jobbers would sell to service stations?

A. Also, yes, sir.

Q. So that in giving me your percentages of the production handled directly through jobbers you were not attempting to give me a percentage as to the retail outlets handling your product, were you?

A. No. All I was giving you was the direct sales made by our own organization to service stations.

Q. Do you sell your batteries in Washington and Oregon?

[fol. 1143] A. We do not.

Q. Do you sell them in Idaho?

A. We have. However, we do not travel a man that distance at the present time.

Q. How long has your company been selling batteries in the states of California, Arizona, Nevada, and Utah?

A. Since 1932.

Q. Did it sell in any of those states before 1932?

A. I cannot answer that. I did not work for the company prior to that time. However, the company has been in business since 1921, I believe.

Q. Have you any records showing how many retail outlets your jobbers sell to?

A. No; I have not.

Q. In the various states?

A. No; no figures available.

Q. But you do have direct sales other than sales to jobbers, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. You could give us those figures as to the number of outlets?

A. I could; yes, sir.

Q. Now, taking the overall number of outlets, not only service stations but all other types of trade, considering your direct sales not to jobbers, how many outlets did you [fol. 1144] sell to in the year 1946 in the states of California, Arizona, Nevada, and Utah?

A. I would have to check before I could answer that question.

Q. Well, give me an approximation.

A. You want—may I ask you this question?

Q. Surely; you may ask me.

A. You want the sales direct to service stations, the number of service stations that were sold direct, exclusive of jobbers, is that correct?

Q. No, no. You misunderstood me. I want to put jobbers to one side for a moment.

A. Yes.

Q. And I want to know, aside from your sales to jobbers, how many units, how many retail outlets you sold your batteries to in those states in 1946; and by retail outlets I mean all kinds of retail outlets, stations, garages, dealers, everything else you may have sold to.

A. You just said "those states." You mean the states outside of California?

Q. No; I mean California, Arizona, Nevada, and Utah.

A. Well, I would say that in that number, the total number of service stations and garages and retail outlets that we have sold, exclusive of jobbers, would probably be around 250 to 260 accounts.

[fol. 1145] Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: Any redirect?

Mr. Driscoll: Yes, your Honor.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. You have testified, Mr. Shaffer, that in 1946 your sales to service stations represented 47 per cent of your business?

A. That is correct.

Q. And in 1947 represented approximately 33 per cent?

A. That is correct.

Q. You have had, then, a drop of approximately 14 per cent in the sales to service stations?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, you have also testified that you have sold some Chevron stations?

A. That is correct.

Q. During what period of time was that?

A. In 1946, and we have sold a few stations in 1947.

Q. Now, have the service stations, Chevron stations which you have sold in 1947, as compared to 1946, been less or more?

A. They have been less.

Q. Would a part of the 14 per cent drop in your business be attributed to the loss of those Chevron accounts?

[fol. 1146] A. Some of it.

Q. Yes. Do you have an adequate supply of batteries to meet all of your orders that your salesmen take and your merchandising requirements?

A. We do.

Q. Has the fact that you have discontinued selling in Idaho had anything to do with your manufacturing capacity?

A. Well, we have curtailed production. We have production available if sales were made.

Q. I see. As to your sales organization, sales force, are you responsible for their direction?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you expanding your efforts to acquire retail outlets?

A. We are.

Mr. Driscoll: I think that is all.

Recross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I think you said you had no records and did not know what the outlets were that your jobbers sold to, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Driscoll: You may be excused. Mr. Leon Gill.

[fol. 1147] LEON B. GILL, called as a witness by plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?
The Witness: Leon B. Gill.
The Clerk: Leon B., and how do you spell your last name?
The Witness: G-i-l-l, Junior.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Gill?
A. 8553 Saturn Street, Los Angeles.
Q. Are you employed?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. By whom are you employed and in what capacity?
A. I am with the Frank W. Dillon Organization, 2525 South Grand. I am a salesman.
Q. What territory do you sell for them?
A. Well, I cover the Arizona, Utah, Nevada, and sections of California.
Q. What products do you sell?
A. The Federal storage batteries.
Q. Storage batteries?
A. Yes.
Q. And under what brand name?
[fol. 1148] A. Federal.
Q. How long have you been employed by the Frank W. Dillon Company?
A. About 15 months, 14 months.
Q. Where were you employed prior to that time?
A. Well, I was employed by them prior to that time in 1942 and part of '43, and I left and joined the service.
Q. In the course of your duties as salesman have you ever called on a service station located at Wellton, Arizona called Bob's Service Station?
A. Yes.
Q. When was that?
A. That was February the 17th, this year.
Q. What kind of a service station is this? What products does it sell?
A. Well, it is a Chevron service station; it advertises Atlas tires and batteries.

Mr. Hall: May it be deemed, your Honor, that Standard Oil's objection No. 1 runs to all this testimony?

The Court: All right, it is so understood.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. How did you happen to call on this dealer and what occurred at the time that you called on him?

A. Well, I was driving from Yuma, going to Casa Grande, and we didn't have distribution in that particular area [fol. 1149] and it looked like a pretty good location, so I dropped in to talk to him.

Q. Had you known the operator of that station prior thereto?

A. No.

Q. Who did you ask for?

A. Well, I asked for Bob, the manager and owner.

Q. Then what happened?

A. Well, I found him, he was in the station, and I introduced myself and told him I was representing Federal storage batteries. He said——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. I object to this as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. When did this conversation take place, if you recall?

A. In February, this year.

Q. Was anyone there besides you and the manager Bob?

A. There were just two other people, who were not in the conversation. They were having their automobile fixed. They were tourists.

Q. Now will you relate what was said by Bob and what was done?

A. I introduced myself and told him I was representing the Federal Battery Company. I said I had an interesting program to offer him, price and quality and so [fol. 1150] forth. He said, "No doubt that you do, but I am not interested. I am tied up with the program here by Standard and my time and your time can both be saved. There is no point in giving me a sales talk."

Q. Are you acquainted with a service station called Glacier Service Station operated at Big Pine?

A. I am.

Q. Do you know who operates that station?
A. Jimmy Nikolaus.
Q. Are you acquainted with him?
A. Yes; I am.
Q. When did you first become acquainted with him?
A. In May of 1946.
Q. May of 1946?
A. Yes.
Q. And what were the circumstances of your acquaintance with him at that time?
A. Well, I was working up at Glacier Lodge at that time. That is a lodge 11 miles up the canyon from Big Pine. I had just been released from the navy and I went up in the mountains more or less as a lark. He and I became quite well acquainted at that time.
Q. Has that acquaintance extended over since then?
A. Yes, but it was mainly for three or four months there. However, we are familiar with each other and speak and [fol. 1151] so forth. We do not correspond. It is not a close relationship.
Q. What business is Mr. Nikolaus in up there did you say?
A. He is the Chevron service station dealer.
Q. After you took employment with the Frank W. Dillon Company did you ever call on Mr. Nikolaus to sell him your product?
A. Yes.
Q. About when was that, do you know?
A. It was May 5th of 1947.
Q. Were you successful of selling him some of your products at that time?
A. Yes; I was.
Q. Did you have a conversation with him at the sale?
A. Yes.
Q. Was anyone there besides you and he?
A. No, sir.
Q. And where did it take place?
A. In his service station.
Q. And what was said, if you will?
A. Well, I told him——

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.
The Court: Overruled.

A. I told Mr. Nikolaus that I was working for the Frank W. Dillon Organization and we manufactured storage [fol. 1152] batteries. He asked me, he said, "Are they good storage batteries?" I said, "They are." He said, "All right; I will order some." I mean that is the relationship between us.

Q. Did he have any other brand of batteries on hand at that time?

A. I didn't see any other brand.

Q. Was anything said by him with respect to his supply of batteries?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. That didn't enter the discussion, supply.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. And did you thereafter contact Mr. Nikolaus for the sale of batteries?

A. Yes. I phoned him in August of the same year.

Q. That would be 1947?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you ever talked to Mr. Nikolaus over the phone previously?

A. Yes.

Q. Were those phone conversations frequent or infrequent?

A. I would say frequent.

Q. From whence did you call him?

A. I called him from Los Angeles from our factory.

Q. How did you place this phone conversation with him [fol. 1153] to him?

A. Well, I called the long distance operator and asked her for Jimmy Nikolaus Glacier Service at Big Pine, California, Inyo County.

Q. Did he answer the phone?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know who answered?

A. No. One of his employees there.

Q. And what did you say then?

A. I asked——

Mr. Hall: Objected to as no proper foundation laid and also hearsay.

The Court: Well, the hearsay objection will be overruled.
Mr. Driscoll: I am laying the foundation, your Honor.
The Court: You may lay a better foundation.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. And what did you say to this voice that answered the phone, if anything?
A. I asked to speak to Jimmy Nikolaus.
Q. And what then happened?
A. Jimmy Nikolaus came to the phone.
Q. Did you recognize his voice?
A. Oh, yes.
Q. And when was this?
A. This was in August; in fact, it was August 1st,
[fol. 1154] 1947.
Q. And did you then have a telephone conversation with Mr. Nikolaus?
A. I did.
Q. Will you please relate to the court what was said by you and what was said by him?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.
The Court: Overruled.

A. I asked him where were some more battery orders. And he said business had been a little slow, for one thing; second, he said that he had better not order any more of my batteries; that it would be better for him to handle the batteries offered to him by the company.
Q. Did he say anything further with respect to——
A. Well, he said that the company frowned on, as he might call, off-brand merchandise in his service station.
Q. And since that time have you attempted to sell Mr. Nikolaus any batteries?
A. No. It was just left by him that if he were in a position to buy some more from me, he would.

Mr. Driscoll: All right, that is all. You may examine, Mr. Hall.

The Court: All right. Cross examine.
Mr. Hall: You may step down.
The Court: Pardon?
[fol. 1155] Mr. Hall: That is all.
The Court: We will take a short recess.

(Short recess.)

[fol. 1156] The Court: Proceed.

Mr. Thody: The government calls Mr. Robert W. Hinton.

ROBERT W. HINTON, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: Take the stand, please. What is your name, please?

The Witness: Robert W. Hinton.

The Clerk: The last name?

The Witness: H-i-n-t-o-n, Hinton.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Hinton?

A. 162 West Elm Drive, Phoenix, Arizona.

Mr. Hall: What was the name of the place?

The Witness: Phoenix, Arizona.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Have you been employed by the Denton Tire Company in Phoenix, Arizona?

A. I have.

Q. During what periods were you employed by this company?

A. July 15, 1947 through March 15, 1948.

Q. In what capacity did you serve with the Denton Tire Company?

A. Wholesale salesman.

[fol. 1157] Q. Do you know what business the Denton Tire Company is engaged in in the city of Phoenix?

A. They are wholesale tire, battery and auto accessory TBA line distributors.

Q. Do you know what brands of such merchandise they sell?

A. I do.

Q. What are they?

A. They handle the Gillette line of tires, Exide batteries, the Hollingshead and Whiz line of chemicals.

Q. Do you know in what area, sales area, the Denton Tire Company markets its products?

A. They market in what is commonly called there as the Phoenix area.

Q. What would the Phoenix area comprise?

A. Oh, everything north of Florence and west of Tucson, I would say. It is the valley, Salt River Valley, taking in Mesa, Tempe, Phoenix, Globe, Superior, and so forth, and so on.

Mr. Hall: Will you speak a little louder, please, Mr. Hinton?

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Would you approximate what radius in miles that would cover, outside of the city of Phoenix?

A. It covers in the neighborhood of 750 miles, if you make the complete loop.

[fol. 1158] Q. What was the nature of your duties as salesman with the Denton Tire Company?

A. Calling on garages, service stations, and outlets for retail distribution.

Q. Did you spend all of your time in this type of work?

A. Yes.

Q. Approximately how many calls a day did you make to such accounts?

A. Approximately ten.

Q. How did you visit these accounts?

A. By car.

Q. Did you call on Chevron stations?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you call upon the station located at Indian School Road and North Central Avenue, in Phoenix, Arizona?

A. I did.

Mr. Thody: The government wishes, your Honor, to have marked as a Government's exhibit for identification the distributor agreement with Standard Oil Company of California and Rudy Glenn, dated June 10, 1941, which was produced in response to Government's subpoena No. 1, paragraph 1, No. 59.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 79, marked for identification.

By Mr. Thody:

[fol. 1159] Q. Approximately when did you call on this station?

A. August, 1947.

Q. What was the purpose of your call?

A. To solicit the dealer account for the products which I was handling.

Q. Did they include all the products you have described?

A. Tires, tubes, batteries, and accessories.

Q. Did you make any sales to this station at that time?

A. No.

Q. Did you have any conversation with anybody concerning the reasons you didn't sell?

A. Yes.

Q. To whom did you talk?

A. Rudy Glenn himself.

Q. And who is Rudy Glenn?

A. The operator of the station.

Q. When did those conversations take place?

A. During business hours of that period, near early August, 1947.

Q. Where were those conversations held?

A. At the establishment.

Q. And what was said at that time?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

[fol. 1160] The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: I beg your pardon?

The Court: You may answer.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. You may answer.

A. Well, it was pointed out that although our lines were satisfactory and first-grade, that it was against the principles of the terms of his business agreement to handle other than Atlas products.

Q. Who stated that?

A. Mr. Glenn.

Q. Have you ever called upon the station located at Central Avenue and Mohave Streets in Phoenix, Arizona?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you call upon such station?

A. During the same period, August and September, 1947.

Q. Over what period of time?

A. I made weekly calls, made weekly visits around the area.

Q. Did you sell any merchandise?

A. During the early period to that particular locality, yes.

Q. When you say "the early period," what period of time do you mean?

A. For the summer months of 1947.

Q. What products did you sell?

[fol. 1161] A. Tires and tubes.

Q. Approximately how many did you sell?

A. I should say in the neighborhood of 8 to 10 over a two-months period perhaps.

Q. Did you sell him any products after September, 1947?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever have any discussions with anybody concerning the difference in volume of the sales you previously made and the fact that you did not sell afterward?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With whom did you have such discussion?

A. One of the partners of the organization named Frank Von Gelder.

Mr. Hall: I didn't get the name.

The Witness: Frank Von Gelder.

Mr. Hall: Spell it, please.

The Witness: I believe it is capital V-o-n capital G-e-l-d-e-r, I believe that is right.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Now, is or is not Mr. Von Gelder the person that you had previously sold your merchandise to?

A. He is.

Q. When did these conversations take place, that you have described?

A. In the late summer months, September, leading up into October, perhaps.

[fol. 1162] Q. Where did they take place?

A. At the station at Mohave and Central.

Q. What was the nature of the conversations? What was said by you and him?

A. We had been able to do some business during the early part there due to shortages, I would presume, but after

Q. We don't care what you presume, Mr. Hinton.

A. I am sorry.

Q. What was said?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Proceed.

The Witness: Pardon?

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: Mr. Von Gelder explained that his source of supply through Atlas had suddenly been increased and it would be impossible for him to do any further business with us in that line.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Did you see any Atlas tires at his place of business when you first made your original sales?

A. Some.

Q. Did you see Atlas tires at his place of business when you first made your original sales?

A. Some.

Q. Did you see Atlas tires at his place of business [fol. 1163] in September, at the time the conversation took place which you have enumerated?

A. In large quantities.

Q. In large quantities. Were the quantities larger in September than they were in June?

A. They were.

Q. At any time was any dissatisfaction expressed to you concerning the merchandise you had previously sold?

A. None whatsoever.

Mr. Thody: The government moves at this time, your Honor, that Government's Exhibit No. 79, for identification, be admitted into evidence.

Mr. Hall: We object to each and all of the documents so offered on the ground they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: 79 admitted into evidence.

Mr. Thody: I ask that the dealer agreement T.B.A. dated September 11, 1946, with Standard Oil Company of California and Francis J. Woods, which was produced in response to subpoena No. 1, paragraph 1, Item No. 61, be marked for identification.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 80, for identification.

Mr. Thody: Have you ever sold or attempted to sell your products to a station located at Van Buren Avenue and 36th Avenue in Phoenix, Arizona?

[fol. 1164] A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you make such solicitation?

A. I believe it was February, 1948.

Mr. Thody: The government at this time, your Honor, wishes to have marked for identification the dealer's agreement TBA, dated January 22, 1947, between Standard Oil Company and Lawrence Wetzel; to be marked as a Government's exhibit, for identification.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 81, for identification.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Whom did you visit at this time at that station?

A. Mr. Wetzel.

Q. Do you recall his name, his full name?

A. Well, he is more or less known just as Larry.

Q. When was it you called upon him?

A. In February, 1948.

Q. What products did you attempt to sell him?

A. Our complete TBA line.

Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful?

A. Unsuccessful.

Q. Were any reasons given to you as to your being unsuccessful in making this sale?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: It was stated——

[fol. 1165] By Mr. Thody:

Q. Answer "Yes" or "No."

A. No, sir—or, I am sorry.

Q. Were or were not any reasons given to you for your inability?

A. Reasons were given.

Q. Did you have any conversations concerning these reasons?

A. A short one.

Q. And that was when?

A. At that same time?
Q. And who was present?
A. Myself and Mr. Wetzel.
Q. And what was said?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.
The Court: Overruled.
The Witness: It was stated that it would be against business, better business judgment as far as he was concerned to make any endeavor to deviate from his Atlas TBA.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Were any further discussions had with him at that time?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you notice any products other than Atlas sold at that station at that particular time?
A. No, sir.
Q. Have you visited the station located at 7th Avenue [fol. 1166] and Heatherbrae in Phoenix at any time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When have you visited this station?
A. The latter part of 1947 through February, 1948.
Q. Approximately how many times have you visited the station?
A. Perhaps a dozen.
Q. Was that with the purpose in mind of selling your products?
A. Soliciting business.
Q. And have you ever sold them any products?
A. I recapped two tires for them.
Q. Would you describe the circumstances concerning the selling of these tires?
A. Oh, I had made——

Mr. Hall: Objected to as irrelevant and immaterial, and no proper foundation laid.
The Court: You had better lay the foundation.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. When was it you sold these two recapped tires?
A. In February of '48.
Q. How was this sale initiated?
A. The operator placed a call to our establishment and requested that we pick up two tires for recap.

Q. Did you follow through on this order?

[fol. 1167] A. I did.

Q. Did you visit the station?

A. I did.

Q. And when did you visit it?

A. In February.

Q. Have you ever sold any other merchandise to this station?

A. No, sir.

Q. To whom did you talk at the station?

A. I believe his name is John Lentner and——

Mr. Hall: I couldn't hear the name.

The Witness: —John Hogue.

Mr. Hall: Will you read that last, please?

(The answer referred to was read.)

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Have you ever tried or endeavored to sell him your line of merchandise, your new merchandise?

A. I have.

Q. Upon what occasions?

A. On numerous visits after the station was opened, which to the best of my knowledge right now is the latter part of 1947, through the time we have just mentioned.

Q. Well, have you been successful or unsuccessful?

A. Unsuccessful.

Q. —in selling your new merchandise?

[fol. 1168] A. Unsuccessful.

Q. Have you ever had any conversations with Mr. Lentner concerning your inability to sell new merchandise?

A. I have.

Q. When did such conversations take place?

A. During the aforementioned period.

Q. Do you recall any specific time?

A. As I said, I made weekly calls to all of my stations and endeavored each time to solicit business.

Q. Well, at any of those times were there any reasons given to you why you were unsuccessful?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. Objected to as no proper foundation laid, irrelevant and immaterial. It hasn't been shown who this station belonged to or that it was a Chevron station.

The Court: I think you had better lay a better foundation.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. What brand of gasoline was sold at this station?

A. Chevron.

Q. Were any products advertised?

A. Atlas products.

Q. Where were these products advertised?

A. On banners and through standards, tires placed in there for display.

[fol. 1169] Q. What were such advertisements,—what products?

A. Atlas tires and tubes.

Q. When was your conversation that you referred to?

A. I would say in February of 1948.

Q. Approximately when in February?

A. The early part.

Q. Were any other persons present other than you and Mr. Lentner?

A. Well, it was a partnership there of Lentner and Hogue, and the three of us were in the discussion.

Q. And what was said?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as no proper foundation laid, irrelevant and immaterial, and hearsay.

The Court: I think he has laid the foundation as best he can. Overruled.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. What was said?

A. That it was not feasible for them to handle our merchandise, as they had a contract with their petroleum supplier which covered the TBA fully.

Q. Now, on these products that you were selling for the Denton Tire Company at this time, do you know where shipments were received from for Gillette tires?

A. Los Angeles.

Q. Were orders placed from Los Angeles, do you know?

A. By the Denton Tire Company. Then we carried a full [fol. 1170] line of merchandise for distribution in our area.

Q. And from where were shipments of batteries received, if you know?

A. Electric Storage Battery, here in Los Angeles.

Mr. Thody: The government moves at this time, your Honor, to have Government's Exhibit No. 80, for identification, admitted in evidence.

Mr. Hall: Each and all of the documents offered are objected to on the ground they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: Exhibit 80 in evidence.

Mr. Thody: Likewise, your Honor, the government moves that Government's Exhibit 81, for identification, be admitted into evidence.

Mr. Hall: Each and all of the documents so offered are objected to on the ground they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: 81 in evidence.

[fol. 1171] Mr. Somerville: You may examine the witness.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I believe you said your area was, roughly speaking, the Salt River Valley of Arizona?

A. Well, sir, in servicing Arizona for redistribution it is more or less divided into two areas, one serviced from Tucson, which goes down through Bisbee, Nogales, and so forth, and one from Phoenix, which covers the area toward Wickenburg or Highland and back down to Phoenix.

Q. What I wanted to get at was what was your sales area?

A. Mine was the immediate Salt River Valley.

Q. And you canvassed that area between July, 1947 and March, 1948, is that correct?

A. I did, sir.

Q. During that period how many separate retail outlets did you solicit?

A. Approximately 125 to 130.

Q. And how many did you sell?

A. Sir?

Q. How many did you sell?

A. I had about 80 active accounts.

Q. Then there were about 45 people that you visited that you did not sell, is that correct?

A. I would say so.

[fol. 1172] Q. Is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did any of those people complain about the products you were offering?

A. I had no complaints.

Q. I beg pardon?

A. No complaints.

Q. No complaints from any of those 45 people?

A. No.

Q. Well, what reasons did they give you for not buying the products that you offered?

A. Some through choice handled other items.

Q. They gave you various reasons, did they?

A. Various reasons.

Q. What were some of them?

A. Well, some of them prefer the U. S. Royal tire to our Gillette or a Goodyear tire to our Gillette or a Firestone tire to our Gillette.

Q. Any other reasons you can think of?

A. Not offhand, sir.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: Any redirect?

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. After the year or the months of January and Feb- [fol. 1173] ruary, 1948 did you customarily call upon Chevron stations?

A. No, sir.

Q. When you first started in July, 1947, did you customarily call upon Chevron stations?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And approximately when did you discontinue.

A. When it was proven to my own satisfaction that I could not make any sales at that particular stop. There were new ones going up all the time and each time one would go up I would make a call.

Mr. Somerville: That is all.

The Court: All right. Anything further?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute.

Recross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Did you during the eight or nine months that you have covered that territory call on all service stations in the territory?

A. As many as physically possible.

Q. Well, I am asking you did you call on all of them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words, you covered every single service station in the Salt River Valley?

A. Oh, numerically. No, sir; I am afraid I couldn't say that.

[fol. 1174] Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: Gentlemen, we will recess the case until 2:00 o'clock.

(Whereupon, a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock p.m., of the same day, Tuesday, May 18, 1948.)

[fol. 1175]

Los Angeles, California,
Tuesday, May 18, 1948. 2:00 p.m.

The Court: You may proceed, gentlemen.

Mr. Somerville: The government calls Irvin Stimpson as the next witness.

Irvin G. Stimpson, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

The Clerk: Take the stand, please. What is your name, please?

The Witness: Irvin G. Stimpson.

The Clerk: How do you spell your first name?

The Witness: I-r-v-i-n.

The Clerk: And the middle initial is?

The Witness: G.

The Clerk: And the last name?

The Witness: Stimpson, S-t-i-m-p-s-o-n.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What is your residence address, Mr. Stimpson?

A. R.F.D. 4, Ogden, Utah.

Q. Would you speak a little louder, please? By whom are you employed?

A. The Town Supply Company.

[fol. 1176] Mr. Hall: Just a moment. Can you speak louder? What was the name, please?

The Witness: Town Supply Company.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What is the business of the Town Supply Company?

A. Automotive jobbers and wholesalers.

Q. What are your duties there? What is your capacity with this company?

A. I am a salesman.

Q. What area do you cover as a salesman?

A. I travel northern Utah and southern Idaho.

Q. What products are handled by Town Supply Company that would be sold to service station operators for resale to the motoring public?

A. We sell Autolite batteries, Raybestos fan belts, radiator hose.

Q. Do you know from what source your company receives Autolite batteries?

A. Yes, they receive them through the Autolite company from Oakland, California.

Q. Where does the Raybestos line come from?

A. It comes from Bridgeport, Connecticut.

Q. And does your company handle spark plugs?

A. Yes, sir, A.C. spark plugs and oil filters.

Q. And oil filters?

[fol. 1177] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do those come from?

A. That is from the A.C. Company at Flint, Michigan.

Q. Did your company handle various types of chemical polishes and waxes that are used by the automobile trade?

A. Yes, they handle the Inland line.

Q. From what source are they received?

A. That is received from the Inland Company in Missouri—from Minnesota.

Q. In what area does the Town Supply Company distribute these products to the trade?

A. From what area, you mean?

Q. In what area are they doing business, selling to the trade?

A. Utah, Idaho, Nevada, Wyoming.

Q. Are you familiar with how many salesmen the Town Supply Company has?

A. Yes, twelve.

Q. Are some of those salesmen assigned to selling territory in Nevada and Idaho?

A. Yes.

Q. What trade do you call on?

A. I call on service stations, garages, car dealers.

Q. Do you call on the Chevron station trade?

A. Some, yes.

[fol. 1178] Q. Have you called on a service station located at Main and Second South Street at Brigham City, Utah, operated by Mark Brightenburg?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first call on this station?

A. About September, 1947.

Q. Did you attempt to sell your line of accessories at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful?

A. Well, not right at that time. I have sold him supplies that he couldn't get from Standard Oil Company.

Q. What were some of those supplies, do you recall?

A. Well, tire chains, polishing mitts.

Q. Did you thereafter continue to call on Mr. Brightenburg?

A. Yes.

Q. How often?

A. Well, I make the trip every week, and most generally I stop and see him each week.

Q. Were you successful in making additional sales?

A. Only on those items that I have told you before.

Q. As a salesman did your technique involve an attempt to get Mr. Brightenburg to stock your accessories as a regular thing?

[fol. 1179] Mr. Hall: That is objected to as calling for a conclusion of the witness' speculation and conjecture.

Mr. Somerville: I am asking what his technique was.

Mr. Hall: There is no proper foundation laid showi he had any technique.

The Court: He can state how he proceeded, to descri how he did things. Objection sustained.

[fol. 1180] By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Was anything ever said to you during any of the calls respecting the matter of carrying these items stock?

A. Well, not the ones that I was able to sell him, but told me——

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. I object to any conversa tions with the dealer on the ground that it is hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Somerville: The question was: Was anything sai yes or no?

A. Objections to handling the product that I was sellin him? I don't quite get the question.

Mr. Somerville: Will the reporter read that questio back?

(Question read by the reporter.)

Q. I believe you started to qualify it by saying it did n involve the items you did sell but something was said wit respect to other items; was that correct?

A. That is right. The items that——

Q. When were any conversations held with respect t items that you could not sell but desired to sell?

A. Well, at the times when I called on him.

Q. Approximately when would those be, at the beginnin of your calls?

A. Oh, yes. I would name over my lines and the on [fol. 1181] that he could handle and wanted, he woul buy it.

Q. Was anyone present other than Mr. Brightenburg i on any of these discussions?

A. No.

Q. And these conversations would occur at his servic station?

A. Yes.

Q. And what were those conversations?

A. Well, I asked him about his batteries, fanbelts and like that, and he says: Well, he bought those from the company.

Mr. Somerville: The Government asks that dealer agreement TBA dated December 10, 1947, between Standard Oil Company of California and Mark F. Brightenburg, produced under subpoena No. 2, paragraph 1, No. 49, be marked for identification.

The Clerk: Government's 82 for identification.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Were you unsuccessful thereafter in having your items stocked?

A. No. He would stock my tire chains, but those other items, no; I was not able to sell those.

Q. With respect to the items that he did stock were Atlas competitive items also present in the station?

A. Yes.

Q. But you were never able to sell him items such as oil filters, fanbelts, spark plugs?

[fol. 1182] A. No.

Q. Have you ever called upon a service station operated by Hugh C. Nielsen at the northeast corner of the intersection of Second South and State Streets in Preston, Idaho?

A. Yes.

Mr. Somerville: The Government asks that dealer agreement TBA dated September 3, 1947, between Standard Oil Company of California and Hugh C. Nielsen, and an assignment of this dealer agreement to Ariel A. Biggs, effective as of March 1, 1948, be marked for identification.

The Court: Government's Exhibit 83 for identification.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When did you first call on Mr. Nielsen?

A. Mr. Nielsen was about September, the end of '47, November or somewhere in there.

Q. And were you successful or unsuccessful with respect to selling him?

A. I was able to sell him some spotlights and fog lights.

Q. Was there any change in the personnel operating this station on any later calls?

A. Ariel A. Biggs.

Q. When?

A. Took over in approximately March 1st of this year.

Q. Did you attempt to sell your products to Mr. Biggs? [fol. 1183] A. Yes.

Q. Did he purchase any from you?

A. Only spotlights and fog lights, as I have stated before. I asked him on batteries and he told me that——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. Object to what he told the witness on the ground that it is hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. By the way, when did you have any conversation with Mr. Biggs concerning stocking your items?

A. About a month ago.

Q. Where did such conversations occur?

A. In his place of business.

Q. And who were present?

A. Just Mr. Biggs.

Q. And what was said?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I asked him about stocking a line of batteries and he said that he was unable to do that; he had to buy them from Standard Oil. I asked him also about his fanbelts and he said he—I mentioned that he had Gates fanbelts, and he said, "Well, I have to get rid of those as soon as possible."

Q. Did he have any competitive tires at the time?

A. He had two which they had complained about him [fol. 1184] handling.

Q. Did he say that they had complained about them?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful in selling him your fanbelts, your oil filters, your spark plugs, your waxes and polishes?

A. I was unsuccessful, because he said that they had told him that—give him the understanding when he went in there that he bought from them or they had someone else that would.

Mr. Somerville: That will be all.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute, sir.

Mr. Somerville: There is cross examination.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. How long have you been covering that north Utah and south Idaho territory?

A. A year, a year ago last September.

Q. Then you have been covering it about a year and a half approximately?

A. Yes, sir; approximately.

Q. During that year and a half how many separate and distinct retail outlets did you call upon and solicit?

A. I have approximately 125 accounts throughout that territory.

[fol. 1185] Q. Now, please listen to my question, because that is not what I asked you.

A. Oh.

Q. I asked you how many retail outlets you solicited for business during that year and a half whether you sold them or not.

A. Well, that is what I say; I have about 125 accounts. They are all retail accounts.

Q. Do you sell to all those 125?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you ever call on anybody you don't sell to?

A. Well, occasionally. I don't sell always when I call there but I do, maybe, every other trip or——

Q. Now, let me put it this way: Are there any outlets that you have called upon in that territory at any time that you didn't sell something to?

A. You mean of all the time that I have been calling? I don't believe so.

Q. Were there any outlets that you called upon during that year and a half period that did not buy all of the things that you offered to sell them?

A. Oh, yes; there were some that I didn't sell everything that I had.

Q. How many of those were there?

A. Well, I don't know that.

[fol. 1186] Q. If I get you correctly, you don't knock out

100 per cent on every trip, on every visit that you make covering your entire line, do you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Which means that some of these people that you call upon refuse to buy certain commodities from you, don't they?

A. They don't refuse; no, sir. They just don't need it at the time.

Q. Well, they don't buy from you, do they?

A. At times. If they need it, they do.

Q. What reason do they give for not buying from you at the times they don't buy?

A. Well, they just don't need it; their stock is complete.

Q. Do you run what in trade is called a "pie wagon"?

A. No, sir.

Q. You don't carry around things that you actually sell?

A. No, sir.

Q. It is all upon order, is it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I want to get this perfectly clear, and you correct me now if I am wrong. Do I understand that the only occasions upon which an outlet does not buy things that [fol. 1187] you offer to the outlet is when such outlet has those things in stock which it has already purchased through you?

A. Well, that is right to a certain extent. We have contracts, that is, on different lines which another jobber may have the same contract and able to fill in. He handles our lines in that respect and if he is down, he buys from me. [fol. 1188] Q. Well, now, let me give you an illustration. There are various makes of fan belts on the market, aren't there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Competing in your territory, aren't there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, does every outlet that you have visited during that year and a half stock your particular brand of fan belts?

A. Oh, no, sir, not——

Q. In other words, those outlets buy fan belts from somebody else?

A. That's right, sir.

Q. And when they have stocked fan belts which they bought from somebody else, they don't buy your fan belts; isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. The same thing might be said of the radiator hose, and batteries, and spark plugs, and other miscellaneous items, might it not?

A. Ordinarily on radiator hose, spark plugs and oil filter elements, and such, they handle several lines of each, and we sell those.

Q. How about the waxes and polishes?

A. Well, that's true with that, too.

Q. They handle several lines?

A. That's right, sir.

[fol. 1189] Q. So that is it your testimony that everyone you call upon in that area, whether they handle some competing line, they at least handle your line of spark plugs and oil filters and waxes and polishes?

A. The majority of them do.

Q. Well, now, there are some that don't, aren't there?

A. Well, in order to tell you for sure on that, I would have to take you there and show you, or take an inventory on it.

Q. Couldn't you give it from recollection?

A. Well, they may handle the oil filters and they may not handle the spark plugs, like that, but I still sell them on that line.

Q. What makes of batteries compete with your batteries in the area that you have referred to?

A. We have—there is the Willard, Exide, Hobbs, Fluor, and the U. S., Goodrich, and your Atlas.

Q. That is in addition to your brand? What is your brand?

A. Autolite.

Q. The what?

A. The Autolite.

Q. The Autolite. Now, is it customary in that area for a substation to handle more than one brand of batteries?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 1190] Mr. Hall: That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Mr. Stimpson, I would like to make this perfectly clear, also. You testified that you sell to 125 accounts. Are there additional stations that you merely call on maybe one time and then let go and never re-call on?

A. Oh, yes. Well, I have approximately 125 accounts that I do contact, some every week and some of them maybe every other week, but there are other stations that I have called on, or other places of business that I have called on, that I haven't gone back because I haven't been able to sell them.

Q. Have you ever called upon a Chevron station a single time and never gone back?

A. No, not a single time. I have called on them two or three times and then have quit.

Q. Now, with respect to the 125 accounts that you have mentioned, that would include the two that you have testified to on your direct examination, would it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, with respect to the items that you sell, you are not able to sell your full line to each one, are you?

A. That's true.

Q. And you were not able to sell your full line to either [fol. 1191] one of the dealers whom you testified to?

A. That's right.

Q. Were you able to sell either of those dealers batteries?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you able to sell either of those dealers fan belts?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you able to sell either of those dealers oil filters?

A. No.

Q. Were you able to sell either of those dealers spark plugs?

A. No.

Q. You were able to sell those dealers tire chains?

A. The one I sold tire chains to.

Q. Do you know whether or not competitive tire chains were available, bearing the Atlas brand or obtained through Standard Oil Company?

A. I don't know that.

Q. Did I understand your testimony on direct to be that there were competitive Atlas chains in stock at the time you sold these?

A. No.

Q. Now, have you been able to increase the number of [fol. 1192] Chevron accounts that you sell to?

A. No.

Mr. Somerville: That is all.

Recross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, I am not talking about the 125 accounts which you have called upon, and I am not talking about Chevron stations. My question is this: Leaving those out of account, did you call upon any stations or dealers or retail outlets one or two times in an endeavor to make a sale and then give in on it?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Somerville: The Government at this time offers in evidence Government's Exhibit 82, for identification, and Government's Exhibit 83, for identification.

Mr. Hall: The defendants object to each and all of the documents so offered on the ground they are irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Somerville: You may be excused, Mr. Stimpson.

The Court: The objection will be overruled. They may be received.

The Clerk: 82 and 83 in evidence.

Mr. Somerville: The government calls as the next wit- [fol. 1193] ness E. E. Stevens.

Elmo E. Stevens, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: Take the stand, please, sir. What is your name, please?

The Witness: E. E. Stevens.

The Clerk: How do you spell your last name?
The Witness: S-t-e-v-e-n-s.
The Clerk: What is your first name?
The Witness: Elmo, E-l-m-o.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Stevens?
A. Salt Lake City.
Q. By whom are you employed?
A. Well, I am self-employed.
Q. What is your business?
A. We are a distributor for Pennsylvania tires and tubes.
Q. Does your business have a name?
A. Yes, Penn Tire Service, 872 South State.
Q. How long have you been associated with this company?
A. Two years.
[fol. 1194] Q. Are you a franchise distributor for Pennsylvania Rubber Company?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Does that include tires, tubes and batteries?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. From what source did you receive tires and tubes?
A. Well, we received partial shipments from the Los Angeles warehouse, and also some drop shipments, and car, partial car shipments from Jeannette, Pennsylvania.
Q. From the Pennsylvania Rubber Company?
A. Yes.
Q. From what stock did you receive batteries?
A. We received them from the Los Angeles warehouse of the Pennsylvania Rubber Company directed to the Paint & Piston Service Company. They are the warehouse distributor for the Pennsylvania batteries in Salt Lake.
Q. What is the area of your distribution for these products?
A. We have Salt Lake County and west on Highway 40 to Wendover, Utah.
Q. As the distributor of the Pennsylvania tires and tubes and batteries, do you receive any direct assistance from factory representatives or company representatives of the Pennsylvania Rubber Company?

A. Yes, promotional. They have a promotional man in the [fol. 1195] territory at all times.

Q. Who is the Pennsylvania Rubber Company man that assists you?

A. Robert L. Ripley.

Q. And what type of assistance does he give you?

A. He aids us in our advertising promotional work; also aids our salesmen in their calls daily, not going with them every day, but periodically he goes with them.

Q. Would he on some occasions call on service station operators, for example?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. In company with your salesmen?

A. Right.

Q. What class of trade does your company endeavor to sell?

A. We solicit service stations, and fleet operators, and industrial accounts.

Q. Calling your attention, Mr. Stevens, to the service station located in Knolls, Utah, operated by Harry Naylor, have you ever called on this station?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Somerville: The government asks that a lease dated June 2, 1941 between Mrs. H. L. Haylor and Woody Naylor, her son, and Standard Oil Company, lessee; a sublease dated June 2, 1941 between Standard Oil Company of Cali- [fol. 1196] fornia and Mrs. H. L. Naylor and Woody Naylor; a contract dated July 25, 1946, a dealer agreement TBA dated July 25, 1945 between Standard Oil Company of California and Mrs. H. L. Naylor and Woody Naylor; a letter from W. G. Watson, Attorney-in-fact, to Mrs. H. L. Naylor and Woody Naylor dated January 20, 1943; and an assignment of certain contracts dated or effective as of March 1, 1947 be marked for identification. These were produced under subpoena No. 2, paragraph 1, item 47.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 84, for identification.

By Mr. Somerville

Q. Have you ever sold any tires to this station?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you commence these sales?

A. Oh, around the middle of April, 1947.

Q. Were additional sales made after that time?

A. Oh, yes, weekly.

Q. Describe the circumstances which led to your first making sales to Mr. Naylor?

A. We had several accounts in Wendover we were doing recapping for. We were also selling used tires, and we deemed it advisable to start a route to Wendover, servicing all of the accounts that were on Highway 40, particularly service stations. Our salesman, Mr. Frank C. Williamson, who was employed by us, made the first call and on his daily [fol. 1197] report on his return remarked that this man——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. Not what was shown in the report. That is objected to as not the best evidence.

By Mr. Somerville

Q. Your Mr. Williamson suggested to you that an effort be made to sell——

A. Prior to opening——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute.

The Court: That is leading and suggestive. Furthermore, he can't testify to that. He can tell what was done.

Mr. Somerville: Very well.

By Mr. Somerville

Q. Did you thereafter personally call on Mr. Naylor with respect to selling him tires and tubes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you first call on him yourself?

A. Around the 1st of June, 1947.

Q. And were you successful or unsuccessful?

A. Successful.

Q. And did you make additional calls?

A. Yes, every week thereafter.

Q. Did you make sales every week?

A. Yes; sometimes twice a week.

Q. At the time you first called on Mr. Naylor personally did you consider this an unusual account?

A. Yes.

[fol. 1198] Mr. Hall: Just a minute. I move to strike the answer. I didn't have an opportunity to object.

The Court: All right. It may be stricken.

Mr. Hall: I object on the ground it is leading and suggestive and calls for a conclusion of the witness, speculation and conjecture.

Mr. Somerville: Let me rephrase it.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Somerville

Q. Let me ask you, was there anything unusual about this account?

Mr. Hall: That calls for a conclusion.

The Court: That calls for a conclusion, yes. He can describe it.

By Mr. Somerville

Q. Did you have any conversations upon your first visit with Mr. Naylor with respect to his handling Pennsylvania tires and tubes?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did this occur?

A. At Knolls, Utah, at his service station.

Q. And this would be in June, would it?

A. Yes, my first visit there was in June.

Q. And who were present at the time?

A. Well, just Mr. Naylor and myself at that time.

Q. What was the nature of the conversations?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

[fol. 1199] The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: I asked Mr. Naylor if it was not possible to sell him additional items, and received an order for a radiator cleanser, and fan belts and, well, quite numerous items of accessories relative to the automotive supplies.

By Mr. Somerville

Q. Did you at that time ask him if he was receiving supplies of Atlas tires and tubes and batteries?

A. Yes, because I was inquisitive, because prior to that time I was associated——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is the witness' conclusion. He has answered the question and I move to strike out all of his answer after word "Yes."

The Court: The motion will be granted He can give his estimation later, after he has answered the question, but you should not theorize.

Mr. Somerville: Would you read the question and answer, please.

(The question and answer were read.)

The Court: That will be stricken. All except the answer "Yes."

Q. By Mr. Somerville: Where is this station located, Mr. Stevens?

A. It is at Knolls, Utah, on the desert, 24 miles east of Wendover.

[fol. 1200] Q. How far is that from Salt Lake City?

A. About 100 miles.

Q. Is Salt Lake City the only city of any size there?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that located on a U. S. Highway?

A. Yes, U. S. 40.

Q. Is that highway heavily or sparsely traveled?

A. Very heavily traveled.

Q. Did Mr. Naylor on the occasion of your first visit place any orders for fan belts and miscellaneous accessory items?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Were Pennsylvania tires and tubes prominently displayed in his station?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you sometimes receive telephone orders from Mr. Naylor during this period?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How would these be shipped?

A. We would place them on the bus, the Union Pacific bus, and they would drop them off at his station.

Q. How long did your sales to Mr. Naylor continue?

A. Until the end of July, 1947.

Q. You first commenced them in May,——

A. It was April.

[fol. 1201] Q. —1947, and ended in July, around July 31, 1947?

A. Yes.

Q. And how many tires in dollar volume did you sell Mr. Naylor during this period?

A. Oh, I would say about $1300 worth.

Q. Did any conversations occur prior to the last sale with respect to the handling of Pennsylvania products?

A. Yes.

Q. About when did that occur?

A. The middle of July.

Q. Where?

A. At his station.

Q. And who were present?

A. There was myself and his wife and himself in the soft drink parlor.

Q. What was the nature of the conversation?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: I asked for an order in the future, if he could give me an idea about what size tires and in what quantity he would want me to deliver in the next week, and he said he didn't know for sure, because he didn't know how long he could handle our tires. He said that pressure was being brought to bear, and he didn't know for sure whether he could handle our tires in the future.

[fol. 1202] By Mr. Somerville:

Q. At that time did he take some tires from you?

Q. Do you take tires with you on one of these trips——

A. Yes, I had a truck.

Q. —if there is a sale made, and do you call that a "pie wagon"?

A. That's right.

Q. Were there any further conversations held with respect to Mr. Naylor handling Pennsylvania tires and tubes and other products?

A. Not until we terminated at the end of July.

Q. Were these conversations also held at the service station?

A. Yes, in his service station.

Q. At the end of July?

A. Yes.

Q. Would that be on your last trip there?

A. That's right.

Q. And who were present at these conversations?

A. Mr. Naylor and I were at the truck at the time.

Q. And what was said?

A. He said he would not be able to handle our tires any longer, and that he appreciated what I had done, and said he was sorry he couldn't give me some more business.

[fol. 1203] Q. Did he give you any further reason for his refusal?

A. Well, yes; he said that there was certain pressure being brought to bear by Standard Oil Company, that he could not handle our tires in their station.

Q. By the way, where did you unload these tires?

A. I unloaded them in the service station.

Q. In the service station?

A. Yes; up to the last shipment. The last shipment was placed in the back room.

Q. I was referring to the last shipment. They were placed in the back room?

A. Yes; in the back room.

Q. There was a change, then, in the manner in which Pennsylvania tires were displayed, is that true?

A. That is right.

Mr. Somerville: The Government offers into evidence Government Exhibit 84 for identification.

Mr. Hall: Each and all of the documents so offered are objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: 84 in evidence.

Mr. Somerville: At this time I would like to call attention to dealer agreement TBA dated July 25, 1945, and the term of this contract, which runs from August 1, 1945 to March 31, 1972.

[fol. 1204] Q. By the way, does the weather get pretty hot out there at Wendover?

A. Very warm.

Q. And the stretch of highway over which the tourists will travel is long or short?

A. It is a long drive.

Q. Calling your attention to a service station operated by George Duffin at 11th East and 9th South Street, Salt Lake City, Utah——

11th East and 9th South?

Mr. Hall: What was that name, again, counsel?

Mr. Somerville: George Duffin.

Mr. Hall: Thank you.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When did you first call on Mr. Duffin?

A. Well, at the outset, when they bought the tire shop and we done all his recapping from May, 1946 on.

Q. Did you sell him any new tires?

A. Yes, occasionally.

Q. Did Duffin stock these tires at his station?

A. No.

Q. Describe how he would buy them.

A. Well, he would come down in his own car and put them in the back end of his car and take them away from our place.

Q. Did he buy a number at one time?

A. No; one or two at the most.

[folio 1205] Q. Were any conversations held concerning stocking these tires in his station?

A. Well, yes; we would like him to stock the tires, but under his agreement he said that he could not stock them in his service station.

Mr. Somerville: I think that will be all. Oh, just a minute. The Government would like marked for identification a letter to Standard Oil Company of California signed by Bernice Duffin, which appears to appoint George Duffin as operator of this service station at 1085 East 9th Street South. This document was produced under subpoena No. 2, paragraph I, item No. 48. As part of the same exhibit I would like a document produced in response to request for documents under Rule 34. It appears to be a memorandum concerning a $7,000 loan to Bernice Duffin.

The Clerk: Government's 85 marked for identification.

Mr. Somerville: You may cross examine, Mr. Hall.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Did you ever sell any merchandise to Standard Oil Company of California?

A. No.

Q. Did the company you represent ever do so?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. You have been soliciting the trade for two years, [fol. 1206] I think you said?

A. Right.

Q. And that was in this area in Utah adjacent to Salt Lake City?

A. In Salt Lake, Salt Lake County, and adjacent to it.

Q. How many separate retail outlets did you call on, whether you sold them or not, during that two-year period?

A. Oh, I would say possibly a hundred.

Q. Just a hundred separate ones during the whole two-year period?

A. Retail accounts.

Q. Retail accounts?

A. That is right.

Q. How many did you sell out of that hundred?

A. Oh, of course, we must realize that during that 1946 you could sell tires to anyone. They were very short and critical, and we did not sell but to two outlets other than our dealers during the critical shortage.

Mr. Hall: Would you read the answer, please, Mr. Reporter?

(Answer read by the reporter.)

Mr. Hall: Your answer leaves me a little mystified.

The Court: He started merely to give the reasons, but you did not give the answer.

A: The reasons for that were: My being familiar with [fol. 1207] the setup, I knew that I had to cultivate customers for the future, therefore, I wanted to give the tires to people that would patronize me after the shortage was over.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, I am getting at how many people you called on during that period, whether you sold them or not.

A. Well, retailers, I didn't call on them.

Q. Oh, you didn't?

A. During 1946.

Q. I see. Well, let us get down to 1947, then. How many retailers did you call on then, whether you sold them or not?

A. Well, I would say approximately a hundred.

Q. Tires were not so short in 1947, were they?

A. No.

Q. Did you sell tires to all of those hundred?

A. Oh, no.

Q. How many did you sell out of the hundred?

A. Well, about 30 per cent.

Q. So that 70 per cent of the hundred turned you down for one reason or another?

A. Right.

Q. What were some of those reasons?

A. They were not able to buy from us.

Q. Well, those 70 outlets were not all Chevron stations, were they?

[fol. 1208] A. No.

Q. Were they stations that handled the petroleum products of some other company?

A. Yes; Standard Oil of Indiana, also Texaco stations handling Firestone.

Q. Any others that you can think of?

A. Not that I recall, only, naturally, the Chevron stations, they are the same as Standard Oil of California. We were excluded there.

Q. After you were unsuccessful in selling this Mr. Naylor at Knolls, Utah did you ever go back there?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Now, let's see. When was the first time you were unsuccessful in selling him?

A. Well, I was back later on, but the last time——

Q. Wait a minute, wait a minute.

A. —I was there for that express purpose——

Mr. Hall: You are not answering my question.

A. —was July 1st, 1947.

Q. That was the last time you sold him?

A. That is right.

Q. How often after that did you go back?

A. I didn't go back.

Q. So you don't know what he was handling in the way of tires after that time?

[fol. 1209] A. No.

Q. After George Duffin failed to buy tires from you did you go back and see him again?

A. Yes.

Q. Let's see, now. When was it you said he would not buy any tires from you?

A. Well, that went on until he was out of the station, until he gave up the lease.

Q. Wait a minute, wait a minute. Please listen to my question. When was the last time that he refused to buy tires from you?

A. I would say it would be in about February, 1947.

Q. How many times after February, 1947 did you call on him?

A. Oh, at least once a week.

Q. For how long a period?

A. I don't remember how long it was.

Q. When was the last time you called on him?

A. I am not sure of the date, either, on that.

Q. What was it he told you in February, 1947?

A. Well, he could not stock the tires.

Q. Then why did you keep on calling upon him week after week?

A. Because we were doing his recapping for him and his section work.

[fol. 1210] Q. On any of those occasions when you called on him then after February, 1947 it was with reference to recapping and you did not try to get him to buy any tires, is that right?

A. Well, naturally, you would try.

Q. I beg pardon?

A. Naturally, I would try.

Q. You would keep on trying?

A. Certainly.

Q. Did he have a stock of Atlas tires?

A. He did.

Q. How large a stock?

A. Well, comparatively large; yes.

Q. I am speaking now of the period after February, 1947.

A. Comparatively large for a service station.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: Any redirect?

Mr. Somerville: Yes.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. In July, on July 31, 1947, at the time that you last delivered tires to Stephens (Duffin) did Mr. Stephens express any dissatisfaction with Pennsylvania tires and tubes?

Mr. Hall: Will you pardon me a minute, counsel? Did you [fol. 1211] say "Stephens"?

Mr. Somerville: Oh, I am sorry. I said "Stephens." I meant Naylor.

A. No; he didn't express any dissatisfaction whatsoever.

Q. Did he ever express dissatisfaction?

A. No.

Q. Have you seen or talked to ~~Mr. Naylor since~~?

A. Yes; I talked to him. I have sent his laundry out to him a number of times since then.

Q. That is all you have delivered, then, is laundry?

A. Just put it on the bus for him; yes.

Q. No accessories along with it?

A. No.

Q. At the time you last called at this station did you notice whether any Atlas tires and tubes were on hand?

A. Yes; he had a few Atlas tires and batteries and tubes there.

Q. Had he had any Atlas tires and tubes prior to this time?

A. No; he was not able to get them.

Mr. Somerville: I think that will be all, Mr. Hall.

Recross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Did you ever have a person that you solicited to buy [fol. 1212] tires tell you that he didn't like the product you were offering him?

A. Certainly.

Q. Is that a matter of frequent occurrence?

A. I think everyone—yes.

Q. You say it is a frequent occurrence?

A. Not with me; with any product.

Q. No; I don't want your speculation as to anybody else. I want your experience. Is it a frequent occurrence with you?

A. No.

Q. It isn't?

A. It is a well accepted item.

Q. How many such criticisms would you say occurred in the given year in your experience; and I mean by that criticisms made to you of the product you are offering in the way of tires?

A. Probably 12 or 14.

Q. 12 or 14 times. Do those criticisms come from any particular type of dealer or retail outlet?

A. No; not one specific type.

Q. What do they criticize in your tire?

A. Sometimes they criticize our adjustment policy.

Q. What else do they criticize?

A. The tread design that they have.

Q. What else?

[fol. 1213] A. That is about it.

Q. And you get about 12 of those a year, you say?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that would be in the year 1947 12 out of a hundred people would make those criticisms?

A. Certainly.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Do I understand you to say that 12 out of every hundred people you contact make these complaints?

A. Yes; the users and service stations and so forth, general.

Q. Had you ever received any complaint of this character from Mr. Naylor?

A. No.

Q. Had you ever received any complaints of this character from Mr. Duffin?

A. No.

Mr. Somerville: That is all.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: When you say that it is accepted policy do you mean that you accept it as a part of the chance in doing business? Is that it?

The Witness: That is right. It has sufficient advertising and background, but it is an accepted product with the [fol. 1214] motoring public.

The Court: No; that is not the point. You misunderstood me. I thought I heard you say that a certain percentage of complaints is accepted.

The Witness: Yes.
The Court: As going with the product.
The Witness: Yes.
The Court: Did I understand you correctly?
The Witness: That is right.
The Court: I am asking you if you accept that?
The Witness: That is right.
The Court: In other words, you figure that is one of the risks in doing business that there would be people that would complain about the product?
The Witness: Yes.
The Court: All right.
Mr. Somerville: I would like to ask an additional question.
The Court: All right.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Does your company make adjustments on tires?
A. Yes.
Q. Would that be with respect to somebody who had made one of the complaints that you have enumerated?
A. Oh, yes.
[fol. 1215] Q. And have they thereafter continued to buy Pennsylvania tires?
A. Yes.

Mr. Somerville: That is all.
The Court: All right, who is your next witness?
Mr. Somerville: The Government will call Paul Ferrari.

Paul S. Ferrari, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?
The Witness: Paul S. Ferrari.
The Clerk: Paul S., and how do you spell your last name?
The Witness: F-e-r-r-a-r-i.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

The Government offers into evidence Government Exhibit 85 for identification.

Mr. Hall: The defendants object to each and all of the documents so offered on the ground that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: That is 85 in evidence.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. What is your residence address, Mr. Ferrari?

A. 408 East 8th Street, Reno, Nevada.

[fol. 1216] Mr. Hall: I could not hear the last word.

The Court: Reno, Nevada.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. And what is your employment or occupation?

A. I am a partner in an automotive supply business.

Q. What is the name of that?

A. Rissone's.

Q. And what is the business of that company?

A. We are jobbers and distributors for automotive supplies and accessories, and we also have a large recapping plant.

Q. What are some of these products that your company handles?

A. We are distributors for Fisk tires and tubes and batteries and accessories, and Thermoid products, Willard products, Hollingshead products.

Q. And from what source do you receive your Fisk tires?

A. We receive them from several sources. Some come from the coast warehouses, some come direct from the factories, Los Angeles, some come direct from the factory at Chicopee Falls, Massachusetts.

Q. Do you handle Fisk batteries as well?

A. Yes; they have a line of batteries also.

Q. Do they come from the same sources?

A. They come from the warehouse in San Francisco and [fol. 1217] also from the battery company that makes the battery for Fisk.

Q. And where do you receive shipments of Thermoid products; that would be fanbelts, hose, brake linings?

A. They have a coast warehouse in San Francisco; they also come—some come out of Los Angeles; a lot of them come from Trenton, New Jersey, which is their plant.

Q. From what source do you receive oil filters?

A. We handle several lines. One is the Wix line which comes from back east and also from the coast warehouses. We handle Purolator, which comes from the coast warehouse.

Q. Are you also distributors for any oils and greases?

A. Yes. We are distributors for Valvoline, Freedom Oil Company.

Q. From what source do you receive these products?

A. We received that from direct shipments and also from coast warehouses or other warehouses around the west coast.

Q. What class of trade do you solicit in selling your products and distributing them?

A. We sell to service stations, garages, and also other motor supply houses.

Q. What is the area of distribution covered by your company?

A. The area of distribution up there is Nevada and northern California, as a rule, with most companies.

[fol. 1218] Q. Could you approximate the percentage of business done in California?

A. Yes. I would say approximately 40 per cent.

Q. Calling your attention to a service station operated by Jerry Vidovich at Schurz, Nevada, have you ever called on this service station?

A. Yes; I have.

Q. When did you first call on Mr. Vidovich?

A. It was the latter part of last year, when he first started to open his service station.

Mr. Somerville: The Government would like marked for identification dealer agreement TBA dated November 7, 1947, between Standard Oil Company of California and Jerome S. Vidovich; and petroleum products and equipment agreement dated November 7, 1947, between Standard Oil Company of California and Jerome S. Vidovich, produced under subpoena No. 2, paragraph 1, item 57.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 86 marked for identification.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. At the time of your first call last year did you make any sales of any of your products to Mr. Vidovich?

A. Yes; I took an order for some tire tools which I shipped out to him.

Q. Tire tools?

[fol. 1219] A. Tire tools.

Q. And at that time did you make any efforts to sell your resale products?

A. Yes; I did. I talked to both he and his brother.

Q. Where were these conversations, at the service station?

A. They were there at the service station and also in his brother's restaurant which is adjoining.

Q. Were any other parties present if you recall?

A. Yes; his brother's wife was present.

Q. And what were the nature of those conversations?

A. Well, he was just getting started and I, of course——

Mr. Hall: I object to this as hearsay, if the court please.

The Court: Overruled. Just strike out "he was just getting started."

A. I spoke to him about putting in the tires and batteries and doing his recapping, and spark plugs and accessories, whatever the lines we had or carry.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. And what did he say?

A. Well, he wasn't quite sure at that time. He didn't know just what he could handle.

[fol. 1220] Q. Did you thereafter make additional calls?

A. Yes, I made a call about—either a week or two weeks after that.

Q. Did you again make an effort to sell him?

A. Yes, and he and his brother both verified the fact that they would do business with us.

Q. Thereafter did you make any further calls?

A. Our salesman makes a call there every week.

Q. And have you been successful or unsuccessful in selling him the usual retail items sold to service stations?

A. He has sold him some items; mostly items that are either odd—he has sold him tires, and has sold him plugs, but I couldn't tell you offhand just what size they were.

Q. At the time you sold him tires, have you noticed whether Atlas tires were in stock?

A. He didn't at that time have anything in stock there because they were supposed to put them in, or something, according to the contract.

Mr. Hall: I move to strike that part of the answer of the witness, they were supposed to put them in according to the contract.

The Court: Yes, that may be stricken.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. In your conversation which you mentioned, was anything said concerning stocking Atlas products?

[fol. 1221] A. Yes, there was. He told me that Standard Oil was to give him a stock of tires and batteries.

Q. Was anything said with respect to stocking sizes of Fiske tires which may or may not have been supplied by Standard? What, if anything, was said along that line?

A. Well, he gave me to understand that he would like to handle Fiske tires and our Willard batteries and quite a few of our lines.

Q. But did he ever stock these items?

A. No, he never has.

Q. Has he ever displayed any of your items at his station?

A. No, he never has.

Q. Calling your attention now to a certain station operated at Portola, California by Orville Musser, have you ever called at that station?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. When did you first call there?

A. I first called on—well, I called on that station after I got out of service. It was sometime in 1946, and from then on.

Q. How long were you in the service?

A. I was in the service four years.

Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful upon your first contacting Mr. Musser in selling him anything?

[fol. 1222] A. I sold him—he has been buying from us right along. Our other salesman made that territory, and I used to go around every once in a while in different territories and this particular—the first time that I went back there after I got out of service, I delivered the merchandise to Mr. Musser.

Q. Did you ever sell him any tires?

A. Yes, I delivered tires to him.

Q. In any quantity at all?

A. Yes. I think it was either at that particular time—this particular time I think I delivered either two or four tires of a certain size that he wanted.

Q. Did he thereafter make additional orders for tires?

A. Yes, he purchased tires from us right along, and batteries, and other accessories and supplies.

Q. How long did purchases of your tires continue?

A. Well, they continued right along up through 1947.

Q. Was there any change in the amount or type or sizes of tires that you sold him?

A. Well, there was a change in the quantity. There was a change in the amount we sold him, according to our records, which we have.

Q. Calling your attention to a service station or garage, operated by Bruce Mills at Portola, California, did you call on that station?

[fol. 1223] A. Yes, I did. I called on them before I went in the service. It was around—it started around in 1939, and I called on him about once a week, pretty regular.

Q. And were you successful in selling him?

A. We were successful in selling him certain items, and also our—we did his recapping.

Q. You did his recapping?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you sell him any tires?

A. We never sold him any tires unless it was some size that he couldn't get, or something that he needed in an awful hurry, or something like that.

Q. Did any conversations ever occur with respect to stocking regular sizes of Fiske tires?

A. Yes, I——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Or a complete line of Fiske tires?

A. Yes, I tried to——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. The witness has answered.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Just answer that "Yes" or "No."

The Court: You can answer "Yes" or "No," to that.

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When did such conversations occur?

[fol. 1224] A. It occurred numerous times.

Q. During what period?

A. Well, between 1939 and the time I went into the service.

Q. Did such conversations occur early in 1939?

A. Yes, it did.

Q. And who were present at the conversations?

A. His wife was present.

Q. And these conversations occurred at the service station?

A. Yes.

Q. What, if anything, was said with respect to stocking your items?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. —or your tires?

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: He told me that he had to sell Atlas tires because he had a Standard Oil agreement and wasn't able to stock any other tires, and that was the only tire that he could put on a credit card, on a Standard Oil Credit Card.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. By the way, did Mr. Musser ever express any dissatisfaction or satisfaction with your products?

A. No, not to me.

Q. In 1947 were you able to sell him a full line of [fol. 1225] Fiske tires?

A. No.

Q. Was it limited to certain sizes, or, what type did you sell him?

A. He bought pretty much all sizes, but he never had a complete stock at any one time, that I can remember of.

Q. Did any conversations occur during this year with respect to stocking your tires?

A. Yes, it did. I spoke to him about those tires.

Q. When did this conversation occur?

A. On about my second trip up there after I returned from the service.

Q. And who were present?

A. Mr. Musser himself I believe was all that was present at the time.

Q. What was the nature of those conversations?

A. I spoke to him about stocking tires and batteries, the Willard line of batteries.

Q. And what did he say?

A. Well, he told me that—he made me understand that he would like to stock them, but wasn't able to, although he was buying from us at the time whenever he needed something.

Q. Did he say anything about whether Atlas tires in those sizes were being supplied him?

[fol. 1226] A. No, tires didn't become plentiful until later on.

Q. Pardon? What was the answer, please?

(The answer was read.)

A. Tires became plentiful, say, in the earlier part of 1947. They were pretty scarce up through that time.

Q. At the time tires did become plentiful, did your sales then drop off?

A. Yes, they did.

Q. Calling your attention now to a service station at Friendly, Nevada operated by Dave Williams, did you ever call on this station?

A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Hall: What was the name of the dealer?

Mr. Somerville: Dave Williams.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When did you first contact Mr. Williams?

A. I contacted Mr. Williams shortly after I went back to work, after I got out of the service.

Q. That would be in 1946?

A. The beginning of 1946.

Q. Were you able to sell him?

A. I sold him, yes.

Q. What items did you sell him?

A. I sold him most everything, that is, in the line of a service station line; tires, and batteries, and fan belts, [fol. 1227] and hose, and cables.

Q. How long did you continue to sell Mr. Williams these tires and batteries?

A. Up to the time that tires became plentiful.

Q. That would be about the end of 1947?

A. Approximately.

Q. At that time——

Mr. Hall: Pardon me. I didn't get that answer. What was it, please?

(The answer was read.)

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When tires became plentiful, did you contiue to sell tires and other accessories to Mr. Williams?

A. No, only those sizes which he wasn't able to secure from Atlas or Standard Oil.

Q. Was there a period in which batteries were short?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you able to sell batteries to Mr. Williams after they became plentiful?

A. No.

Q. Were you able to sell miscellaneous accessories,—I am talking now about oil filters, spark plugs, and other items, to Mr. Williams?

A. Yes, I sold him quite a few oil filters and cables and hose, radiator hose, and other accessories, flash lights, [fol. 1228] and flash light batteries.

Q. Are you continuing to sell tires, tubes and batteries to Mr. Williams?

A. No, our sales have just about fallen off to nothing, outside of a little recapping that he——

Q. Are you making any sales of those miscellaneous accessories?

A. No.

Q. When were the last substantial sales made to Mr. Williams?

A. I couldn't say offhand, but it is at least six or eight months. I would have to look at the records.

Q. Were any conversations held with Mr. Williams concerning the falling off in his purchases?

A. Yes. He said that he——

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.
The Court: Overruled.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Just answer "Yes" or "No."
A. Yes.
Q. When did such conversations occur?
A. At several different times on my calls there. I usually stopped there once a week.
Q. In what year would you place some of them?
A. It was 1947, and also right up to the present time.
Q. I am talking now about the period after you were [fol. 1229] unable to make additional sales. Did you again approach him with respect to continuing to stock your items?
A. Yes.
Q. When did you approach him?
A. On which particular item?
Q. When tires and batteries became plentiful?
A. Well, I approached him on tires and batteries about the time they started to become plentiful; after his sales with us dropped off, I wanted to know why.
Q. When these conversations were held, who were present?
A. Mr. Williams. I spoke to him personally.
Q. Where?
A. There at his place of business.
Q. And what was said?
A. He told me——

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.
The Court: Overruled.
The Witness: He told me that he would have to sell Atlas tires and Atlas batteries, and that he wasn't allowed to put Fiske tires on a Standard credit card in case a customer came in and wanted to put a tire on a credit card.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Thereafter you were unable to sell him; is that correct?
A. Yes. We sell him, as I say, recaps, and sometimes [fol. 1230] a few other small items, but it has just about fallen off to nothing.
Q. I would like to clarify a point here with respect to Mr.

Musser. Did you continue to sell Mr. Musser anything after the conversations that you related concerning the tires? This is after tires became plentiful. Did you continue to sell him?

A. Yes, we sold him. I don't just know the approximate amount, because our other salesman took care of him in that territory.

Q. You have no knowledge of whether you sold him or not?

A. But I am pretty sure we sold him right along a certain amount of merchandise.

Q. What type of merchandise?

A. Well, we did all his recapping and he would pick up—buy things from us; different items.

Q. Don't be so general; be specific. What items?

A. Well, tires and batteries, Willard batteries.

Q. He continued to purchase them right up——

A. A certain quantity. He never did stock a complete line, because he wasn't able to, but he did have several batteries in stock, Willard batteries.

Q. Did he stock these along with Atlas batteries?

A. Yes.

[fol. 1231] Q. Did he display them with Atlas batteries?

A. He never had them out in the open. They were more or less out in the back.

Q. How long did you sell Mr. Mills tires, tubes and batteries?

A. I sold him up to the time I went into the service.

Q. Do you have any knowledge whether sales were made after that time?

A. Yes, they were made up to the time—it must have been in the latter part of 1942, that the government came in and took over his equipment.

Q. That was during the period of the shortage?

A. Yes.

Mr. Somerville: I think that will be all.

The Court: Cross-examine.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Do you operate what is referred to in the trade as a "pie wagon"?

A. We operate a supply wagon; that is, we have trucks that are equipped with automotive supplies.

Q. And those trucks are loaded with merchandise that is sold to the dealers directly from the truck?

A. They are loaded with merchandise, yes. They aren't [fol. 1232] sold direct off the truck. Orders are usually taken previously.

Q. Well, is the truck just for the purpose of displaying samples, or do you sell dealers any merchandise off the truck?

A. The trucks are made—are for the purpose of delivering our own merchandise, and also displaying it.

Q. Do you make outright sales off the truck of merchandise that has not been previously ordered?

A. To who?

Q. To the dealers?

A. In some cases, yes. We pay a license to do it, though.

Q. Now after you got back from the war, did you handle this Nevada and northern California territory yourself?

A. We had salesmen that covered that area, but I took care of that area on different occasions, being the head of the sales department.

Q. Well, your concern handles Fiske tires and tubes, and Fiske batteries, doesn't it?

A. They distribute Fiske tires and tubes.

Q. And they have done that for 10 years or more?

A. Yes, more than that. I would say twelve.

Q. Now, presently what is the percentage of profit that your concern makes on the sale of Fiske tires?

[fol. 1233] A. Is that——

Mr. Somerville: I object to that question as irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Hall: If for no other purpose, if the court please, it at least shows bias.

The Court: Overruled. You may answer.

The Witness: Well, before I can answer that, you would have to tell me what type of trade.

By Mr. Hall.

Q. Well, let's take the retail, service station trade.

A. To the service station trade?

Q. Yes.

A. That would be wholesale. The amount of profit made would vary with the amount of tires the individual sold.

Q. And between what percentages would the profit vary?

A. The gross profit would be between 15 and 25 per cent.

Q. Going to your concern; is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, what would be the profit made by the retail dealer on the same merchandise?

A. His profit would vary between 25 to 35 per cent.

Mr. Somerville: I object to that as irrelevant and immaterial, and not within the scope of the complaint.

[fol. 1234] The Court: Read the question, please.

(The question and answer were read.)

The Court: the objection is overruled, and if there was a motion to strike, it will be denied. Go ahead.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, what would be the profit or the percentage of profit to your company on the sale of Fiske batteries to retail service station dealers?

A. Our percentage?

Q. Yes.

A. That would vary again with the amount purchased over the period of a year.

Q. Between what percentages would it vary?

A. I would say on batteries it would vary—to a service station it would be around 20 per cent.

Q. To what?

A. I would say between 15 to 20 per cent.

Q. 15 to 20 per cent. Now, what would be the retail service station dealer's percentage of profit on batteries?

A. His would vary between, oh, 25 to 40 per cent.

Q. Now, you mentioned the fact that I think two of these dealers you referred to mentioned Standard Oil credit cards. Is it a fact that Mr. Mills told you that he wanted to handle tires that he could credit or that he could charge on the Standard Oil credit card account?

A. Not necessarily, no.

[fol. 1235] Q. Well, I am asking you what he said.

The Court: Is that what he said?

The Witness: No.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Well, tell me what he said about credit cards.

A. He said that he wasn't able to put a Fiske tire on a Standard Oil credit card.

Q. Was that all he said about credit cards?

A. Or other makes or other brands, outside of Atlas.

Q. Is that all he said about Standard Oil credit cards?

A. In other words, Standard Oil wouldn't honor——

Q. Now, wait a minute. I want just what he said, your recollection of what he said about Standard Oil credit cards.

A. Well, he just said that the company would not honor other merchandise other than Atlas on a Standard credit card?

Q. Is that all he said?

A. Yes, that was one of the things he said.

Q. Oh, what was the other thing he said?

A. He also said that he was—that it was the company's policy to supply him with tires and batteries.

Q. I am asking you what he said about credit cards.

Mr. Somerville: Mr. Hall, he apparently has exhausted his recollection.

[fol. 1236] The witness: I have told you what he said about credit cards.

The Court: Did he say anything else about credit cards?

The Witness: No.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, what did Mr. Williams say about credit cards?

A. He said about the same thing.

Q. Well, did he say anything else than what you have said that the other gentleman said?

A. No, it amounted to about practically the same thing.

Q. How many retail accounts, separate retail accounts, have you canvassed, you personally canvassed, for tires, tubes, batteries or accessories since you came back from the war in 1946?

A. Oh, I had canvassed approximately a hundred.

Q. A hundred?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that all you have canvassed? I am not talking about the ones you necessarily sold to, but I am talking about every one you visited to sell them either tires, tubes, batteries or accessories from the time you got back from the war in 1946 down to the present time.

A. That's right; about a hundred.

[fol. 1237] Q. How many did you sell?

A. I personally sold approximately 40 to 50 accounts.

Mr. Hall: 40 or 50. That is all. Thank you.

The Court: Any redirect?

Mr. Somerville: Yes, your Honor.

Redirect examination:

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. In the conversation with Mr. Mills, a part of the conversation was with respect to credit cards. What did he say about the contract, if anything?

The Court: If anything, that is right. That is better. We both have the same thought there.

The Witness: What was the question, please?

(The question was read.)

Mr. Hall: I don't know what counsel is alluding to when he says "contract," in connection with credit cards. I didn't know we had a contract relating to credit cards.

The Court: I will reframe the question. When you were talking about the credit cards, did he say anything about a contract?

The Witness: Yes. He said he had a contract with Standard Oil to handle their products.

The Court: Is that all?

The Witness: And they, if I remember correctly, they [fol. 1238] had done some work on his building for him, remodeled it, or something, the front end.

The Court: All right.

The Witness: And that is about all.

Mr. Somerville: That is all.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: All right. Step down. We will take a short recess, gentlemen.

(A recess was taken.)

[fol. 1239] Mr. Somerville: The Government will call Mr. Orville C. Musser. At this time we offer into evidence Government's Exhibit 86 for identification.

The Court: Shall I say subject to the usual objection and overruled?

Mr. Hall: I beg pardon, sir?

The Court: Are you offering it into evidence or identifying it?

Mr. Somerville: Into evidence.

The Court: I do not think he heard you.

Mr. Hall: Yes; I want an objection shown on the grounds the documents offered are irrelevant and immaterial. Thank you, your Honor.

The Court: All right, overruled; admitted into evidence.

Orville C. Musser, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Orville, O-r-v-i-l-l-e.

The Clerk: O-r-v-i-l-l-e.

The Witness: C. Musser.

The Clerk: C. is the middle initial. How do you spell your last name, please?

The Witness: M-u-s-s-e-r.

The Court: Have you any documents that you wish [fol. 1240] identified in conjunction with the examination of this witness?

Mr. Somerville: The documents for the Government will be produced by the witness.

The Court: The reason I ask, the clerk has to go and check some matters.

Mr. Somerville: I will call for those immediately, your Honor.

The Court: All right; because I want the clerk to go and check some records.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Where do you live?

A. Portola, California.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I have a little cab business at the present time.

Q. Have you ever operated a service station at Beckwith and Sierra at Portola?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you take over the operations of this station?

A. The 1st of February, 1943.

Q. Did you enter into any agreements with Standard Oil Company concerning this service station for Standard Oil supplies?

[fol. 1241] A. Standard Stations, Inc.: yes, sir.

Q. Did you produce those agreements in response to a subpoena?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you give them to me, please?

The Government would ask that certain documents produced by this witness, which include a sublease dated March 7th, 1944, between Standard Oil Company and Orville C. Musser, a distributor agreement dated March 7th, 1944, between Standard Oil Company of California and Orville C. Musser, and certain other documents relating to a service station located at Beckwith and Sierra Streets, Portola, California; be marked for identification.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 87 marked for identification.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. After entering into those agreements, Mr. Musser, did you commence to handle Standard Oil products?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did that include lubricating oils, greases, and accessories?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know who the owner of the property is that is covered by your sublease?

A. Mr. Jack—Mr. John Schill of Portola.

[fol. 1242] Q. Mr. John Schill.

Mr. Hall: Would you pause just a moment, Mr. Somerville, to enable me to examine these documents which I expect you intend to offer into evidence?

Mr. Somerville: Yes.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. After entering into these agreements, Mr. Musser, were any verbal instructions given you with respect to handling competitive oils and gasoline?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did such instructions occur?

A. Oh, very shortly after I had taken it.

Q. Where?

A. In the office.

Q. And by whom were such instructions given and who were present at the time they were given?

A. Just the instructor and myself.

Mr. Hall: I can't hear what the witness says. Would you read the answer, please?

(Answer read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Who was the instructor?

A. Mr. Spencer Mains.

Q. Who is he?

A. He was a representative of the Standard Oil Company.

Q. Will you speak up so we can hear back here?

[fol. 1243] A. A representative for the Standard Oil Company I would say.

Q. And what were those instructions?

A. That there would be no other lubricating oils or gasoline handled by that station other than Standard Oil products.

Q. Had you experienced any demand up to that time for petroleum products other than the Standard products?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you experience any demand for competitive petroleum products after that period?

A. Just my oil, some canned oil, like Quaker State, Penzoil. We did have several calls for that.

Q. Did you have salesmen for these competitive oils come around to you in an effort to sell their product?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you buy their products?

A. No, sir.

Q. You were abiding then by the instructions given you by Mr. Mains?

A. That is right.

Q. During the period commencing the operation of your station in February, 1944 and during the war did you handle automotive accessories such as tires, tubes, and batteries, and miscellaneous accessories used by the motoring public?

[fol. 1244] A. Other than Standard Oil products?

Q. No. Did you handle these items?

A. Just the accessories.

Q. Accessories. You had no tires, tubes or batteries?

A. Very few; what we could get then.

Q. Was the Standard Oil Company able to supply you your requirements in those days?

A. No.

Q. Well, did you handle competitive products at this time?

A. When I could get them; yes.

Q. What was the answer?

A. When I could get them; yes.

Q. When you could get them. When did Standard Oil Company commence to supply you with your normal requirements of tires, tubes, and batteries?

A. Let's see; the last of—about 10 months to a year after the war was over, after rationing went off, gasoline rationing. That would be in—

Q. Were they at that time able to supply all of your requirements?

A. Well, no; not all the accessory requirements, no; and not all of the tire requirements, such as odd sizes in tires.

Q. Did you ever experience any difficulty in handling [fol. 1245] competitive accessories during the period that Standard was unable to supply you?

The Court: Just a minute, gentlemen.

(Brief intermission.)

The Court: All right; proceed.

Mr. Somerville: Do we have a pending question?

The reporter: Yes. (Pending question read.)

A. Well, they did complain some of that, not too much. They asked us—they would rather we wouldn't handle competitive products, but I suggested that we still had to make a living.

Mr. Somerville: Don't go into any conversation.

Q. At the time that Atlas supplies became more plentiful were any instructions given you by any representative of the Standard Oil Company concerning the handling of competitive products?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when were such instructions given you?

A. That was, I would say, from 10 months to a year after the gas rationing went off.

Q. And who gave you those instructions?

Mr. Hall: Just pardon me a minute. What was that date?

The Witness: It would be 10 months to a year after the gas rationing went off, or approximately.

By Mr. Somerville:

[fol. 1246] Q. Who gave you those instructions, Mr. Musser?

A. The district manager by the name of Mr. Hodges.

Q. Where were the instructions given you?

A. At the office of the place of business.

Q. Were any other parties present at the time?

A. The tank truck driver and the accessory sales manager.

Q. What was his name, do you recall?

A. Mr. Mortenson.

Q. What were the conversations?

A. Well, they looked it over and decided that——

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. Object to the conclusion of the witness.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Just the conversation. What happened with respect to anything that was said? What was said?

A. They didn't wish to have any more competitive accessories handled in that station.

Q. Were any particular accessories mentioned at the time or was it general in character?

A. Just general competitive.

Q. And did Mr. Hodges or Mr. Mortenson or any of the other gentlemen present of Standard Oil Company inspect your station?

A. They looked at the inside pretty thoroughly; yes.

[fol. 1247] Q. And did they see any competitive items prior to the conversation?

A. A few.

Q. Did you purchase Atlas tires and tubes at any time, during which you were also able to get the—pardon me, I will withdraw the question. Did you purchase any competitive tires and tubes at any time when you were able to get the same sizes from Standard Oil Company?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you then comply with the instructions which were given you by Standard Oil representatives, by Mr. Hodges?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you comply with respect to tires, tubes, and batteries?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had anybody ever called upon you from the Rissone Super Service?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or Rissone's. Who?

A. Their salesman, Mr. Ferrari, has called a few times.

Q. And have you purchased any items of them?

A. Yes. When we couldn't get certain stuff from Standard Oil Company, accessories that we should have, we purchased from Mr. Rissone.

Q. Did you purchase any competitive items from them at [fol. 1248] any time when Standard was able to supply you?

A. No, sir.

Q. How often did Mr. Hodges call at your station?

A. Well, approximately four times a year.

Q. Did he inspect your station at times?

A. A little; yes.

Q. To your knowledge did he ever see any competitive tires, tubes, and batteries on the premises?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did he ever say anything further with respect to having these competitive products in the station?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did such conversations occur?

A. Just whenever I would have them.

Q. Pardon?

A. When I would have them in my station, when I had any competitive products he would ask——

Q. Were any conversations held at the time that Atlas tires, tubes, and batteries began to become plentiful? Do you recall any conversations during that period?

A. Just instructions of not to handle any competitive brands.

Q. Did these instructions go to anything other than tires, tubes, and batteries? Were they mentioned specifically or—— [fol. 1249] A. Accessories, also.

Q. Accessories, also. Did salesmen for competitive accessories supply companies continue to call on you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you continue to have customer demand for competitive items?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you continue to stock competitive items?

A. No, sir; not the stuff we could get from Standard Oil Company, we did not.

Q. How long did you operate this service station, Mr. Musser?

A. Approximately four years.

Q. When did you leave that station?

A. December the 1st, 1947.

Mr. Somerville: That will be all.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. When did you first hear about this lawsuit?

A. I read some little article about something up here sometime back. I don't remember just when.

Q. When did you first talk to anybody about this lawsuit?

A. First talk to anybody? It has been, I would say, about six weeks ago, four weeks ago, approximately.

[fol. 1250] Q. Who was that?

A. I wouldn't know his name. I don't remember his name.

Q. A stranger to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he show you any authority or credentials?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. An FBI man?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is your present business?
A. I have a taxi line.
Q. A what?
A. Taxi, taxi business.
Q. A taxicab?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How many taxicabs?
A. One.
Q. If I understood you correctly, you said that some representative of the company told you not to handle accessories, and by "accessories" I mean something other than tires, tubes, and batteries, is that right?
A. That is right, sir.
Q. How many times did he tell you that?
A. Well, they asked me several times.
Q. Well, what do you mean by "several"?
[fol. 1251] A. Well, oh, as they would come in and there would be some item that was not Atlas.
Q. How many times, approximately, did that occur?
A. Oh, I would say three or four times.
Q. Three or four times. On those three or four occasions what accessories other than tires, tubes, and batteries were you handling that you had not purchased from Standard Oil Company?
A. Oh, there was gas caps, certain sizes of fanbelts that Atlas didn't handle, and wash mats for washing cars.
Q. Was that all?
A. And spotlights, fog lights, and car wash, carwashing soap. Let me see. And headlight fuses.
[fol. 1252] Q. What is that?
A. Headlight fuses.
Q. Headlight fuse?
A. Fuse, yes. We handle headlight fuses.
Q. I can't hear what you are saying. I am pretty close to you, but I can't hear you.
A. Automobile headlight fuses.
Q. Anything else?
A. Flashlights. Let's see. Certain sizes of oil filter elements that Atlas didn't have in stock. I don't remember if there was anything more. There may be a little more stuff. I don't remember now just what it was, just the articles.

Q. Now, you had all of the articles you have mentioned in stock on the three or four occasions the Standard Oil representative called on you; is that right?

A. That's right, sir.

Q. Did he look it over?

A. Yes, sir. And I asked him if he had it, and he said he didn't have.

Q. He said he didn't have it?

A. They didn't have it in stock, no.

Q. Well, is it my understanding that he nevertheless told you that you couldn't handle it, even though they didn't have it in stock?

[fol. 1253] A. He asked me very emphatically not to handle it.

Q. Not to handle it?

A. And I told him I had to make a living and to satisfy customers.

Q. Over what period did these three or four instances occur? How long a period?

A. They started probably in 1945.

Q. In 1935?

A. '45.

Q. '45. Up to what time?

A. Well, we had pretty well run out of competitive merchandise by the end of—by the last three months of '46.

Q. Now, you purchased tires from Mr. Rissones, didn't you?

A. That's right.

Q. And you continued to purchase those up through 1947?

A. Odd sizes that Atlas didn't have in stock.

Q. Did all of these three or four conversations occur with Mr. Hodges?

A. Well, some of them with Mr. Hodges, and Mr. Martinson; between the two of them.

Q. Between those two?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1254] Q. Did either of those Standard Oil men ever tell you that you were running a dirty service station?

A. Very often, sir.

Q. Very often?

A. In the last year.

Q. Did they, either of them, on any occasion, tell you that they had received complaints from customer concerning the condition of your station?

A. No, I don't recall.

Q. It might have occurred?

A. I don't recall that ever occurring, no.

Q. You don't recall it, but would you say that they didn't say that?

A. I don't believe they did. I wouldn't say that they did.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Has anybody from Standard Oil talked with you about this case, Mr. Musser?

A. No, sir, nobody knew anything about it because I kept it to myself.

Mr. Hall: May I have the answer read?

(The answer was read.)

[fol. 1255] The Court: You said somebody complained about your running a dirty station. Did they go into that in any greater detail, about what they complained of, or on what, the grounds, or the restroom, or what?

The Witness: They said the grounds were—at times they were dirty, but it is very dusty and very windy up there at times.

The Court: Where is this located?

The Witness: Portola, California.

The Court: That is in Monterey County?

The Witness: In Plumas County.

The Court: What?

The Witness: In Plumas County.

The Court: Oh, in Plumas County. I see.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Did the Standard Oil Company ever furnish you with anybody to help keep the station clean?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever buy any tires from Rissmes that Standard was able to supply at the time?

A. No, sir.

Q. How often did Mr. Hodges inspect your station and look through your stock?

A. Well, about four times; three to four times a year.

Q. Did he ever specifically call your attention to fan belts, for example, that might be competitive?

[fol. 1256] A. Yes, he did.

Q. Do you recall what type of fan belt it was and what happened?

A. I showed him the size of it, and we looked through the book, and it was an odd size that they did not handle.

Q. And was anything said at that time?

A. Well, just—he said it looked a little bad, having competitive merchandise.

Mr. Hall: What was that? Will you read that answer? (The answer was read.)

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Did he instruct you to thereafter purchase from Standard or did he give you any instructions at all?

A. He asked——

The Court: Strike out the first part and leave the last part of the question: Did he give you any instructions.

Mr. Somerville: Yes.

Q. Did he give you any instructions?

A. Just to purchase Atlas brand products.

Q. By the way, how much gasoline were your pumping at this station when you took over?

A. It had been closed down for a number of weeks when I took over.

Q. How did the gallonage run thereafter, during the period that you operated the station?

[fol. 1257] A. It continually increased in gallonage right up until the last—I would say until just about the last month that I was there.

Q. Did you ever receive any complaints personally from any of your customers concerning the condition of the premises?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you make an effort to keep the premises clean?

A. Very much so. I worked hard.

Mr. Somerville: That will be all.

Recross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, let me get this clear about the gallonage. What gallonage were you pumping on the average when you took over the station?

A. It was very small.

Q. What was it?

A. I don't remember just what the gallonage was, but it was very small.

Q. What is your best recollection?

A. I don't—I would say the first month it wasn't over—I don't believe over 1,000 or 1200 gallons.

Q. Not over 1,000 gallons, is that your answer?

A. That's not—possibly a little over, but not much.

[fol. 1258] Q. I see. When you left the station, what were you pumping on the average?

A. Well, we averaged—let's see—the last 9 to 11 months we run——

Q. Please speak a little louder——

A. Approximately between 90,000 and 100,000 gallons, the last months we were there.

Q. Between what?

A. Between 90,000 and 100,000 gallons the last 9 months we were there, or 11 months.

Q. Do you attribute the fact, if it be a fact, that your station was cleaner at that time, to the increased sale of gasoline?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words, you believe that with a cleaner station you can sell more gasoline?

A. Well, that's right.

Q. Do you recall when it was that gasoline rationing ceased?

A. Let's see. Sometime in the last half of 1945, if my memory is correct.

Q. You took over during the war, didn't you, in 1943?

A. Yes, sir; shortly after I come out of service.

Q. Gasoline rationing was on then, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1259] Q. All right. Now, what was your station pumping during the first month, let us say, after gasoline rationing ceased?

A. I don't remember, sir, just what it was.

Q. Well, approximately.

A. Well, let's see. It was approximately between eight and ten thousand gallons.

Mr. Hall: That is all. Thank you.

The Court: Anything further?

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. At the time you prepared to leave this station, Mr. Musser, did you receive any complaints from the owner of the property, Mr. Schill, regarding your operation of the property?

A. He was very much put out about it.

Q. What do you mean?

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. I move to strike the answer of the witness as being a conclusion.

The Court: Yes, it may be stricken. He asked you if you received any complaints.

The Witness: No, no complaints.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Was there some conversation regarding your leaving with Mr. Schill?

[fol. 1260] Mr. Hall: Just a minute. If the court please, that is objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, calling for hearsay, and not within the issues.

The Court: Yes, I think that calls for a self-serving declaration. Some other man may testify as to what he did, because it goes to intendment, but that is a little too far afield.

Mr. Hall: May the last answer of the witness go out?

The Court: I didn't hear it, keen as my hearing is. I wish my eyesight was as good as my hearing. The answer is stricken. Is that all?

Mr. Somerville: That is all.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Somerville: At this point, your Honor, I would like to offer in evidence——

The Court: The clerk has it now. I didn't understand just what form of agreement it was. Are you offering it now?

Mr. Somerville: Yes, I offer this in evidence.

The Court: I didn't hear it once or twice, and I know he wants to make an objection.

Mr. Somerville: The government offers Exhibit 87 in evidence.

Mr. Hall: The defendant objects to each and all of the documents so offered on the ground they are irrelevant and [fols. 1261-1262] immaterial.

The Court: I have examined them. They are of the type heretofore admitted. The objection is overruled. They may be received in evidence.

The Clerk: 87 in evidence.

The Court: Gentlemen, the hour is late and we will adjourn, unless, as I said yesterday, you have some urgent short witness who is from a great distance. I gather that most of these people do not come from very great distances.

Mr. Driscoll: Well, I have some witnesses here from Nevada and San Francisco.

The Court: Well, it is pretty late. Bring them in tomorrow. When you have them down here and when you are just filling in, it is just as well to give precedence to the outsiders, the men who come from distances and whose business is disorganized by their being here, especially when you are dealing with men who are in an individual or a one-man business.

Tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock, gentlemen.

(Whereupon, at 5:15 o'clock p.m. Tuesday, May 18, 1948, an adjournment was taken until 10:00 o'clock a.m., Wednesday, May 19, 1948.)

[fols. 1263-1264] IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES IN AND FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, CENTRAL DIVISION

Honorable Leon R. Yankwich, Judge Presiding

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff, vs. STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA and STANDARD STATIONS, INC., Defendants.	No. 6159-Y-Civil

REPORTERS' TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS

Los Angeles, California
Wednesday, May 19, 1948

APPEARANCES:

(As heretofore noted.)

[fol. 1265]

Los Angeles, California,
Wednesday, May 19, 1948, 10:00 a.m.

The Court: Cause on trial.

The Clerk: 6159, Civil, United States v. Standard Oil Company.

Mr. Driscoll: The government will call Mr. Robert F. Clapp.

ROBERT F. CLAPP, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination

The Clerk: Take the stand, please, sir. What is your name, please?

The Witness: Robert F. Clapp.

The Clerk: Robert F., and the spelling of your last name?

The Witness: C-l-a-p-p.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Clapp?

A. 560 Tiopa Drive, in Pacific Palisades.

Q. What business or occupation are you engaged in?

A. I am an automobile dealer.

Q. What automobiles do you handle?

A. DeSoto and Plymouth.

Q. What is the address of that business?

[fol. 1266] A. That is 2201 Westwood Boulevard, Los Angeles—West Los Angeles.

Q. Is that operated by you alone?

A. No, I have a partner.

Q. Under what firm and style name do you operate?

A. Hughes & Clapp.

Q. Do you handle petroleum products, gasoline and lubricating oils?

A. No gasoline; lubricating oils.

Q. What type of lubricating oils do you handle?

A. Standard Oil.

Q. In response to a subpoena, Mr. Clapp, did you bring to the court with you certain documents and contracts?

A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Driscoll: May I have them, please?

(The documents were handed to counsel.)

Mr. Driscoll: The government will ask to have marked for identification a document entitled "Petroleum Products and Equipment Agreement," between the Standard Oil Company of California and Hughes & Clapp, 2201 Westwood Boulevard, West Los Angeles, California, dated November 22, 1944.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 88, marked for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

[fol. 1267] Q. Mr. Clapp, I hand you what has been marked for identification as Exhibit 88 and ask you what this document is, if you know.

A. Well, it is our contract with Standard Oil for the handling of their products and installation of equipment.

Q. And on the reverse side of the first page thereof there are some signatures. Do you know whose signatures those are?

A. Yes, that is my partner's signature. These I don't know. This one I do know.

Q. Whose signature is that?

A. That is the owner of the corner property.

Q. And the name is?

A. Nina G. Anderton.

Q. Now, pursuant to that agreement, the Government's Exhibit to which you have just testified, what, if anything, was done with respect to any installation of equipment?

A. Well, all equipment was installed, possibly not by Standard Oil, but on the orders of the Standard Oil Company.

Q. What was the cost of that equipment, if you know?

A. Approximately $3800.

Q. What arrangements were made, if any, for the payment of that?

A. To be paid off at so much a month over a period of 60 months, I believe $43.60 a month, or something like that.

Q. Do you know, then, what the cost of that equipment [fol. 1268] will be to you?

A. It will be around twenty-six or twenty-seven hundred.

Q. Are you in personal touch with the lubricating division of your firm, the operators?

A. I wouldn't say I was in too close personal contact with it, no.

Q. Do you or do you not know, of your own knowledge, whether any customers have requested lubricating oils other than the kind you handle?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Pursuant to this contract, what lubricating oils do you handle?

A. Standard Oil.

Q. Do you know, Mr. Clapp, how much lubricating oil and greases you have purchased from Standard Oil since the inception of that contract?

A. I believe it is around 4500 gallons.

Q. And that would be over a period——

A. That is a period of three years.

Q. Three years.

A. It is about 4900 gallons. Pardon me.

Q. That includes the greases and lubricating oil?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know, of your own knowledge, Mr. Clapp, [fol. 1269] whether or not the lubricating department of your company purchases any other greases or oil other than the petroleum products of Standard Oil?

A. From the standpoint of lubricating oils, I don't believe so.

Q. What type do you purchase, if you purchase any others?

A. Oh, we purchase what they call break-in oils, and possibly some other oils, that are furnished by the Chrysler Corporation.

Q. And that is pursuant to your dealership service of cars?

A. Yes.

Mr. Driscoll: Very well. I think that is all, your Honor. You may examine, Mr. Hall.

[fol. 1270] If I may, Mr. Hall, first offer this before you examine?

Mr. Hall: Certainly.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government now moves the admission of Exhibit 88 for identification. I call attention to paragraph 5 thereof in which it is agreed that

> "Dealer shall pay to Company for the use of Company's facilities on said premises, as follows: $43.66 per month payable on the first of each month in advance for 60 months beginning January 1st, 1945."

And paragraph 11, which is:

> "The term of this agreement shall be from January 1st, 1945 to December 31st, 1949 but if during said period said dealer shall not have purchased from Company 36,000 gallons of lubricating oils and greases, this agreement shall continue in full force and effect until such time as said number of gallons of lubricating oils and greases have been purchased by Dealer from Company."

Mr. Hall: Objection is made by the defendants to each and all of the documents offered on the grounds that they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: Government's 88 in evidence.

Mr. Hall: Are you done with your examination, Mr. [fol. 1271] Driscoll?

Mr. Driscoll: Yes, sir.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Are you entirely satisfied with Standard Oil's products?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Driscoll: That is all.

The Court: All right; call your next witness.

Mr. Driscoll: That is all, Mr. Clapp, thank you. Call Mr. Jim Callicoatt.

JAMES C. CALLICOATT, called as a witness by plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: James C. Callicoatt.

The Clerk: James C., and what is your last name?

The Witness: Callicoatt, C-a-l-l-i-c-o-a-t-t.

The Clerk: C-a-l-l-i-c-o-a-t-t?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Callicoatt?

A. 7731 Dumbarton Avenue in Los Angeles.

[fol. 1272] Q. What business are you engaged in?

A. I am a service station operator, sir.

Q. In response to a subpoena did you bring with you documents?

A. Yes, sir; I brought my agreement of a contract.

Q. Will you let me have it, please?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will ask to have marked for identification the documents produced by the witness entitled "Dealer Agreement TBA," dated July 1, 1946, between the Standard Oil and James C. Callicoatt of the premises at 1697 Pacific Avenue, Venice, California.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 89 marked for identification

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Mr. Callicoatt, I now hand you what has been marked as Government's Exhibit 89 for identification and ask you to examine it, and after examination state, if you know, what this document is?

A. Yes, sir; It is a TBA agreement between Standard Oil and myself to operate the business which I now operate.

Q. After entering into this agreement to which you have testified, Mr. Callicoatt, did you have at that time or approximately at that time any interview with any official of the Standard Oil Company?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1273] Q. Where and when did that interview take place and who was present?

A. At the time of the signing of the contract in Long Beach.

Q. Where?

A. In Long Beach.

Q. Long Beach. And with whom did you have an interview?

A. Mr. Furrer, I believe.

Mr. Hall: I did not get that name. What was that name?

The Witness: Mr. Furrer.

The Reporter: Do you know how to spell it?

The Witness: No; I don't

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. And what was that conversation?

Mr. Hall: That is objected to as no proper foundation laid.

The Court: Read the question again.

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Driscoll: You may answer.

A. We discussed the contract and the agreement of contract and the signing of it, sir.

Q. At or approximately at that time did you have any further conversations with him or with any other official [fol. 1274] of the company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who was present at that interview?

A. A representative, I imagine a sales representative, sir. We were together and discussed the items to be stocked and went through catalogs and operation system and so forth.

Q. And was anything said as to your carrying and stocking tires, tubes, and batteries?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. No proper foundation has been laid for the conversation.

The Court: I think you had better lay a better foundation.

Mr. Driscoll: I thought I had, at the time of the signing of the contract with a sales representative.

Mr. Hall: No. Pardon me, sir. He said this was after that. The time is entirely vague.

Mr. Driscoll: Very well.

Q. Subsequent to your interview and conversation with Mr. Furrer, Mr. Callicoatt, did you have a conversation with some other representative?

A. After my conversation with Mr. Furrer, sir.

Q. And at what time, when, and where?

A. In the Long Beach office, just after signing the contract, as best I remember, sir.

[fol. 1275] Q. Now, what was said in that conversation?

A. That was the discussion of the products and the operation schedule.

Q. From this sales representative did you receive any instructions as to the items of merchandise you were to be supplied with or carry?

Mr. Hall: Now, if the court please, that is leading. Objected to as leading and suggestive, calling for the conclusion of the witness. I think the witness should be asked what was said.

The Court: I think so. Please reframe your question.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. What was said at this conversation, Mr. Callicoatt?

A. Just now, sir? The last question?

Mr. Driscoll: I will withdraw that question.

Q. At the time that you had this interview with the sales representative was anything said as to the stock of merchandise?

A. Yes, sir: tires, tubes, and batteries, and accessories would be purchased from our accessory warehouses.

Q. And did you follow those instructions, or have you?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That calls for—I move to strike the answer of the witness until I can object.

The Court: All right.

[fol. 1276] Mr. Hall: Objected to as calling for a conclusion of the witness and leading and suggestive. The examiner is putting words in the witness' mouth that the witness has not testified to.

The Court: All right. Read the question.

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Court: The objection is sustained. The witness should be asked what he did.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Have you purchased items, miscellaneous accessories, or tires, tubes, and batteries other than those handled, sponsored and distributed by Standard Oil?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During what time did you purchase those?

A. During the early part of '46, sir.

Q. Since this interview you had to which you have testified at the time you entered into the contract have you had any further interviews with Standard Oil Representatives?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When and where did that interview take place?

A. Early part of '48 was the most important interview. My supervisor brought my bonus check.

Q. And what is his name?

A. Mr. Jim Barber.

Q. And what was that conversation?

[fol. 1277] A. He stated that it could be better, and it seemed bad from my books or the units record to buy thousands of dollars worth of tires, tubes, and batteries and a small amount of miscellaneous accessories; and that in the future my bonus check would be much better if I bought more accessories.

Q. Since that time have you purchased any outside miscellaneous accessories?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were those items that you purchased items which are also sponsored and sold by Standard Oil?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you include in those miscellaneous accessories tires and tubes and batteries?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you again, other than tires, tubes, and batteries have you purchased any miscellaneous accessories outside of the line sponsored by Standard Oil?

A. Yes, sir; when there is quick demand for it, sir.

[fol. 1278] Q. When there is quick demand?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, have you had customer demand for oils, lubricating oils, other than the products sold and distributed by Standard Oil Company?

A. I have, sir.

Q. Have you purchased any such outside oils?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you have any customers who buy their gasoline from you but request lubricating oils other than Standard oils?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any such customers that request lubricating service of you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What do you do when such request is made?

A. Sir, I have customers that bring their own oil. I will lubricate their car and use their oil.

Q. What kind of oil do they bring?

A. I have one that brings Ring-Free, and I have one that brings Quaker State.

Q. Do you have any customer demand for tires other than the Atlas brand?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you stock such tires?

[fol. 1279] A. No, sir.

Q. Are you able to supply the demand that is made of you for brands of tires other than the tires sponsored by Standard Oil?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do you do that?

A. Some—well, for instance, a customer comes in and demands or I can't sell him an Atlas tire. He wants a U. S. Royal or a U. S. tire. I contact the U. S. Rubber dealer in the locality and purchase the tires from them and mount them on the customer's car right there.

Q. You do not display them?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Driscoll: One moment, if your Honor please.

Q. Now, as to these miscellaneous items, Mr. Callicoatt, which you purchased on quick demand for customers,—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —do you regularly stock them from sources other than Standard Oil?

A. No, sir.

Q. I have forgotten, and did you or did you not testify that you never carried any outside oils, brands other than Standard Oil?

A. No, sir, I do not carry any others.

Q. You do not stock them?

[fol. 1280] A. No, sir.

Mr. Driscoll: You may examine.

Mr. Hall: Are you going to offer your exhibit in evidence?

Mr. Driscoll: Thank you, counsel.

The government will offer for admission in evidence Exhibit 89, for identification, TBA agreement dated July 1, 1946 between James C. Callicoatt and Standard Oil Company.

Mr. Hall: The defendant objects to the documents offered, and to each of them, on the ground they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 89 in evidence.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. You have referred, Mr. Callicoatt, to a conversation you had with, I think it was, Jim Barber, when he brought you a bonus check?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember that conversation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He pointed out at that time, did he not, that you could include accessories purchased from Standard, in addition to tire, tubes, and batteries, in the amount upon which the bonus was figured?

[fol. 1281] A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was his suggestion that if you would buy more of those accessories, and I am not talking about tires, tubes and batteries, but if you would buy more of those accessories from Standard you would make a bigger bonus? Wasn't that the substance of his conversation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you mentioned that two people brought in their own oil when you serviced their cars; that one of them brought Ring-Free oil and the other brought Quaker State. Do you remember that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were those the only two customers you had that requested oils that you didn't carry?

A. No, sir.

Q. How many others were there?

A. Sir, there is quite a few over a period of a year. Should I say they are tourists? I don't know the customers. They are not regular customers, but they have their oil with them.

Q. They have their oil with them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When they have their oil with them, they want you to use the oil they have with them?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1282] Q. Before you became the operator of this station, Mr. Callicoatt, what were you doing? What was your business?

A. I was manager of a Douglas welfare station at Santa Monica.

Q. Employed by Douglas, were you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To make a long story short, Standard Oil Company set you up in business down there in Venice, didn't they?

A. How do you mean, sir?

Q. Well, I mean that that was the first time you had operated an independent dealer station?

A. On my own, yes, sir.

Q. And they helped you to do it, didn't they?

A. I had no assistance from any company salesman or management, if that is what you mean.

Q. You had no assistance?

A. Not that I recall. I had no——.

Q. You didn't own the property, did you?

A. No, sir; that is, the company owned it.

Q. Who first approached you to get you to take over that property?

A. Nobody approached me. I approached them.

Q. Oh, you went to Standard, did you?

A. Yes.

Q. And asked to be made a dealer?

[fol. 1283] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, how many brands of Standard lubricating oil do you regularly stock?

A. How many brands, sir?

Q. Yes. Do you have the RPM?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have Zerolene?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have Standard Penn?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many grades of each of those brands do you carry?

A. I carry from 10 to 50.

Q. From what?

A. From No. 10 to 50 in each oil.

Q. How many grades would that be in each one?

A. Five, sir.

Q. Five of each one?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that would make 15 grades all together that you carry in the station?

A. Yes, sir, besides my—yes, sir.

Q. Do you carry that in bulk in the station?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what they call highboys? Is that the name?

[fol. 1284] A. Yes, highboy drums; yes, sir.

Q. Big drums, is that it, with a faucet on the top?

A. That's right, sir.

Q. Where do you keep those drums? In the station office?

A. Yes, sir. I have small drums displayed in the office, and I have my lubricating oils in the back in plain sight, displayed.

Q. How many gallons does each of those big drums contain?

A. 30, sir.

Q. 30?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So you have containers there for about 450 gallons?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you mentioned cases where customers expressed a preference for some oil that was not a Standard Oil Company product like Ring-Free and Quaker State?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do those types of customers express a preference for just one type of oil or does one express a preference for one make and another for another make, and so on?

A. I have today the same customers. They are still using the same oil that I mentioned, and they still bring it with them.

[fol. 1285] Q. They still bring it with them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But isn't it true that one customer likes one kind of oil and another likes another?

A. Apparently.

Q. Are you satisfied with your relations with Standard?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Mr. Callicoatt, are you paid a salary by the Standard Oil Company?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Hall: What was that?

Mr. Driscoll: Are you paid a salary by the Standard Oil Company?

Mr. Hall: Did he say "No, sir"?

(The answer was read.)

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. When you first started to operate that station, Mr. Callicoatt, how much rent did you pay?

A. One cent a gallon.

Q. At that time how many gallons were you pumping, approximately, if you know?

A. Well, the station was closed temporarily when I went [fol. 1286] in, and it was very low gallonage.

Q. Was there a maximum or a minimum rent on the gallonage basis?

Mr. Hall: Doesn't the contract speak for itself?

Mr. Driscoll: I am asking when he first started. It might have changed. I don't know how many of these contracts there are.

Mr. Hall: I don't think there is a proper foundation laid for the question, if the court please. Objection on that ground.

The Court: I think a better foundation should be laid.

Mr. Driscoll: I didn't hear that, your Honor.

The Court: I say, I think a better foundation should be laid.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. How many gallons were you pumping when you went into this station?

A. I checked my books this morning before I came down, and on July 1st, I think, I am not positive, it was twelve hundred and some odd gallons for the month of July. I am not sure.

Q. How many gallons a month are you pumping at this station now?

A. It varies, but it is close to 8,000.

Q. In other words, you started at 1200 and have gone to 8,000 gallons?

[fol. 1287] A. Something like that, sir; approximately.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit 89, paragraph 6, and ask you whether the rent that is provided for in that paragraph of $4.50 a month, plus 1 cent a gallon, with a minimum of $86.50 is the rent that you still pay?

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute before you answer that question.

No objection.

Mr. Driscoll: Will you read the question to him, please.

(The question was read.)

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. At the outset of this contract and until such times as you went to 8,000 gallons you were paying a rent of $86.50; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think you have testified, Mr. Callicoatt, that you do not carry in stock tires, tubes and batteries other than those sponsored by Standard Oil, nor do you carry in stock lubricating oils other than those marketed and sponsored or sold by Standard Oil. I ask you whether or not your sales would be more or less if you carried the brands of tires, tubes and batteries and lubricating oils with respect to which you have testified you have a demand.

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. That question is objected [fol. 1288] to as calling for a conclusion of the witness, speculation and conjecture, and no proper foundation laid.

Mr. Driscoll: Your Honor please, the witness has testified that he has customer demand for oils other than the Standard oils, and that he has demand for tires, tubes and batteries other than the products sponsored and distributed by Standard Oil. He has also testified he does not stock them but goes out and gets them on a quick demand basis. Counsel for the defendant has gone into the question of profits and bonuses. I think I have a right to let this witness explain why he purchases these outside products on quick demand and whether or not his sales would be greater, in reference to defendants opening up the question of profits.

The Court: The objection will be sustained. The defendant has a right in questioning the motive of the witness to go into the question of profit. That is the only materiality in order to show that perhaps he is motivated by making a greater profit than with other products. That is the only question we are interested in, is whether this tie-in, if I may so characterize it, between Standard Stations and various stations which it uses as outlets for its products under one arrangement or another are violative of the law as restraints upon commerce, either under the Sherman Anti-trust law or the Clayton Act, or both. That is all we are interested in, and nothing else. Anything that [fol. 1289] does not bear upon that is not material.

Anything further?

Mr. Driscoll: Nothing further, your Honor.

Recross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. When you took charge of that station, the building and equipment were already in, weren't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: That is all. Thank you.

The Court: Step down. Call your next witness.

Mr. Driscoll: I call Mr. Warren F. Emerson.

Warren F. Emerson, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: Take the stand, please, sir. What is your name, please?

The Witness: Warren F. Emerson.

The Clerk: E-m-e-r-s-o-n?

The Witness: That's right.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where is your residence?

A. At 8940 47th Avenue, San Francisco.

[fol. 1290] Q. And your occupation?

A. I am a salesman.

Q. How long have you been a salesman?

A. Since the 19th of March, 1948.

Q. What was your business——

Mr. Hall: I beg your pardon. I didn't get the year. What year was that?

The Witness: 1948. This year.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. What was your business and occupation, if any, prior to that time?

A. I operated a Chevron station at 48th Avenue and Fulton; at 7200 Fulton Street, San Francisco.

Q. How long had you operated that station?

A. Since August 16, 1940.

Mr. Driscoll: The government would like to have marked for identification a document purporting to be a distributor agreement dated August 15, 1940, between Standard Oil Company of California and Warren F. Emerson.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 90, marked for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Mr. Emerson, I hand you what has been marked as Exhibit 90, for identification, and ask you to examine this document, and after examination state, if you can, what it is.

A. Well, it is a distributor agreement which I signed [fol. 1291] when I first took over the station.

Q. You signed it, you say. Are you referring to a signature appearing at the bottom of the second page of the exhibit?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Warren F. Emerson?

A. That's right.

Q. Do you know whose signature other than yours appears on the document?

A. No, I am not familiar with that man.

Q. At the time you entered into this contract to which you have testified, Mr. Emerson, did you have any interviews or conversations with anyone representing the Standard Oil Company?

[fol. 1292] A. Previous to my operating the service station on my own, why, I worked for the Standard Stations, Inc. I was manager of four different stations for them in the City of San Francisco and I had been manager of this same station previous to the time I took it over. In 1940, when I took over the station there at 48th and Fulton, the business had run down considerably, and, as I say, I had been manager there before and I wanted to build it up and have a business of my own. I had been successful in building up three or four other stations that the company operated and I figured if I could do it for the company, I could do it for myself. So I asked for 48th and Fulton and I was given that station to operate. The business had——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. I think that answers the question. A lot of this is not responsive to the question.

The Court: All right. That is not a valid objection in this court. It is in the State court, but we are not required to follow the State court here. Somebody put that absurd principle into the Statutes that the answer be restricted if not responsive. It has never been the law of California until somebody in the Legislature made it so. The only objection to an answer is materiality and relevancy, but it is not necessary merely because we adopt the Socratic method of asking questions and receiving answers, does not mean that the person, when you ask him a question, [fol. 1293] cannot give a narrative of matters that occurred, without being prompted every minute or so by questions.

But I think his answer was complete and the rest of it was not called for by the question. It is better to limit the answer so that we know that he will not bring in foreign matter. But the mere fact that it is not responsive is not a good objection which we observe in the Federal Court.

Go ahead.

A. Well——

The Court: No. You have completed your answer.

Mr. Driscoll: Yes.

Q. After the preliminary negotiations that you have testified to at or approximately at the time that you signed the contract did you have a conversation with a representative of the Standard Oil Company relative to your operation of this station?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was that conversation, where did it take place, and who was present?

A. Well, it took place at the station and in regards to the operation of the station.

Q. Who was there and when did it occur, if you know?

A. Mr. Monard, I believe, was the superintendent at that time when I first took that station over. And it was conversation dealing with the operation of the service [fol. 1294] station, keeping the premises clean and orderly, and selling the company's stock of Atlas tires, batteries, tubes and other accessories that they handled.

Q. And during the period of time in which you operated this station did you handle any other tires and batteries or miscellaneous accessories other than those sponsored or distributed by the Standard Oil?

A. Do I get your question that you mean during this whole entire period of eight and one-half years that I was there?

Q. Well, during any period of time did you handle any other than those brands?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when was that?

A. Well, shortly after the start of the war materials became scarce and the company were not able to supply me with numerous articles like cables; there was a shortage of cables; there was a shortage of fan belts; there was a shortage of tires. Well, the fact is tires were rationed, and after the rationing of tires was lifted, why, there was an acute shortage of tires, tubes, and batteries.

Q. Prior to that time of shortage had you carried any items of merchandise other than those sponsored or sold by the Standard Oil Company?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 1295] Mr. Driscoll: At this time the Government will ask to have marked for identification a document purporting to be a dealer agreement TBA dated November 15, 1945, between Standard Oil and Warren F. Emerson.

The Clerk: Government's 91 marked for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Now, Mr. Emerson, at any time subsequent to the time that you testified that there was a shortage and you carried other items did you have any further conversations with representatives of the Standard Oil Company?

A. In November of 1945 the company came out with the dealer agreement TBA.

Q. Continue.

A. And they came out with that due to the fact that there was a shortage of items and that gave me permission to buy and fill in items that they could not supply.

Q. I hand you what has been marked as Exhibit 91 for identification and ask you to examine this and state, if you know, what it is?

A. Yes; that is the dealer agreement TBA that I signed in 1945, November.

Q. And you state that you signed it. Are you referring to the signature "Warren F. Emerson" appearing on the second page thereof?

A. That is right.

[fol. 1296] Q. Do you know whose signature it is over the legend "Assistant General Manager of Standard Oil Company"?

A. I have heard of the man but I never have met him.

Q. After you had signed this dealer agreement TBA did you have any conversation with representatives of the Standard Oil Company relative to your handling outside products?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that conversation?

A. Well, Mr. Krisel used to come around about——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute.

A. —every week.

Mr. Hall: We object to this and move that the answer be stricken as irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Driscoll: He is laying the foundation for a conversation.

The Court: This is a preliminary question. All right; fix your time when the first conversation was.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Approximately when was the first of those, if there were more than one conversation?

A. Well, after the signing of this agreement, the second agreement?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, there was a conversation at the time he brought out the agreement.

[fol. 1297] Q. What was said at that time?

A. Well, he stated what the agreement was; that it gave me permission to buy and fill in on stock that they were short on. And I thought that was a good idea, because I had been doing it for quite some little while, anyway. I was forced to because they didn't have the stock like fan belts and cables, and even spark plugs were critically short at one time.

Q. When was the next time, if there was a further conversation, that anything occurred in that regard? I will withdraw the question. Directing your attention to a month, or the fall of 1947, last fall, I will ask you whether or not at that time you had any conversation with any representative of the Standard Oil Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who was that and where did it take place and who was present?

A. Well, Mr. Krisel called on the station every week or approximately every week, and last fall material and supplies and equipment, that is, stock, the critical shortage period is over or was over, the company were beginning to get fan belts back, and cables, and tires and tubes were becoming gradually more plentiful. So he began telling me that I would have to stock more Atlas products. You see, during the critical shortage I——

[fol. 1298] The Court: Don't give explanations. You are on the conversation. Just go on with what you told him.

A. Well, I had built up a considerable stock of competitive products so as to have merchandise on hand to sell and take care of the requirements of anybody that happened to come in the station that needed a fan belt or a cable or a spark plug. I wanted to have the size that they needed for their car. And Mr. Krisel told me that due to the fact that they were getting their stock back in shape, that he wanted me to sell more Atlas products. And he not only told me once but numerous times. Every time he would come out to the station he would look around to see how my stock was. And I did start filling in with the Atlas products that they had. Whenever I needed, for instance, fan belts—I had a complete stock of Gates fan belts that I had put in during the critical shortage period—and, as their fan belts came back and as the Gates belts ran out, I replaced what belts I needed with Atlas belts. I did that with everything.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Did you have other different conversations subsequent to that time?

A. Well, that was generally the theme of the conversation on his visits, was that he wanted me to sell more Atlas products and get rid of the competitive stock I had on hand.

Q. Did you have any customers who requested of you items of merchandise, tires, batteries, accessories, or oils [fol. 1299] other than the products that were sponsored and sold by Standard Oil?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. And did you stock any lubricating oils in response to these requests?

A. Not at the station.

Q. You did stock some?

A. I had several customers who persisted in wanting Pennzoil and I stocked a certain amount of it in my basement at the house just for their needs.

Q. Now, Mr. Emerson, calling your attention to about the month of February of 1948, this year, I will ask you whether or not at that time you were carrying any tires other than the Atlas brand of tires?

Mr. Hall: May I have the question?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. May I have the question read, please?

The Court: All right.

(Question read by the reporter.)

Mr. Hall: Thank you.

The Court: All right, you may answer.

A. Yes, sir; I did.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. And at or about that same time did you have a con- [fol. 1300] versation with anyone of the Standard Oil Company relative to that stock of tires? And just answer yes or no, Mr. Emerson.

A. Yes.

Q. Who was that representative; where did this conversation take place, and what was said?

A. The representative was Mr. Krisel and it occurred at the station. In January of this year the company came out with consigned—consigned tires and tubes. They became plentiful enough that they could do that. Previous to that time I had had to buy tires and tubes and batteries wherever I could get them. If the company had them, I bought them from them; if they didn't have them, I bought them wherever else I could get them. And, as a result, I had four tires and several—oh, a couple of batteries left over in February of this year that I had not sold. There was two Firestone and one Goodyear and one Goodrich Silvertown.

Q. All right. Now, did you have a conversation regarding that?

A. Well, Mr. Krisel didn't like the idea of my having those competitive tires on hand and he told me to get rid of them as soon as possible.

Q. And did you thereafter secure or have delivered to you any Atlas tires?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1301] Q. What were the circumstances and facts surrounding that delivery?

A. Well, this year—of course, now, they were consigned, and the only time that they were delivered was when I would make a sale of a tire and I would have to replace that tire. It was consigned stock. Last year, previous to the time that they consigned tires to me, Mr. Krisel was out to the station and we were discussing the quota of the tires—they had quotas in those days—and I had these competitive tires on hand at the time, possibly not the same ones that I had there in February of this year, but others, and the next day after his visit I received four Atlas tires C.O.D. at the station. And I was a little short on finances at the time and I called the office to see if I couldn't have those tires, couldn't accept them then and pay for them the following month, and they refused. So I sent the tires back. I didn't really need the tires. I had tires on hand but they were competitive.

Q. Now, when was the last time that you had any conversation with anyone of the Standard Oil Company relative to the products of the Standard Oil Company or those which you had at your service station?

A. The last time, you say?

Q. Yes. When was your last such conversation?

A. Well, the first part of February of this year I

[fol. 1302] called Mr. Krisel to tell him that I wanted to be released from the station.

Q. Why were you terminating your contract?

A. Well, Mr. Krisel had let me know in his various visits that the company wanted me to handle and sell Atlas products exclusively, as it had been before the shortage took place, and during this time of critical shortage period, in my buying of competitive products like batteries and tires and fan belts and spark plugs and numerous other items, I had found that I could buy from other distributors at a lower price. In other words, I made more profit by handling other products, although it was the same, for instance, Champion Spark Plugs were the same spark plug that the company handled. And I knew that, with the higher cost of operation, higher rent, that is, the higher wages that I had to pay and the—well, there just wasn't enough money in the service station business to interest me. I wanted to get out.

Q. And what was the result of that request of the company?

A. Well, Mr. Krisel told me it would possibly take two weeks to get a buyer. The fact is it took five weeks to get a buyer. He also told me that he wouldn't pick a man unless he had at least $3,000 more than the inventory value of products on hand.

Q. Now, at that time did you have any stock of mer-[fol. 1303] chandise other than the Atlas brand of tires, tubes, batteries, and miscellaneous accessories?

A. I had a large stock other than Atlas products.

Q. And did you have any conversation with Mr. Krisel or any other representative of Standard Oil relative to that stock of merchandise?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: I did not quite hear the question.

(Question read by the reporter.)

The Court: That requires just an answer yes or no. That is a preliminary question. Answer yes or no, and counsel will ask you for more detail.

A. Yes.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Yes; I did.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where and at what time and who was present at that conversation?

A. That conversation took place at the station with Mr. Krisel.

Q. And what was said?

A. Just a week previous to my actually selling the station they had picked a young man by the name of Jensen that was going to buy the station——

Mr. Hall: I move to strike the answer of the witness [fol. 1304] as given thus far on the grounds that it is irrelevant and immaterial, no proper foundation laid.

The Court: That may be stricken. He is asking you for a specific conversation, so confine yourself to what you told the man. Do not give us any preamble of other things which do not concern us. Just get down to the conversation of what you told him on that particular occasion.

The Witness: Mr. Krisel told me, your Honor.

The Court: That is all right. That is part of the conversation. A conversation implies both sides, both sides participating.

A. Mr. Krisel looked over the stock of Gates belts that I had on hand. I had a large stock of Gates belts. And he said, "You will have to get rid of those Gates belts before the new owner comes in."

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Did he say anything further with respect to that?

A. Well, that was an order, I had to get rid of them, which I did.

Q. Now, Mr. Emerson, you testified to some quota. What do you mean by quota? Will you tell us what you mean? You got caught with some quota?

A. Quota?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't quite get your meaning there, quota.

[fol. 1305] The Court: Well, you stated you were getting products on a quota or you were getting a certain percentage.

The Witness: Oh, during rationing, you mean?

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Oh, you got them on quota during rationing?

A. When the tires, tubes and batteries were critically short the company used to break down the available tires, batteries, and tubes that they had, and they would divide them up between the different dealers and each one got his share of stock.

Q. At the time there was a plentiful supply of Atlas brand products on hand how were orders placed or taken or inventoried on these consignment items? How does that work?

A. The company simply sent out a consigned stock. For instance, I believe there was six 616 tires and four 650-16 tires and various sized tires, to give me a representative stock of tires and tubes to keep at the station. That was supplied to me without cost.

Q. Did they regularly send you that merchandise?

A. They did at first. When I first took the station over in 1940, tires, tubes, and batteries were consigned.

Q. How about miscellaneous items, did they regularly send you a supply of those or did you order them?

A. I had to order those.

Q. And when, finally, on what date did you leave or [fol. 1306] give up your service station?

A. I sold out March 15th in 1948.

Q. And how long had you been there at that time?

A. That was seven years and seven months.

Q. Do you recall when you first began this operation what your gallonage and your volume of business was?

A. When I took that station over in 1940 it was operated by Standard Stations, Inc. They had one man. When he took his day off the station was closed. The gallonage at that time was approximately 3,500 gallons a month. Lubrication, if I recall, it was around $18.00 a month. Accessories items was something right around $12.00 a month. It was very low.

Q. Do you know what gallonage and volume of business you did during 1947?

A. In 1947 our gallonage averaged a little better than 8,000 gallons a month on gasoline, and approximately 130 gallons of oil a month, and about $90.00 a month on lubrication, about an average of $300.00 a month on accessories sales.

Q. What, if any other, operations did you conduct in connection with this service station?

A. During the start of the war when mechanics became scarce, the Government took them into the service and it became critical to get a car worked on, being a mechanic, I [fol. 1307] had the tools and equipment there at my station that I could take care of customers' cars, which I did. And when I got into that, taking care of their cars, I gradually got to even putting in new motors, reboring motors, overhauling clutches, transmissions, relining brakes, and everything there was to do to a car.

Q. At any time did you have a conversation with any representative of the Standard Oil relative to that activity?

A. Yes, sir. It was the——

Q. Where and who was present and what was said?

A. Well, that was in about 1943. Mr. Krisel was out to the station and there was a part of the section of the ground there that——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. I am going to object to that, if the court please, on the grounds that it is irrelevant and immaterial and not within the issues of this case.

The Court: I can't see the materiality. After all, I assume you want to show that the man objected to his doing the work, but that does not involve the use of any products. If they wanted him to devote all the time to the station and not do any detail work, that has nothing to do with any restraint we are talking about in this lawsuit.

Mr. Driscoll: He is, of course, under the contract an independent business man.

The Court: But whether they stopped him from doing [fol. 1308] work on the cars is not a violation of interstate commerce. They are going to sell him engines and things like that that he was required to buy from them.

Mr. Driscoll: Very well, your Honor.

The Court: We are not talking about restricting service. This is not a labor case. This is a sales case, a merchandising case.

All right; the objection will be sustained.

I think the examination of this witness is so extensive we had better break the continuity here so long as we are stopping, and have a short recess.

(Short recess.)

[fol. 1309] The Court: Proceed, gentlemen.

Mr. Driscoll: If your Honor please, the government moves for the admission of Exhibit 90, for identification, and Exhibit 91.

Mr. Hall: Defendants object to each and all of the documents so offered on the ground they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Are those the same as the others that we have had under consideration?

Mr. Driscoll: Yes. Exhibit 90 is a distributor agreement and Exhibit 91 a dealer agreement.

The Court: All right. The objection will be overruled.

The Clerk: 90 and 91 in evidence.

The Court: The witness will resume the stand.

Mr. Driscoll: You may examine, Mr. Hall.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What is your present business or occupation, Mr. Emerson?

A. Why, I have a little business started selling Wax-seal polish.

Q. What kind of wax? What is the trade name of the wax or polish?

A. Wax-seal.

[fol. 1310] The Court: Is that an automotive polish?

The Witness: It is both, automobile and home, furniture.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Do you have a distributorship for that product?

A. I have, in San Francisco and the Bay area.

Q. What counties does it cover?

A. San Francisco, San Mateo, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, and they just gave me Alameda County.

Q. You left the operation of this Chevron station to take up that distributorship, didn't you?

A. That's right.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: All right. Step down. Call your next witness.

Mr. Hall: Would your Honor entertain a motion to adjourn at this time if I made the representation that I will be particularly docile and expeditious this afternoon?

The Court: I think so. You did very well this morning. If I had known how limited you were going to be, I would not have taken a recess. So long as you have shortened the cross examination and limited it to only one question, I can't very well deny you that request for the additional time.

We will take the usual recess until 2:00 o'clock.

(Whereupon at 12:00 o'clock noon a recess was taken until 2:00 p.m.)

[fol. 1311] Los Angeles, California,
Wednesday, May 19, 1948, 2:00 p.m.

The Court: Proceed, gentlemen.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will call Mr. Walter Bretthauer.

WALTER V. BRETTHAUER, called as a witness by the plaintiff, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Walter V. Bretthauer.

The Clerk: Now, just a moment. Walter V.?

The Witness: V.

The Clerk: How do you spell your last name?

The Witness: B-r-e-t-t-h-a-u-e-r. 235 Caliente Street, Reno, Nevada.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Bretthauer?

A. Reno, Nevada.

Q. And what is your occupation?

A. Service station operator.

Q. Now, if you will just speak up clearly so that counsel and the court and all of us can hear you?

A. Service Station operator.

Q. What brand of petroleum products and lubricating [fol. 1312] oils do you have?

A. Standard.

Q. How long have you been operating a station selling the Standard Oil products?

A. Going on my fifth year.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will ask to have marked for identification documents purporting to be a sublease, distributor agreement, inventory of equipment, and a confirmatory letter, all dated April 12, 1944, between the Standard Oil of California and Walter Bretthauer.

The Clerk: Government Exhibit 92 marked for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. When you began operating the station as a dealer for the Standard Oil Company did you enter into a contract with them?

A. I did.

Q. I hand you some documents headed "Sublease" and "Distributor Agreement" and "Inventory," and a letter over the heading of the "Standard Stations, Inc." which have been marked Exhibit 92 for identification, and ask you if this is the contract you refer to in your testimony?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you operating under that specific contract at the present time?

A. No, sir.

[Vol. 1313] When did you change or what did you change? What occurred?

A. Well, I negotiated another contract about approximately a year ago last February.

Mr. Driscoll: The Government will ask to have marked for identification the documents produced by the defendants Standard under Paragraph I, subpoena 2, item 78.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 93 marked for identification.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. At the time that you first took over and operated the service station for the Standard Oil Company did you have any interview or conversations with any representative of Standard?

A. Yes.

Q. And with whom, if you recall, and where and when?

A. You mean in my first contract?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, I negotiated that with Richard Pickett. He was superintendent of the Incorporated Stations at that time.

Q. Did you have an interview with him?

A. Yes; for the station.

Q. Where?

A. The interview was for the station. That is so long ago, I think it was in their training station.

Q. Was anyone else present?

[fol. 1314] A. Not that I remember.

Q. State what the conversation was.

A. Well, I was trying to negotiate a contract with him on a cent a gallon or a half a cent at that time, but he wanted a cent and a half, and we settled it by a cent a gallon.

Q. After you had been successful in negotiating the contract did you have any further conversations with him relative to its operation?

A. Well, I can't recall. We had quite a few conversations. I can't recall any pertaining to my operation.

Q. At the time that you began operation of the station under the first contract, Government's Exhibit 92, what tires, batteries, tubes, and automotive accessories were you handling?

A. A Standard line.

Q. And did that include miscellaneous accessories as well as the tires, tubes, and batteries?

A. Yes; I think so, because I bought outside, but all I could order was Standard. I did, I stayed with the sponsors.

Q. Did you continue to purchase the full line from them?

A. No.

Q. What occurred?

[fol. 1315] A. Well, they couldn't supply me and I asked permission to go on the outside so I could stay in business, otherwise I could have never operated.

[fol. 1316] Q. At the time that you entered into the second agreement with them, Government's Exhibit for identification 93, did you have at that time an interview with any representative of the Standard Oil Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did that interview occur, and who was present then?

A. Well, I was asked for an increase in rental of a half a cent, which I wouldn't grant, due to the fact that they could not supply me, and the supply houses around there were keeping me in business, and I felt that Standard wasn't justified in getting an increase in rent.

Q. What did the representatives do, if anything, with respect to that?

A. Well, they asked me several times, and one afternoon the representative came to me and said, "Walter,"——

Mr. Hall: Pardon me. May we have the name of the representative?

The Witness: The representative's name?

Mr. Hall: Yes.

The Witness: Mr. Mortenson.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Continue.

A. Could I have the question again?

(The question and answer were read.)

A. "—I don't think it is fair to the Standard Oil [fol. 1317] Company, and I am afraid you will have to grant the half a cent," I thought it over, and I agreed. I granted the half cent.

Q. The outcome of that conversation and discussion was your present agreement?

A. No. Well, before this agreement—no, at the end of the month they billed me, instead of the one and a half cent, they charged me on the tank wagon, they billed me a minimum and a maximum, and billed me the difference, in which case I canceled out.

Q. Then did you have any further negotiations?

A. Yes. The representative of Standard, I think it was in Sacramento, Mr. Haines, told me that he felt that I didn't really want to cancel out, and that he would send up a man that would negotiate an agreement, a rental agreement, that would be satisfactory to me and the Standard Oil Company.

Q. What resulted from those negotiations?

A. I took the agreement. I signed the contract.

Q. Now, during the time that you have operated this station under either agreement, have you had customers who requested of you petroleum products, tires, tubes and batteries, and miscellaneous accessories, other than and of different brands than those which are sponsored and distributed and sold by Standard Oil?

[fol. 1318] A. Yes.

Q. Were you able to comply with their request? Did you supply them?

A. Well, I have always tried to sell them my sponsor's products, but if I couldn't, I would go down and buy the tire, whatever competitive tire it was, and put it on. I wouldn't lose the sale.

Q. Have you ever stocked the different merchandise?

A. Only batteries, with permission.

Q. How would you supply these requests?

A. Well, I never stocked it. As they requested them, I would get in the car, get the tires and bring them up, and put them on. I never stocked them.

Q. Now, at any time have you had any conversations with a representative of the Standard Oil relative to your stocking or supplying tires, tubes and batteries, or miscellaneous accessories, other than or different than those that are sponsored and sold and distributed by Standard Oil?

A. Well, they haven't come to me. They know I live close to the Standard's contract, but the conversation—Mr. Mortenson said they had a meeting and in this meeting he said that some of the boys were probably going to be canceled out if they didn't get rid of their competitive line. In answer to that, I said, "They won't have to worry about me, because you people have never supplied me."

[fol. 1319] Q. Was anything further said?

A. Oh, he said, "No," he said, "absolutely. You are a good operator."

Q. Since that date have you stocked any merchandise of any kind other than that which is sponsored by Standard Oil?

A. As to miscellaneous stock, yes; that is radiator seal, and a few items like Casi*de*.

Q. Are those items which are distributed or sold under the Atlas brand?

A. No.

Mr. Driscoll: You may examine. Oh, excuse me.

The government will move admission of Exhibits 92 and 93, for identification.

Mr. Hall: The defendant objects to each and all of the documents so offered on the ground they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: I will look at one set and see if they are the same. These are of the type which have heretofore been introduced?

Mr. Driscoll: They are, your Honor.

The Court: I haven't looked at a set lately. I thought I had better check up to see if any variance has been introduced. The objection is overruled and the documents will be received and marked Exhibits 92 and 93.

The Clerk: 92 and 93 in evidence.

[fol. 1320] Cross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. As I get the story, Mr. Bretthauer, we started out with a contract or with a sublease which on its face provided for a rental of a cent and a half?

A. Yes.

Q. But with a letter——

A. A rider, yes.

Q. With a letter which said that until June 23, 1944, the company would accept one cent per gallon instead of a cent and a half; is that a correct statement of what occurred?

A. Yes, it was, until when we made a new lease.

Q. A little louder.

Mr. Driscoll: Will you speak louder, please?

The Witness: Up to 1944.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I was reading the document which is a part of Exhibit 92——

A. Yes.

Q. ——which is a letter dated April 12, 1944 to you from somebody connected with Standard Oil Company.

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. Is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. I have stated it correctly, have I?

[fol. 1321] A. Yes, you have.

Q. Now, after June 23, 1944 did you continue to pay rental at the rate of a cent a gallon?

A. A cent a gallon, yes.

Q. Then they wanted, as I understand your testimony, to raise the rent to a cent and a half, and you didn't like that?

A. I didn't accept that, as they weren't supplying me.

Q. Yes. Now, as a result of that effort on their part to raise the rent and your objection to the raising of the rent, we come along to a new contract, which is exhibited by Exhibit 93; is that correct?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, up to the time that Exhibit 93 was executed, had you been paying only a cent a gallon rental?

A. That's right.

Q. I notice under Exhibit 93 there is a sublease dated March 13, 1947 which calls for a rental of $169.25 a month.

A. That's right, plus $6.75 for the sign or their advertising, which makes it $175 total.

Q. Yes, plus $6 and——

A. ——75 cents.

Q. Right. You are perfectly happy about your arrangements with Standard Oil Company, are you?

A. I signed an agreement.

[fol. 1322] Q. Well, are you happy about it?

A. Yes, I guess so.

Q. Now, this station was a Standard Oil station before it was subleased to you in the first place, wasn't it?

A. No, I don't think it was operated by Standard, Incorporated.

Q. Well, let's take the time when the first sublease to you was made. It is a fair statement, isn't it, that at that time it was Standard Oil's property, either owned or leased by Standard Oil?

A. Leased by Standard Oil, yes.

Q. So that you never had any interest in the real estate except as a subleasee from Standard; isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, counsel, in referring to a period I believe before you had this dispute as to the rental, asked you whether you handled products competing with Standard Oil products, and I understood your testimony to be that you asked Standard's permission to go on the outside and purchase certain things. Am I correct in that?

A. That's right.

Q. Did they give you that permission?

A. They did.

Q. Now, what are the products that you have handled or the accessories that you have handled that weren't a part [fol. 1323] of the Standard Oil line?

A. Well, Prestone, chains.

Q. Well, how about batteries? Did you say you stocked some other batteries?

A. Well, last winter I was informed that the batteries would be short, and I asked my sales manager if it would be all right for me to order some from the Nevada Auto Supply, so that I wouldn't be short. He said yes, so long as they are on the allocation, he said, it would be all right.

Q. I think you said you did buy competitive tires when you had a demand for competitive tires from some particular customer.

A. That is, if you would like to have it and wouldn't want the Atlas, and you were sold on a Firestone tire, before I would lose the sale, or if I couldn't convert you to an Atlas tire, I would certainly go and get them. I mean, that's money in my pocket, and that's what I am after.

[fol. 1324] Q. You made every effort to sell them an Atlas tire, didn't you?

A. Oh, always. I stayed with my subject.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Driscoll: Now, one or two more questions, if the court please.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Driscoll:

Q. Mr. Bretthauer, this permission that you testified in response to counsel's question which was extended to you, was that to all items or only to items that Standard was unable to supply you?

Mr. Hall: I submit, if the court please, that the witness has already testified as to the permission.

The Court: Yes. It is not proper redirect. He has testified to conversations he had.

Mr. Driscoll: That will be all.

The Court: All right; step down. Call your next witness.

Mr. Thody: The Government calls Mr. Ralph A. Bryan.

RALPH A. BRYAN, called as a witness by the plaintiff, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Ralph A. Bryan, B-r-y-a-n.

[fol. 1325] The Clerk: Ralph A. Bryan, B-r-y-a-n. Thank you.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Bryan?

A. 425 Broadway, Santa Monica.

Q. And what is your occupation?

A. Service station operator.

Q. And what products do you sell in this service station?

A. Standard products.

Q. Do you have any written understandings with the Standard Oil Company concerning the operation of this service station?

A. Yes.

Q. I hand you at this time, Mr. Bryan, a document entitled "Dealer Agreement TBA," dated December 12, 1945; and a document entitled "Mutual Termination Agreement," dated December 12, 1947; and a document entitled "Adjustment Dealer Rental," dated March 2nd, 1948; and ask you with respect to each of these documents do they contain your signature?

A. They do.

Q. Do these represent agreements which have been entered into between you and the Standard Oil Company of California?

[fol. 1326] A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Thody: At this time, your Honor, I ask to have marked as Government's Exhibit for identification the agreements referred to by Mr. Bryan.

The Clerk: Government's 94 marked for identification.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. How long have you operated this station, Mr. Bryan?

Mr. Hall: Will you pardon me a minute while I look at these, Mr. Thody?

Mr. Thody: Yes.

Mr. Hall: Suspend for just a moment.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. How long have you operated this station, Mr. Bryan?

A. Under my own management or, rather, for myself, since the 1st of March, 1943.

Q. Did you have any previous affiliation with this station?

A. I worked in the station approximately a year prior to that time as manager for the former operator.

Q. Did you have any previous agreement prior to the agreement which I have just shown to you?

A. There was a letter of assignment of the former operator's lease to me in March of '43, at the time that I took the station over.

Q. Do you have a copy of that agreement?

A. I believe I still have it in my files but I can't [fol. 1327] say positively, because this agreement I considered as replacing the former assignment.

Q. Under that previous agreement were you selling the same type of products that you were selling under this present agreement?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you selling tires, tubes, and batteries?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you selling miscellaneous automotive accessories?

A. Yes.

Q. Under your present agreement, Mr. Bryan, do you now sell oils and greases?

A. Yes.

Q. What brands of oils and greases do you sell?

A. Standard products.

Q. Do you handle at the present time any competitive oils, any other oils other than carrying the brand name of Standard Oil?

A. Not at the present time.

Q. Have you in the past handled other oils than those manufactured or produced by Standard Oil?

A. Yes.

Q. What other brands of other oils have you handled?

A. I for a time handled some Macmillan Ring-Free and [fol. 1328] some Conoco Mph.

Mr. Hall: Pardon me. What was that last name?

Mr. Thody: Conoco Mph.

The Witness: Mph.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Have you had since the operation of this station customers who have asked for lubricating oils other than Standard Oil lubricating products?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When have you had such customer preferences or requests?

A. A short time prior to buying and stocking in limited quantity these two particular brands of oil.

Q. And approximately when did you first stock the oils you have referred to?

A. Probably about two years ago.

Q. Where have you kept this oil?

A. In the storeroom off of the lube rack.

Q. And where is that located with reference to your principal office or with reference to the location of your pumps?

A. Well, the pumps and the office is on the front of the premises. The lube rack is on the very back of the premises.

Q. Have you sold much or did you sell much of this Ring-Free oil and this Conoco Mph?

[fol. 1329] A. Not by ratio to the total gallons of oil sold; no.

Q. To whom did you sell this oil?

A. Well, I had possibly 10 or 12 customers who were buying their gasoline from me, and I couldn't get their lubrication and oil change business because I was not able to supply the oil that they requested; so I stocked this oil to be able to get their other lube business, and only for that use.

Q. And did you or not stock this especially for those customers?

A. That is right; expressly for those customers.

Q. These customers, what type of customers were they Were they commercial accounts or were they private parties?

A. Private parties with privately owned passenger cars, better quality cars.

Q. What type of cars?

A. Cadillacs, Buicks.

Q. With the exception of these special customers you have referred to, have you ever had or did you at that time have other customers who might drive into your station and ask for special brands of lubricating oils?

A. Oh, yes; we always have that in a station over the gas islands. There is naturally brand preferences on the part of transient customers.

Q. At the time you stocked this Conoco Mph oil and [fol. 1330] this Macmillan Ring-Free would you have customer preferences asking for Macmillan products or Conoco products?

A. I have had them ask for it; yes.

Q. At the same time you were storing such products in your station?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With reference to these customers, Mr. Byran, when an oil preference had been placed upon you did you satisfy their requests?

A. No, sir.

Q. What would occur in such circumstances as that?

A. I informed them that we stocked Standard RPM and Standard Penn and I was able to supply, and that they were of a good quality, and that was all that I was able to supply them.

Q. Were you successful or unsuccessful in selling your Standard Oil to such customers?

A. Probably where they stated a definite preference I did lose some sales. In other words, I was not able to convert them to the brand of oil that I had if they had a set preference for some other brand of oil.

Q. In those instances where you were unable to convert them did you mention the fact that you had Macmillan Ring-Free oil or Conoco Mph oil in your own stock?

A. I did not, sir.

[fol. 1331] Q. Have you ever discussed the matter of your handling competitive oils, or did you discuss the matter of your handling competitive oils with any representative of the Standard Oil Company?

A. I think there was a discussion on one instance at least.

Q. When was that, if you recall?

A. I believe about October of 1947.

Q. Who was the representative of the Standard Oil Company that you had this discussion with?

A. Mr. Monroe, the merchandiser.

Q. Was he the merchandiser that calls upon you regularly?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was present during this discussion?

A. No one in the immediate vicinity. I mean my employees were possibly near, but they do not enter into conversations between I and representatives of Standard. They have their work to do.

Q. Where did this discussion occur?

A. In the lube room, in the store behind the lube room.

Q. And what was said during this discussion?

A. Well, Mr. Monroe asked me if I stocked that oil regularly and I said, "In a limited quantity to satisfy special customers." He asked if the people supplying me that oil [fol. 1332] would build a station for the sale of it for me. I told him I hardly thought so.

Q. How did Mr. Monroe find out about this oil?

A. In inspecting the premises, checking over conditions.

Q. And do you now sell either Conoco Mph or Macmillan Ring-Free oil?

A. No, sir.

Q. With reference to your station do you sell automobile tires and tubes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What brand of automobile tires and tubes do you now sell?

A. Atlas.

Q. Do you purchase any other outside brands of tires or tubes?

A. At the present time, no, sir.

Q. Have you in the past purchased any outside brands of tires and tubes?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. What brands have you purchased and when did you purchase them?

A. Oh, during the period of critical shortage and allocation of tires, I bought U. S. Royals, I bought Firestones, Dunlop, Kelly-Springfield—any make that I could get to supply a customer demand.

[fol. 1333] Q. Approximately what period of time were such purchases made with reference to the year?

A. Starting year and ending year?

Q. Well——

A. I would say over a period of two years or longer during rationing of tires, particularly.

Q. During that period of time were you able to procure your needs from the Standard Oil of California?

A. No.

Q. Do you happen to have any brand of outside tires in stock at the present time?

A. I think I have one.

Q. What is it?

A. One Dunlop in a 21-inch tire for an old model Ford.

Q. And when did you purchase that?

A. Almost a year ago.

Q. At the time you purchased this were you able to procure comparable merchandise from Atlas?

A. Not at that time, and it was on a customer order. I checked with the warehouse and they didn't have the size in stock, and I was able to get two. Then the customer didn't come back and get them, so I have one left.

Q. Do you have any outside tubes?

A. Very few, possibly less than half a dozen.

[fol. 1334] Q. In what brand?

A. U. S. Royals.

Q. And when did you purchase those?

A. About the same time.

Q. At that time were you able to purchase your requirements of tubes from the Atlas?

A. No. I believe tubes were still on allocation at that time; in fact, I know they were.

Q. And when you speak of "allocation" what do you mean, Mr. Bryan?

A. Well, during this period of shortage on tires and tubes, each month we received a notice, what they called a "Notice of Allocation" from the El Segundo office, granting, or, rather, giving us the privilege to buy from the warehouse a certain number of tires and tubes of a stated size that they stated in the letter. In other words, they had so many of such and such a size and they allocated or attempted to, evenly amongst all the dealers. And then when we received that letter the first of the month, allocating so many tires and tubes, we could send in a purchase order from them, or, rather, not a purchase order but a tire and tube order to the warehouse and they were shipped to us.

Q. Would that be in the form of an availability list, a limited availability list?

A. Yes; that could be what an allocation would be [fol. 1335] called. I mean the way I understand it.

Q. At the present time, with respect to your obtaining the Atlas tires and tubes do you obtain these tires and tubes on a consignment basis or do you purchase them?

A. You say at the present time?

Q. At the present time.

A. At the present time my entire stock of tires and tubes, Atlas tires and tubes, are consigned.

Q. Have you always obtained your requirements of tires and tubes on a consignment basis?

A. No, sir.

Q. When did you obtain them otherwise than by consignment?

A. Well, prior to March of this year, that is going back. In other words, I changed over to a straight consigned stock in March. For about six months prior to that time I had part of my stock of tires and tubes on consigned, and part I owned, had bought outright.

Q. Now, you have referred to this change that occurred in March of this year. Does that represent your present arrangement for obtaining tires and tubes on consignment?

A. Yes.

[fol. 1336] Q. Could you describe how that method of operation was worked out?

A. Well, at that time, as I say, part of my stock was consigned and part was owned, and they came—the Standard representative came in and said they were able to consign my requirements of tires, if I so desired it, and due to simplicity of bookkeeping, I would rather have it all consigned or all owned. So I agreed to an entire consignment of them, and so they took an inventory of the tires owned, issued a credit memo to me for the tires I owned, left it in the stock, and increased my consignment to cover my entire stock of tires and tubes.

Q. In your present operation, when you sell a tire do you immediately place an order for a replacement?

A. We are supposed to send an order immediately on the sale of a tire.

Q. Is that in accordance with your previous arrangement with the Standard Oil Company?

A. When I owned the stock?

Q. No, with reference to the plan worked out in March of this year, after you have sold a tire do you immediately place an order for a replacement?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, have you had any discussion at any time, Mr. Bryan, with reference to the risk of loss on these tires, as [fol. 1337] to the party who would bear the risk of loss?

A. Yes.

Q. And with whom did you have such discussion?

A. I believe that that was with Mr. Lackey some time ago.

Q. Do you recall approximately when?

A. Approximately, yes. It was after the reissuance of credit cards. I mean that would be after the relaxation of the government controls on credit, which evidently was some time in '45.

Q. Who was present during your discussion with Mr. Lackey?

A. I think only Lackey and myself.

Q. What was said with reference to this risk of loss?

Mr. Hall: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. You may testify.

A. May I have the question again, please?

Q. Will you read the question, please?

(The question was read.)

A. Oh, that the responsibility for the care of the tires; in other words, if tires were stolen, it was my responsibility as though it was an owned stock. I mean, they are in my charge.

Q. Now, when you make a sale of tires, what is normally [fol. 1338] done by you with the proceeds, the money which you have obtained from such sale?

A. Oh, it is handled in the regular manner, just as though it was a sale of gas, or anything else. It is run through the register as a sale, and then when I reorder the tire is paid for by check. In other words, I run it through my sales records and pay by check.

Q. In the conversation you referred to with Mr. Lackey, was there any discussion concerning the risk of loss on the proceeds of these tire sales?

A. No, the discussion was—I mean, the discussion of the risk of loss on the consigned stock was brought about by a conversation with reference to something else in connection with money belonging to Standard Oil Company. In other words, prior to the war, when we had credit cards for the short time that I operated for Dailey, we accepted payments from the public on Standard Oil credit card accounts and turned them in to the company. And then I was a little green, and I never even considered the risk of the handling of that money, so I didn't bring any question up on it until after the war when credit cards were again installed and people came in and wanted to pay on their account. Then I wondered who was responsible for that money, because service stations are not able to buy adequate insurance to protect even their own small office [fol. 1339] cash because of the prohibitive cost, and I asked that question first, and I was told that since I wasn't bonded or wasn't insured I should not accept credit card payments. And I also asked them about the responsibility of consigned stock.

Q. Now, do you presently sell batteries?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From whom do you procure your supply of batteries?

A. From Standard, Atlas batteries.

Q. Do you obtain any outside batteries?

A. Not at the present time, sir.

Q. Have you in the past?

A. In the past I have, sir.

Q. From whom have you obtained such batteries and what brand batteries were they?

A. Oh, I purchased Willards from a local jobber, Bruner & Miller, and I purchased Hobbs from another local jobber, Ackdahl Auto Parts.' Then during the extreme shortage a couple of years ago I bought batteries in L. A., and any quantity or size I could get, wherever I could get them. I have handled probably four or five different brands of batteries.

Q. With reference to your obtaining batteries at that time, did you have to go out and solicit the source of the batteries yourself?

A. Oh, yes I had to hunt for them.

[fol. 1340] Q. At that time was Standard Oil able to supply your requirements of batteries?

A. Not at that time, no. I tried to get them from them first.

Q. But at the present time you handle Standard Oil or Atlas batteries exclusively; is that correct?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, you also sell at your station items known as miscellaneous accessories?

A. Yes, sir, I have quite a heavy stock of them.

Q. What does your heavy stock consist of?

A. Well, radiator supplies, fan belts, polishes. Then I have some, oh, fuel pumps, brake linings.

Q. Have you ever had any discussions with any representative of the Standard Oil Company with reference to your purchasing these miscellaneous accessories,—the purchasing of your requirements of miscellaneous accessories?

A. I believe there has been discussion. In fact, I know there has been a discussion several times on it.

Q. Well, with whom?

A. I discussed it with Mr. Monroe.

Q. Is this the same Mr. Monroe you mentioned previously in your testimony as the local merchandiser who calls around at your station?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1341] Q. When did you have discussions with Mr. Monroe concerning your purchasing of your requirements of automotive accessories?

A. At the time that he would come in on inspection trips to the station or to check consignment stocks.

Q. And how often was that?

A. I would say about once a month; maybe not quite that often; once a month to six weeks.

Q. Well, every time he has come around have you had discussions?

A. Oh, if I have had items that weren't there the last time—I mean all my accessories are displayed in the office, and if there were new items there, it was of interest to him. I mean, if it was an item that was unusual, he would ask where I purchased it.

Q. Are you acquainted with the Standard Oil's program which has been cominonly designated in this law suit as the Bonus-for-Volume program?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what is meant by that designation?

A. We get a statement each month from the company showing the volume of accessories purchased from them, and once a year there are brackets that we get an additional, or, rather, get a commission or an additional bonus above the original purchase price—above the original dis-[fol. 1342] count on the products.

Q. These brackets that you refer to, is that a graduated discount scale?

A. That's right, based on the volume of purchases of accessories, and tires, tubes and batteries.

Q. Have you received such discount checks in accordance with that program?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall in what years you received such discounts?

A. Oh, I am quite sure I received it each year that I was there.

Q. Have the discounts that you have received on this Bonus-for-Volume program remained more or less constant through the years?

A. My volume——

Q. No, not your volume. Has the program, has there been any change at any time with reference to the discount rates?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. When were such changes inaugurated?

A. In June of last year; June of '47.

Q. Preceding this change in June of last year, that you refer to, was there anything in the volume of merchandise, miscellaneous accessory merchandise, which you were sell-[fol. 1343] ing through your station?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever have any discussions concerning the discrepancy in the volume under the changes which occurred in June, 1947, and the volume that you had previously enjoyed in your station with any representative of Standard Oil?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. I would like to have the question read, please.

(The question was read.)

Mr. Hall: Objected to as unintelligible.

Mr. Thody: Can the witness answer it?

The Court: That is a preliminary question that should be answered "Yes" or "No," and then he will ask you the details. Can you answer it? Mr. Hall thinks it is unintelligible. Do you understand it?

The Witness: I believe I do, sir.

The Court: What would your answer be?

The Witness: My answer would be there was a conversation regarding it.

The Court: That is enough. Now, go ahead.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. When did that conversation take place, with whom, and who was present?

A. About three or four months after the change in the Bonus-for-Volume. That would make it about September [fol. 1344] or October of 1947.

Q. With whom was the conversation?

A. With Mr. Monroe.

Q. And who was present?

A. I believe in the office where we had this conversation there was only Monroe and I.

Q. What was said by Mr. Monroe with reference to your change in the volume you were buying of discount-for-volume items?

A. Well, I had our records there of some kind, comparable records by months with that year, against previous years, and he commented that there had been an appreciable drop in my purchases particularly of spark plugs.

Q. What did he say about your purchases of spark plugs?

A. Well, he asked me if I was buying spark plugs from somebody else, Champion spark plugs.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I told him no, that I had discontinued pressing the sale of spark plugs. I previously had done quite a large volume, I had enjoyed a large volume of sales of spark plugs because it would affect my bonus rate.

Q. Was there anything further said with reference to any other type of accessories?

A. Well, all of my accessory purchases had dropped considerably.

[fol. 1345] Q. Did you make any explanation to Mr. Monroe at this time, giving the reasons for that drop?

A. Other than the fact I kind of laughed and kidded him and said I couldn't make as near the maximum bonus bracket as I had the previous year because of the raise in the requirement of purchases.

Q. What change had taken place with reference to that?

A. Well, in 1946 the maximum bonus could be obtained by a dealer if he bought $10,000 worth of accessories, that is, tires, tubes and batteries, and miscellaneous accessories, and after June of '47 the requirements to make a 15 per cent bonus was $75,000 of purchases which, in my opinion, was pretty much out of reach of the average service station.

Q. Now, have you ever had any conversations with any other representatives of Standard Oil, other than Mr. Monroe, concerning your purchases of miscellaneous accessories within, say, the last year?

A. I think there was a conversation with Mr. Bilger and Mr. DeWitt along in March of this year.

Q. And where was this conversation?

A. In the office of my station.

Q. Who is the Mr. Bilger that you referred to?

A. I believe Mr. Bilger's title is assistant to the district manager at Long Beach, Mr. Furr's assistant.

Q. Does he have anything to do with Chevron stations?

[fol. 1346] A. Oh, yes.

Q. In what capacity?

A. Well, it was then—he has apparently a lot to do with the leasing.

Q. Who is this Mr. DeWitt you referred to?

A. Mr. DeWitt is the branch manager at El Segundo.

Q. What was said now in this conversation that you had with these two gentlemen?

A. Oh, I had a display cabinet, a metal—a very attractive metal display cabinet of Whiz products on rollers in the middle of the floor, and they asked me whether I had to buy the cabinet or whether it was supplied with the products, and I told them it was a part of a package deal, and I said that Whiz carries quite a line of accessories, or, rather, polishes and such, and I said that I had tried to stock only their items in the Whiz line that were not competitive to the items carried in the Atlas line. I mean there was no argument. It was just conversation. But there were a number of items I had on the rack that it was pointed out Atlas did supply.

Q. Who pointed those out?

A. I think——

Q. Did you point them out to Mr. Bilger?

A. No, they were pointed out to me.

Q. Do you recall whether it was by Mr. Bilger or Mr. [fol. 1347] DeWitt?

A. I think it was Mr. Bilger, but I can't be sure.

Q. What was said with reference to each one of these items that was pointed out?

A. Well, I had a Whiz Venus polish, and he said, "We have an Atlas polish." And I had a Whiz hydraulic brake fluid, and he said, "We have an Atlas hydraulic brake fluid." And I had a London Whiz finish, a car finish polish, and they said, "We handle Maxite and a simonizer through an Atlas supplier." I mean they were just comparing the products and that there were products of a like nature in the Atlas line.

Q. Since that time have you ordered any merchandise to replace that rack?

A. In the Whiz line?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

The Court: Cross-examine.

Mr. Thody: Just one moment. If I may, your Honor, I would like to move at this time to have Government's Exhibit 94, for identification, admitted into evidence.

Mr. Hall: Objected to as irrelevant and immaterial. My objection runs to each of the documents so offered.

The Court: Is this a TBA contract, and so forth?

[fol. 1348] Mr. Thody: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: All right. The objection is overruled.

The Clerk: 94 in evidence.

The Court: Gentlemen, this has occurred to me, that we are making a very voluminous record unnecessarily. While I realize that as to each of these contracts we have to have the particular form used because the typewritten matter differs, but it seems to me it is not necessary to introduce every time the Atlas catalogue, because you are introducing a large number of exhibits which have this catalogue attached to them, and the problem in any record to be prepared on this case is going to be; what to do about that. They are supposed to be transcribed in any record on any appeal to be taken in this case, and I anticipate this is the type of case which is not going to stop with the District Court. You are going to have difficulty in getting the record made up unless you secure permission from me and from the higher court to send up the physical records. I was wondering whether it couldn't be stipulated as to these exhibits that there was attached to each of these exhibits the catalogue as of a particular date, a catalogue which you have already in the record.

Mr. Hall: That would be perfectly agreeable to me, your Honor. I think the stipulation should refer to each exhibit, where it occurs.

[fol. 1349] The Court: Yes, I understand that.

Mr. Hall: And to each document.

The Court: Counsel can offer it and merely say that attached to it is the catalogue of such-and-such a date and that permission is asked that it be withdrawn, as it is already in the record with other exhibits.

Mr. Hall: That is very satisfactory to me.

Mr. Dixon: I might say, your Honor, that the government has the same view and has in mind if, as and when that time occurs that counsel for the government and for the defendants, undoubtedly with the approval of the court, enter into a stipulation covering these exhibits which simply indicates that unless there is some change in the language of a particular exhibit, that the type of exhibit involved there was of a type comparable or substantially the same as Government's Exhibits 1 through 5, inclusive.

The Court: I thought that we might do it chemin ferant, as the French say, rather than to have it by a blanket stipulation.

Mr. Dixon: I might say, your Honor, I think we are approaching the end, in any event.

The Court: I fear that that is happening. I wouldn't say I am glad or sad, or anything like that. I just say I fear it is happening. I perhaps should have thought about it before, but you know that I haven't looked at any of these [fol. 1350] lately on the assumption that they are of a similar character. But today I have again been looking at them and I notice that we are putting in time and time again the same exhibit, which serves no purpose.

Mr. Dixon: I quite agree with your Honor.

The Court: Except to make folios for the reporters and for the printers.

Mr. Dixon: There is quite a lot of duplication, yes.

The Court: And while it is legitimate to make folios for the reporters, we do not want to make them unnecessarily.

Mr. Dixon: I think we can work it out along the line of your Honor's suggestion, with your approval.

The Court: All right. I will not have the time taken to have them torn out now, but later you can cover it by stipulation. You can go through the exhibits and see which is a duplicate of something else. For instance, this I notice is a current one, bears the date January 1, 1948, and there may be others which are older which may be of a different character. Proceed.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Are you still operating this station, Mr. Bryan?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The reason I ask is that in Exhibit 94 is a document [fol. 1351] which seems to be a termination by mutual consent of some dealer agreement. Was that a different agreement than this?

A. That was that agreement, sir.

Q. Well, is it your testimony that this termination never became effective?

A. It has been superseded by a verbal agreement, sir, that I am to continue the operation of the station beyond July the 1st on the old automatically renewable contract.

Q. I see. Now, the document that starts this dealership so far as you are concerned, referring again to Plaintiff's Exhibit 94, is a dealer agreement TBA, dated December 12, 1945; is that correct?

A. That is the one that is in effect now, yes, sir, but I operated this station previous to that day.

Q. Oh, yes.

A. From March 1, 1943, and I had——

Q. Well, let me ask you this: At the time you entered into this dealer agreement TBA, on or about December 12, 1945, you did so of your own free will, didn't you?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. You wanted at that time to deal in Atlas tires, tubes and batteries, didn't you?

A. That's right, yes, sir.

Q. You still do, as a matter of fact, don't you?

A. Yes, sir, surely.

[fol. 1352] Q. You knew, did you not, that you could have taken what is called the plain dealer agreement, which contained no obligation with reference to tires, tubes and batteries, didn't you?

A. No, I didn't know that, sir.

Q. You didn't?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, has there been any time, and I am speaking of the period from December 12, 1945 up to the present time, when you have felt that you didn't want to handle Atlas tires, tubes and batteries?

A. No, I prefer to handle them when I can get them.

The Court: While there is no objection made to the question, I want to propound an inquiry: The government isn't contending that any coercion was used to secure the execution of any of these agreements?

Mr. Hall: No, your Honor, I don't think that is in their pleadings, but I have been somewhat mystified by lines of inquiry that have been pursued with government witnesses, holding possibly an inference that the government was attempting to show that the dealer was being imposed upon.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Dixon: We direct your Honor's attention to paragraph 33 of the complaint which covers——

The Court: Will you give me the complaint? Gentlemen, [fol. 1353] I wonder if you have an extra copy of the complaint. The file is rather voluminous, and it is hard to handle, and if I had a copy of it which I could use, then I wouldn't have to bother with the file.

Mr. Hall: May I give you this one, your Honor? It is printed by Mr. Goble. I think it is correct.

The Court: So long as we are talking about Mr. Goble, I want to say that he has placed upon my desk each day the letters that he sends out, and I think while I gather he is not legally trained and is a layman, just a reporter and with knowledge of the oil industry, he is giving a very fair summary of the proceedings that happen here. He may not get some of the legal implications of some of the discussions, but at any rate, he has not anticipated, as sometimes happens in a case where there is considerable publicity, that we are making any rulings except temporary ones which affect only the particular issue and the testimony before us.

Now, the reason I was asking the question I propounded was because I noticed yesterday and today that in several instances Mr. Hall has asked a witness whether he was satisfied with his dealership, and while I didn't intervene and no objections were made, the inquiry having been repeated I raise the point because, as I gather, what was commonly contended was not that the agreements were not entered into voluntarily, but that the implications of the [fol. 1354] agreements, both by their terms and by their practice, were a practical exclusion of dealing in products from other suppliers, except in rare instances where permission was granted because the Standard Oil Company was unable to supply them.

I am merely stating what I understand to be the theory upon which the government's testimony has gone into the record.

[fol. 1355] Mr. Dixon: You are quite right, your Honor.

The Court: If that is true, then this inquiry does not become——

Mr. Dixon: Material.

The Court: —material at all. I may say—and I mean it, Mr. Hall—I may say that you have not stepped over, even in the enthusiasm of advocacy, which is a part of any lawyer's experience, and particularly one of the long experience you have had. Of necessity, a lawyer is carried away at various times by the quality which makes him a good lawyer. He is a good advocate and, consciously or unconsciously, he may sometimes overstep a little on cross examination in order to press a point. You have not done it, and that is why I have not intervened. Otherwise, if I believed you were doing it, I would have intervened, as you know, without the objection on the other side.

But it occurred to me that the inquiry was not germane and there was not any need to encumber the record with it, because it has no relevancy under the issue. And now, under what Mr. Dixon has stated, it does not relate to any contention, directly or indirectly, that the Government makes.

Mr. Hall: My fears are set at rest, your Honor.

The Court: All right, that I have allayed your fears. I did not know you had any as a matter of fact. Off the record:

[fol. 1356] (Brief comment off the record.)

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, Mr. Bryan, you said that you had 10 or 12 customers who expressed definite brand preferences for some lubricating oil Standard didn't sell, when you handled an oil change, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many what you might call regular customers have you had as a maximum during the time you have had the station?

A. Regular customers, that is, lubrication customers, sir?

Q. Yes; what you call regular customers, not transient people.

A. A very high percentage of my total business, sir, due to my location and the class of trade that I have there.

Q. Yes.

A. I am on the edge of the downtown business district and I service the business owners' cars.

Q. Well, could you give me an approximation as to how many of those there might be as a maximum at any time?

A. As a maximum at any time? Well, I have got to do a little guessing here or figuring in my mind and talk it out load. We will say possibly 150 to 200 lube jobs a month; figuring on 90 per cent of my business as being regulars—we probably don't have more than 20 to 40 transient lubes a [fol. 1357] month—the rest is all regulars, sir.

Q. Did I understand you to say that Standard Oil Company objected to your stocking some special lube oils for those particular 10 or 12 customers?

A. You say did they object?

Q. Yes.

A. That would be not to say: No, you cannot or you should not, if that is what you mean by "object."

Q. Nobody from Standard, for example, ever said that they were going to terminate your dealer agreement TBA because you were doing that, did they?

A. Oh. Standard hires men smarter than that. I mean they wouldn't do that, I am sure, under any circumstances.

Q. Well, now, that agreement, you knew, could be terminated on six months' notice, is that right?

A. Minimum, 30 days, sir.

Q. 30 days' notice at the end of any six months?

A. Yes; at the end of any six months period.

Q. And you could do the same, couldn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, aside from those 10 or 12 customers that wanted a particular brand that was not a Standard brand of oil, how many other customers would you say expressed a preference for a brand that was not a Standard brand?

A. Oh, we possibly will have maybe two or three people [fol. 1358] a day going over the gas islands that, when we determine that they are low on oil, will ask if we have some particular brand of oil other than what we are able to supply.

Q. You don't mean to say that you didn't at times sell those two or three people on Standard brands, do you?

A. I did my very best to sell them Standard brands. If I was not able to convert them to Standard, I did not supply them with other products I had.

Q. Perhaps you misunderstand me.

A. Pardon me.

Q. What I am asking you is: Didn't you on occasions convert certain of those kinds of people to a Standard brand?

A. On occasions; yes, sir.

Q. Now, still speaking of those—I am not talking about the 10 or 12 people, now, who were your regular customers and who have other brand preferences, but I am speaking now about these other people that come into the station and express a preference for a brand not a Standard Oil brand—now, as to those people what brand preferences do they express? Can you remember some of the names of brands they ask for?

Mr. Thody: I object to that, your Honor. It is outside the scope of the direct examination and it is immaterial.

The Court: Well, no. No; I think certain specific [fol. 1359] brands have been brought in and, while this witness has not indicated any brand, he has stated that he has had persons express a preference. Then they have a right to pursue that to find out whether they are of the type already testified to by other witnesses, which are nationally known products, or whether they were some other products. All right. Have you answered the question?

The Witness: No, sir.

The Court: Can you tell any of them?

The Witness: Yes; I can tell some of the names.

The Court: All right.

A. Pennzoil, Macmillan, Conoco.

The Court: I haven't heard that one.

The Witness: Conoco?

The Court: I mean I haven't heard it in this courtroom.

The Witness: Conoco Mph is one that I stock.

The Court: Speak up.

The Witness: Conoco Mph is one that I stock.

The Court: Oh, that is one you stock. All right. Whose product is that?

The Witness: Continental Oil Company.

The Court: Continental Oil Company.

The Witness: Yes, sir. They don't market gasoline in California, only their lubricating oils.

By Mr. Hall:

[fol. 1360] Q. Can you give me some more names that are asked for, Mr. Bryan?

A. Well, Mr. Hall, I think I have had every known brand and unknown brand requested over the driveway during the six years that I have been there, because——

Q. Well, pardon me. How many would that amount to altogether? Perhaps that will satisfy my curiosity.

A. In brands? I would say, without a doubt, at least 50 brands, sir.

Q. 50 brands. So that it is perfectly true that if you filled up the yard of your station with oil cans, and your office with oil cans, and your lube room with oil cans, you would still have people coming to your station asking for brands that you did not have in stock?

A. That is quite true, sir.

Q. That is correct, is it?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, you mentioned some accessories called Whiz Products?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember those?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said they carried quite a line, is that right?

A. Primarily automotive chemicals; yes, sir.

Q. And in connection with your discussion of Whiz you [fol. 1361] mentioned some conversation; I think it was with a man by the name of Bilger and a man by the name of DeWitt, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did either one of those gentlemen tell you that you were in danger of losing your TBA agreement if you didn't handle miscellaneous accessories put out by Atlas?

A. No, sir.

Q. As I understood your testimony, they went through your place of business and where they would see a Whiz product of another accessory that was not put out by Atlas, or sold you by Standard they would point out to you that Atlas had something competitive or comparable; isn't that the size of it?

A. Possibly I didn't make myself clear enough, Mr. Hall, in answering.

Q. Well, I am asking you if that was not your testimony that you gave?

A. In the discussion of these Whiz products there was comparison made between comparable products in the Atlas line.

Q. Yes.

A. But they were not there primarily to check my stock——

[fol. 1362] Q. Now, wait a minute. I am not asking you what they were there for.

A. Oh.

Q. I want you to tell me all that they said, and I don't want you to speculate as to why they were there.

A. That was no speculation, sir.

Q. We want the facts. All right, now, have you told all that they said to you?

A. Yes. It was a minor discussion with reference to the accessories.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: Any redirect?

Mr. Thody: Yes, just a few questions, your Honor.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. At the time your initial TBA agreement was negotiated with you, Mr. Bryan, was there ever any mention of a dealer agreement at all as another form of agreement which you might possibly enter into?

A. Not to my knowledge; no, sir.

Q. Now, with respect to your testimony on these 10 or 12 customers, was it your testimony that these are regular customers?

A. They were, sir.

Q. And, in addition to those regular customers, you [fol. 1363] had other persons making brand preferences?

A. Yes.

Q. So at the time this oil was found on your premises, the oil was there expressly for the purpose of using and supplying it to these 10 or 12 customers, is that correct?

A. That is right; and to get their entire lubrication business. In other words, if I could not supply the motor oil, after request, they went to the dealer, or I mean to the car dealer, and they would get their lube and oil change at the same place; where, if I could supply the oil that they needed, I also got the lubrication job which is practically all labor and is desirable to have.

Q. With respect to these other parties who would come into your station, other than your special customers that you have testified to, on some occasions you have stated that you converted them to Standard oil products?

A. I always made that effort, sir.

Q. On some occasions is it true or is it not true that you failed to convert them to Standard oil products?

A. Yes, sir; and I could explain why, I believe.

Q. What would happen to those customers then?

A. Well, sir, it is much more difficult to convert a man that is only adding a quart of oil to mix brands of oil. It would be easier to convert him to a Standard product if he were having his oil changed so he would have the crank [fol. 1364] case drained and flushed and all of the same oil put in than it is to make another oil add of another make. In other words, I am rather proud of my ability as a salesman on a driveway, and all of them that I can convert, I think it has been definitely done, and I think my records will prove it.

Q. Is it true, however, that on some instances you did fail to make them convert?

A. On the oil adds; yes, sir.

Q. You have testified to a number of brand preferences that were made to you, including Conoco and, I presume, MacMillan?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have previously testified that you stocked Conoco Mph and MacMillan Ring-Free. Why did you select those oils as distinguished from Pennzoil and these other brands you have mentioned?

A. They were the oils—in other words, I stocked them expressly for on request of these particular customers, to be able to secure their business. I mean I didn't stock it for general sale over the driveway.

Q. Is it true or is it not true that in the case of MacMillan, for instance, that you would have more customer request for MacMillan than other oils?

A. Oh, yes. In other words, you couldn't stock all of [fol. 1365] the oils. I mean if I stocked every brand. So I picked only the ones that I had the most demand for and what I could gain the most by having.

Q. At the time you testified in response to questions asked by Mr. Hall concerning the visits by Mr. Bilger and Mr. DeWitt, you stated that there were some other reasons why those men were visiting your station at the time that they checked through your Whiz line, is that correct? Can you state what those other reasons were?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. The witness has already testified that he gave the entire conversation. He stated that emphatically.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Hall: So that any further statement by the witness would be speculation, conjecture and conclusion.

The Court: I think the question should be changed. Did they give you any other reason? If they gave you any reason, all right. If you suspected it, you can't testify. Did they give you any reasons other than those you have already testified to?

The Witness: Your Honor, in answer to Mr. Hall's question as to whether I stated the entire conversation——

The Court: Yes.

The Witness: —with reference to the other products I did state the entire conversation. I mentioned that it was [fol. 1366] of minor importance.

The Court: That is right.

The Witness: But there was other conversation there, sir, and of a major importance to me. In other words, Mr. Bilger doesn't make a habit of visiting every gas station.

The Court: I do not think there is any materiality on the facts in this case.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. I believe, Mr. Bryan, that Mr. Hall asked you concerning the termination notice which is one of the documents in evidence, dated December 12, 1947. Did Mr. Bilger discuss that with you?

A. Yes; it was discussed with Mr. Bilger and Mr. Furrer.

Q. And what was said concerning that termination notice?

Mr. Hall: Well, I object to that. That is irrelevant and immaterial. The witness has said that the termination notice was disregarded and that he goes on and occupies the station. How would the conversation be material?

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Mr. Hall, I believe, Mr. Bryan, asked you concerning the March 2nd letter which you testified superseded the December 12th termination notice, is that correct?

Mr. Hall: No; I did not ask him about that, Mr. Thody. That was already in evidence as part of your evidence. [fol. 1367] Mr. Thody: I think you asked the witness, if your Honor please, concerning this March 2nd agreement; and Mr. Hall specifically asked him if that superseded the agreement dated the termination notice dated December 12, 1947, and was specifically referred to by Mr. Hall in his cross examination.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Hall: I did not refer to that document in my cross examination.

The Court: All right. You may answer the question.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. I call your attention to the document executed March 2nd, 1948 which refers to the rental agreement between you and Standard Oil and ask you to examine this provision. Are you familiar with it?

A. I am, sir.

Q. Does it refer to the amount of rent which you must now pay at that station?

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. The document speaks for itself and the question calls for that which is not the best evidence.

Mr. Thody: May the record show, your Honor—may I call your attention, your Honor, that the document dated March 2nd, 1948 refers to a rental in the amount of $150.00 per month; whereas the dealer agreement TBA dated December 12, 1945 refers to a minimum rental of $75.00 per [fol. 1368] month, with an additional $2.75 per month provision for a sign.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Hall: There, if the court pleases, is a prime illustration of my confusion and my belief that counsel for the Government are trying to claim that we are abusing our dealers.

The Court: Well, all right. The inference to be drawn from the facts to which my attention is called is a matter for the future.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

The Court: All right; anything further with this witness?

Mr. Thody: No, your Honor.

Recross examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. When you went in there the station was already up, wasn't it?

A. I beg your pardon, sir?

Q. When you went in there the station was already up?

A. Erected?

Q. Yes; already erected?

A. Oh, yes; had been for a number of years.

Q. The station has always belonged to Standard Oil Company, hasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1369] Q. You have had no interest in the real property?

A. In the real property, no, sir.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Do you have any investment in this station at the present time?

A. Approximately $7,000 in equipment.

The Court: That is not stationary equipment; that is removable equipment, is it not?

The Witness: It is movable, sir, but it can be used only for a service station work at that location. I mean if it were taken to another location it would not be adaptable.

The Court: It belongs to you. You have a right to move it in case your relationship is terminated; isn't that true?

The Witness: Yes.

The Court: All right, step down. We will take a recess.

(Short recess.)

[fol. 1370] The Court: Proceed, gentlemen. Call the next witness.

Mr. Thody: Mr. Samuel N. Blasker.

SAMUEL N. BLASKER, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: Take the stand, please, sir. What is your name, please?

The Witness: Samuel N. Blasker.

The Clerk: Just a moment. The middle initial is N?

The Witness: N.

The Clerk: And your last name, please?

The Witness: Blasker, B-l-a-s-k-e-r.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Blasker?

A. 1369 8th Avenue, San Diego.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I am a partner in a service station, as a service station operator.

Q. Where is that service station located?

A. At Rosecrans and Midway, San Diego.

Q. And what type of gasoline do you sell at that station?

A. Standard Oil products.

[fol. 1371] Q. Do you have a written understanding with Standard Oil concerning the sale and merchandising of their products at this location?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. I now hand you some documents described as Dealer Agreement TBA, a sublease, an agreement, a lease, and another agreement entitled "Lease," all dated December 27, 1945, and ask you to examine each of these agreements, and ask if this is your signature appearing on each of said agreements?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are these the agreements that you have with Standard Oil Company, that you have referred to in your previous testimony?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Thody: I now ask to have marked as Government's Exhibit, for identification, the various agreements referred to by Mr. Blasker.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 95, for identification.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Will you describe, briefly, the location of this station with respect to downtown San Diego?

A. Well, it is just outside of the downtown district at rather a principal intersection.

Q. It is located at Rosecrans Avenue and Midway Drive?

A. Rosecrans Avenue and Midway Drive, that is correct.

Q. Now, is this Midway Drive one of the principal [fol. 1372] traffic arteries between Los Angeles and San Diego?

A. It parallels the principal artery. It is the second in importance.

Q. Does Rosecrans Avenue connect with any principal arteries or any principal highways in San Diego?

A. Well, it is a cross-town highway and connects the Marine Base and Naval establishments, and also a road to downtown San Diego with the main portion of the city.

Q. Is there or is there not a relatively large volume of automotive traffic that passes along these highways?

A. Yes, there is quite a large volume.

Q. Prior to the execution of these various agreements which you have testified occurred on December 27, 1945, did you have any conversations with any officials of the Standard Oil Company concerning the method of operation which you were to employ in your service station?

A. Yes.

Q. With whom did you have these conversations?

A. Mr. Lincoln and Mr. McCarthy and Mr. Teldroe.

Q. And when did they take place?

A. Prior to November of 1945.

Q. Where did they take place?

A. In the Standard Oil offices at the Bank of America Building, and also at their district office at the plant on Pacific Highway.

[fol. 1373] Q. On the occasion of this meeting, Mr. Blasker, was any reference made to the policy of Standard Oil concerning the sale of competitive oils in your service station?

A. It was mentioned during the conversation that they expected us to exclusively handle their products.

Q. Was anything further said than that?

A. Well, other sentences of equal importance in the principal portion of the conversation.

Q. Did you or did you not have the understanding that you were forbidden, then, to handle them?

A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That calls for a conclusion [illegible]

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Now, how soon

Mr. Hall: Pardon me. I didn't get the ruling on my objection.

The Court: I don't think he answered the question.

Mr. Hall: I believe he did, your Honor, before I could object.

The Court: Will you read the question and answer?

(The question and answer were read.)

The Court: The answer will be stricken and the objection sustained.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. At what time did you commence the operation of this station?

[fol. 1374] A. We began erection in November of '45. As we had actually to build the station prior to its occupancy, my partner and I helped physically to erect the station in connection with the Trepte Construction Company.

Q. When did you commence dispensing your gasoline and oil?

A. May 30, 1946.

Q. At the time of your initial sales venture, what brand or brands of oils were you selling?

A. RPM and Standard Penn.

Q. Following this period of time did you have any customers or prospective customers who entered your station and asked for other types of oils?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. Approximately how many?

A. Oh, two or three per cent.

Q. Can you say with relation to numbers approximately how many each day?

A. That would be hard to do because the question of the product would be put to others than myself. There are six or seven persons on the station, but we have always received inquiries and requests for other products.

Q. During that initial period when you first got started were you able to supply these demands for these competitive oils?

[fol. 1375] A. We didn't attempt to stock any other oils.

Q. Do you stock any other oils at the present time?

A. I handle a small quantity of Quaker State.

Q. And from whom do you buy that?

A. From the LaMesa Oil Company in LaMesa, California, a division of San Diego. Excuse me. I would like to remark—well, that's all right. We will just pass it.

Q. Is the LaMesa Oil Company located in San Diego?

A. It is just outside.

The Court: LaMesa is a town outside of San Diego.

The Witness: Yes. They deliver this oil in an unmarked truck that might be of interest to know, to our station.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Have you been furnished with any advertising by the Quaker State Oil Company?

A. They furnished us with a display cabinet, but we haven't used it.

Q. Have you ever used it?

A. No.

Q. Where do you keep your competitive oil?

A. We have a storeroom in the back of the station and it is kept there; just keep it out of sight. On recommendation it was decided that was the best place to keep it.

Q. Do you have Standard Oil representatives who visit your service station from time to time?

[fol. 1376] A. Oh, yes.

Q. Who are such representatives?

A. Well, Mr. Earl Studley. He is the merchandiser. Then there is a Mr. William McCarthy. He is the district manager. And Mr. Tremaine, I think he is the Chevron district manager, and Mr. Kirkendahl, he is also a merchandiser. We have visits from most all of the persons that are associated with the Standard Oil Company here.

Q. Have any of these officials ever seen this Quaker State merchandise in your station?

A. No.

Q. Now, from whom do you presently purchase your automobile tires?

A. From Standard; from the Atlas Supply.

Q. Now, are you acquainted with the terms and provisions of your dealer agreement TBA?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you purchase them pursuant to the terms of such agreement?

Mr. Hall: That is objected to as calling for a conclusion of the witness.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Do you ——

The Court: Are you withdrawing the question? Do you want to reframe it?

Mr. Thody: Perhaps I should wait for a ruling.

[fol. 1377] The Court: Why don't you ask him to describe what he is doing? Whether he does it pursuant to the agreement or not calls for a conclusion.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Do you or do you not at the present time purchase any other tires or tubes other than the Atlas tires?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. You do?

A. Just on very rare occasions.

Q. Well, explain the circumstances of these rare occasions?

A. Well, when we have specific requests for them. Occasionally sizes can't be obtained from the Atlas Supply, or if there is a delay in shipment then I procure the tires locally to satisfy some particular need.

Q. Did you ever purchase outside merchandise when Atlas is able to supply you with those sizes?

A. Oh, no.

Q. Or that type of merchandise?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you stock other types of tires and tubes at the present time?

A. I have one or two.

Q. When did you purchase those?

A. Well, one was taken in in trade, and the other was [fol. 1378] obtained, oh, more than a year ago.

Q. Was this one you took in in trade new merchandise or old?

A. It is new merchandise. It was a swap for some other merchandise which he obtained.

Q. Well, what brand is that?

A. It is a Hood.

Q. How long ago did you obtain it?

A. About three weeks ago.

Q. Now, have you ever purchased in the past, between say, May 1946, when you commenced your operations, up to the present outside tires and tubes?

A. Yes. When tires were not plentiful, why, we obtained the tires locally.

Q. What brand?

A. We have bought Goodyear and Firestone principally.

Q. Did you sell those in the regular course of business, to your trade?

A. Yes, we stocked them. We had quite a supply on hand.

Q Are you buying any of those tires now?

A. No.

Q. At the time you stocked and sold Firestone and Goodyear tires, were your customers satisfied with this type of merchandise?

[fol. 1379] A. We never had any complaints.

Q. Now, from whom do you now obtain your batteries?

A. From the Atlas Supply.

Q. Do you obtain batteries from any other source at the present time?

A. No.

Q. Have you previously obtained batteries from any other sources?

A. Yes, from local jobbers.

Q. What brand or brands?

A. Hobbs, Federals, Stowe, U. S. That seems to cover them.

Q. And when did you purchase those?

A. Well, about a year ago. Nothing was bought recently, later than about seven months ago.

Q. Now, with reference to these Hobbs or Willards or other batteries, did you sell those in the regular course of your business?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you ever have any dissatisfaction expressed to you by your customers with respect to these products?

A. No.

Q. Now, at the present time are you obtaining your tires, tubes and batteries on consignment or do you purchase them outright?

[fol. 1380] A. No, they are exclusively placed in on consignment.

Q. Have you ever attempted to purchase them at any time?

A. Yes. There was some disagreement sometime back, principally in connection with billing, Standard Oil billing, which was considered bad, and we had some disagreement. We offered to buy the entire stock, and the local merchandiser called Los Angeles long distance to determine whether that was acceptable, and we were told that they would remedy the situation as connected with the billing, and that the purchase could not be made outright. We were restricted so far as the buying of our tires.

Q. By that you mean you were unable to buy?

A. That is so.

Q. And your must handle them only by consignment?

A. That is so.

Q. Now, with reference to your other types of accessories, do you sell other miscellaneous accessories, automotive accessories, other than tires, tubes and batteries?

A. Oh, yes. We carry quite a lot of them.

Q. Have you ever had any discussion with any Standard Oil officials concerning the purchasing of these miscellaneous accessories?

A. Yes.

Q. With whom?

[fol. 1381] A. Mr. Earl Studley.

Q. Who is Mr. Studley?

A. Mr. Studley is our merchandiser.

Q. He is the one you said calls on your station regularly?

A. Yes, he calls, oh, a month or six weeks apart.

Q. Do you recall any specific time you had discussions with him concerning automotive accessories?

A. I believe the question is raised every time he visits us.

Q. When was the last time that you recall a discussion?

A. About six weeks ago.

Q. And where did such a discussion take place?

A. I would like to make one comment in connection with that statement, that my partner and I, we alternate days in the station, and as a result the merchandiser can visit and I may not see him, whereas my partner may, and the same discussion usually takes place with either one of us.

Q. Well, you can testify only to the discussions you have had, and not those of your partner.

A. My discussion was about six weeks ago.

Q. Where was that?

A. In my station, in the store.

Q. Who was present?

[fol. 1382] A. Just Mr. Studley and myself.

Q. And what was said?

A. That we should try to obtain a larger volume bonus and buy a greater quantity of the Atlas accessories.

Q. Did he say anything further at that time? Did you have any discussion concerning any other matters which might relate to your purchasing of accessories?

A. There is always conversation, but I don't recall the exact statements. The inference is always that we should buy more.

Q. Now, do you advertise Standard Oil products at your station?

A. There are certain types of signs which exist on all Chevron service stations. I have attempted, however, to have erected for my particular needs a huge sign on the roof of the station.

Q. Have you ever had any conversations with Standard Oil officials concerning that sign?

A. Yes, I——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. That is objected to as irrelevant and immaterial and outside the issues in the case.

The Court: Do you insist on the question?

Mr. Thody: I will reframe the question, if I may.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Thody:

[fol. 1383] Q. In connection with your discussions with the merchandiser that you have referred to, pertaining to your purchasing of your requirements of automotive accessories, was there any discussion of the relationship of the sign to your purchasing requirements of automotive accessories?

A. Yes.

Q. And what were those discussions?

A. This happened a short time ago. We were having a little difficulty with respect to understanding the practices of the Standard Oil manner in which to handle our credit and charge accounts, and we were being examined rather thoroughly at each time when we would submit the credit cards to Standard for payment of some commodities. This became more or less embarrassing. We decided to check into the reasons for our being considered as bad boys, as we put it. So we had a conference involving Mr. Tremaine, Mr. McCarthy, my partner and myself in Mr. Tremaine's office at the Standard Oil business office in the Bank of America Building.

[fol. 1384] Q. When was this?

A. This was about four weeks ago.

Q. And what was said?

A. Well, initially we had discussed the matter of what we brought the meeting to disclose, that is, the manner in which they handled credit cards. They first objected to our use of the credit card for charging other than the Standard Oil products and the products merchandised through the Atlas Supply Corporation. Then, more particularly as applies to one instance, where we requested use of the credit card for charging wheel bearings associated with a wheel pack that we were applying to a car.

Well, we were informed then that we were not to use the S28, as it is known, for any purpose other than for the Atlas Supply products and the Standard Oil products.

Well, that being clarified, we brought up the discussion of the sign. We had been informed that we were to receive a huge sign on the roof, displaying Chevron products, that is, mentioning Chevron products. We waited a long time for it and it was not forthcoming. They informed us at that meeting that it had been cancelled. We asked for an explanation and there was none given. They just said: "Let's forget it." Well, we insisted and they said, "Well, if you folks would buy larger quantities of the Atlas Supply merchandise, then we will re-open the issue relative to [fol. 1385] the sign at some future date." And that closed the incident.

Q. When was this discussion of the sign? When did that first take place? You say it had been hanging fire for a long period of time.

A. Well, the sign was discussed at the very inception of our agreement with Standard Oil.

Q. Was it discussed in this meeting in November of 1945 you have previously referred to?

A. Yes; it was.

Q. What was promised to you or discussed at that time?

A. Well, that the sign problem would be presented to the advertising division of Standard for their approval, and that seemed to support the idea. They came out several times and looked, and a design corporation—I think it is California Electric Products—came in several times and measured to determine the strength of the building and also adequately plan a sign for erection on the roof.

Q. Have you ever heard anything since this last meeting as to when you might get the sign?

A. No.

Mr. Thody: I ask, your Honor, that Government's Exhibit No. 95 for identification be admitted into evidence.

Mr. Hall: Each and all of the documents so offered are objected to on the grounds that they are irrelevant and [fol. 1386] immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: 95 in evidence.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Now, Mr. Blasker, I direct your attention to the agreement entitled "Lease" of these premises at this location on Rosecrans and Midway Avenue in San Diego, the lease from you to Standard Oil, and call your attention to Paragraph 2 thereof, which reads that the lessee agrees to pay the lessor rental for the use and occupancy of leased premises in accordance with $200.00 per month. Now, have you been receiving those $200.00 per month from the lessee?

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. That is objected to as irrelevant and immaterial and not within the issues of the case.

The Court: My thought was on something else.

Mr. Thody: This is merely preliminary, your Honor.

The Court: All right.

The Witness: May I answer?

The Court: You may answer.

A. No; we haven't been paying that. I would like to continue further, if I may.

Mr. Thody: Yes.

A. We have a sublease which in turn the Standard Oil Company becomes the lessor and we are the lessee, and we [fol. 1387] are to receive—they are to receive $200.00 in turn from us, which cancels out the original agreement.

Q. And you are pointing to Paragraph 3 of the sublease, 3 of the sublease?

A. Yes, sir; dated December 27th, 1945. There is one more——

Q. So it is your testimony that the $200.00 reference in the sublease cancels out the $200.00 reference in the lease?

A. That is correct; yes, sir. May I make another comment here?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. That is in connection with our basic lease. We have a $250.00 obligation to our landlord and——

Q. Who is this landlord?

A. The landlord is Arnet Speer, and we are more particularly dealing with Percy H. Goodwin Company. This $250.00 is a minimum rental. And we have, in addition to that, a five per cent clause which is imposed after $6,000 amount of merchandising is gone.

Q. Have you been paying that rent to the owner regularly?

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute. Just a minute, please, Your Honor, I am asking to have the previous answer of the witness stricken, and objecting to this last question on [fol. 1388] the ground that the relations between this man and the landlord can have no possible relation to any issue in this case.

Mr. Thody: The Government submits they do, your Honor, because the testimony will show that the occupant here holds the master lease of the premises, and actually between Standard Oil and the dealer there is no exchange of money. In previous questions Mr. Hall has inquired as to whether or not the operator was set up in business, and so on. In this particular instance we are merely trying to show that the operator has the master lease and is obligated to pay other persons a substantial amount for rental of his property.

Mr. Hall: The questions, if the court please, go much beyond that, and the documents——

The Court: All right; we will limit them, then, to that.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Do you own this property?

A. No; I do not.

Q. Do you lease it?

A. Yes; I do.

Q. Do you lease from the parties you have referred to in your previous testimony?

A. I lease from Arnet Speer through their agent, Percy H. Goodwin Company.

Q. And what is the rental paid by you?

[fol. 1389] A. $250.00 minimum plus five per cent over $6,000 gross.

Q. How much on an average does that amount to per month or has it in the last year amounted to per month?

A. About $450.00 per month.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Standard Oil Company built the station on that property, didn't it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did it pay anything for the station on the property?

A. They advanced some money; yes.

Q. How much did they advance?

A. I would like to modify that. They didn't advance it. They paid the contractor $20,000.

Q. $20,000?

A. Yes, sir. And they expected me to have a substantial interest in the station by demanding that I put up $6,000.

Q. Yes.

A. I have a $6,000 actual equity in that building.

Q. In your testimony you mentioned credit cards and some dispute with the company concerning charges on the credit card accounts.

[fol. 1390] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Well, if I understand you correctly, you people were charging on credit card accounts merchandise which was not purchased from Standard Oil Company?

A. That is correct. May I add to that, sir?

Vol. II

TRANSCRIPT OF RECORD

(Pages 801 to 1416)

Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1948

No. 279

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA AND STANDARD STATIONS, INC., APPELLANTS,

vs.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

FILED SEPTEMBER 16, 1948.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

OCTOBER TERM, 1948

No. 279

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA AND STANDARD STATIONS, INC., APPELLANTS,

vs.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

VOL. II

INDEX

	Original	Print
Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California
Continued
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Testimony on behalf of Defendants—Continued	Original	Print
Opening statement on behalf of defendants	1432	825
Testimony on behalf of defendants:
Bussert, L. M.
Direct examination	1752	1010
Cross-examination	1779	1027
Redirect examination	1781	1028
Christy, Ronald A.
Direct examination	1541	871
Cross-examination	1547	874
Dern, John P.
Direct examination	1605	925
Cross-examination	1631	939
Redirect examination	1642	946
Garrett, Robert W.
Direct examination	1963	1135

JUDD & DETWEILER (INC.), PRINTERS, WASHINGTON, D. C., NOV. 23, 1948.

	Original	Print
Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California—Continued
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Testimony on behalf of Defendants—Continued
Hays, Harry T.
Direct examination	1786	1031
Cross-examination	1817	1051
Hillback, Elliott D.
Direct examination	1979	1145
Cross-examination	1986	1149
Hodge, Arthur
Direct examination	1657	954
Cross-examination	1665	959
Hugill, Elbert A., Jr.
Direct examination	1499	864
Cross-examination	1506	867
McCall, Edward P.
Direct examination	1433	826
Cross-examination	1492	860
Direct examination	1498	863
Mortensen, Hjalmar
Direct examination	1643	946
Cross-examination	1654	952
Olaine, Francis S.
Direct examination	1700	978
Cross-examination	1748	1008
Rogers, Elmer C.
Direct examination	1533	884
Cross-examination	1534	885
Seeley, Harold D.
Direct examination	1525	880
Cross-examination	1530	882
Thompson, Erskine D.
Direct examination	1830	1057
Cross-examination	1925	1114
Travis, Ward E.
Direct examination	1545	890
Cross-examination	1581	911
Redirect examination	1595	919
Recross-examination	1596	920
Further redirect examination	1600	923
Turner, Clesse M.
Direct examination	1673	964
Cross-examination	1681	969
Redirect examination	1686	972

Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California (Continued)

	Original	Print
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Wharton, Clinton S.
Direct examination	1519	876
Cross-examination	1524	879
Will, David
Direct examination	1535	885
Cross-examination	1539	888
Colloquy at close of defendants' case	1953	1153
Opening argument on behalf of plaintiff	2060	1157
Argument on behalf of defendants	2070	1197
Closing argument on behalf of plaintiff	2184	1261
Statement by the Court on submission of case	2204	1273
Reporter's certificate (omitted in printing)	2210-a
Colloquy re objections and amendments to decree	2213	1278
Colloquy re objections to findings	2250	1299
Reporter's certificate (omitted in printing)	2251
Plaintiff's exhibits:
1—Dealer Agreement Form S-452	2252	1301
2—Distributor Agreement Form SS-130-E	2254	1304
3—Petroleum Products and Equipment Agreement Form S-475	2256	1305
4—Dealer Agreement TBA Form S-452-TBA	2258	1308
5—Sublease Form S-456	2260	1311
6—Tabulations labeled "Item A—Number of Documents Outstanding as of 3-12-47"; "Item B—Use of the Distributor Agreement . . ." etc.; "Item C—The Total Number of Dealer Retail Outlets . . ." etc.; "Item D—Number of retail Outlets as of March 12, 1947 . . ." etc.	2262	1313
7—Tabulation of Total Gross Quantities of Gasoline Shipped from Standard Oil Company of California's Refineries	2267	1316
8—Tabulation of Total Gross Quantities of Gasoline Purchased or Acquired by Standard Oil Company of California (Other Than From its Own California Refineries)	2268	1317
9—Tabulation of Total Gross Quantities of Gasoline Sold by Standard Oil Company of California to Retail Dealers	2269	1317
10—Tabulation of Total Number of Tires, Tubes, Batteries and Other Automotive Accessories Shipped by Companies Manufacturing or Supplying the Same to Standard Oil Compa[illegible] of

	Original	Print
Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California—Continued
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Plaintiff's exhibits—Continued
California and or Standard Stations, Inc., or to Others on the Order of Standard Oil Company of California and or Standard Stations, Inc., From States Outside of California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, Idaho and Utah	2271	1319
11—Tabulation of Tires, Tubes, Batteries and Other Automotive Accessories Shipped by Companies Manufacturing or supplying the Same to Standard Oil Company of California and/or Standard Stations, Inc., or to Others on the Order of Standard Oil Company of California and/or Standard Stations, Inc.	2272	1319
12—Tabulation of Total Number of Tires, Tubes, Batteries and Other Automotive Accessories Shipped by Companies Manufacturing or Supplying the Same Located in California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, Idaho and Utah to Standard Oil Company of California and/or Standard Stations, Inc., or to Others on the Order of Standard Oil Company of California and/or Standard Stations, Inc.	2277	1324
16—Memorandum from E. D. Thompson to Mr. E. J. McClanahan dated June 13, 1945 re: Lease Site and Lessor Built Station Loan of $4,000.00; Kamas, Utah	2278	1325
16-A—Lease dated April 10, 1945 from Harold W. Butler et ux. to Standard Oil Company of California	2280	1327
16-B—Sublease dated April 10, 1945 from Standard Oil Company of California to Harold W. Butler et ux.	2284	1332
16-C—Dealer Agreement dated April 10, 1945 between Standard Oil Company of California and Harold W. Butler	2286	1334
16-D—Real Estate Mortgage from Harold W. Butler et ux. to Standard Oil Company of California	2288	1337
16-E—Promissory Note dated April 10, 1945 in favor of Standard Oil Company of California executed by Harold W. Butler et ux.	2291	1339

	Original	Print
Record from D. C. U. S., Southern District of California—Continued
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Plaintiff's exhibits—Continued
16-F—Letter dated April 16, 1945 from Standard Oil Company of California to Mr. Harold W. Butler et ux.	2292	1349
17—Memorandum dated March 12, 1945 from E. D. Thompson to Mr. E. J. McClanahan	2294	1341
17-A—Agreement dated May 6, 1947 between Standard Oil Company of California and Mildred C. Ransom	2296	1343
17-B—Dealer Agreement TBA dated March 19, 1945 between Standard Oil Company of California and Mildred C. Ransom	2297	1344
17-C—Sublease dated March 19, 1945 from Standard Oil Company of California to Mildred C. Ransom	2324	1371
17-D—Letter dated April 16, 1945 from Standard Oil Company of California to Mrs. Mildred C. Ransom	2326	1373
17-E—Letter dated March 19, 1945 from Standard Oil Company of California to Mrs. Mildred C. Ransom	2327	1374
17-F—Lease dated March 19, 1945 from Mildred C. Ransom to Standard Oil Company of California	2328	1375
17-G—Lease dated March 19, 1945 from Mildred C. Ransom to Standard Oil Company of California	2332	1379
17-H—Note dated March 23, 1945 in favor of Standard Oil Company of California executed by Mildred C. Ransom	2333	1381
17-I—Real and Chattel Mortgage from Mildred C. Ransom to Standard Oil Company of California dated March 23, 1945	2334	1381
18—Memorandum dated July 10, 1946 from E. D. Thompson to Mr. E. J. McClanahan re: Gross Brothers, Maywood, California	2339	1385
18-C—Letter dated July 9, 1946 from Standard Oil Company of California to Mr. A. M. Gross	2341	1387
19—Memorandum dated February 15, 1945 from E. D. Thompson to Mr. E. J. McClanahan re: Burnie Hyland, Spokane, Washington	2343	1389
19-D—Dealer Agreement dated January 5, 1945 between Standard Oil Company of California and Burnie Hyland	2345	1391

Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued

Plaintiff's exhibits—Continued	Original	Print
19-E—Letter dated December 3, 1946 from Standard Oil Company of California to Mr. Burnie Hyland	2347	1394
19-F—Bill of Sale dated January 16, 1947 from Standard Oil Company of California to Burnie Hyland	2348	1394
20—Memorandum dated June 22, 1945 from E. D. Thompson to Mr. E. J. McClanahan re: Wright and Roberts, Parma, Idaho	2349	1394
20-A—Agreement dated September 17, 1945 between Standard Oil Company of California and Ray A. Wright	2351	1395
20-B—Indenture dated May 3, 1945 between Elmer C. Roberts et ux.; et al. and Standard Oil Company of California	2353	1400
20-C—Promissory Note, dated May 3, 1945 in favor of Standard Oil Company of California executed by Elmer C. Roberts et ux., et al.	2358	1404
21—Memorandum dated January 10, 1945 from E. D. Thompson to Mr. E. J. McClanahan re: Chitwood and Study, San Pedro, California	2359	1405
21-A—Lease dated January 19, 1945 from Dean B. Chitwood et ux., et al. to Standard Oil Company of California	2363	1409
21-B—Lease and Option to Purchase, dated January 19, 1945, between Dean B. Chitwood et ux., et al. and Standard Oil Company of California	2366	1412
21-C—Sublease dated January 19, 1945 from Standard Oil Company of California to Dean B. Chitwood et ux., et al.	2367	1413
21-D—Dealer Agreement dated January 19, 1945 between Standard Oil Company of California and Dean B. Chitwood et al.	2369	1415
21-E—Letter dated March 2, 1946 from Dean B Chitwood et ux., et al. to Standard Oil Company of California	2371	1417
21-F—Note Secured by Deed of Trust in favor of Standard Oil Company of California executed by Dean B. Chitwood et ux., et al.	2372	1417
21-G—Deed of Trust With Assignment of Rents, dated January 20, 1945, between Dean B. Chitwood et ux., et al., Trustors, Security-First National Bank of Los Angeles, Trustee, and

Plaintiff's exhibits Continued

	Original	Print
Standard Oil Company of California, Beneficiary	2373	1418
22—Letter dated September 4, 1947 from W. A. Frazer to Mr. W. H. Haines, re Competitive Oil-Chevron Truck Stations	2379	1421
22-D—Agreement dated March 11, 1948 between Standard Oil Company of California and H. A. Holyfield et ux., et al.	2380	1422
22-E—Assignment dated October 15, 1946 from W. S. Darnell et ux. to W. S. Darnell et ux., et al.	2381	1422
22-I—Letter dated September 18, 1946 from Standard Oil Company of California to W. S. Darnell	2382	1423
23—Letter dated September 22, 1947 from C. T. Furrer to W. A. Frazer, re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2383	1424
23-D—Letter dated June 28, 1943 from Standard Oil Company of California to Ransome Company	2384	1425
23-E—Letter dated November 15, 1941 from Standard Oil Company of California to Ransome Company	2385	1426
23-F—Sublease dated November 15, 1941 from Standard Oil Company of California to Ransome Company	2386	1426
23-K—Lease dated June 4, 1943 from W. L. Kissinger et ux. to Standard Oil Company of California	2388	1430
23-N—Letter dated March 4, 1948 from Standard Oil Company of California to Mr. Walter F. Hannah	2389	1431
23-O—Agreement dated March 4, 1948 between Standard Oil Company of California and Mr. Verne Mortimer	2390	1432
23-Q—Letter dated September 26, 1947 from E. D. Thompson to Mr. H. R. Cuyler re Competitive Lubrication Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2391	1432
23-R—Letter dated October 27, 1947 from C. T. Furrer to Mr. J. L. Burke re SS-7333-CDA, Ontario California	2392	1433
23-S—Memorandum dated December 15, 1947 from S. J. Coull to Mr. C. T. Furrer re Ransome Co.	2393	1434
23-T—Letter dated December 31, 1947 from C. T. Furrer to W. A. Frazer re Com-

...laintiff's exhibits—Continued	Original	Print
...petitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2395	1435
23-U—letter dated January 5, 1948 from W. A. Frazer to C. T. Furrer re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Gas Stations	2396	1436
23-V—Letter dated January 19, 1948 from C. T. Furrer to J. L. Burke re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Gas Stations	2397	1437
23-W—Letter dated January 22, 1948 from C. T. Furrer to G. C. Calden re Santa Maria Truck Station	2398	1437
23-X—Memorandum dated January 22, 1948 from J. L. Burke to C. T. Furrer	2400	1438
24—Letter dated May 8, 1947 from E. D. Thompson to H. R. Cuyler re Truck Registration and Fuel Requirements—Pacific Coast States	2401	1438
24-A—Letter dated May 19, 1947 from H. R. Cuyler to E. D. Thompson re Truck Registration and Fuel Requirements—Pacific Coast States	2402	1438
24-B—Letter dated August 14, 1947 from W. A. Frazer to F. C. Eastman et al. re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2403	1439
24-C—Letter dated August 14, 1947 from W. A. Frazer to G. C. Briggs et al. re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2404	1440
24-D—Letter dated August 14, 1947 from W. A. Frazer to E. V. Burns re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2405	1441
24-E—Letter dated August 14, 1947 from W. A. Frazer to C. S. Lincoln et al. re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2406	1442
24-F—Letter dated October 27, 1947 from G. C. Briggs to R. W. Goodale re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2407	1443
24-G—Letter dated February 17, 1948 from E. D. Thompson to H. R. Cuyler re Competitive Lubricating Oil—Chevron Truck Stations	2408	1444
24-H—Letter dated February 5, 1948 from E. D. Thompson to H. R. Cuyler re

Plaintiff's exhibits—Continued	Original	Print
Competitive Lubricating Oils—Chevron Truck Stations	2409	1445
24-I—Letter dated February 3, 1941 from W. A. Frazer to C. T. Furrer re Competitive Lubricating Oils—Cheyron Truck Stations	2419	1446
53—Letter dated August 29, 1947 from Standard Oil Company of California to Union Square Garage Corporation, etc.	2411	1447
53-A—Amendment to Garage Management and Occupancy Agreement, dated July 1, 1945, between Union Square Garage Corporation and Union Square Garage, Inc., etc.	2422	1459
85—Notice dated January 3, 1946, by Bernice Duffin to Standard Oil Company of California, of the appointment of Darwin G. Duffin as operator of service station, etc.	2472	1498
99—Answer of Standard Oil Company of California to Interrogatory #4, Part II, re Total Gross Quantities of Gasoline Sold to Dealers	2475	1499
100—Answer of Standard Oil Company of California to Interrogatory #4, Part III, re Total Gross Quantities of Automotive Lubricating Oils Sold to Dealers	2476	1499
101—Lease Form S-450	2477	1500
102—Lease Form S-450-1	2481	1504
103—Lease Form S-450-2	2485	1508
104—Certificate of Secretary of State of the State of Oregon	2489	1514
105—Merchandise Inspection Report	2490	1514
Defendants' exhibits:
B—Questionnaire re Retailing Agents and Amount of Business	2491	1515
C—Tide Water Associated Oil Company Sales Statistics—Year 1941	2492	1516
D—Tide Water Associated Oil Company Sales Statistics—Year 1946	2493	1517
E—Service Station Lease—Tide Water Associated Oil Company form 4580-B	2494	1518
F—Merchandise Agreement for Ford Tires and Tubes, Aero Batteries, Auto Supplies of Tide Water Associated Oil Company	2496	1524
G—Questionnaire and Answers of Shell Oil Company	2499	1534

Defendants' exhibits—Continued.	Original	Print
H—Application form for Shellubrication Dealers' License, etc.	2505	1538
I—Service Station Lease Form of Shell Oil Company, etc.	2517	1554
J—Tabulations re Sales of General Petroleum Corporation	2521	1566
K—Service Station Lease (L) form of General Petroleum Corporation, etc	2527	1569
L—Dealer Gasoline Contract (L)—Form of General Petroleum Corporation, etc.	2532	1578
M—Tabulations re Sales of The Texas Co.	2536	1589
N—Agreement of Sale form of The Texas Company, etc.	2538	1590
O—Lease form of The Texas Company	2542	1603
P—Tabulations of Sales of Tires, Tubes, Batteries and other Accessories Through Employee-Operated Service Stations of Union Oil Company of California	2546	1609
Q—Service Station Lease form of Union Oil Company of California (form No. 909)	2550	1611
R—Retail Dealer Gasoline Contract form of Union Oil Company of California (form No. 896-F)	2552	1615
S—Tabulations re Sales of Union Oil Company of California	2554	1618
T—Tabulations re Number of Retail Service Station Outlets, etc., of Richfield Oil Corporation	2558	1619
U—Sales Contract form of Richfield Oil Corporation, etc.	2561	1621
V—Tabulation of Los Angeles Basin Competitive Service Station Report	2575	1649
W—Los Angeles Sales District Map dated October 23, 1942—revised September 1, 1943	2576	1650
X—Long Beach Sales District Map dated October 28, 1942—revised February 14, 1947	2577	1651
Y—Tabulation of San Francisco Bay Area Competitive Service Station Report	2578	1652
Z—Tabulation of Gasoline Sales—Retail Sales by Standard Stations, Inc. and Dealers versus State Total Taxable Motor Fuel Sales	2579	1653
AA—Tabulation of Automotive Lubricating Oil Sales, etc.	2587	1657

Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued

Defendants' exhibits—Continued

	Original	Print
BB—Tabulations of Tire Replacement Shipments, etc.	2591	1661
CC—Tabulations of Replacement Battery Sales—Retail Sales by Standard Stations, Inc. and Dealers versus Total Replacement Manufacturers	2599	1665
DD—Graphs Showing Retail Sales by Standard's Dealers as % of State Taxable Motor Fuel Sales	2607	1669
EE—Graphs Showing Retail Sales by Standard's Dealers as % of API'S Estimated Use of Automotive Lubricating Oils	2608	1670
FF—Graphs Showing Retail Sales by Standard's Dealers as % of Estimated State Total Tire Replacement Shipments Based Upon Rubber Manufacturers Association's Data	2609	1671
GG—Graphs Showing Retail Sales by Standard's Dealers as % of Estimated State Total Battery Replacements Based Upon Data from Ass'n. of American Battery Mfgrs., Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.	2610	1672
HH—Graphs Showing Retail Sales by Standard's Dealers as Percents of Estimated State Totals (Seven Western States)	2611	1673
II—Tabulations of Companies Marketing Over 1,000,000 Taxable Gallons of Gasoline in Seven Western States, 1946, etc.	2612	1675
JJ—Depositions of Francis S. Olaine, L. M. Bussert and Harry T. Hays	2615	1677
KK—Map of Western States with Numbered Subdivisions	2726	1754
LL—Bulk Distribution Data (Exhibit "A" to Deposition)	2727	1755
MM—Map of Western States with Lettered Subdivisions	2731	1758
NN—Package Goods Distribution Data (Exhibit "B" to Deposition)	2732	1759
OO—Location of Accessory Warehouse (Exhibit "C" to Deposition)	2735	1760
QQ—Photograph of Standard Station	2739	1761
RR—Photograph of Chevron Gas Station	2740	1762
SS—Telegrams	2741	1763
TT—Trademarks	2756	1778

	Original	Print
Record from D.C. U. S. Southern District of California—Continued
Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings—Continued
Defendants' exhibits—Continued
UU—List of Competitive Service Station Construction Activity	2763	1785
VV—Dealer Agreement form of Standard Oil Company of California, etc.	2766	1788
WW—Lubrication Chart	2782	1822
XX—Specifications re Fan Belts, etc	2784	1824
YY—Chevron Merchandiser	2787	1827
ZZ—Booklet "Round Table," etc.	2808	1848
AAA—Form of Daily Report	2818	1858
BBB—Two Photographs of Garage	2819	1859
CCC—Tabulation of Automotive Oils—Year 1947	2821	1861
DDD—Tabulation of Average Installation Cost	2822	1862
EEE—Graph Showing Average Delivery Cost to Dealer Stations, etc.	2823	1862
FFF—Tabulation of Competitive TBA at Chevron Dealers Signed on TBA Agreements	2824	1863
GGG—Tabulation of Companies Marketing Their Own Brand of Lubricating Oil, etc.	2825	1864
Petition for Appeal	2828	1866
Assignment of Errors and Prayer for Reversal	2830	1867
Order Allowing Appeal	2842	1876
Bond on Appeal (omitted in printing)	2844
Stipulation Designating Portions of the Record to be Included in the Transcript on Appeal (Pursuant to Supreme Court Rule 10)	2851	1876
Praecipe Indicating the Portions of the Record to be Incorporated in the Transcript on Appeal	2950	1943
Designation of Additional Portions of the Record Desired by Plaintiff to be Included in Transcript on Appeal	2955	1945
Clerk's certificate (omitted in printing)	2957
Statement of points to be relied upon and designation of parts of record to be printed	2960	1946
Order noting probable jurisdiction	2962	1947

The Court: Go ahead.

Mr. Hall: Not as far as I am concerned.

The Court: Well, if it is by way of explanation, you may.

The Witness: Well, there was never any restrictions placed on us so far as what we should charge or not charge on those particular credit cards, and we assumed that that was permissible as well as any other subject, inasmuch as in one instance where a customer bought a large quantity of gasoline in the course of several months and he failed to pay, and the charge came back to me for reimbursement to the Standard Oil, which I paid. It was some $60-odd there, and inasmuch as I felt that I am obligated to take responsibility for these credits and charges, why, I assumed that then I was perfectly legitimate in my charging any merchandise which I sold on that particular credit account.

The Court: Well, it is not the credit extended by the company.

[fol: 1391] The Witness: There was never any mention of that, sir.

The Court: What is that?

The Witness: There was never anything in writing restricting me in that.

The Court: Did that create a bookkeeping problem when you gave credit for merchandise which is not theirs and in which they do not have an interest at all?

The Witness: Yes, sir. But we also have a bookkeeping problem in maintaining records for Standard Oil Company, so I think it is even.

The Court: All right; it was tit for tat, was it?

The Witness: Well, we didn't try to retaliate or anything like that, sir.

The Court: All right. Anything further?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute.

Mr. Thody: After——

Mr. Hall: Pardon me just a moment.

The Court: Had you finished?

Mr. Hall: Yes.

The Court: All right.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. With reference to this $20,000 that was advanced by Standard Oil, did you, pursuant to clause 4 of your agreement, give a bill of sale to Standard Oil for all of the im-
[fol. 1392] provements on this property?

A. Actually, we gave them a $26,000 bill of sale for the $20,000 they advanced us.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

Mr. Hall: Just a moment. Pardon me just a moment, your Honor. That is all.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

The Court: All right, step down. Call your next witness.

Mr. Somerville: The Government calls Eugene Paridy.

Eugene V. Paridy, called as a witness by the plaintiff, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Eugene V. Paridy, P-a-r-i-d-y.

The Clerk: P-a-r-i-d-y?

The Witness: That is right, sir.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Paridy?

A. 3920 25th Street, San Francisco.

Q. Are you at the present time a Chevron operator?

A. Yes, sir; I am.

Q. Have you produced certain agreements with Standard Oil Company covering your station?

A. Yes, sir; I have them with me. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1393] Mr. Somerville: The Government asks that dealer agreement TBA, dated August 4, 1945, between the Standard Oil Company of California and E. V. Paridy, and other documents relating to the service station located at Day and Church Streets, San Francisco, California, be marked for identification.

The Clerk: Government's 96 for identification.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When did you first commence operations at this station, Mr. Paul?

A. September the 6th, 1945.

Q. At that time were supplies of tires, tubes, and batteries and other accessories capable of easy obtaining?

A. There weren't any.

Mr. Hall: Will you pardon me a moment? Is this witness mentioned in your answers to our interrogatories?

Mr. Somerville: No; he is not. Is there a question unanswered, Mr. Reporter?

The Reporter: No; there is no question unanswered, Mr. Somerville.

Mr. Hall: Pardon me, Mr. Somerville.

Mr. Somerville: I am sorry, Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall: I object to any testimony of this witness on the ground that he is not included within the list of witnesses given us by the Government in answer to our interrogatories, and that fact is admitted by Mr. Somerville [fol. 1394] who is interrogating him.

Mr. Somerville: If your Honor please, the testimony of this witness concerns a transaction about which we will have other testimony of witnesses who were listed. At the time we did not know of the availability of this witness.

The Court: If it is merely corroborative, I think it is all right; but if he is going to testify to things which are not corroborative, I think it is not fair to do that, and I would hold you strictly to the answers to the interrogatories.

Mr. Somerville: That is true; it is corroborative.

The Court: Well, all right; with that understanding I will allow the interrogation.

Mr. Hall: Do you mean, if your Honor please, so that I will understand the ruling——

The Court: That this testimony is merely corroborative.

Mr. Hall: Corroborative of something that is coming later.

The Court: No; corroborative of something that has already gone in. Isn't that the case?

Mr. Somerville: It is corroborative of something that is coming.

The Court: What?

Mr. Somerville: The next three witnesses, your Honor, will all testify to the same matter.

[fol. 1395] The Court: Well, why don't you take your principal witnesses and save the time, and then maybe counsel will not object? Why don't you take the witness whose name you have, and then maybe we will eliminate the others if they are merely corroborative?

Mr. Somerville: The witnesses, none of them would be in the category of a principal. It is merely an oversight on our part.

The Court: All right; I will reserve the motion to strike the testimony of this witness if he is not in the category of a corroborative witness.

Mr. Somerville: Mr. Reporter, is there a question unanswered?

The Reporter: No; there is not.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Were you able to obtain supplies of tires, tubes, and batteries from Standard Oil Company at this time?

A. No, sir; I was not.

Q. How long did this period of shortage last?

A. Oh, I would say for about a year and a half at least.

Q. Did you handle competitive tires, tubes and batteries during this period of shortage?

A. As a matter of fact, that is all I had.

Q. When was Standard Oil Company first able to supply [fol. 1396] you with tires, tubes, and batteries, to your recollection?

A. I would say about two or three months after rationing went off, and then only in a very limited supply.

Q. Have you handled tires, tubes, and batteries on consignment?

A. Yes, sir; I do.

Q. When did such consignments begin?

A. I think in February, originally.

Q. February?

A. Of 1948, I should say.

Q. Were you instructed by anyone to the effect that you must handle tires, tubes, and batteries on consignment?

A. Well, I had tires——

Mr. Hall: Now, just a minute, if the court please. That calls for a conclusion of the witness. I have not objected always, but they say to the witness: "Were you instructed by somebody?" Now, it may not be an instruction.

The Court: That is true.

Mr. Hall: I think they should be asked what was said.

The Court: I think they had better, yes. Let us reframe the question.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Were any conversations held, Mr. Purdy, concerning the matter of consignment at any time?

A. Well, to begin with, I had tires in my possession that I had bought and paid for from Standard Oil. And they [fol. 1397] came in and gave me a credit memorandum for them and took the tires over as their own, and then reconsigned them to me.

Q. When did this occur, February?

A. Around February. I am not just too sure.

Q. At your station?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were any other parties present?

A. Mr. McCune came around.

Q. Were any conversations held concerning the subject of consignment?

A. Well, at that particular time, I said if it was the same to them I would continue to pay cash for them, but I would say that they practically insisted that they be taken on consignment.

Q. Have you bought any competitive tires, tubes, and batteries since this policy of consignment began?

A. No; I haven't.

Q. Have you ever attended a meeting called by Standard Oil Company concerning the sale of the Atlas line of products?

A. Yes.

Q. Who requested you to come to this meeting?

A. Well, we wasn't made to come. We were asked if we wished to attend a meeting at the Diner on Market Street [fol. 1398] right off of 4th, I think it is. I am not too sure.

Q. When was such a meeting held?

A. I don't remember the exact date. I know it was on a Thursday and probably——

Q. What month, approximately?

A. It wasn't so terribly long ago. Maybe in February. I am not too sure about that.

Q. Where was this meeting held and who were in attendance?

A. It was held in a—oh, it is a small restaurant with a private room in the back. It probably would hold about 25 or 30 people at the most. Most all the Chevron dealers were invited. There was no compulsion to attend, just an invitation.

Q. Were any representatives of Standard Oil Company present?

A. Yes; Mr. Berwald, Johnny Berwald. He is the merchandise man. He came around and issued the invitation to attend.

Mr. Hall: Pardon me. Would you give me that name?

The Witness: Berwald, B-e-r-w-a-l-d. And Mr. Hink was there, and quite a few of the Chevron dealers, Mr. Strong. I don't think Mr. Carey was there. I was introduced to a lot of fellows whose names I don't remember. There was several other men from Standard Oil there, but Mr. Wood-[fol. 1399] side, Branch Manager—Assistant Branch Manager, was there. Outside of that I don't remember the names of the others. There was a lot of hand-shaking going on.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Who is Mr. Hink?

A. Mr. Hink, he is the Branch Manager, south side.

Q. Of Standard Oil Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Hink make any remarks or addresses to the meeting?

A. Well, everybody made a little speech and Mr. Hink made a speech, too.

Q. What was said by Mr. Hink, as nearly as you can recall?

[fol. 1400] Q. What was said by Mr. Hink, as nearly as you can recall?

A. Well, to begin with there were some motion pictures shown of the making of the Atlas tires, and a few sandwiches served, and some beer and some coffee, and a few addresses, and, in substance, we were told that there had been quite a shortage of merchandise, but that it was becoming available, and that they would like for us to get out and hustle the sale of Atlas tires and products.

Q. Was anything said concerning your purchasing from competitive sources?

A. There was some remark made. I think they referred to them as pie wagons, that come around and sell merchandise. There isn't any of them, but that they handle a little bit of everything and not much of anything, and there was some mention made of that. And, also, the fact that they hadn't been able to supply us, but things were coming in and in the future they would be able to supply us with merchandise and they expected us to sell it.

Q. Was anything further said?

A. Well, I think Mr. Hink did say there was quite a few applications on hand for Chevron stations at that time.

Q. Was that said immediately after his remarks concerning pushing Atlas products and the availability of them?

A. I wouldn't be sure whether he said it first or [fol. 1401] afterwards. I know the remark was made.

Mr. Somerville: That will be all.

The Court: Cross-examine.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Did you make a speech on that occasion, Mr. Paridy?

A. Me? Why do you ask that?

The Court: They want to know whether you went just for a good time or whether they made you work.

The Witness: I might say I was disappointed in the food. I came there hungry, and they didn't have much to eat.

The Court: Then probably you were not in the mood to make a speech.

The Witness: No, I didn't have enough to make a speech, to be honest with you, sir.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Somerville: Mr. Paridy——

Mr. Hall: What is this? Redirect?

The Court: I thought you said, "That is all."

Mr. Hall: Yes.

Mr. Somerville: I think I might ask the witness this question——

The Court: You had finished?

[fol. 1402] Mr. Hall: Yes, I had finished.

The Court: All right.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Was the meeting more concerned with——

The Court: Oh, let's not talk about that. Let's proceed.

Mr. Somerville: That is all, Mr. Paridy.

The Court: Step down. Call your next witness.

Mr. Somerville: The government calls Mr. Strong, R. L. Strong.

Roy L. Strong, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: Take the stand, please, sir. What is your name, please?

The Witness: Roy L. Strong.

The Clerk: Roy L. Strong. Thank you.

Mr. Somerville: The government offers as its exhibit next in order the exhibit marked Exhibit 96, for identification.

Mr. Hall: The defendants object to each and all of the documents so offered on the ground they are irrelevant and immaterial.

[fol. 1403] The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: 96 admitted in evidence.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Mr. Strong, are you a Chevron operator?

A. I am, sir.

Q. Have you produced any agreements pursuant to subpoena covering your station? Have you produced any agreements between yourself and Standard Oil covering the service station which you operate?

A. Well,——

Q. I say, have you brought with you——

A. Oh, have I? Yes. Do you want the lease, or what?

Q. The agreement, TBA agreement.

(The documents were handed to counsel.)

Mr. Somerville: The government asks that dealer agreement TBA, dated July 1, 1946, between Standard Oil Company of California and Neil Andrus, and an assignment of this agreement effective December 1 to R. L. Strong be marked for identification.

The Clerk: Government's 97 for identification.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. When did you first take over the station, Mr. Strong, and operate it?

A. In December of '46.

Q. After taking over this station, were you able to [fol. 1404] obtain supplies of tires, tubes and batteries from the Standard Oil Company?

A. I was not.

Q. Did you handle competitive tires, tubes and batteries during this period?

A. I did.

Q. When did supplies of Atlas tires, tubes and batteries become plentiful?

A. The first of the year.

Mr. Hall: Pardon me. The first of what year?

Mr. Somerville: When did they become plentiful? He said the first of the year.

Mr. Hall: Did he say what year?

Mr. Somerville: 1948, I understand.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Do your at the present time have Atlas tires, tubes and batteries on consignment?

A. I do.

Q. How many tires and tubes do you have on consignment, approximately?

A. Oh, I would say somewhere in the neighborhood of 30 to 35 tires, and probably the same in tubes, and batteries——

Q. Any batteries?

A. About 8 or 10 batteries, something like that.

Q. Were any conversations held between you and any representatives of Standard Oil Company concerning the [fol. 1405] policy of consignment?

A. Yes.

Q. Where and when, and with whom?

A. At the station at the beginning of the year.

Q. By whom?

A. By Mr. Bill McCune.

Q. Were any other persons present?

A. No, there wasn't.

Q. And what was said?

A. He said we were going to get tires on consignment and you would have to take them on consignment in order to participate in this volume bonus.

Q. Did you thereafter purchase competitive tires, tubes and batteries?

A. I did not.

Q. Does the fact that you were required to maintain a stock of Atlas tires, tubes and batteries have any effect on your ability to stock competitive tires, tubes and batteries?

Mr. Hall: Objected to. That assumes facts not in evidence.

The Court: Yes.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Have you any requests for competitive tires, tubes and batteries?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1406] Q. Have you had salesmen call on you with respect to competitive tires, tubes and batteries since the policy of consignment?

A. Yes.

Q. Do some customers request tires lower in price than Atlas tires, tubes and batteries?

A. They do.

Q. Do you have customer demand for competitive lubricating oils?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. On those occasions, when you receive requests are you able to substitute Standard Oil products?

A. Not always.

Q. Did you ever attend a meeting concerning sales policy called by Standard Oil Company?

A. I have.

Q. Who requested you to come?

A. I wasn't requested, I was asked.

Q. You were asked?

A. Yes.

Q. Who asked you to come?

The Court: That is quite a distinction there. "Request" and "ask" mean the same thing. It wasn't a command performance, then, was it?

The Witness: I am sorry. No.

By Mr. Somerville:

[fol. 1407] Q. Describe the circumstances, if you will that brought you to this meeting. You must have been notified.

A. Well, John Burwald had called me and asked me if I would like to come to this meeting, and I told him I didn't know whether I could make it or not.

Q. Did he call you again?

A. And he called me several days later and I told him I thought I could make it, and so I went.

Q. Where and when was such a meeting held?

A. I believe it was March of this year.

Q. Where?

A. In a little diner on Market Street, San Francisco.

Q. Who were in attendance?

A. Well, there was John Burwald, there was Mr. Hink, there was Al Woodside, Bill McCune, and Chevron dealers.

Q. Did Mr. Hink make any remarks at this meeting?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. What, if anything, did he say in his remarks? As nearly as you can recall, what did he say?

A. Well, he said, "In the past we haven't been able to supply you with Atlas tires, tubes and batteries," and that they was rapidly overcoming that, and then he had gone on to say, "With the money that we were spending for advertising purposes, we thought it was up to you boys to sell our [fol. 1408] merchandise now."

Q. Was anything further said?

A. Oh, he did say that he had dozens of boys coming into the office every day looking for a Chevron station, and there just wasn't any available.

Q. When did he make this remark, after his other remarks?

A. I can't remember.

Mr. Somerville: I think that will be all. Just one moment, please.

Q. Was any mention made of pie wagons?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. Do you remember what the mention was?

A. Well, he just said, "I know they were around, and we haven't been able to supply you, and the dealers have been purchasing from pie wagons, but now that we have the stock I think it is up to you boys to purchase from us."

Mr. Somerville: That will be all. Your witness, Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: Step down. Call your next witness.

Mr. Somerville: The government calls Augustus Carey.

Mr. Hall: Did you offer those last documents?

Mr. Somerville: The government offers in evidence Government's Exhibit 97, for identification.

[fol. 1409] Mr. Hall: The defendant objects to each and all of the documents so offered on the ground they are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Clerk: Overruled, your Honor?

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Clerk: 97 admitted in evidence.

Augustus O. Carey, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: Take the stand, please, sir. What is your name, please?

The Witness: Augustus O. Carey.

The Clerk: Augustus, that is spelled——

The Witness: A-u-g-u-s-t-u-s.

The Clerk: And how do you spell your last name?

The Witness: C-a-r-e-y.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Carey?

A. 711-C Guerrero, San Francisco.

Q. Are you an operator of a Chevron service station?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is that located?

A. On the corner of 19th and Guerrero, San Francisco.

[fol. 1410] Mr. Somerville: The government asks that the distributor agreement dated October 22, 1943, between Standard Oil Company of California and W. L. Benson, a sublease dated October 22, 1943, between Standard Oil Company of California and W. L. Benson, and an assignment of these agreements to Augustus O. Carey dated May 18, 1944 be marked for identification. These documents were produced under paragraph 1, item 64 of subpoena No. 2.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 98, marked for identification.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Upon taking over this station, Mr. Carey, were you able to obtain supplies of tires, tubes and batteries from Standard Oil Company?

A. Not an adequate supply, no.

Q. Were there shortages of other items, such as oil filters and fan belts?

A. There were shortages of all items, practically.

Q. Did you attempt to procure supplies from competitive sources?

A. I did.

Q. When was Standard Oil Company first able to supply you with your requirements of tires, tubes and batteries?

A. I would say about six or eight months ago.

Q. Do you presently handle these items on consignment?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1411] Q. By the way, with respect to the competitive items that you purchased, did you ever display them prominently in your station?

A. I have some displayed, yes.

Q. What items did you display?

A. Well, I have a radiator cleaner, a Wonder Wash for washing cars, and a filter, I have other filters, and I have oil lines.

Q. Have you ever displayed tires?

A. No, no tires.

Q. Where do you keep those tires?

A. Out in the back, in the washroom.

Q. Have you ever displayed batteries?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where do you keep the batteries?

A. I have a safe out there, a cabinet to keep the batteries in.

Q. Where do you display your Atlas tires, tubes and batteries?

A. I display the tires. I have displayed batteries. I don't at the present time.

Q. Did you ever handle flexible oil lines and flexible gas lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall from what source you obtained those? [fol. 1412] A. I got them through my regular supplier, but I don't recall the address.

Q. They weren't acquired from the Standard Oil Company?

A. No.

Q. Did Standard at the time you put in this line have equivalent stock to offer?

A. No, they didn't have that line in, although they put it in later.

Q. When did they put in the stock of flexible oil lines and gas lines?

A. I would say along the last of last year, about November, October or November.

Q. Have any conversations occurred between you and any Standard Oil representatives concerning flexible oil lines and gas lines?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. When and where did such conversations occur?

A. It was at the station approximately at the same time the lines came out, the last part of last year.

Q. Who was present during those conversations?

A. There was just the two of us; Bill McCune and I.

Q. What, if anything, was said?

A. Well, he said that they had these lines now and they was putting them in stock, and that they could furnish me [fol. 1413] with those lines from then on out, and I could replace those with the other ones. I told him I would replace them as I sold the others out.

Q. Are you replacing them?

A. Yes, I am replacing them as I sell the others out.

Q. Were the competitive products good products?

A. Yes, they were good products.

Q. Do you have customers who request competitive brands of tires?

A. Occasionally, yes.

Q. Do you have customers who request competitive brands of batteries?

A. Yes, we have customers that want different brands of batteries.

Q. Have you been able to obtain batteries other than Atlas batteries at a cheaper price for resale to your customers?

A. That's right. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you give me an example of a battery that would be sold cheaper?

A. Well, I have an Eagle battery I sell that sells cheaper than the Standard battery.

Q. What is your margin on that battery?

A. Well, I can make around $1.50 to $2.00 more margin on it than I can on the Atlas.

[fol. 1414] Q. Do you have customers who request that battery?

A. Yes, we do.

Q. And you are able to pass on the benefit of your margin to them in the form of a reduced price?

A. That's right.

Q. Does that battery have any guarantee?

A. Yes, it has. They have a guarantee also.

Q. Is that guarantee equivalent to the Standard Oil and Atlas guarantee?

A. Yes. They have different guarantees; some for 12 months, 24, and 30 months, the same as any other battery.

Q. Have you attended a meeting called by the Standard Oil Company concerning the merchandising of their products?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When and where?

A. Well, the first part of March at 993 Market Street, in back of a restaurant in a small hall there.

Q. And who was in attendance, Mr. Carey?

A. There was approximately 25 Chevron dealers, and Mr. Hink, Al Woodside, John Burwald, and I think Bill McCune was there, too.

Q. Did any of those gentlemen make addresses or speeches or remarks?

A. Yes, there was three representatives that talked. John Burwald talked on marketing, and different ways of [fol. 1415] marketing and so on. And Al Woodside, I think he spoke a little bit; not much. And then Mr. Hink gave a speech.

Q. Who was Mr. Hink?

A. He is the district manager of the South Side.

Q. I would like you to tell the court exactly what Mr. Hink said, as nearby as your recollection permits.

A. Well, he spoke of supply and demand of tires, and that they were easier—they was out of allocation, and we would get all the tires we wanted now. And he spoke that during the war, when tires, tubes and batteries and accessories were hard to get, they co-operated with us and let us buy products anywhere we desired, and now that the tires, tubes and batteries were off allocation, and accessories were getting plentiful in the warehouse, they expected us to cooperate with them. And then he said something about the pie wagon that goes from door to door. I don't remember just what it was he said about them, but he did bring that in. And then his last sentence was that the office sends men down there every day, and he has men coming into his office every day, and he interviews them, that want the Chevron stations. That's about all I remember of it.

Mr. Somerville: That will be all.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court: Step down.

Mr. Somerville: You may be excused, Mr. Carey. Thank [fols. 1416-1418] you.

Mr. Dixon: May it please the court. If we may adjourn at this time, I will guarantee to close the government's case tomorrow morning.

The Court: I want to say that I am not going to allow any more witnesses to testify as to the same meeting. We don't have to have everybody who was there. I think we have had three persons testify already. If you have any more witnesses on that, I will not allow it.

Mr. Somerville: That is all we have, your Honor.

Mr. Hall: Now, if the court please, it appears from the testimony of the last two witnesses, compared with the testimony of Eugene V. Paridy, that the only part of Mr. Paridy's testimony which is corroborated is that which relates to the dinner held on Market Street in February or March, 1948. I, therefore, move that all of the testimony of Mr. Paridy except that relating to the events of the dinner meeting be stricken.

The Court: I will grant the motion. I don't think at this stage we should receive testimony of witnesses whose names were not disclosed, unless that be corroborated, and, therefore, the motion will be granted as to the portion designated by Mr. Hall.

Very well, gentlemen, tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock.

(Whereupon at 5:20 o'clock p.m. an adjournment was taken until 10:00 o'clock a.m., May 20, 1948.)

[fol. 1419] IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES IN AND FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, CENTRAL DIVISION

Honorable Leon R. Yankwich, Judge Presiding

No. 6159-Y-Civil

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff,

vs.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA and STANDARD STATIONS, INC., Defendants

Reporters' Transcript of Proceedings

Los Angeles, California,
Thursday, May 20, 1948.

Appearances:
(As heretofore noted.)

[fol. 1420]

Los Angeles, California,
Thursday, May 20, 1948, 10:00 a.m.

Mr. Dixon: May it please the court, the Government asks that the answer of the defendants to supplemental interrogatory No. 4, part 2, the same being a compilation indicating the total sales by the Standard Oil Company of gasoline to retail or independent operated outlets for the years 1936 through 1946, inclusive, be marked for identification.

The Clerk: Government 99 marked for identification.

Mr. Dixon: The Government asks that the answer of the defendants to supplemental interrogatory No. 4, part 3, the same being a compilation indicating the total gross quantities of automotive lubricating oils sold to dealers or independent operators of retail outlets for such products for the years 1936 through 1946, inclusive, be marked for identification.

The Clerk: Government Exhibit 100 for identification.

Mr. Hall: I think, in further explanation, that you should state, Mr. Dixon, that these schedules do not show quantities sold to Standard Oil stations, that is, to company operated stations.

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

Mr. Hall: But they cover, as I understand, quantities sold to the independent dealers handling Standard products.

[fol. 1421] Mr. Dixon: In other words, they are retail outlets other than company operated stations.

Mr. Hall: That is right.

Mr. Dixon: The Government asks that lease form of the Standard Oil Company of California "S-450" covering "(Vacant Site)" be marked for identification.

The Clerk: Government's 101 for identification.

Mr. Dixon: The Government asks that Standard Oil lease form "S-450-1" covering "(Existing Station)" be marked for identification.

The Clerk: Government's 102 for identification.

Mr. Dixon: The Government asks that Standard Oil Company of California lease form "S-450-2" covering "(Lessor Built Station)" be marked for identification.

The Clerk: Government's 103 for identification.

Mr. Dixon: The Government offers Government's Exhibits Nos. 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, and 103 into evidence.

Mr. Hall: Defendants object to the documents marked as Exhibit 98 on the ground that each and all of the documents included in the offer are irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: The objection is overruled. They may be admitted and so marked.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibits 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, and 103 now admitted in evidence.

Mr. Dixon: The Government offers as exhibits into [fol. 1422] evidence the exhibits No. 7, No. 8, No. 9, No. 10, No. 11, and No. 12 for identification, in evidence.

Mr. Hall: Is that 7 to 12, inclusive?

Mr. Dixon: That is right.

The Clerk: Admitted, your Honor?

The Court: They may be admitted.

The Clerk: Government's Exhibits 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12 admitted in evidence.

Mr. Dixon: Mr. Daley, take the stand, please.

JAMES E. DALEY, called as a witness by the plaintiff, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: James E. Daley.

The Clerk: D-a-l-e-y? Thank you.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Daley?

A. At 1223 North Havenhurst, Hollywood 26, California.

Q. By whom are you employed?

A. The Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Q. How long have you been in the employ of the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. Since March the 19th, 1934.

Q. And what is your type of work?

[fol. 1423] A. I am an accountant.

Q. And that is the type of work that you have been doing with the Bureau?

A. Yes.

Q. I will hand you, Mr. Daley, what is marked Government's Exhibit 99 and ask you to examine the same, and after you have done so, state to the court, if you can, what the total amount in gallons of gasoline sold to dealers or independent operator outlets for Standard Oil products during the year 1936 was?

Mr. Hall: Pardon me just a minute. That involves simply a computation, does it not, Mr. Dixon?

Mr. Dixon: That is right.

Mr. Hall: Multiplying the figures on 99 by the figure 42?

Mr. Dixon: That is right.

Mr. Hall: No objection.

A. The total gallons of gasoline sold to dealers in 1936 in the seven western states is 169,108,926 gallons.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. I will hand you Government's Exhibit 9 and ask you if you will examine the same, and after you have done so, whether you can state what the total amount in gallons of gasoline sold to retail dealer outlets for the year 1946 was?

A. The total gallons of gasoline sold to retail dealer [fol. 1424] outlets for the year 1946 was?

A. The total gallons of gasoline sold to retail dealers in 1946 in the seven western states is 268,568,748 gallons.

Q. Still referring to Government's Exhibit 9, will you state to the court, if you can, what the total amount in gallons of the gasoline sold the dealer outlets for the year 1947 was?

A. The total reflects 320,257,350 gallons.

Q. And directing your attention to the gallonage figure which you gave for the year 1946 and assuming that all of such gallons of gasoline were sold to the dealers at a rate of 18 cents a gallon, will you state to the court, if you can, what the total amount in dollars was for the gallonage of gasoline sold to such outlets for the year 1946?

A. $48,342,374.64.

Q. Directing your attention to the figures which you gave for the year 1947, can you and will you state to the court what total amount in dollars was for the gallonage sold to such outlets for the year 1947?

A. Fifty seven million——

Q. That is at 18 cents a gallon?

A. At 18 cents a gallon, $57,646,323.

Q. Directing your attention to the amount of gasoline [fol. 1425] in gallons which was sold to the dealers for the year 1936 and also directing your attention to the amount of gallons sold to the dealers in 1946, can you state to the court by comparing such figures of from such figures what the percentage of increase in such sales to dealer outlets was in 1946 over the year 1936?

A. 58.8 per cent increase.

Q. Directing your attention to the same figures and comparison of such figures for the year 1947, will you state to the court what the percentage increase of sales was for that year as against the sales to dealers for the year 1936?

A. 89.4 per cent.

Q. I will hand you Government's Exhibit 100 in evidence and ask you to examine the same and state, if you can after examining that exhibit, what the total amount in gallons of lubricating oils sold to dealers for the year 1936 by the Standard Oil Company was?

A. 3,724,476 gallons.

Q. Again handing you Government's Exhibit 9, I will ask you to examine the same and state, if you can, what the total amount in gallons of lubricating oils sold to dealers or operators of independent retail outlets was for the year 1946?

A. 6,067,782 gallons.

[fol. 1426] Q. Again directing your attention to Government's Exhibit 9, can you state how many gallons were sold to such dealers during the year 1947?

A. 6,268,206 gallons.

Q. Now assuming for the purpose of this question and still directing your attention to Government's Exhibit 9, that of the total amount of lubricating oils sold for the year 1946 10 per cent was Zerolene, 35 per cent Penn, 55 per cent RPM, and that such lubricating oils or brands were sold to the dealers at the minimum price range established on that exhibit, or 29 cents a gallon for Zerolene, 66 cents a gallon for Penn, and 50 cents a gallon for RPM, can you state to the court what the total dollar volume was of such sales for all lubricating oils so sold for the year 1946?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. No objection.

A. The total is $3,246,263.83.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. After examining the same exhibit and upon the same assumptions, can you state to the court what the total dollar volume of such sales of lubricating oils was to dealers for the year 1947?

A. $3,353,490.21.

Q. Now directing your attention to Government's Exhibit 100 and Government's Exhibit 9, I will ask you to refer to the same and state to the court, if you can, what [fol. 1427] the percentage of increase in sales of lubricating oils to dealers was from the year 1936 as compared with the sales for the year 1946?

A. There was an increase of 62.9 per cent.

Q. And still referring to such exhibits, can you state to the court what the percentage of increase was in such sales as compared with the year 1936 for the year 1947?

A. 68.3 per cent increase.

Q. Handing you Government's Exhibit 11, I will ask you to examine the same and state to the court, if you can, what the total number of tires were that were shipped to dealers by the Standard Oil Company in the seven western states for the year 1946?

A. 179,462 tires.

Q. And what was the amount of such tires so shipped to dealers for the year 1947?

A. 213,304 tires.

Q. And what was the number of tubes that were shipped to dealers or sold to dealers by the Standard Oil Company for the year 1946 to such outlets in the seven western states?

A. 138,174 tubes.

Q. And what was the total amount of tubes so sold to dealers for the year 1947?

[fol. 1428] A. 197,400 tubes.

Q. Will you give to the court the total of tires and tubes sold to dealers by the Standard Oil Company for the year 1946?

A. 317,636 tires and tubes.

Q. And can you state what the total dollar volume of such sales for the year 1946 is from such exhibit?

A. $2,692,094.

Q. And will you state to the court what the total number of tires and tubes sold to dealers for the Standard Oil Company was for the year 1947?

A. 410,704.

Q. And what was the total dollar volume of such sales for such year?

A. $3,188,301.

Q. By comparing the figures of 1946 with those of 1947 will you state to the court what the percentage of increase, if any, was over the sales for the year 1947 as against the year 1946?

A. In dollar volume it represents an 18.4 per cent increase.

Q. Still directing your attention to Government's Exhibit 11, will you state to the court what the total number of batteries shipped to independent dealer outlets for the Standard Oil Company in the seven western states [fol. 1429] was for the year 1946?

A. 43,078 batteries.

Q. And what was the amount of such batteries shipped to such dealers for the year 1947?

A. 63,126.

Q. And can you give the dollar volume of such sales for batteries for the years 1946 and 1947 from such exhibit?

A. For 1946 the dollar volume for batteries is $352,464; for 1947, $669,829.

Mr. Hall: May I have the answer read, please?

(Answer read by the reporter.)

Mr. Hall: Thank you.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. By comparing the figures of such sales for the year 1947 with the figure for such sales for the year 1946, will you state to the court what the percentage of increase in such sales in batteries was for the year 1947 over the year 1946?

Mr. Hall: Pardon me a moment. You are now comparing the dollar volume?

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

Mr. Hall: I think your question should so show.

Mr. Dixon: May the question so indicate? I thought it was so understood.

The Court: All right.

A. It represents a 90 per cent increase in '47 over [fol. 1430] '46.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Again directing your attention to Government's Exhibit 11, will you state to the court what the total number of accessories items was that was shipped or sold to the independent dealers by the Standard Oil Company in the year 1946?

A. 2,375,162.

Q. And what was the dollar volume of such shipments or sales?

A. $687,557.

Q. And what was the total number of accessories so shipped or sold to dealers for the year 1947?

A. 2,526,114.

Q. And what was the dollar volume of such sales for such year?

A. $988,469.

Q. By comparing the dollar volume of such sales for the year 1947 with those of '46, will you state to the court what percentage of increase in such sales was for the year 1947 over the year 1946?

A. It represents a 43.8 per cent increase.

Q. Now will you state to the court, if you can, what the total dollar volume of tires, tubes, batteries, and accessories is that was sold to the dealers by the Standard Oil Company for the year 1946?

[fol. 1431] A. $3,732,115.

Q. And what was the total dollar volume for such sales of the tires, tubes, batteries, and accessories for the year 1947?

A. $4,846,599.

Q. By comparing the sales in dollar volume for the year 1947 with those for the year 1946, will you state to the court what the total percentage of increase of all the items mentioned was for the year 1947 in sales over the sales for the year 1946?

A. It represents a 29.9 per cent increase.

Mr. Dixon: Thank you. That is all.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Dixon: The Government rests, your Honor.

Mr. Hall: Do you desire me to proceed before the recess, your Honor?

The Court: It might be better not to. I presume you will probably make a motion to dismiss. So as not to break the continuity, I will take a recess now. We will take a short recess and then I will hear the motion and whatever presentation you wish to make.

(Short recess.)

[fol. 1432] The Court: I am sorry, gentlemen, but Judge Harrison came in for a conference. You know he has been away, down in San Diego, and it was necessary to consult with him about some cases, and it took longer than I thought.

You may proceed.

OPENING STATEMENT ON BEHALF OF DEFENDANTS

Mr. Hall: Before calling our witnesses, if the court please, I would like to make a very brief opening statement as to what we expect to show, and it will be very brief.

Defendants expect to show in a comprehensive way the competitive factor in the seven western states as it affects the retail marketing operations of Standard, a factor which we believe will demonstrate that Standard has for years past and is now operating in the face of powerful and aggressive competition; and we expect to show the result of that competition upon Standard's retail operations in gasoline, in lubricating oil, and in tires, batteries, and accessories.

We also expect to show that the contracts attacked by the government in this case are nothing new, that substantially similar marketing practices have been generally in vogue for many years, induced by the competitive situation to which I have referred.

Believing that the public interest is a factor of paramount importance in this case, we expect to show how the practices of Standard serve that public interest, and what Standard does to enable dealers in its products to serve [fol. 1433] the public interest.

And, finally, your Honor, in order to make clear the inequity of what the government is here attempting, as well as to make clear the injury to the public as well as dealers, if the government has its way, we expect to show what will happen to dealers and the public in the event that the distribution system which the government seeks to inaugurate is forced upon the community.

I will call as my first witness Mr. Edward P. McCall.

EDWARD P. MCCALL, called as a witness by the defendants, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: Take the stand, please, sir. What is your name, please?

The Witness: Edward P. McCall.

The Clerk: Edward P. M-c——

The Witness: M-c-C-a-l-l.

Mr. Hall: I will ask that a schedule containing four questions and certain subdivisions be marked as Defendants' Exhibit, for identification, next in order.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit B.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What is your occupation, Mr. McCall?

[fol. 1434] A. I am assistant to the vice-president at Tide Water Associated Oil Company.

Q. How long have you been connected with the Tide Water Associated Oil Company?

A. Twenty years.

Q. Do you recall that several weeks or possibly months ago I made inquiry of Tide Water Associated, an inquiry which is referred to in the exhibit which has just been marked Defendants' Exhibit B, for identification?

A. Yes.

Q. In response to that inquiry did you give me certain computations?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: I ask that a schedule entitled "Tide Water Associated Oil Company Sales Statistics, Year 1941" be marked as our exhibit, for identification, next in order.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit C, marked for identification.

Mr. Hall: And I ask that a schedule entitled "Tide Water Associated Oil Company Sales Statistics, Year 1946" be marked as our exhibit, for identification, next in order.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit D, for identification.

Mr. Hall: Probably I was in error in referring to these as computations. I think they should be more properly referred to in the record as compilations.

By Mr. Hall:

[fol. 1435] Q. Mr. McCall, I show you the papers which have been marked Defendants' Exhibits C, for identification, and D, for identification, and ask you if those schedules were prepared under your supervision.

A. Yes.

Q. Do they correctly reflect the matters stated therein?

A. Yes, they are taken from the official records of the company.

Mr. Hall: I offer in evidence the documents which have been marked Defendants' Exhibits C and D, for identification.

Mr. Dixon: The government objects to the introduction of such evidence on the ground they are irrelevant and immaterial to the issues of this case.

I might say that Mr. Hall and I have discussed the matter of the original records being available to the government, on which these compilations are based, and we have not required that they bring those records into court, but we might want to check some of these figures, assuming your Honor feels they are relevant and material. So subject to that reservation we object to these on the ground of competency, but only for the reasons that I have mentioned, and not for the purpose of requiring the witness or his company to bring the records on which the compilation is based into court at this time.

[fol. 1436] The Court: Mr. Hall, do you want to say anything?

Mr. Hall: I think the relevancy and materiality are perfectly clear under the pleadings and the issues in this case, if the court please. It will appear from the evidence, your Honor, that this company is a competitor of the defendant, and a prominent competitor of the defendant, and the defendants' position among its competitors certainly is an issue in the case. Under Section 3 of the Act, one of the questions is whether competition has been substantially lessened, and I am satisfied from your Honor's remarks in the record heretofore during the case that your Honor is not going to shut out the showing of the competitive background which these schedules and other schedules of similar character will depict.

The Court: So that there will be an understanding of my view of the matter, I will make this statement: The Supreme Court has said repeatedly that a mere economic advantage is not a defense to an action of this character. They have said, for instance, that if prices are fixed even at a low level, in dealing with price-fixing, with which this case is not concerned, there is violation just the same. In other words, if fixed at the maximum or minimum, it doesn't make any difference, that the law prohibits the doing of the act, and the mere fact that but for that there would be ruinous competition is not a defense. The recent [fol. 1437] cases have not modified that attitude, because throughout the history of this legislation, and the litigation around it, in various forms attempts have been made to show that the practices that were adopted were motivated by a desire to benefit the public. But the court has held if they are of a type which legally is prohibited by the statute, whether dealing with price control or interference with the flow of commerce, that the wisdom, the economic wisdom, of the policy does not excuse it.

That is my understanding of the law, which the recent decisions have not changed in any respect. I may say that I have studied very carefully the recent decisions. I even went so far as to study an article in the Harvard Law Review, which I saw when it was published, but in connection with which great significance didn't occur to me at the time; but it was brought home to me when I noticed Mr. Justice Rutledge referred to it in note No. 10 in the decision of the Sugar case. The article referred to is called, "The Commerce Clause and the National Economy," published in two issues of the Harvard Law Review, 59 Harvard Law Review, 545-883; a recent article to which reference was made. However, I think that under the charges here there is need for inquiry into the extent of the restriction. Under the Sherman Act the restriction must be unreasonable. That requirement generally does not ap- [fol. 1438] ply to the Clayton Act, because the Clayton Act forbids an act which may result in restraint, and the wording of the recent Sugar case is that the word "may" encompasses not only probabilities, as the previous decisions held, but possibilities. So that I believe that the entire picture of the industry is material, because unless we see these acts in the configuration which they occupy in the field in these western states, we cannot form an intelligent opinion as to the effect of these practices upon the free flow of products into the area through the practice of control of outlets.

I thought I would make this statement and give my view of the matter. There was no occasion for making a similar statement before, although, of course, I anticipated that the matter would come up and intended to make a statement at the proper time, so that counsel will understand my attitude in the matter as a basis for any argument that may be presented either now or at later stages of the case.

With that statement I will overrule the objection, and these compilations which have been marked Defendants' Exhibits C and D—let me see. What was Exhibit B? Has B been offered.

Mr. Hall: B was the inquiry that I addressed to the companies, your Honor. I haven't offered that.

The Court: Oh, you haven't offered that?

Mr. Dixon: Pardon me, your Honor. I would like to state——

[fol. 1439] The Court: Go ahead before I rule.

Mr. Dixon: —I would like to be heard a little further on this matter, if you care to hear it at this time.

The Court: Yes, I will be glad to hear you.

[fol. 1440] Mr. Dixon: Because we do feel that this proffer or line of testimony which is suggested——

The Court: I think you may step down. No use to sit there. You may step down and take an easy chair.

Mr. Dixon: Through this line of inquiry may, of course, undoubtedly will, if continued, lead to the introduction of similar evidence or of this character from the various other oil companies and other groups that are in competition with the Standard Oil Company in this area in the sale of comparable products. However, we feel that under the rulings of the Supreme Court, the facts of this case—and that, of course, is the matter with which we are concerned now—come squarely within the decisions of the court in the Yellow Cab and the International Salt cases.

In other words, the theory of the Government's case here is—and I believe it is clearly stated in the complaint—that these contracts, and there have been some 7,000 of them that are involved in this case that are in use and operation through the seven-state area in which the defendants operate, which serve to completely, if the court please—and I emphasize that word "completely"—exclude that market represented by those outlets from any competition for the products which are sold at that outlet or those outlets.

In other words, there is a complete wall that is set [fol. 1441] up around these outlets by reason of these contracts which prevents any other manufacturer, whether it is Tide Water Associated Oil Company, which the witness now on the stand appears for, or whether it is the Mobil Oil Company, or whether it is the Shell Oil Company or some of the so-called minor oil companies, from competing, if the Court please, for the sale of those products which they sell at these restricted outlets.

In other words, we have here in this case shown, we believe, by the evidence that these outlets have been restricted and the operators of those outlets who are denominated in the contracts, themselves, as independent business men, they are precluded from even purchasing products that are directly competitive with the products which they are handling at that station from any source other than the defendants in this case.

Now, the International Salt case, the Supreme Court, on summary judgment — and there were only some 800 agreements involved in that case with a total amount of commerce of a half a million dollars involved—but the court held that those agreements served to exclude all competition.

The Court: Are you talking of the last decision?

Mr. Dixon: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: On May 3rd?

Mr. Dixon: I am talking about the one that is reported [fol. 1442] in 332 U. S. at page 392, the International Salt Company, Inc.

The Court: There are two of them.

Mr. Dixon: Yes. Well, the other was the Morton Salt case, I believe, your Honor. That was a decision from an appeal from the Federal Trade Commission ruling.

The Court: Just a moment. What page have you?

Mr. Dixon: 392, your Honor.

The Court: 332, 392.

Mr. Dixon: 392. It is in the preliminary print volume.

The Court: Yes; I have them here. Volume 3, isn't it?

Mr. Dixon: That is right; No. 3.

The Court: Oh, I have it marked here. That is right; it is right here. Yes; I have that.

Mr. Dixon: And the Supreme Court stated on page 398 of its opinion that:

> "it is admitted that, at times, at least, competitors do offer such a product", namely, salt to the people or the individuals or companies that were parties and bound by these restrictive agreements that were involved in the Salt case, the International Salt case.

The court says, however, quoting:

> "They are, however, shut out of the market by a [fol. 1443] provision that limits it, not in terms of quality but in terms of a particular vendor."

I submit, your Honor, that if ever there was a case on all fours in the books that is comparable to a case that is in trial, the decision in this case, I submit, is of that character, because the agreements here do not limit competition on the basis of quality at all; they limit it solely on the basis of the vendor, if the court please, because these contracts prevent these dealers from purchasing any of the products that they sell at these outlets from anyone other than the vendor, the Standard Oil Company, or its wholly owned subsidiary, Standard Stations, Inc.

Now, it is the complete exclusion of all competition by that type of a contract that is the vice of the contract and which is in and of itself, we submit, violative per se, not only of the Clayton Act, but of the Sherman Act as well; and the Supreme Court, we believe, so held in that International Salt case.

And then, further language at 396, where it is said:

> "By contracting to close this market for salt against competition, International has engaged in a restraint of trade for which its patents afford no immunity from the Anti-Trust Laws."

In the Salt case they were endeavoring to justify this exclusive practice on the theory that it was justified [fol. 1444] under the patents; and, of course, the court held the patents no justification for the restricting of this market from all competition and the closing of that market to all competition.

And then it proceeds on page 396 to say:

> "Under the law, agreements are forbidden which 'tend to create a monopoly,' and it is immaterial that the tendency is a creeping one rather than one that proceeds at full gallop; nor does the law await arrivals at the goal before condemning the direction of the movement."

Now, that is important, if the court please, under the Clayton Act where, as your Honor has already pointed out in the recent decision of the Morton Salt case, the Supreme Court held that under the Robinson-Patman Act—and that was the Act that was involved in the Morton Salt case, but the principle is substantially the same under the Clayton Act and so far as application is concerned—that any agreement which even tends to promote a monopoly or has the possibility, as distinguished from a probability, even, is in violation of the Robinson-Patman Act; and, of course, it would be also in violation, assuming the facts were such as to bring it within the Clayton Act, of the Clayton Act as well.

So that on the Salt case and the language of the [fol. 1445] Supreme Court, we submit that regardless of whether there are other competitors of Standard Oil Company in the seven western states that are engaged in the similar practices or are engaged in selling petroleum products, that it is no justification in any sense of the term for the defendants in this case from blocking off—and that is precisely what these agreements have done—from blocking off all competition—not part, but all competition—and all possibility of any competition for the business of these independent business men in the some 6,000 or more outlets that are involved and subject to these contracts.

Now, proceeding further, we can take the language of the Supreme Court in the Yellow Cab case; and that is reported, your Honor, in 332 U. S. I am sure your Honor is familiar with that decision.

The Court: I have all these before me here.

Mr. Dixon: Yes. I direct your Honor's attention to the language of the court on page 225 of the opinion, under the paragraph or heading No. I, in which the court again points out that the agreements involved in the Yellow Cab case precluded all interstate sales and shipments between each individual Yellow Cab operating company and manufacturers other than the defendants located in other states; and that that was sufficient to make the action and the conduct of the defendants in that case a violation of the Sherman Act. The Clayton Act was not involved in that [fol. 1446] case, your Honor, but that was a Sherman Act violation case.

And that was on a motion to dismiss the complaint of the Government on the ground that it did not state a cause of action; so the facts were naturally all conceded and the court had no factual question before it.

But, applying the language of the Yellow Cab case; not only on page 225 but various other portions of the decision, on pages 226 and 227 as well, I believe it is clear that these contracts here, paraphrasing from the language of 225, "precluding all interstate sales and shipments between each," Chevron Operator "and manufacturers" other than the Standard Oil Company "located in other states."

And then may we add: That were manufacturing and selling products comparable to those sold to these restricted outlets by the Standard Oil Company under these agreements.

So, on the basis of the language of those two decisions, we feel that this type of testimony, namely, whether other oil companies are or are not following the same type of practice of the Standard Oil Company here or whether they are or are not in competition with Standard Oil Company is immaterial.

We say that certainly the record in this case shows that Standard is the largest seller of petroleum products in this area. And, of course, there are other companies that are selling, and it is those companies that are excluded [fol. 1447] from this market, and evidence that they are in business in competition with the Standard Oil Company, particularly as offered by the defendants, we submit would be of little materiality or aid to the court in determining the legality of these contracts.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Hall: I call your Honor's attention to this in relation to the International Salt case. In the first place, as counsel states, that case went up on a summary judgment, and it will appear from the reports—it is either in the Supreme Court report or in the lower court report—that the showing made by the defendant there was very meager. One of the points that the International Salt Company raised on appeal was that the court should not have determined it upon summary judgment because what was a substantial lessening of competition was a question of fact. But when the case got to the Supreme Court there was the record, there was the record made in the lower court; so that the Supreme Court of the United States in that case was not saying what the defendant might have introduced in evidence in the lower court. It was taking the record as it was presented. And in the opinion it says: "We think the admitted facts"—"admitted facts," if the court please, "left no genuine issue."

Now, to go a step further: The reason that there was [fol. 1448] no genuine issue upon the admitted facts in that case is, as pointed out in our printed brief, the heart and meat of the International Salt Company case, is in that paragraph which we quote on page 69.

> "The appellant's patents confer a limited monopoly of the invention they reward. From them appellant derives a right to restrain others from making, vending or using the patented machines. But the patents confer no right to restrain use of, or trade in, unpatented salt. By contracting to close this market for salt against competition, International has engaged in a restraint of trade for which its patents afford no immunity from the Anti-Trust Laws."

There is the meat and heart of the International Salt Company case, if the court please, that there was a patent monopoly to start with and that by buying clauses the defendant was enlarging the patent monopoly and extending that patent monopoly to unpatented articles.

Now, your Honor, in the case at bar we do not start with a monopoly of any kind, patent or otherwise; and we submit that we have the right to show, by the competitive situation in which we find ourselves, that there is no monopoly to start with as there is in the International Salt Company case.

[fol. 1449] Counsel is proceeding in this case, not only under the Clayton Act, but under the Sherman Act, and certainly we all know that the pattern under the Sherman Act is exactly the pattern which defendants seek to follow in this case. Authority for that is found in Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 283 U. S. 163. There defendants, Standard Oil of Indiana, the Texaco, Standard of New Jersey, and the Gasoline Products Company owned patents covering gasoline cracking processes. They made certain contracts by which each obtained rights to use the patents of the others, and royalties under the patents were to be divided in certain proportions. A violation of Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act was charged. In the course of the opinion, reading from page 175, the court says:

> "* * * Up to 1920 all cracking plants in the United States were either owned by the Indiana Company alone, or were operated under licenses from it. In 1924 and 1925, after the cross-licensing arrangements were in effect, the four primary defendants owned or licensed, in the aggregate, only 55 per cent of the total cracking capacity, and the remainder was distributed among twenty-one independently owned cracking processes. This development and commercial expansion of competing processes is clear evidence that the con- [fol. 1450] tracts did not concentrate in the hands of the four primary defendants the licensing of patented processes for the production of cracked gasoline. Moreover, the record does not show that after the execution of the agreements there was a decrease of competition among them in licensing other refiners to use their respective processes."

Here, if the court please, there was the clear indication that the competitive setting is a material factor to be considered in these cases.

Take the case of the United States v. International Harvester Co., 274 U. S. 693. There the opinion, reading from page 709, states:

> "We further find that while several of the competitors of the International Company in harvesting machines have retired from business since 1911, some during the period of depression commencing in 1921, these retirements were not due to inability to compete with the International Company, but to other causes for which it was in no way responsible; that the place of these retiring competitors has been taken by other and stronger competitors; and that in 1923 it not only had as many competitors in harvesting machines as in 1911, but competitors of greater strength and com- [fol. 1451] petitive efficiency."

And at a later point it says:

> * * * And the Government's own tabulations show that while in 1919, the year after the consent decree was entered, the International Company sold 66.6 per cent of all the harvesting machines sold in the United States, in 1923 its percentage was only 64.1 per cent. * * *"

Speaking of those percentages, counsel this morning, through his witness Mr. Daley, introduced comparative percentages as they affect our company.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Hall: In United States v. Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, 47 Fed. (2d) 288, Judge Kimbrough Stone, speaking for the court, said: "The undisputed facts that competitors, large and small, have increasingly come into this area, extended and expanded their businesses freely and are doing so with increasing force, completely negatives any finding of an attempt at compulsory price control or any such result in the sense of the Anti-Trust Act."

There, your Honor, the question at issue was whether there might be a merger of two large oil companies, or whether that would lessen competition. And that brings us right back to the Clayton Act.

What does the last clause in the Clayton Act really [fol. 1452] mean? Does anybody know, whether the effect of the contract will be to substantially lessen competition or tend to monopoly?

That is the very thing we are trying to prove in this case, that there was no lessening of competition; that our principal competitors waxed and flourished while these contracts were going on.

Doesn't that have a bearing upon the very issue presented by Section 3? Whether that issue was presented in these cases that counsel refers to or not is entirely beside the point. We are offering the factual issue in this case. And, to go a step further, the language says: "Or tend to create a monopoly." Haven't we a right to show by the facts that there was no tendency to create a monopoly by these contracts?

Now, we expect to prove that these contracts have been in force, in operation for quite a considerable number of years. And after all, the proof of the pudding is in the eating. May not the court, sitting as a court of equity, see what has resulted in actual fact in the seven western states while these contracts have been pursued?

[fol. 1453] The Court: All right, Mr. Dixon.

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, I don't know whether we are zigging or zagging, but I assume since we made the objection we have the right to answer.

The Court: You have the right to answer, yes.

Mr. Dixon: I want to say, your Honor, that we are familiar with 283 U. S. and the other cases cited by counsel for the defendant. They are patent cases involving agreements on pooling patents, as was the case in 283 U. S., the Standard Oil case. The question there was what was the purpose and the object of that combination of agreements, but to pool patents in the industry. This is not, if the court please, a patent case. This is a much stronger case, an a fortiori case to the one in the Salt case, because in that case they were trying to justify the complete exclusion of competition upon the market on the ground it was tied in with the patents. It seems to me where there is no patent involved, and there certainly isn't any in this case, it would be a much stronger case to show the illegality from the point of view of justifying the complete—and I again emphasize that word "complete"—closing of this market to all competition. And that is what we have here, and the difference between counsel for the government and counsel for the defendants arises in the approach to that problem.

The Court: In this case it is not so bad. Usually you [fol. 1454] cite the same cases to support the contrary conclusions.

Mr. Dixon: I think we are at least in accord on this, that counsel cannot get much comfort—that is, counsel for the defendants cannot get much comfort from their position in the language of the Supreme Court in the International Salt case and in the Yellow Cab case. But to close my point, the difference is in the approach to this problem. The government contends that this market is completely closed to all competition by reason of these contracts. The defendants say that that is justified; in other words, they say it is legal under the Sherman and Clayton Acts for them to close a substantial interstate market to all competition on the grounds that it is justified by competition. I submit that is precisely their argument and that their position is precisely that position, and it falls of its own weight under the language of the cases I have mentioned.

The Court: I have attempted to refer to a trite expression that is sometimes used to illustrate the proposition that persons in disagreement may disagree, although only as to one phase, and be in agreement as to fundamentals. It brings to mind the polite answer of the Frenchman who was called in to arbitrate, as it were, an argument which had taken place between a husband and wife, and being a very polite Frenchman and not desiring to take sides, his answer was, as he put in in French, "Monsieur a raison et [fol. 1455] Madame n'a pas tort," and interpreted he said, "The husband is right and Madam is not so far from wrong."

I would be inclined to hide behind that, but I cannot do so. However, I think this is an important matter and I want to state here my view, not the final view, because, as I said, this is not the type of case where everything which the court or counsel says will receive great publicity, but it is a very important case, although it does not affect the type of industry that lives on glamour. But there is no likelihood that anything I may say now will be misinterpreted in advance of determination of the issues.

What I am doing now is so that counsel may understand the ruling on the admissibility of the testimony, and as is my custom, and the custom of every judge who tries a case of this character, we do not just sit and rule, but we owe to the bar the courtesy of stating the grounds for our decisions, although we are not required by law to do it.

Last week when I was addressing a group of lawyers I chided them for resenting a talkative judge by inducing the attitude and belief that an uncommunicative judge is necessarily a wiser one. That is not true. But with that understanding, that I am not deciding any points that will determine this case, but merely laying down certain rules for the guidance of counsel, I will point out one or two things as to which I may be in agreement with one side or the [fol. 1456] other, and then I will indicate my final ruling.

One of the difficulties which arise in these particular cases is the general difficulties to which I have adverted repeatedly, and other judges have and other students have, and that is in interpreting the commerce clause. The court takes one view when it comes to interpreting the commerce clause in one group of cases and another view when it comes to interpreting another group of cases.

You will note that in the Sugar case, and by that I mean the last case, the American Crystal Sugar case, the court referred to a case which I referred to earlier in the discussion, because I happened to be one of the judges in the three-judge court which decided that case, and I happened to be the minority judge, whose views were later on sustained by the Supreme Court. I refer to the Brown case, that is, the raisin control case. You will note that that case was called to the attention of the Court, and, incidentally it was chiefly upon that case that Judge Harrison based his ruling that contracts between growers establishing conditions for the growing of beets in the market prior to the beets being transported for refining were not within interstate commerce. In the raisin case we had the identical situation. The question there was whether the State of California from the time the raisins were picked and were placed in the drying boxes entered interstate commerce, [fol. 1457] that is, the process of their being transported to the packers and being processed to the extent of being destemmed and cleaned, and, in other words, made more edible. I did say that, in my opinion, I thought they were not edible, only to have a lot of the local growers raise a terrible fuss because they said that you can eat them then without harm to yourself; but what I meant was that they were not commercially edible, that is, you do not sell them as you take them out of the drying boxes. The court established a twilight zone and said that during that period, from the time they leave the grower's place and actually were processed for interstate commerce the State of California had a right to control them. And that was my view. The view of Judge Stevens and Judge Beaumont, who wrote the majority opinion of the three-judge court, was that it was interstate commerce. When the case went to the Supreme Court on direct appeal, as happens in those three-judge cases, the Supreme Court adopted the minority view of the case.

In the American Crystal Sugar case, which I have just called the Sugar case, they distinguish that point, and once more illustrate the proposition that I referred to, that whether a certain set of facts are in the flow of commerce or not or will interfere with commerce cannot be established by any abstract or absolute criterion. It depends upon the situation with which the court is dealing. The [fol. 1458] court may say one thing when it is dealing with the power of the state to tax or control commodities, as is illustrated in the raisin case, and as is illustrated also in the telephone cases and in the railroad tie cases, where the power of the state to tax these instrumentalities was in question, although it was conceded that they were not intended for local consumption, but held merely temporarily for shipment in interstate commerce; and the court reaches an entirely different conclusion when it interprets the plenary power of Congress, under the commerce clause, to control interstate commerce.

Now, two things are to be borne in mind. If I agreed with the government that these contracts in themselves, either because of their verbiage—which they contend—or because of the manner in which those concerned have interpreted them amount to a restriction which in itself is illegal per se, there would be no case left, because all I would have to do, at least as to one part of the case, would be merely to interpret the contract. The only thing that would be left would be to contradict some of the oral testimony, and if I held that the contract, by its very language, had the effect of restricting commerce, then I could decline to hear any further testimony by saying that the contract is at least violative of the Sherman Antitrust law, and I do not care to hear any evidence on the Clayton Act, because the relief obtained under one would be broad enough [fol. 1459] to cover what the government contends here.

However, I repeat what I have said before, that under the big manufacturing company cases, the General Motors case, it is still the law, and that is at least under the Clayton Act, that an agreement by a dealer, in consideration of being permitted to deal in a certain product, that he will not sell or offer to sell any other parts or instruments not manufactured by the particular manufacturer, is not per se illegal. The opinion in the General Motors case, which was a big case, is very brief. It is a per curiam opinion, but it states tersely the point. In that case the court had an agreement which not only indirectly forbade as the contracts do here by merely saying that the dealer obligates himself to take from Standard all the dealer's requirements, but there was a direct prohibition of sale, and it said:

> "'Dealer agrees that he will not sell, offer for sale, or use in the repair of Chevrolet motor vehicles and chassis second-hand or used parts or any part or parts not manufactured by or authorized by the Chevrolet Motor Company . . .'"

In other words, it eliminated not only parts not manufactured by them, but second-hand and used parts. It was a complete monopoly. And at the same time they said he is not granted exclusive selling rights in genuine new Chev- [fol. 1460] rolet parts and accessories; in other words, indicated that other dealers within the same territory would have the same right. The court dismissed the bill for want of equity, and the decree was affirmed. I have read the decree which affirms it, and in sustaining it the court said:

> ". . . Upon the evidence adduced at the trial the District Court found that the effect of the clause had not been in any way substantially to lessen competition or to create a monopoly in any line of commerce."

In other words, the court says that the effect of the contract is an element in the case; that even when they are confronted with a contract which exclusively shuts out competition, there is still a second element under the Clayton Act, namely, the element of the effect upon competition.

Now, under the Sherman Act the unreasonableness of the restraint since the first Standard Oil case is an element to be considered, and the unreasonableness of that restraint is a question of fact. That is especially true when you are dealing with restraint other than price-fixing. That is why the language in price-fixing cases does not help us very much, because the courts have said that price-fixing per se is a violation of law, and it does not make any difference whether price-fixing is at a maximum or at a minimum, or whether, as I held in the Food and Grocery case, it is [fol. 1461] by formula. When we are dealing with that, the court has said that price-fixing per se is illegal, and for that reason it is immaterial to show whether there is a reasonable or unreasonable restraint.

I want to call attention to the United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Company case. It is a very long case and the paragraph I want to refer to is at page 220. The opinion begins at page 130 of 310 U. S. The paragraph I am going to read applies to both arguments. It sustains the view I expressed that the economic wisdom or unwisdom or the economic benefit or detriment of a policy is not material when we are dealing with a practice such as price-fixing, which is declared to be illegal per se. But at the same time the economic result becomes material if we are dealing with restraint other than price-fixing, a restraint which is monopolistic because there we have to show that there is an unreasonable monopoly under the Sherman Act and a substantial monopoly under the Clayton Act.

The portion of the opinion which I want to read begins at the top of page 220. It is to be borne in mind that one justice has written almost all of these antitrust case opinions in recent years. That is Mr. Justice Douglas, and which indicates that the court or the Chief Justice has assigned these cases to him so that there can be no misunderstanding as to what is meant in each case. Often when [fol. 1462] a different justice writes an opinion the danger is that it lends itself to the argument that perhaps he did not interpret the language in the way in which another justice expressed the views of the court. But when the same justice writes these various opinions there is an assurance that he knew not only what he was talking about, but he knew what he meant by the prior language. In the last case, the American Crystal Sugar case, the opinion was written by Mr. Justice Rutledge, but I think I am correct in saying that most of these opinions were written by Mr. Justice Douglas, that is, those which arose under the Anti-trust law. This is the language:

> "Secondly, the fact that sales on the spot markets were still governed by some competition is of no consequence. For it is indisputable that that competition was restricted through the removal by respondents of a part of the supply which but for the buying programs would have been a factor in determining the going prices on those markets. But the vice of the conspiracy was not merely the restriction of supply of gasoline by removal of a surplus. As we have said, this was a well-organized program. The timing and strategic placement of the buying orders for distress [fol. 1463] gasoline played an important and significant role. Buying orders were carefully placed so as to remove the distress gasoline from weak hands. Purchases were timed. Sellers were assigned to the buyers so that regular outlets for distress gasoline would be available. The whole scheme was carefully planned and executed to the end that distress gasoline would not overhang the markets and depress them at any time. And as a result of the payment of fair going market prices a floor was placed and kept under the spot markets. Prices rose and jobbers and consumers in the mid-western area paid more for their gasoline than they would have paid but for the conspiracy."

That is the factual background, and I am just giving you that factual background. Then it goes on:

"Competition was not eliminated from the markets; but it was clearly curtailed, since restriction of the supply of gasoline, the timing and placement of the purchases under the buying programs and the placing of a floor under the spot markets obviously reduced the play of the forces of supply and demand.

"The elimination of so-called competitive evils is no [fol. 1464] legal justification for such buying programs. The elimination of such conditions was sought primarily for its effect on the price structures. Fairer competitive prices, it is claimed resulted when distress gasoline was removed from the market. But such defense is typical of the protestations usually made in price-fixing cases. Ruinous competition, financial disaster, evils of price-cutting and the like appear throughout our history as ostensible justifications for price fixing. If the so-called competitive abuses were to be appraised here, the reasonableness of prices would necessarily become an issue in every price-fixing case. In that event the Sherman Act would soon be emasculated; its philosophy would be supplanted by one which is wholly alien to a system of free competition; it would not be the charter of freedom which its framers intended."

Now, what Mr. Justice Douglas says applies with greater force to a restrictive practice other than price-fixing. In other words, the fact that it was beneficial is not material if it, in effect, was an unreasonable restraint.

Judge Learned Hand made that very point in the Fashion Originators Guild case, Fashion Originators Guild v. Federal Trade Commission, 114 Fed. (2d) at page 80. Both [fol. 1465] of you have commented on this case, and I refer to page 84 of the opinion, in which Judge Hand applied the reasoning of the Socony-Vacuum case to a case not involving price-fixing, and with that clarity of language which is so characteristic of his opinions, and which makes him, to my mind, the greatest stylist on any bench anywhere, not excluding the Supreme Court of the United States, he shows that the economic benefits cannot be considered if, in fact, there is substantial restriction of commerce. I read from page 84:

> ". . . Many trade combinations which affect competition are lawful, when they are designed to prevent trade 'abuses'; they are 'reasonable,' though perhaps to say so is no more than to state the problem."

Citing the Appalachian Coal case, and the Sugar Institute case.

> "Certainly it is not true that the lawfulness of every combination depends upon whether it 'reasonably' corrects trade 'abuses'; there are some combinations that nothing will excuse. The accepted rubric for this is that when the means are unlawful per se, the purposes of the confederates will not justify them."

Citing the Sugar Institute case.

> [fol. 1466] "The most recent example of this is the Supreme Court's reaffirmation of the unconditional illegality of price-fixing, in spite of the probability that the combination in fact benefited the industry."

Citing the Socony-Vacuum case.

> "However grave the industrial disorders, that remedy was not permissible; the industry may restore itself by many devices, but not by all.
>
> "The case at bar is not one of price-fixing, and for that reason United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., supra, does not control, for the members of the Guild are free to compete with each other in price or in any other way they choose. The purpose was not more than to exclude 'piratical' dressmakers from any share in the market for 'original' designs; all else was left open. Success in that purpose might, or might not, result in an increase in price to the consumer, or in that stabilization of prices which United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Company, supra, condemned. Nobody can tell what will be its effect because, although the exclusion of the 'piratical' dressmakers will reduce the supply and price is normally a function of supply, it does not appear that the Guild has not a [fol. 1467] reserve of producing power equal to what it excludes. If so, it may well be able to take up the slack, so to say, created by its efforts, and free competition among the members may keep prices as low and as wayward as they were before. Price-fixing is not, however, the only means unlawful per se. The interest of the consumer is not all that determines the 'reasonableness' of a contract 'in restraint of trade.' It is also unlawful to exclude from the market any of those who supply it—assuming that there is no independent reason by virtue of their conduct to justify their exclusion—and it is no excuse for doing so that their exclusion will result in benefits to consumers, or to the producers who remain."

Then he cites practically every case that has been decided on that question by the higher courts, beginning with the Montague case, the Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers Association case, the Binderup case, the Anderson v. Shipowners Association case, the Stone Cutters' Association case, the Paramount Famous Corporation case, the First National Pictures case, and those are the Supreme Court cases, and then the National Harness Association case in the Sixth Circuit, the Wholesale Grocers Association in the Fifth Circuit, and the Butterick Publishing Company case [fol. 1468] in the Second Circuit. Then the opinion continues:

"There is another reason supporting this conclusion. A successful combination among a part of the producers to exclude others, even when not accompanied by an agreement fixing prices, puts into their hands collectively the power to control the supply and with it the price. The fact that the power is not at the moment exercised is no assurance that it may not be; if the effort succeeds and the combination is not disrupted, it may at any time be used, and there will then be no protection to the consumer."

I will read the next paragraph:

"Finally, it is of no consequence that the Guild does not supply the whole market for women's dresses; it aims at a monopoly however small its share of total sales. The reason is as follows. Although all dresses made after one design are fungibles, the different designs themselves are not fungibles. Each has its own attraction for buyers; each is unique, however trifling the basis for preferring it may be. Hence to attempt to gather to oneself all possible reproductions of a given design is to attempt to create a monopoly, as at once [fol. 1469] appears from the fact that a copyright for it—and a fortiori a design patent upon it—would be ranked as a monopoly. It is true that the sanction of that monopoly may be very weak; it depends upon the design's attractions above other designs, often not a very important margin of advantage. But the same is true of nearly all monopolies; for there are substitutes for most goods. As to each design therefore the Guild is seeking to establish a monopoly; and it is unimportant whether its gross sales are large or small, as compared with those of all women's dresses. For these reasons the combination was unlawful per se; the commission was right in refusing to hear any evidence in its excuse, for it could have no excuse; . . ."

Then he refers to the Millinery Creators' case.

fol. 1470] ; To use another expression of Judge Hand's, hich I have adopted and have used myself, recently taken rom him, the gloss of these cases, that is, the teaching of hese cases, is this: That when we are dealing with price-xing we are dealing with a contract which is invalid per e and violative of the Act. When we are dealing with any ther restriction the legality must be determined by the ature of the contract itself. I am of the view that under he decision of the Supreme Court in the General Motors ase a contract by a manufacturer of a product which binds n agent who is used as an outlet to the exclusive use of its product is not, in itself, a violation of either the Sherman Act or the Clayton Act; but it may be so under the Sherman Act if it results in an unreasonable restraint in trade, and under the Clayton Act if it results, to use the language of the Act, in a monopoly in a line of commerce or lessens competition substantially.

Now, as to the second element of these, this testimony will be admitted, and like testimony, not for the purpose of showing the benefit which the public derived from the competition or that it prevented a glutting of a market, or economic crisis, because that is no concern of the courts. If the Congress of the United States has created a law, which, as interpreted by the Statute, results in economic disadvantage, then the industry can do as other industries are doing—go before [fol. 1471] the Congress and ask themselves to be excluded.

I take notice of the fact that there is pending now before the Congress of the United States a bill, which I think has passed one house—it has passed the House of Representatives—and which would exclude from the operations of the Act, transportation companies, despite the fact that prosecutions and actions of a civil nature against the various transportation companies are actually pending in some eastern courts. I think one is pending in the State of Wisconsin. I think there is also a bill pending before the Congress to overcome the decision rendered last year which declares that insurance is interstate commerce and within the regulatory powers of the Congress.

I am merely giving these illustrations as illustrations to point out that because the higher court's interpretations of the Act have in some instances been considered by some members of industry as detrimental to them and to the public interest, they have called upon the only body that can give them relief, and that is the Congress of the United States. And it is for this reason that the courts in these cases have repeatedly held that they are not going to go into any question of the benefit to be derived from certain practices. They are material only insofar as they go to the issues of fact relating to the particular case, namely, to repeat, [fol. 1472] whether to some party the practices do or do not result in unreasonable restraint of competition, or substantially would have the effect of lessening of competition or creating a monopoly.

And the only difference in the matter of proof of the two is this: That, as to the Sherman Act we have to have proof of actual result; while under the Clayton Act, the tendency, the effect is also covered.

The object of the Clayton Act was to include contracts which may have the effect, which may not have been carried into execution, and for that reason, either through the courts or through the control of the Federal Trade Commission, power was lodged to prevent the practices. Or, to sum it up, under the Sherman Act the unreasonable restraint must be actual in order to lend itself to action, to restraining action by the court. Under the Clayton Act, the probabilities, the possibilities of its resulting in the actual evils which the Congress reaches are sufficient.

Those, to my mind, are the only two differences which affect the method of proof. And you will note that in the Morton Salt case, which of course was a case on the merits and was a review of the findings of the Commission, the court did not condemn the Federal Trade Commission because it received actual proof of actual losses, although they said that it was not strictly necessary that this be done.

[fol. 1473] I want to read a paragraph from the slip decision, at page 11. I will start with the top here because it speaks again about the effect, and then it speaks of economic result.

> "* * * Since there was evidence sufficient to show that the less-than-carload purchasers might have been handicapped in competing with the more favored carload purchasers by the differential in price established by respondent, the Commission was justified in finding that competition might have thereby been substantially lessened or have been injured within the meaning of the Act.
>
> "Apprehension is expressed in this Court that enforcement of the Commission's order against respondent's continued violations of the Robinson-Patman Act might lead respondent to raise table salt prices to its carload purchasers. Such a conceivable, though, we think, high improvable contingency, could afford us no reason for upsetting the Commission's findings and declining to direct compliance with a statute passed by Congress."

Then they went onto say—this is just only the thought I had in mind. Continuing:

"The Commission here went much further in receiving evidence than the statute requires. It heard testi- [fol. 1474] mony from many witnesses in various parts of the country to show that they had suffered actual financial losses on account of respondent's discriminatory prices. Experts were offered to prove the tendency of injury from such prices. The evidence covers about two thousand pages, largely devoted to this single issue—injury to competition. It would greatly handicap effective enforcement of the Act to require testimony to show that which we believe to be self-evident, namely, that there is a 'reasonable possibility' that competition may be adversely affected by a practice under which manufacturers and producers sell their goods to some customers substantially cheaper than they sell like goods to the competitors of these customers. This showing in itself is sufficient to justify our conclusion that the Commission's findings of injury to competition were adequately supported by evidence."

I pointed out before that some language which is used in reviews of orders of the Federal Trade Commission cannot always be applied to a trial of a case of this character. The same is also true about language which is used in determining the sufficiency of a complaint or an indictment, as distinguished from language which is used in passing upon [fol. 1475] a case upon the merits.

But on this particular topic which I am discussing I have chosen decisions from both fields to show that whether the court is dealing with one situation or with another, the two principles to which I have referred have received full recognition.

I am taking a long time to express these views. You will note I have kept comparatively uncommunicative for a long while, because I felt that a full discussion at the present time will be helpful to counsel in charting the course that evidence is to take and so there will be a place in the record where there is fully expressed the reasons for the ruling I am about to make. And that ruling will be to overrule the objection to the introduction of the two documents.

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, I do not want to unduly argue the point and I am sure your Honor understands that my only purpose is to endeavor to be helpful to the court on this question, which, as your Honor has stated, is fundamental to the trial of the case because it will undoubtedly take considerable time to put in this type of evidence if it is admissible. I just rise to make a few comments concerning some of these points raised by your Honor.

The Court: Just one minute.

[fol. 1476] Mr. Dixon: Certainly.

The Court: I want to say this: I am passing now just on this. I do not want to have any discussion as to that portion of the opening statement which deals with the effect of this policy during its existence, because that statement was not an offer of proof, was not brought before the court by a question to be elicited from a witness and, therefore, is not before me at the present time. Because the question in my mind arises whether that type of testimony does not come within the inhibition to which I have referred, that it relates to economic policy with which we are not concerned in this case if, in fact, the practices do result in unreasonable restraint or in a monopoly under the two Acts.

So I do not want you to understand what I am saying as being an endorsement of the statement in full which was made by Mr. Hall.

Mr. Dixon: Oh, I see.

The Court: I am merely determining at the present time that computations of this character which show the extent of the sales by competitors in the field are material upon the second issue, as I call it, and for that reason I think there is no further argument necessary at the present time.

If a witness is called to support that part of the opening statement, I will hear you further. What I have tried to do is merely to lay down certain fundamental principles as [fol. 1477] the basis of my ruling. My ruling is limited to the specific thing. When the reasoning I have given is applied or it is sought to apply it to something else, then I will hear you further at that time.

Mr. Dixon: I just wanted to be clear, and I am sure that your Honor understands that I am rising only for that purpose.

The Court: I do not think it is necessary.

Mr. Dixon: I felt from some remarks your Honor had made that perhaps I had been remiss in presenting the position of the Government on the competition that we claim had been restricted. It is not the competition between Standard Oil and these other oil companies. It is the competition for this market that Standard has with these dealers. That is the only competition that we claim is restricted in any sense of the term, your Honor.

The Court: Oh, yes; I understand that. Your contention is two-fold: That, in the first place, it has the effect of lessening the flow of competitive products into the state as it affects these particular outlets.

Mr. Dixon: That is right, your Honor, precisely. That is right.

The Court: And it is really one contention. In other words, that even though—I am stating the Government's position as I understand it—that even though the other [fol. 1478] suppliers are in the field and through either outlets of their own or through other outlets which are not bound by similar contracts, market a large number of products, there still remains the question whether the restriction prevents these same suppliers from supplying the stations——

Mr. Dixon: That is right.

The Court: Which the Standard—I would not say "controls"——

Mr. Dixon: The 6,000 stations.

The Court: —influences; let us use that word, "influences".

Mr. Dixon: I see your Honor understands our position on that point.

Now, just two other thoughts here in connection with reference to decisions by Justice Douglas which confirms our position.

Mr. Hall: If he keeps on speaking, I want to reply, your Honor.

Mr. Dixon: I will be very brief, your Honor, I assure you.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Dixon: In the Griffith case, of which your Honor has the slip decision or opinion, decided May 3rd, Justice Douglas, if there was ever any question about it, goes along with our position here.

[fol. 1479] The Court: That is the other case?

Mr. Dixon: That is right.

The Court: Yes, I have it.

Mr. Dixon: On page 7, your Honor:

"* * * It is indeed 'unreasonable per se, to foreclose competitors from any substantial market.'"

That is, in other words, citing International Salt case previously decided.

Now, that was Justice Douglas' adoption and reaffirmance and expression, if necessary, of this doctrine, that we contend applies here to the facts, namely, these contracts, the contracts of the 6,000 stations affected by that.

Just a word or two about the Pick case which your Honor has mentioned. That decision, written by Judge Lindley, a very able Judge who has decided many anti-trust cases, including the General Motors case—I do not mean General Motors v. Pick, but also another General Motors case.

The Court: The one involving the finances?

Mr. Dixon: That is right.

The Court: I know.

Mr. Dixon: And the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. case, as well as some others. That decision was referred to and cited by the defendants in the International Salt case, your Honor, before Judge Rifkin in the District Court, and it is interesting to note in passing what Judge Rifkin said [fol. 1480] about that decision, as well as the Sinclair decision which is also cited by the defendants as justification for this type of contract. Judge Rifkin's opinion is reported, if your Honor is interested, in 6 Federal Rules, Decision 302.

He states in his opinion that it is true that the holding of the Sinclair——

The Court: What page are you reading from?

Mr. Dixon: I am reading from Judge Rifkin's opinion.

The Court: What page of the report?

Mr. Dixon: I am sorry. I do not have the precise page.

The Court: What is the number?

Mr. Dixon: It is 6 Federal Rules, Decision 302.

The Court: Just a moment.

Mr. Dixon: I mention this decision, your Honor, because it was the ruling of the court in the District Court in the Salt case and the cases which your Honor has mentioned were relied upon and cited by the defendants in that case in the District Court, namely, the Federal Trade Commission, the Fashion Guild case which your Honor mentioned sometime ago in the course of your discussion of the matter. But in this opinion Judge Rifkin, in the International Salt case, points out that the Pick case and the Sinclair case had been severely restricted, as he puts it. And your Honor will also find, by referring to the General Motors [fol. 1481] Acceptance case on appeal, where the Pick case was again referred to, that the Circuit Court in considering the appeal in that case severely restricted the Pick with the facts of that particular case before it. So that when it reached the Supreme Court the matter was necessarily before it and while, of course, the Pick decision was a per curiam decision, if it had any effect on the Supreme Court on the facts in the Salt case, it would certainly have been referred to, but it was not even referred to in the decision of the Supreme Court in the International Salt case.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Dixon: Also, as I have pointed out, the Pick case was referred to in the General Motors decision that I have mentioned. I give you those references, your Honor, only so that if you care to, you may refer to those decisions which your Honor has not yet perhaps had time.

The Court: Yes; I have read them. 1946. I am familiar with that. It came out almost a year ago.

Mr. Dixon: The General Motors decision, your Honor, do you have that citation?

The Court: Yes; I have. All right; are you finished?

Mr. Dixon: Yes; I am except for that citation. Thank you very much.

[fol. 1482] The Court: We are still at cross purposes in one respect. I still insist that language which the court uses in deciding on the face of the record without any testimony does not necessarily apply to the case which is before the court. I am familiar with Judge Rifkin's decision and the decision was on a summary judgment. Therefore, all the allegations of the complaint and all the inferences that could be drawn were drawn favorably to the allegations of the complaint. For that reason the language cannot necessarily be applied to cases like the present one, where we are concerned with the problem of whether facts in the record have any of the effects prohibited by the two statutes.

There is another stronger reason for not applying them, because I am dealing now merely with the question as to whether certain testimony should be received. That one paragraph in Justice Douglas' opinion must be read in the context, and the context really shows that their effect is a question of fact, and the paragraph which Mr. Dixon read occurs on page 7 of the slip decision, and reads as follows:

". . . It is indeed unreasonable, per se to foreclose competitors from any substantial market.' ".

That is quoting from International Salt Co. v. United States, 332 U. S. 392, 396.

[fol. 1483] But you cannot wrest a sentence from its context. That is a phrase which should be familiar to Mr. Hall because that is one you run into in the law of libel, where one takes ahold of one phrase and takes it out of the context and tries to use it, and the reason why that is dangerous is because the next paragraph may contain the antidote, or, as we say in the law on libel, one paragraph may be the poison and the other may be the antidote to the poison. I myself wrote an opinion which was sustained by the Supreme Court, a case against the Los Angeles Examiner in which I think Mr. Hall was one of counsel, in which I held that where a certain phrase in a document can have a libelous meaning, yet the whole document may show that the meaning is other than stated; in other words, that where a subsequent paragraph takes the sting out of the statement by saying that the allegations were found by the court to be untrue, the whole article must be read and the article declared not libelous. That is also true when you come to apply the reasoning of the court to the particular situation, so I want to read the entire paragraph. It states:

"Anyone who owns and operates the single theatre in a town, or who acquires the exclusive right to exhibit a film, has a monopoly in the popular sense but he usually does not violate section 2 of the Sherman Act [fol. 1484] unless he has acquired or maintained his strategic position, or sought to expand his monopoly, or expanded it by means of those restraints of trade which are cognizable under section 1. For those things which are condemned by section 2 are in large measure merely the end products of conduct which violates section 1."

Citing Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 61.

"But that is not always true. Section 1 covers contracts, combinations, or conspiracies in restraint of trade. Section 2 is not restricted to conspiracies or combinations to monopolize but also makes it a crime for any person to monopolize or to attempt to monopolize or to attempt to monopolize any part of interstate or foreign trade or commerce. So it is that monopoly power, whether lawfully or unlawfully acquired, may itself constitute an evil and stand condemned under Section 2, even though it remains unexercised. For Section 2 of the Act is aimed inter alia, at the acquisition or retention of effective market control."

Citing United States v. Aluminum Co. of America, 148 Fed. (2d) 416,

"Hence the existence of power 'to exclude competition [fol. 1485] when it is desired to do so' is itself a violation of Section 2,"—

Now, if I stop there, you see, my reading of it would not in any way deviate from your interpretation, but there is a proviso which follows, and it is one of those things which Theodore Roosevelt used to call "weasel words." I hate commas, and I think we all love periods. A man who says, "I believe so-and-so, but,"—I say he should stop before the "but" because as soon as he explains that qualification he shows he doesn't believe it. It continues:

"—provided it is coupled with the purpose or intent to exercise that power."

Again bringing out the point that I made that the effect of the power is important under the Sherman Act, not merely its tendencies.

"It is indeed 'unreasonable, per se, to foreclose competitors from any substantial market.'"

Citing the International Salt Co. v. United States case.

"The anti-trust laws are as much violated by the prevention of competition as by its destruction."

Again citing the Aluminum Company case.

"It follows a fortiori that the use of monopoly power, however lawfully acquired, to foreclose competition, to gain a competitive advantage, or to destroy a competitor, is unlawful."

[fol. 1486] But whether such is the use is a question of fact under both statutes.

For that reason my statement stands. With that we will take our recess. We have consumed most of the noon hour, so I think I will give you a recess until 3:00 o'clock. It is nearly 1:30 now.

The Clerk: Exhibits C and D in evidence.

The Court: Very well, gentlemen. 3:00 o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 1:25 o'clock p. m. a recess was taken until 3:00 o'clock p. m. of the same day.)

[fol. 1487] Los Angeles, California, Thursday, May 20, 1948. 3:00 P. M.

The Court: All right, gentlemen, proceed.

Edward P. McCall, called as a witness by the defendants, having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified as follows:

Direct examination (Continued).

Mr. Hall: The defendants offer in evidence Exhibit B, for identification. That is for the purpose of explaining the schedules, since those were the questions propounded with respect to which the schedules were prepared.

Mr. Dixon: Objected to on the ground that the evidence should come from the witness himself, your Honor, rather than in that manner. I mean, there are some questions there that are perhaps a little ambiguous.

The Court: I think these questions should be propounded again. Then if you want to present this later on as a summary, it is all right.

Mr. Hall: Those were the actual questions propounded, and I thought I was doing counsel a favor when I produced this, in order to enable him to cross-examine.

The Court: Is that a complete answer on the exhibits you have already produced?

[fol. 1488] Mr. Hall: No, the answers are not complete, but it seems to me that would be for counsel to develop by cross-examination.

The Court: Perhaps I did not make myself clear. What I meant to say was that Exhibits C and D were given to you in response to this?

Mr. Hall: Yes. They are really a part of the same.

The Court: Then I will allow you to ask the question as to whether the exhibits were produced in response to this.

Mr. Hall: He has already testified to that.

The Court: Then I will overrule the objection and allow this to be introduced in evidence, merely showing the action which called for these tabulations. You are not bound by the results, nor by the questions. Overruled. It may be received for the purpose indicated.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit B in evidence.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Is Tide Water Associated gasoline sold through independent dealers, Mr. McCall?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the same thing true with respect to lubricating oil?

A. Yes.

Q. And with respect to tires, tubes and batteries?

A. Yes.

[fol. 1489] Q. And other automotive accessories?

A. Yes.

Mr. Dixon: Pardon me, Mr. Hall. May the record show the objection of the government to this line of questioning?

The Court: Yes. We will call that Government's objection—

Mr. Dixon: No. 1.

The Court: No. 1, so that we will have a standard objection.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, are the products which I have referred to sold by those independent dealers in the states of California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, Utah and Idaho in competition with Standard Oil Company of California's products or the products sold at the dealer stations of Standard Oil Company of California?

A. I would answer that question this way, Mr. Hall, that we sell in all those seven states—

Mr. Dixon: Pardon me. Government's Objection No. 1, your Honor.

The Court: Yes. Overruled.

The Witness: We sell in all those seven states. I don't know, for example, if Standard sells in Utah. If you sell in all the seven states, then we compete with you in all the seven states.

The Court: That is a good answer.

[fol. 1490] Mr. Hall: I would ask that there be marked as one exhibit, for identification, with Defendants' number next in order Tide Water Associated forms No. 4580-D and 4603-E.

The Clerk: Defendant's Exhibit E, marked for identification.

The Court: May I just see that, to see if that is the same thing?

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked as one exhibit with Defendants' letter next in order Tide Water Associated forms 4694-G, 4468-H and 4604-E.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit F, marked for identification.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Does Tide Water Associated lease service station properties to independent dealers?

A. Yes.

Q. And that is true in each of the states that I have referred to in the previous question?

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, so that I won't have to make the objection again, may the record show a continuing objection?

The Court: Yes, it may be understood that the objection of the government applies to all of these documents which aim to show similar practices on the part of the oil company which this witness represents.

The Witness: That would be true as to all states except [fol. 1491] Utah. As to Utah, we don't lease there because we operate through distributors.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I show you the documents which have been marked Defendants' Exhibit E, for identification, and ask you if those are forms of lease from Tide Water Associated to independent dealers——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —commonly and currently in use?

A. Yes.

Q. Have forms like those or substantially like those been in use for some time?

A. Yes.

Q. How many years would you say, or can you give an answer to that?

A. I would say more than 10 years.

Mr. Hall: Defendants offer in evidence Exhibit E, heretofore marked for identification.

Mr. Dixon: A continuing objection No. 1, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: Exhibit E in evidence.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Does Tide Water Associated make agreements with independent dealers who handle the products of Tide Water Associated at their stations?

A. Yes.

Q. I show you the documents heretofore marked, for [fol. 1492] identification, as Exhibit F, and ask you if those are forms of agreement which Tide Water Associated makes with independent dealers?

A. Yes.

Q. Those are commonly and currently in use, are they?

A. That's right.

Q. In every state but Utah?

A. In every state but Utah.

Q. Have forms like those, or substantially like those, been in use for some years?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you say for 10 years or more?

A. Probably not 10 years on that merchandise agreement, but I would say seven years.

Q. Would you say that as to the agreements other than the merchandise agreement, the agreements like those dealer sales agreements and petroleum products sales agreements, they had been in use for 10 years?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: Defendants offer in evidence Exhibit F, heretofore marked for identification.

Mr. Dixon: The same objection No. 1, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: F in evidence.

Mr. Hall: Take the witness.

[fol. 1433] Cross-examination.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Mr. McCall, I noted from your Exhibit D that Tide Water Associated only operates six service stations itself in the seven states mentioned, is that correct?

A. That's right. That was in 1946.

Q. Well, that is what is set forth in your Exhibit D?

A. Yes, that is D.

Q. Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how many company-operated stations, that is, service stations, Standard Oil of California has in these seven states?

A. No.

Q. If it should appear to be the fact that Standard Oil Company had over a thousand company-operated stations, would you say that your six company-operated service stations were in competition with their operated service stations?

A. In a limited extent those six are in competition with their over a thousand.

Q. Now, Mr. McCall, does your company ever endeavor to sell any gasoline to any Chevron dealer-operated stations? Do you know what I mean by a Chevron dealer-operated station?

A. I believe I understand the term.

Q. Does your company solicit the business of selling [fol. 1434] gasoline to any dealer operating a Chevron Station?

A. Yes.

Q. Does it endeavor to sell it gasoline? Is that correct?

A. We endeavor to take the whole station, in other words.

Q. Just answer my question, please. Do you endeavor to sell the dealer operating a Chevron gasoline station gasoline while he is operating that station? That is my question.

A. Well, in order to answer your question——

Q. Will you please answer that "Yes" or "No."

A. I can't say "Yes" or "No" to that. If you will just let me explain off the record.

The Court: No; no.

Mr. Dixon: Just a moment. I will give you another question.

The Court: Just a moment.

Mr. Dixon: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: You are not before any legislative committee and you cannot order anyone to answer "Yes" or "No" unless the court feels it is the sort of question that should be so answered.

The Witness: Your Honor——

The Court: Just a moment. Will you read the question, [fol. 1495] please?

(The question was read.)

The Court: That question can be answered "Yes" or "No" and then you may give an explanation, because he is asking you if you are trying, which is what "endeavor" means, to do that. That is an ordinary word and I don't need to explain it.

The Witness: That particular answer would be no, while he is operating that station.

The Court: All right. Do you want to explain your answer?

The Witness: No. What I was going to explain was——

The Court: You just said you weren't going to explain. Are you an attorney, too?

The Witness: I have studied law, yes.

The Court: Well, the Macmillan Company is rather full of lawyers. Are you with the Macmillan Company?

The Witness: No, with Tide Water Associated.

The Court: So many lawyers have been reformed, as Mr. Beeman says, and have become oil men, but the way some of them talk that were lawyers before, they have probably retained some of their legal training and technique.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Has your company, the Tide Water Associated Oil Company, ever sold any gasoline, to your knowledge, to any Chevron dealer while he was operating a Chevron [fol. 1496] Standard Oil Station?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Now, directing your attention to Exhibit F, I believe you testified that that form was instituted about seven years ago; is that correct?

A. That is the merchandise agreement?

Q. Yes.

A. I didn't mark down whether it was F, or what it was.

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Who prepared that form, do you know?

A. Our sales legal staff.

Q. Did you have anything to do with its preparation?

A. In a sense, yes.

Q. In preparing it, did you refer to any forms of the Standard Oil Company TBA agreement, in preparing this form?

A. I didn't.

Q. Do you know whether anyone who was connected with the preparation of form F, or had anything to do with its preparation, referred to the Standard Oil form, Government's Exhibit 2?

Mr. Hall: If you will pardon me, Mr. Dixon, the form you refer to as Standard's form was not in existence at [fol. 1497] the time you are putting the question.

Mr. Dixon: That is what I want to find out from this witness.

Mr. Hall: I will stipulate to that.

Mr. Dixon: I would like to ask this witness the question.

The Witness: My answer would be that I don't know what forms our law department looked at when they prepared our forms.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. In other words, I take it you had nothing to do with the preparation of the merchandise agreement, Exhibit F?

A. I answered "Yes" before, so I won't change my answer, but I will say we have a form committee, and our attorneys draw it up and I check it from the vice-president's standpoint, and our accountant checks it from their standpoint. That is the only way I could do it.

Q. Before this form was prepared, did you see the forms of any other oil companies?

A. I did not.

Q. You did not yourself. Do you know whether there

MICRO TRADE

CARD
MARK ®

1924

MATTHEW BENDER & COMPANY
MB

48

were any other forms in existence or used by any other oil companies at that time?

A. There may have been. I don't know.

Q. You say there may have been?

[fol. 1498] A. Yes.

Q. But you didn't see any yourself?

A. No.

Q. And these were drawn up by your legal department? That is, Exhibit F?

A. Yes.

Mr. Dixon: That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Just one question, Mr. McCall. I notice on Defendants' Exhibit B, Item 4 refers to number of split retail dealers handling company's branded gasoline, and that is followed by a series of numbers. Is that intended to refer to what is commonly called in the oil parlance split pump accounts?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: That is all. Thank you.

The Court: Any further questions?

(No response.)

The Court: Very well. Step down.

The Witness: Am I excused so that I can leave?

The Court: Yes, unless you want him retained under subpoena?

Mr. Hall: Yes, I would like to have the witness excused.

The Court: All right, sir. You may be excused.

[fol. 1499] Elbert A. Hugill, Jr., called as a witness by defendants, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name?

The Witness: Elbert, E-l-b-e-r-t A. Hugill, H-u-g-i-l-l, Junior.

Mr. Dixon: I did not get that. I am sorry. What was the name, please?

The Clerk: Elbert A. Hugill, Jr.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Hugill?

A. I am in the legal department of Shell Oil Company.

Q. I show you Defendants' Exhibit B, Mr. Hugill, and ask you if a copy of that exhibit was presented to your company with a request for the information outlined in that exhibit?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: I ask that sheets containing a compilation be marked as Defendants' Exhibit for identification next in order.

The Clerk: Defendants' G marked for identification.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked with Defendants' letter next in order for identification, as one exhibit, forms of contracts and agreements.

[fol. 1506] The Clerk: Defendants' H for identification.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked with Defendants' letter next in order, as one exhibit for identification, forms of service station lease and service station sublease.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit I marked for identification.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I show you, Mr. Hugill, the sheets which have now been marked Defendants' Exhibit G for identification, containing certain answers and certain schedule, and ask you if those sheets were prepared under your supervision from the records of Shell Oil Company?

A. Yes, they were.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Does Shell Oil Company lease service stations to independent dealers?

A. Yes.

Q. Are the products of Shell Oil Company sold through independent dealers in the seven western states which are referred to in Exhibit G?

A. The Shell brand of petroleum products?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes; they are.

Q. That would include gasoline and lubricating oil, would it?

A. That is correct.

[fol. 1501] Q. Are tires, tubes, and batteries sold at stations which handle the Shell products in the seven western states?

A. Yes; at some of the stations.

Q. Are the products which I have referred to, namely, the petroleum products and the tires, tubes, and batteries which are sold at Shell stations handling Shell products in competition with the products sold at stations handling the products of Standard Oil Company of California?

A. Yes.

Mr. Dixon: May the record show my continuing objection, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Dixon: Government's No. 1 to this line of testimony.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I show you the documents which have been marked Exhibit I for identification and ask you if those are the forms of lease or are forms of lease which are currently and commonly used by Shell Oil Company in leasing service station properties to independent dealers?

A. Yes; they are.

Q. And do you know how long these documents have been put to that use by Shell Oil Company?

A. For varying length of time.

Q. Well, let me put the question this way: For how long a period have documents like those referred to in Defendants' Exhibit I for identification or substantially like them [fol. 1502] been in use by Shell Oil Company for that purpose?

A. The first lease, that is the one marked "SS-61", I believe has been in use for over 10 years. The other two documents designated "DO-727" and "DO-727-A" or forms substantially like them have been in effect for approximately five years, I believe.

Q. I notice I have been talking about "Shell Oil Company" and these documents seem to show the corporate name is "Shell Oil Company, Incorporated." You have understood in my questioning that I was referring to the corporation referred to in these documents?

A. Yes. That is Shell Oil Company, Incorporated. Shell Oil Company, prior to April 1st of 1939.

Q. Now, I show you the documents which have been marked for identification as Defendants' Exhibit H and ask you if those are forms of documents commonly and currently employed by Shell Oil Company, Inc., in contracting with the independent dealers that operate the stations that handle its products?

A. These are forms in use on some but not all of the dealers' stations.

Q. Would you indicate by a number, possibly, or by the identification of the document which of those forms are not employed in dealings between Shell Oil Company, Inc., and independent dealers?

[fol. 1503] A. I should say this: That all of these forms are used by Shell in its arrangements with dealers, but not in its arrangements with all dealers.

Q. Oh, yes. I misunderstood.

A. Does that clarify my position?

[fol. 1504] Q. That clarifies it; yes. Can you indicate the approximate length of time that documents like or substantially like those shown in Exhibit H for identification have been put to such use?

A. Forms DO-580-B, DO-581-C, and SS-71 or forms like them have been in use, I believe, for ten years or more. I believe the same thing can be said of Form DO-652. I believe I can classify all of them together under that answer.

Q. And it is true, is it not, that a service station which is leased by Shell Oil Company, Inc., to a dealer may be a station upon which Shell Oil Company itself holds a lease as lessee?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that station may have been leased to Shell either by the very dealer to whom it is sublet or by some third party?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: Take the witness.

Mr. Dixon: May the record show, your Honor, that there has been a continuing objection——

The Court: That is correct.

Mr. Dixon: ——Government's No. 1 to all of these questions?

The Court: That is correct. And it is no longer the rule that, to make your objection good, you have to decline to [fol. 1505] cross-examine. That never was the law in California, anyway. One thing about us you will find out, Mr. Dixon, that we have had in our procedure for many, many years some of the best things to be found in Civil Procedure anywhere. We observe that here. We began way back in 1850 to modernize our Civil Procedure and we have kept after it ever since.

Mr. Hall: Will you pardon me a moment, Mr. Dixon?

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

Mr. Hall: Defendants desire to offer into evidence the documents heretofore marked as Defendants' Exhibits G, H, and I for identification.

Mr. Dixon: The Government's objection No. 1.

The Court: Are those similar?

The Clerk: You have looked at some of those, your Honor.

The Court: Oh, that is the group I have looked at. I can see the imagination of the lawyers of this company was at work, because they have got all sorts of things. They even have contracts that they call 100 per cent contracts. They have to pass in an Americanism test.

All right; objection is overruled and the groups of documents may be received.

The Clerk: G, H, and I in evidence.

[fol. 1506] Cross-examination.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. I notice that this 100 per cent dealer gasoline contract referred to by his Honor bears the notation at the top "1-39". Does that mean that that form was adopted in 1939?

A. It means the piece of paper from which that was photoprinted. Mr. Dixon, was printed in January, 1939.

Q. So that the form was at least in operation and use by the company on that date, is that correct?

A. Or presumably within a short——

The Court: Which one?

The Witness: Pardon me.

Mr. Dixon: Did you see them, your Honor?

The Court: Is that the one—there are two 100 per cent contracts; a 100 per cent dealer gasoline contract, and the other called 100 per cent dealer gasoline and paint work and sign agreement. All right.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Was the latter one that his Honor just referred to as another 100 per cent dealer gasoline and paint work and sign agreement put into effect at the same time as the other 100 per cent dealer gasoline contract?

A. No, sir.

Q. When was the latter one put into effect, if you know?

[fol. 1507] Mr. Hall: Just a minute. What do you mean by "the latter one"?

Mr. Dixon: The latter one, Mr. Hall, the paint work and sign agreement, 100 per cent dealer gasoline contract.

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. When was that put into effect, Mr. Hugill?

A. Would you please refer to the date in the upper left-hand corner?

Q. I did, but I didn't find any. That is what I was looking for. That is why I asked you the question.

The Court: It is not on the second one. I could not find any, either.

A. My recollection is that it was a year or two ago.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Did you prepare any of these agreements yourself?

A. I assisted in the preparation of some of these; yes.

Q. In doing so did you consult the forms of any of the other oil companies selling petroleum products in the seven western states referred to?

A. Yes; I had occasion to look at those.

Q. Did you consult or refer to any of the Standard Oil forms of agreements comparable to any of those referred to in Exhibit H in preparing any of those agreements?

A. I don't remember whether I looked at the Standard [fol. 1508] form or not.

Q. Well, it is a fact, is it not, that the Standard Oil sells more gasoline or is the No. 1 seller of gasoline in the seven western states, Mr. Hugill?

A. I so understand; yes.

Q. Did you, therefore, or do you want the record to show that you did not look at any of the Standard Oil forms of this character in preparing your form or any of these forms?

A. No.

Q. I am not sure I understand your answer.

A. I said, "No:" that I don't.

Q. You mean you did not look at any of them?

A. No. I say, I don't want the record to show that I did not look at that.

Q. That is what I want to know.

A. I don't remember whether or not I looked at the Standard form.

The Court: In other words, you can't say positively that you did, but you may have?

The Witness: That is correct.

The Court: And chances are, as lawyers generally do when they draw a contract, that you are going to consult any precedents which are available dealing with the particular subject; isn't that true in this case?

[fol. 1509] The Witness: Yes; that is correct.

The Court: In other words, you look into the field and see what others have drawn, and then draw your own on the basis of past experience.

The Witness: Occasionally these forms are brought to our attention, rather than our going out and seeking them.

The Court: That is right.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Do you know anything about the sale of Shell products to retail outlets, Mr. Hugill?

A. What do you mean?

Q. Well, I believe you testified that you helped to prepare or that these documents, Exhibit G, were prepared under your supervision and control; I mean under your supervision, is that correct?

A. I assembled——

Mr. Hall: Pardon me. I would like to have that question read, please.

The Court: Will you read the question, please?

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. The information was assembled under my supervision.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Were the records from which this compilation was made, were they under your control?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or supervision?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 1510] Q. Do you know whether Shell Oil Company endeavors to sell its gasoline to any Chevron dealer while he is operating a Chevron station?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether the Shell Oil Company has ever sold any gasoline to any Chevron dealer outlet while he was operating such an outlet?

A. No; I don't know.

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, we might object to the admission of Exhibit G on the further ground that these records were not prepared by the persons under whose supervision and control the records were kept. However, I assume that the records would probably come in in any event.

The Court: I don't know what your record is. He is testifying to forms in use.

Mr. Dixon: No. I am referring, your Honor, to Exhibit G.

The Court: Oh, the data?

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

The Court: The one that has the tabulations?

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

The Court: Oh, the tabulations.

(Counsel conferring privately.)

Mr. Dixon: The records would probably be the same, your Honor. I will withdraw my objection, but my continu-[fol. 1511] ing objection Government's No. 1 still stands.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Hall: Had you finished with Mr. Hugill?

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

Mr. Hall: That is all, Mr. Hugill. May Mr. Hugill be excused, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hall: Mr. Christy.

Ronald A. Christy, called as a witness by the defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Ronald A. Christy, C-h-r-i-s-t-y.

The Clerk: The middle initial is what?

The Witness: A.

The Clerk: Your last name is?

The Witness: C-h-r-i-s-t-y.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Christy?

A. I am the manager of the marketing and statistical department of General Petroleum Corporation.

Q. How long have you held that position?

A. For over six years, that particular position.

Q. And how long have you been connected with General
[fol. 1512] Petroleum Corporation?

A. 28 years.

Q. Has it been in the marketing department for the last 10 years?

A. Yes, sir; it has.

Mr. Hall: I ask that sheets which I now present, entitled "General Petroleum Corporation Compilations", six sheets, be marked as one exhibit with Defendants' number for identification, next in order.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit J for identification.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Christy, that some weeks or some months ago I presented to General Petroleum Corporation a series of questions which are now reflected in Defendants' B for identification?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you the documents which have been marked Defendants' Exhibit J for identification and ask you if those are compilations prepared under your supervision from the books and records of General Petroleum Corporation?

A. These are the sheets prepared under my supervision.

Q. And they were prepared in response, so far as they do respond, to the questions which are set out in the Defendants' Exhibit B for identification?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the gasoline of General Petroleum Corporation and [fol. 1513] its lubricating oil sold through service stations operated by independent dealers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do those stations also sell tires, tubes, batteries, and automotive accessories?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are those products thus sold through stations handling General Petroleum Corporation's products in competition with products of like description sold at gasoline service stations selling the products of Standard Oil Company of California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is true, is it, with respect to the seven western states; and I mean by that, the States of California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, Utah, and Idaho?

A. Yes, sir; that is true. We are now operating in the seven states.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked with Defendants' letter next in order for identification, as one exhibit, two forms of a service station lease, designated in the one case "L" and in the other case "LX".

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit K marked for identification.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked for identification with Defendants' letter next in order, as one exhibit and for [fol. 1514] identification, forms of dealer contract L, Dealer contract LX, and dealer's gasoline contract.

The Clerk: Defendants' L marked for identification.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Does the General Petroleum Corporation lease service stations to independent dealers handling its products?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is that a practice in all of the seven states that we have referred to?

A. I believe so.

Q. I show you documents which have been marked Defendants' Exhibit K for identification and ask you if those are forms of leases made by General Petroleum Corporation as lessor to dealers as lessee currently and commonly in use?

A. Yes, sir; I believe these are in current use.

Q. Now, does General Petroleum Corporation make gasoline contracts with independent dealers who handle its products?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that generally the practice in the seven western states that I have referred to?

A. I believe so.

[fol. 1515] Q. I show you the documents which have been marked Defendants' Exhibit L, for identification, and ask you if those forms of gasoline contracts are currently and commonly in use by General Petroleum Corporation in its dealings with independent dealers handling its products?

A. Yes.

Q. Could you tell me, Mr. Christy,—perhaps you can't, but if you could, I would appreciate it—how long the forms of contract or forms substantially like the forms of contract shown in Exhibit L, for identification, have been in use by the General Petroleum Corporation and its dealers?

A. Well, I know they have been for several years.

Q. Would you say seven or eight years, at least?

A. Probably six or seven, or eight years, I would say. I don't know exactly. I didn't execute the forms.

Q. Could you tell me how long forms like or substantially like the forms in Exhibit K, for identification, have been in use between General Petroleum Corporation and its dealers?

Mr. Dixon: Pardon me, Mr. Hall. Was the last question prior to that with reference to Exhibit L?

Mr. Hall: Yes.

Mr. Dixon: I see.

Mr. Hall: Now I am talking about Exhibit K.

[fol. 1516] Mr. Dixon: Thank you.

The Witness: I don't think this one has been in use very long. I don't know. I am not sure.

Mr. Hall: In the witness' last answer he has indicated that form 4745 has not been in use very long. That is a part of Defendants' Exhibit L, for identification.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Mr. Christy, I call your attention to the date at the top of the sheet we have just been talking about, and ask you if that refreshes your recollection as to the length of time that document has been in use.

A. This would indicate that this form was revised on 12-16-46, and undoubtedly prior to that there was another form.

Mr. Hall: Defendants offer in evidence Exhibits J, K and L, heretofore marked for identification.

Mr. Dixon: Continuing objection, Government's Objection No. 1, to these documents and to all the testimony of this witness prior to the offer of admission of these documents into evidence.

The Court: The objection will be overruled. The documents may be received and marked as Defendants'—

The Clerk: J, K and L in evidence.

The Court: —Exhibits J, K and L; as to J the understanding being that the books will be available for inspection.

[fol. 1517] Mr. Dixon: May I see those, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hall: You may examine.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. I notice both Exhibits K and L have the notation at the top "Revised" in the year 1947.

A. There are different dates of revision indicated, yes.

Q. How long prior to the date of revision of these contracts, were contracts substantially the same in form as Exhibits L and K in effect?

A. I do not know, but I surmise——

Q. Do you know who prepared the revisions?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. Let him finish.

Mr. Dixon: I thought he said he didn't know.

Mr. Hall: He started to add an explanation.

Mr. Dixon: If he said he didn't know I am not interested in anything further.

The Court: Have you concluded your answer?

The Witness: No, I have not.

The Court: You may complete it.

The Witness: I said I didn't know exactly.

The Court: Whether counsel is interested or not, the [fol. 1518] question is whether the court is interested, and the court is always interested in any explanation a witness has to make of an answer.

The Witness: Being, as I am, the manager of the marketing statistical department, I don't know exactly, because I have no part in the preparation of the forms. But I have been exposed to these forms, and I know of their existence for a period of years.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Can you tell the court how long forms substantially the same as Exhibits K and L were in effect by your company before they were revised in the form of Exhibits K and L?

A. Forms similar to these probably six or eight years.

Q. Do you know who prepared them?

A. Yes, I imagine the legal departments in the marketing.

Q. At least, you had nothing to do with the preparation, Mr. Christy?

A. I did not.

Q. Do you know whether or not your company solicits the trade of any Chevron dealer selling Standard Oil products, while he is selling such products as a Chevron dealer?

A. I do not know.

Q. You don't know?

[fol. 1519] A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether your company has ever sold any gasoline to any Chevron dealer outlet while it was operated by a Chevron dealer?

A. I do not know.

Mr. Dixon: That is all.

Mr. Hall: That is all Mr. Christy.

I will call Mr. Wharton.

CLINTON S. WHARTON, called as a witness by the defendants, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: Take the stand, please, sir. What is your name, please?

The Witness: C. S. Wharton, W-h-a-r-t-o-n.

The Clerk: And will you state your full first name?

The Witness: Clinton, C-l-i-n-t-o-n.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Wharton?

A. Assistant to territorial manager, marketing.

Q. For The Texas Company?

A. Right.

Q. How long have you been connected with The Texas [fol. 1520] Company?

A. Eighteen years.

Q. How long have you held your present position?

A. Since 1943.

Q. Do you recall that several weeks or possibly months ago I made a request on your company, which is set forth in the sheet which has now been marked Exhibit B?

A. I do.

Mr. Hall: I ask that a compilation consisting of two pages be marked as one exhibit, for identification, with Defendants' letter next in order.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit M, marked for identification.

Mr. Hall: I ask that two sheets entitled "The Texas Company" being forms "S-207D, Idaho and Utah" and "S-207D, L. A. and Seattle" be marked, for identification as one exhibit with Defendants' letter next in order.

The Clerk: Defendant's Exhibit N, marked for identification.

Mr. Hall: I ask that three sheets that I now present be marked with the Defendants' letter next in order, as one exhibit, for identification.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit O, marked for identification.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I show you these sheets, Mr. Wharton, which have [fol. 1521] been marked Defendants' Exhibit M, for identification, and ask you if those were prepared under your supervision from the records of your company, responsive to the inquiries which are set out in Exhibit B.

A. That is right.

Q. Is The Texas Company's gasoline and lubricating oil sold through independent dealer stations?

A. It is.

Q. In the states of California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, Utah and Idaho?

A. It is.

Q. Has that been true for the last 10 years?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do those stations that I have referred to handle tires, tubes, batteries or accessories?

A. Most of them.

Q. Are the products sold at those stations, including petroleum products and including tires, tubes, batteries and accessories in the states I have mentioned, sold in competition with the products sold at stations that handle the products of Standard Oil Company of California?

A. They are, if those stations are in the contiguous area.

Q. Does The Texas Company lease service stations to independent dealers?

[fol. 1522] A. We do.

Q. Is it true that some of the stations so leased will be stations which have been previously leased by the dealer to The Texas Company?

A. That is correct.

Q. And other stations will be stations leased by some third party to The Texas Company, as lessee?

A. That is correct.

Q. I show you the documents which have been marked

Defendants' Exhibit O, for identification, and ask you if the first sheet of that exhibit is a form of lease employed by The Texas Company in leasing service stations to dealers?

A. That is right.

Q. Can you tell me what use is made of the second and third sheets which are a part of this exhibit?

A. Well, would you care to clarify your question as to the use made of it? The form itself is explanatory of its use, it seems to me.

Mr. Hall: Will you read the answer, please?

(The answer was read.)

Mr. Hall: If the form is explanatory, then I don't need any answer to the question.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I show you the documents which have been marked Defendants' Exhibit N, for identification, and ask you if those are forms of contract employed by The Texas Com-
fol. 1523] pany in its relations with dealers, independent dealers, operating stations where its products are sold?

A. That is right.

Q. I notice that one of the sheets embodied in Exhibit N refers to L. A. and Seattle and another refers to Idaho and Utah. Do those notations on the sheets indicate the localities in which those particular forms are used?

A. Those are separate divisions of the territory, right.

Q. Then in what states would the sheet which is headed "Idaho and Utah" be used?

A. In those states.

Q. And would the sheet headed "L. A. and Seattle" be used in the remaining five of the seven western states?

A. Seattle, Washington, Oregon, Los Angeles, California, Nevada and Arizona.

Q. Can you tell me, Mr. Wharton, how long approximately forms of contract like or substantially like those included in Exhibit N, for identification, have been in common use by The Texas Company?

A. To the best of my recollection about seven years.

Q. Can you tell me approximately how long the form of lease which is embodied in Exhibit O has been in common use by The Texas Company?

[fol. 1524] A. To the best of my knowledge, since about 1940.

Mr. Hall: Defendants offer in evidence the documents which have heretofore been marked for identification, as Exhibits M, N and O.

Mr. Dixon: Government's continuing objection No. 1 to the admission of the documents in evidence and to all of the testimony of this witness.

The Court: The objection will be overruled. The documents are received.

The Clerk: Defendants' M, N and O in evidence.

Mr. Hall: You may take the witness.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Mr. Wharton, do you know whether your company solicits business, that is, endeavors to sell Texas gasoline to any Chevron dealer selling Standard Oil products?

A. I do not know whether that has been done or not.

Q. Do you know whether The Texas Company has ever sold any Texas gasoline to a Chevron dealer while he was operating a Chevron outlet?

A. I do not know.

Mr. Dixon: Thank you. That is all.

Mr. Hall: May Mr. Wharton be excused?

The Court: Yes. I think we will take a short recess, [fol. 1525] gentlemen, at the present time.

(A short recess was taken.)

The Court: Proceed.

Mr. Hall: I will call Mr. Harold D. Seeley.

Harold D. Seeley, called as a witness by the defendants, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Clerk: Take the stand, please, sir. What is your name, please?

The Witness: Harold D. Segley, S-e-e-l-e-y.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Seeley?

A. Administrative supervisor in the marketing department of the Union Oil Company.

Q. That is the Union Oil Company of California?

A. That's right.

Q. How long have you held that position?

A. Substantially the same position about seven years.

Q. How long have you been employed by the Union Oil Company of California?

A. Twenty-six years.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked, for identification [fol. 1526] as one exhibit with Defendants' letter next in order these sheets of compilation, four in number.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit P, marked for identification.

[fol. 1527] Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked with Defendants' letter next in order as one exhibit for identification only, service station lease of Union Oil Company of California, form 909.

The Clerk: Defendants' Q marked for identification.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked with Defendants' letter next in order for identification, as one exhibit, a form of retail dealer gasoline contract of Union Oil Company of California, form 896-F.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit R marked for identification.

Q. I show you, Mr. Seeley, a document which has been marked Exhibit B and ask you if the inquiries contained in that document were submitted to Union Oil Company of California within the last few weeks or months?

A. They were.

Q. I show you the sheets which have now been marked Defendants' Exhibit P for identification and ask you if those compilations included in that exhibit for identification were prepared by you from the books or records of the company responsive to certain of the inquiries which are set out in Exhibit B?

A. They were.

Q. Do gasoline service stations which sell the petroleum products of Union Oil Company of California also sell tires, [fol. 1528] tubes, batteries, and accessories?

A. They do.

Q. Is that true with respect to the states of Washington, Oregon, California, Arizona, and Nevada?

A. That is right.

Q. Do stations selling Union Oil petroleum products in the states of Utah and Idaho sell also tires, tubes, batteries, and accessories?

A. I believe they do.

Q. Are the petroleum products—and by that I mean particularly gasoline and lubricating oils, and the tires, tubes and batteries which are sold at gasoline service stations in the states which we have referred to which handle Union Oil petroleum products sold in competition with products of similar character sold at the gasoline service stations operated by dealers that sell products of Standard Oil Company of California?

A. I would say they are.

Q. Does Union Oil Company of California in the states we have referred to make leases of service stations to independent dealers?

A. They do.

Q. I will show you the document which has now been marked Defendants' Exhibit Q for identification and ask you if that is a form of lease which is currently and com- [fol. 1529] monly employed in the states that we have referred to by Union Oil Company of California in leasing gasoline service stations to dealers handling those products?

A. It is.

Q. Can you indicate how long, approximately, a form of lease of that character or substantially like that form of lease has been in use for that purpose by Union Oil Company of California?

A. Over 10 years.

Q. Does Union Oil Company of California make contracts with the dealers operating the gasoline service stations where its gasoline is sold?

A. It does.

Q. I show you a document which has been marked Defendants' Exhibit R for identification and ask you if that is the form of contract commonly employed and currently employed by Union Oil Company of California for that purpose in the states to which we have referred?

A. It is.

Q. Can you indicate approximately how long a form of contract like that or substantially like that form shown in Defendants' Exhibit R for identification has been employed for that purpose?

A. A contract substantially like this form, less than five years.

[fol. 1530] Mr. Hall: Defendants now offer into evidence the documents which have heretofore been marked for identification as Exhibit P, Q, and R.

Mr. Dixon: The Government's objection No. 1 to the admission into evidence of those documents and all of the testimony of this witness.

The Court: The objection will be overruled and the documents will be marked P, Q, and R and received into evidence, with the understanding that the figures are subject to correction if found to be in error.

The Clerk: Exhibits P, Q, and R admitted in evidence.

Mr. Hall: I don't know whether I asked you this question. At the risk of repetition, I will ask you again, if I already have, Mr. Seeley.

Q. Are the products sold in the seven western states at the gasoline service stations handling Union Oil Company of California products sold in competition with products of similar character sold at stations operated by dealers handling products of Standard Oil Company of California?

A. I think you asked that, but the answer is they are.

Mr. Hall: You may take the witness.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. By "competition" you mean, Mr. Seeley, that the Union Oil Company gasolines and so on are sold at dealer outlets; is that what you mean?

[fol. 1531] A. That is right.

Q. Now, does your company ever endeavor to sell any gasoline, for example, to any of the Chevron operated stations selling Standard Oil gasoline while they were selling such gasoline?

A. I don't know.

Q. You say you don't know?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether they have ever made any sales of Union Oil gasoline product to such stations while they were being operated by the Chevron dealers?

A. That I don't know.

Q. Do you know when those forms, Exhibits Q and R, were prepared, Mr. Seeley?

A. Oh, you asked me when they were prepared?

Q. Yes.

A. This form has been in effect——

Q. And is Exhibit Q?

A. Exhibit Q has been in effect over 10 years to my knowledge.

Q. Do you know whether forms substantially similar to that were in use by any other oil company at the time the Union Oil Company first used it at that time?

A. That I don't know.

Q. Are you familiar with any of the forms that were in [fol. 1532] use in the oil industry generally at the time form Exhibit Q was first used by your company?

A. No.

Q. Are you familiar with the time when Exhibit R was first put into use by your company?

A. Well, it was within the last five years, less than five years.

Q. Do you know what other companies, if any, were using a form substantially similar to that in the territory in which your company sells your product at that time?

A. I do not.

Q. In other words, you did not prepare either of the forms?

A. No; I did not.

Q. Exhibit R or Q, or have anything to do with their preparation?

A. No. That is right.

Mr. Dixon: That is all.

Mr. Hall: That is all, Mr. Seeley. May Mr. Seeley be excused?

The Court: You may be excused.

Mr. Hall: Call Mr. Rogers.

[fol. 1533] The Clerk: What is your name, please?

A. Elmer E. Rogers, as in Charles Rogers, Rogers.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Rogers?

A. I am supervisor of marketing accounts for the Union Oil Company of California.

Q. How long have you held that position?

A. Eight years.

Q. How long have you been employed by Union Oil Company of California?

A. 25 years.

Mr. Hall: I ask that four sheets of computations, or figures and notes be marked with the letter next in order as one exhibit for identification only.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit S for identification.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Rogers, that some weeks or months ago I submitted your company an inquiry which is exhibited by the matter that is now shown in Defendants' Exhibit B?

A. That is correct.

Q. And responsive to certain of those inquiries were certain schedules prepared?

A. That is correct.

[fol. 1534] Q. I show you the document which has now been marked Exhibit S for identification and ask you if those are the schedules which were thus prepared?

A. That is right.

Q. And the figures shown in those schedules were taken from the books and records of Union Oil Company of California?

A. That is right.

Mr. Hall: Defendants offer into evidence the document which has been marked Exhibit S for identification.

Mr. Dixon: Objection to the admission into evidence of such documents and the succeeding testimony of the witness on Government's objection No. 1.

merely a different witness. The objection is overruled. It may be received.

The Clerk: S in evidence.

Mr. Hall: You may take the witness.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Do you know, Mr. Rogers, whether your company ever solicited the business of a Chevron dealer selling Standard products while he was operating such station? [fol. 1535] A. I have no knowledge of that.

Q. Do you know whether your company ever sold a Chevron dealer selling such Standard products any of your products while operation as a Chevron dealer?

A. I don't know that.

Mr. Dixon: That is all.

Mr. Hall: That is all. May Mr. Rogers be excused? I will call Mr. David Will.

David Will, a witness called by the defendants, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: David Will, W-i-l-l.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Will?

A. I am contract lease manager for Richfield Oil Corporation.

Q. How long have you held that position?

A. Since 1942.

Q. How long have you been employed by Richfield Oil Corporation?

A. Approximately 19 years.

Mr. Hall: I ask that three sheets of schedules be marked with defendants' letter next in order as one exhibit for [fol. 1536] identification only.

The Clerk: Defendants' T marked for identification.

Mr. Hall: And I ask that there be marked with defendants' letter next in order for identification only a set of forms of contracts and leases.

The Clerk: Defendants' U, marked for identification.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Will, that several weeks or months ago I submitted to your company an inquiry which is now shown in Exhibit B?

A. Yes.

Q. I now hand you the sheets which have been marked Defendants' Exhibit T for identification and ask you if those are schedules prepared in response to certain of the inquiries shown in Exhibit B?

A. They are.

Q. Were those schedules which are Exhibit T for identification prepared from the records of your company and under your supervision?

A. They were prepared from the records of our company by our accounting staff.

Q. Is it a fact Richfield gasoline and Richfield lubricating oils are sold through independent dealer stations in the states of California, Arizona, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, and Idaho?

A. That is correct.

[fol. 1537] Q. How about Utah, are they sold in Utah?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do dealers handling those petroleum products also handle tires, tubes, batteries, and accessories?

A. The majority of them do; yes.

Q. And that applies to the six western states?

A. Yes.

Q. Mentioned in this Exhibit T for identification?

A. Yes.

Q. Does Richfield Oil Corporation lease gasoline service stations to independent dealers?

A. Yes.

Q. And that practice prevails in the six western states to which we have referred?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it true that certain of the properties so leased would be properties which had been leased to Richfield Oil Corporation either by the dealer to whom the station was leased or by some third party?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that would apply in these six western states to which we have referred, would it?

A. Yes.

Q. Does Richfield Oil Corporation make contracts with dealers selling its petroleum products as these independent [fol. 1538] dealer stations?

A. Are you speaking now of stations that we have under lease with third parties?

Q. Well, I will make it broader than that. Do they make contracts with stations that are not under lease?

A. Yes.

Q. And then, do they make contracts with stations that are under lease; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. I show you a collection of contracts and leases that have now been marked for identification as Defendants' Exhibit U and ask you if those are forms currently and commonly in use by Richfield Oil Corporation in these six western states in its dealings with independent operators of gasoline service stations?

A. Yes.

Q. Are the petroleum products and the tires, tubes, and batteries that are sold at these dealer stations where Richfield petroleum products are handled commonly sold in competition with products of like character handled at dealer stations where the products of Standard Oil Company of California are handled?

A. I would say so; yes.

Mr. Hall: Defendants offer into evidence Exhibits heretofore marked for identification as U and T.

[fol. 1539] Mr. Dixon: The Government's objection No. 1 to the admission into evidence of such documents and the testimony of this witness.

The Court: All right; the objection will be overruled.

Mr. Clerk: Defendants' T and U in evidence.

Mr. Hall: You may take the witness.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Mr. Will, by referring to Exhibit T will you state, if you can, to the court whether any of the products referred to in said exhibit were sold to any Chevron dealer handling Standard Oil products?

A. I don't know.

Q. While he was operating such station? You say what?

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know. Were you in charge of the preparation of these records or of the compilation from which the material contained in Exhibit B was secured?

A. No. I believe I stated in answer to the question before that it was prepared by our accounting staff from our corporate records.

Mr. Dixon: That is all.

Mr. Hall: That is all, Mr. Will. May Mr. Will be excused? [fol. 1548] The Court: He may be excused.

Mr. Hall: If your Honor would care to take an adjournment at this time, I find myself rather out of ammunition.

The Court: Well, I am willing to do that. The only reason that I am holding over is because I thought that some of these men from other companies who are occupying executive positions do not want to be discommoded too long. If you had one here I would go on, but if you do not, it is perfectly all right.

Mr. Hall: No; I have nobody in the court room from any other oil company so far as I know.

The Court: I see, all right. We have made good progress today, gentlemen, and while we took a long time to dispose of one legal matter, I think, gentlemen, that the time spent was worth it; and I think, by talking, I clarified my own thoughts, because, while I had given the matter some thought in anticipation, I assure you it was not a prepared speech. When it is written up you will probably notice that it was not.

Mr. Hall: We found it very enlightening and helpful, your Honor.

The Court: I repeated myself quite a good deal, but I always feel that a discussion like that saves time and also indicates to any reviewing court—because, as I said before, this is the type of case that is going to go to the [fols. 1541-1542] reviewing court because of the importance of the case and because it affects not only this corporation but others, as the evidence now clearly shows, who are in the same position and who have contracts of a similar character. Whether the Government has any actions against them or not I do not know.

So I felt that there should be a summation to try to clarify the court's own thought and indicate to counsel how I feel about the matter.

Of course, I am always amenable to additional reasons for changing my ruling. And even when evidence is in the record in a case of this character which is tried without the jury, counsel are not forbidden to argue at the conclusion of the case that certain evidence admitted should not be given any effect.

But a full statement avoids the repetition of argument and places in one place the view of the court and the divergent views of counsel in the case.

All right, tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock.

(Whereupon, an adjournment was taken until 10:00 o'clock a. m. of the following day, Friday, May 21, 1948.)

[fols. 1543-1544] In the District Court of the United States in and for the Southern District of California, Central Division

Honorable Leon R. Yankwich, Judge Presiding

No. 6159-Y Civil

United States of America, Plaintiff,

vs.

Standard Oil Company of California and Standard Stations, Inc., Defendants

Reporters' Transcript of Proceedings

Los Angeles, California, Friday, May 21, 1948.

Appearances:

(As heretofore noted.)

[fol. 1545] Los Angeles, California, Friday, May 21, 1948, 10:00 A.M.

Mr. Hall: Mr. Travis.

Ward E. Travis, called as a witness by the defendants, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: My first name is Ward, W-a-r-d, initial E., Travis, T-r-a-v-i-s.

The Clerk: T-r-a-v-i-s, Ward E. Travis—right?

The Witness: That is right.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What is your present occupation, Mr. Travis?

A. I am assistant division manager of the sales equipment division in our office in San Francisco.

Q. Of the Standard Oil Company of California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you start to work with Standard Oil Company of California?

A. I started here in Los Angeles on service stations in 1920.

Q. And from then on will you briefly trace the course of your duties and experience with Standard Oil Company of California?

[fol. 1546] A. Well, from here, in 1922, I think in October or around there; I was transferred to Bakersfield, California as a superintendent of service stations in that particular district for Standard Oil and served in that position until 1924, I believe in either April or May, 1924, and at that time was transferred to—we considered that our retail department. At that time I was transferred back into the wholesale department in which I was a general salesman in San Francisco.

Q. Is that class of general salesman engaged in selling petroleum products to dealers?

A. To dealers; yes. Well, dealers, truckers, and people of that kind. It was a general wholesale operation but the majority of it was dealers, but had some truckers and people of that kind in addition to that.

Q. Will you carry on from there?

A. Yes. Then in March, I believe it was in 1925, I was transferred to Stockton, California, at which time I was made superintendent of what we called the—the title, as I recall, at the time was city sales superintendent, and that was a supervisory position but the same type of work that I was doing in San Francisco in calling on these dealers, and so forth. And at that time we had some, oh, 50 or 60 people in our organization doing the same type of work that I was doing in San Francisco. And I believe then, [fol. 1547] in March, 1927—I am sure that is correct—I was transferred to Portland, Oregon in the same capacity that I was in Stockton. It was a little larger field and had some 50 to 60 people up there under my direction, with the same title of city sales superintendent. Then I served in that capacity in Portland until July, 1929, at which time I was president of the Oregon Gasoline Stations, a retail marketing situation in which I held the controlling stock at that time. And then in 1931 I again joined the Standard Oil Company and I was made division manager for Standard Stations, Inc. from 1931 until June, 1934, at which time I was transferred again to greater fields, which was at Oakland, California, as the division manager for Standard Stations, handling a similar position as at Portland as division manager there. Then in June, 1936 I was transferred to Los Angeles as the division manager for Standard Stations, Inc. in Los Angeles, where I served until October, 1945, when I was transferred back to San Francisco in the present position that I am in today.

[fol. 1548] Q. Now, in the course of the performance of your duties in these marketing department capacities, have you had occasion at times to make surveys of the territory under your jurisdiction relating to questions concerning the location of service stations and questions relating to gasoline consumption of your company and competitors?

A. Well, yes, Mr. Hall. That is necessary because, in particular, when you are in the—well, either the retail or wholesale end of our business, why, we, to justify spending any money for new locations, want to know as to how we are from a competitive standpoint, and that is one of the —probably the outstanding thing that is necessary, in your knowledge of being a manager of any of these divisions, that is, to know whether or not you can justify the expenditure of any extra money. So that is necessary at all times when you are installing a new station.

Q. Now, in the year 1946 did you receive any instructions from the company directing you to prepare in writing an opinion with reference to competitive conditions in any particular area?

A. Yes, sir. In the latter part of April, 1946 I was asked—in fact, I was in Salt Lake City, and was asked to proceed to Los Angeles and meet with a group of our officials, at which time discussion was had in that regard, and it seems that the decision was to ask me to head such [fol. 1549] a survey because I had been around Los Angeles from '36 to '46, and I was asked to make such a survey and give it to the officials, as to what our situation was in comparison to the competitive situation.

Mr. Hall: Now, Mr. Travis,—well, I think you have answered the question.

I ask that there be marked as Defendants' next in order, for identification only, a schedule entitled "Los Angeles Basin Competitive Service Station Report."

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit V, marked for identification.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, this survey that you undertook at that time embraced a certain area in Southern California, did it?

A. Well, yes, it embraced what we, and I think everybody probably in the industry, considers the Los Angeles basin, which took in the greater part of Los Angeles County.

Mr. Hall: I ask that a map entitled, "Los Angeles Sales District," be marked as Defendants' Exhibit next in order, for identification.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit W, for identification.

Mr. Hall: I ask that a map entitled, "Long Beach Sales District," be marked as Defendants' Exhibit next in order, for identification.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit X, for identification.

[fol. 1550] By Mr. Hall:

Q. Standard has for a number of years, has it not, designated a certain area as the Los Angeles Sales District?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And has also designated another area as Long Beach Sales District?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you the maps that have been marked Defendants' Exhibit W and X, for identification, and ask you if they respectively depict the Los Angeles Sales District and the Long Beach Sales District?

A. Yes, sir, they do.

Q. Now, did this survey that you say you undertook embrace the entire Los Angeles Sales District, as shown in Exhibit W, for identification?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the survey embrace a part of the Long Beach Sales District, shown in Exhibit X, for identification?

A. Yes, sir, that is correct.

Q. Now, will you take, and in pen and ink mark a line on Defendants' Exhibit X, for identification, south of which the area was covered by your survey?

A. I don't think I quite get that, Mr. Hall, south——

Q. Well, you say your survey covered a part of the Long Beach Sales District.

[fol. 1551] A. Oh, I see what you mean.

Q. Now, will you mark on Defendants' Exhibit X, for identification, a line which would indicate the division of the area and indicate the area south of the line which was covered by your survey.

Now, will you put at one end of that line the capital letter "A" and at the other end of the line the capital letter "B."

Now, do I understand that your survey covered the Long Beach Sales District south of the line A-B?

A. That's right; not the entire part of it, you see.

Q. Was some other part excluded also?

A. Yes, it was. It cuts right across from San Pedro. Do you want that further?

Q. Yes, put in another line, and mark it C-D.

A. That is a rather small map, but that approximately would show it, and would tell you what it covers.

Q. Now, to be sure that I understand this, your area in the Long Beach Sales District which was covered by the survey, is the area between the lines A and B and C and D?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, I show you a document which has been marked Defendants' Exhibit V, for identification, and ask you if as a result of that survey you prepared that chart, which is so designated.

[fol. 1552] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I will leave that exhibit before you. That chart that I have just referred to, Mr. Travis, if I understand you correctly, indicated your opinion, as stated to the company at that time, concerning the competitive dealer situation in the Southern California area to which you have referred?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now, will you state——

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, I just rise to state at this time, so that the record may be clear, that the government's objection No. 1 is applicable to all of this line of testimony.

The Court: All right. Overruled.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, will you tell us what procedures you went through and what steps you took in arriving at the result which is stated in Defendants' Exhibit V, for identification.

and which formed the basis for the opinion which you say you gave to the company, as reflected in that chart?

A. Well, for a little clarification, Mr. Hall, I might state that in this Los Angeles Basin survey, why, we had—there was ten branch managers of the different branches, which is indicated on this Exhibit V here, and the first thing was to go to those people and to their records and their estimates as to what their competitive situation was. Well, [fol. 1553] first they really showed us the number of competitive service stations that was in their particular branches.

Q. Yes.

A. Which was comparatively easy for them to do with accuracy, due to the fact that it was a matter of counting service stations and, of course, each service station has its own identification. They had no difficulty in establishing for this record the number of stations operated by our competitors.

Mr. Hall: Would your Honor like one of these for reference while I am examining?

The Court: Yes.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, then, if I understand you correctly, the pattern of this exhibit is, first, to state a figure. Take the top row, for example. The figures there, 48, 8, 30, 15, and so on, are numbers of service stations?

A. That first row you are referring to is self-explanatory, Chevron stations indicated in the separate branches, and with the total at the end of each district.

[fol. 1554] Q. And the horizontal row of service stations is followed by a horizontal row of gallonage figures, is it not?

A. That is correct.

Q. All right. Now, you say you obtained the numbers representing service stations from reports made by the branch managers?

A. That is correct.

Q. By the way, there are reports made in the ordinary course of business as a matter of routine, and have been for a number of years, by branch managers indicating the number of competitive stations, have there not, in their area?

A. That is correct. That has always been a practice in the company.

Q. Will your proceed and tell us how you arrived at the gallonage figures stated in this exhibit V for identification?

A. Well, in addition—it is also an established practice in our company, and in addition to having this record of the exact number of stations that our competitors might have, we also have an estimate of their gallonages at all of these stations, because, naturally, that is what we consider part of good business to know what our competitors are doing.

Q. Those gallonage estimates are made by the branch managers, are they?

[fol. 1553] A. That is correct.

Q. Has that practice been pursued for a number of years?

A. As far as my experience with the company, Mr. Hall.

Q. When you got these gallonage estimates from the branch managers did you go any further and check for your own purposes the figures that they had given you?

A. Yes; I did, because it had been impressed upon me they wanted as near an accurate figure as they could, and if there would be any methods whereby that this could be checked and not depend entirely on estimates, to do so.

Q. Now, will you tell us what you did to check these estimates with branch managers?

A. Well, the next thing we did was to get the tax figures, figures of the State of California and——

Q. You mean by that, the gallonage figures published by the board of equalization in connection with the state gasoline tax?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. Then go ahead.

A. And so, of course, this was not a survey, as already indicated, within the entire state. It was for a certain district, namely, the Los Angeles basin. So after getting this gallonage from the tax figures we then also, through records at Sacramento, determined the number of cars registered in the State of California. However—— [fol. 1556] Q. Before you come to that, did you reduce those state gallonage figures?

A. Well, I possibly should put that first. I was going to come next with that. Yes; we did, because we were making—this survey was being made strictly on a service station consumption basis how much gasoline was being sold.

Q. Retail sales?

A. Retain sales; yes, sir. So our own records would indicate to us what percentage of our business goes through service stations and what is sold as, oh, cleaning fluids or aviation gasolines and other certain types of petroleum products of the gasoline family, you might say. And so we got our indication from that. And, of course, we had no competitive figures available and I again referred to the branch managers as to what their estimates were for these different competitors in their particular field and to in some way prove to my own satisfaction and tie in with my knowledge of this operation down here, why, we could again make some kind of a comparison with the percentages that these branch managers gave us with the percentage that the different competitors were doing as indicated by the state tax figures.

Q. As I understand you, then, you reduced the state tax figures by a proportion which you felt represented the petroleum products that did not move through service stations?

[fol. 1557] A. That is right. Now, in that——

Q. After you had made that deduction, you arrived at a certain gallonage figure for the entire state, did you?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you make any division between northern and southern California of that figure?

A. Well, yes; we did. I talked to everyone that I could talk to, not only in our company, but state officials and even Los Angeles officials as to what their opinion was as to the consumption of gasoline per car in southern California as compared to what we usually figure per car here in Southern California. Northern California, we were thinking of it north of the Tehachapies. And it was generally conceded, after all the opinions that I was able to secure and tie in with my own observation, that the usage was possibly around 20 per cent greater here in Southern California than in Northern California. And that was partially accounted for also by cars, out of state cars, that are more prevalent down here. But the consensus of opinion of most people of the reason consumption was greater was the fact that they refer to Northern California around the Bay district, and much of the traffic of people going to work up there are commuters, and here was greater use of automobiles of the people commuting. So I simply had to take that, Mr. Hall, as the opinion of everybody I could talk to. But it did seem to me somewhere near a fair opinion that the [fol. 1558] consumption was greater here.

Q. By that means you then arrive at an over-all gallonage figure for Northern California and an over-all gallonage figure for Southern California?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you make any attempt then to apply the Southern California figure to the particular area embraced in this basin?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Will you tell me what you did?

A. Well, we first secured from the—yes; we first secured from the State of California the automobile registrations of the entire state and divided those cars into the total gallonage that we had indicated that was sold through retail, through service stations, and that indicated the usage per car. And then for Los Angeles or for this Los Angeles basin survey we added 20 per cent to that to get down and get our figure of what we want and finding out right at this particular place. And then on——

Q. In other words, you took the motor vehicle registrations for Northern California and for Southern California and then you applied those figures to the gallonage figures for Northern California and Southern California and arrive at the per car figure?

A. That is right.

[fol. 1559] Q. Then did you go further and determine in anyway the number of cars or use, the car use, within the area embraced within your survey?

A. You mean the number of cars in the particular area?

Q. Well, you have now arrived at a gallonage figure for Southern California.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How then did you find out the gallonage figure for the area embraced within your survey?

A. Well, the first thing that I did was to establish the number of cars, of which a record is available through Sacramento, the number of cars registered in Los Angeles County. And that gave me an over-all figure, because in this thing I was checking back continually on estimates that were being given to me by other people. But it was my duty to find out if these estimates were anyways near correct. So that gave me pretty well to my satisfaction—I had the number of cars to start with for Los Angeles, then I wanted to find out the gallonage that was being consumed in any one of these branches that is mentioned on this exhibit V here. So then the branch manager was asked to give the number of registrations in his particular branch. Now, that was not available, the exact amount it would be for the county, because you can get the county, but they had a very accurate record, and by the time I had all these cars furnished by the [fol. 1560] branch managers that pretty well added up to what I had for the total of Los Angeles County or the Los Angeles basin. So through that we were able to establish then whether or not his estimates were somewhere near right in his particular branch.

Q. Then you got the number of cars for the area embraced within the survey?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have a gallonage per car figure that you determined in that way the gallonage used or the gallonage consumed within the area embraced within the survey?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any further adjustment made because of the fact that a part of the gallonage goes to bulk storage to serve purchasers who do not purchase through service stations, and I mean by that industrial, commercial and agricultural uses? Was that done?

A. Yes, sir; that was.

Q. Will you tell us about that?

A. Well, that goes back to what I first started to say, then, a moment ago. We first established through our own records, which definitely indicate the percentage of our business that goes to the bulk storage, the taxable figures that goes to bulk storage or to other brackets, like cleaners, solvents, and things of that nature. So, with our own records [fol. 1561] it was established the percentage that went into that. Then for arriving at the competitors' average we again in that case had to take the estimate of our branch managers. And through my knowledge of this it was fairly well established that these branch managers made a pretty accurate average of their records. I had no particular way to check the other records, but the other checks I had made on things that were available to me indicate that they were fairly accurate.

Do you remember how much percentage you allowed going to bulk storage for the purposes I have stated previous question?

I don't know whether I can recall the exact recapitun of just how we arrived at it. As I recall, I think it was d approximately, either 30 or 35 per cent of our business went to this so-called bulk storage we are referring to.
then, as our records indicated, I believe—I mean as estimates indicated, I believe the competitive we esti-d that 15 per cent, and then with the compilation there, here we finally arrived at a figure of 25 per cent this gallonage indicated here in the Basin went to storage.

Of course, the gallonage figures that are stated for ion dealers and for Standard Stations, Inc. in Exhibit
r identification were taken from company records,
1562] weren't they?

Oh, yes. It was not necessary to go through that re-ulation matter. Our own records would show that.
Then, if I understand your correctly, you determined lonage figure proportionably allocable to the area
d by the survey, from which you subtracted the gal-figure that went through Standard Stations and ard's dealer stations?

That is right.

To arrive at the gallonage which must have been dis-
of by the dealer stations of the other companies?

That is correct.

Will you tell me again how you allocate that total ge figure proportionable to dealer business of the companies, to the individual companies, in this Det's Exhibit V?

ell, that, again, would be back as an estimate from ords that our branch managers keep as to what they the activity of their public, or of their particular would say, instead of "public." I don't mean that. would take those figures furnished by each individual them, and would give them serious consideration

Could you check them against over-all figures?

hecked them against over-all figures and them in dition to that, to see if their percentages are anywhere near right for the individual figure, and we found in those, in almost every instance, that the percentage that they arrived at that they were giving there was very close to the estimate that the competitor was doing for the over-all picture for the state, don't you see?

Q. Did you yourself consult with competitive service station dealers on occasion to check these figures?

A. Well, not to any great extent. That is pretty much a long-drawn out affair. But I was so anxious to give them a correct picture as possible on this that I did personally call on a few, or what we considered spot checking, spot checked a number of competitors, and then go back and refer to the branch managers, go in and talk to them and in a discussion find out the gallonage that they were doing, and then went back and looked at the branch manager's record to see how near his estimate was hitting what the man at the station had told me; and that gave us an idea as to whether we were arriving at any ways near an accurate figure as an estimate for the different competitive companies.

Q. In all of this you drew upon your personal experience in the marketing field and in dealing with similar subject matters over the years in the course of your duties with the company, is that correct?

[fol. 1564] A. Well, I think, Mr. Hall, you could not prepare a report of this kind in any other way. It would take a previous amount of experience, no matter who might be called upon to make a survey of this kind, because you would have to have that knowledge or you would never have an idea about the estimates.

Q. This survey which is marked Defendants' V for identification was submitted to the directors of the company, was it?

A. I presented it to the general manager of our dealer sales operations, and I believe he in turn did present it to the directors.

The Court: What was the exact date, or can you fix an exact date as to which these figures in this tendered exhibit relate?

The Witness: Well, they were taken from figures, some average figures, I believe, in two or three months—I think we used two or three months—in 1946, using May, June, pleted the survey on July the 10th or 12th, somewhere along in that time.

The Court: So this would reflect the condition as about the middle of the year 1946?

The Witness: That is correct; yes, sir.

[fol. 1565] By Mr. Hall:

Q. And your work on the survey was actually in progress between May of '46 and July of '46?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Following the completion of this survey were you requested to prepare a similar survey for the San Francisco Bay area?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before we get into the San Francisco aspect, let me ask you this: How does this Los Angeles area that is reflected in Exhibit V for identification compare in retail sales volume with respect to other areas in the country? [fol. 1566] A. Well, Mr. Hall, the Los Angeles Basin area is considered, of course, the most lucrative market in the world. It is by far——

Q. Well, is it the biggest in the world?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Do you know how the number of automobiles registered in the Los Angeles Basin area compares with the number of automobiles registered in the states of Oregon, Washington, Nevada and Arizona?

A. May I repeat that again? That is Washington, Oregon, Nevada and Arizona; is that correct?

Q. Yes.

A. There are more cars registered—there were at that time—registered in the County of Los Angeles than there is in those four states.

Q. Now, you say that following the completion of this Los Angeles survey, you were asked to make a similar survey for the San Francisco Bay area?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When were you first told to undertake that survey; do you recall?

A. Well, it was discussed with the general manager of our dealer sales either the latter part of November, 1946 or in December. It was somewhere in those particular months, and he indicated a survey of that kind was con-

[fol. 1567] sidered, and asked if I could spare the time to—

Q. Well, did he tell you to go ahead with it at that time?

A. I think I finally got the definite word to go ahead about the 15th of December, to proceed with it.

Q. And you thereafter proceeded with the completion of a survey for the San Francisco Bay area?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Like the survey you had made for the Los Angeles area?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did it take you to complete this San Francisco Bay area survey?

A. Not quite as long as this one, because we had gained certain knowledge in checking this, and, as I recall, we started right after New Years. Oh, it must have been around January 5th or 6th, and we completed it, I think, right at the first of March.

Mr. Hall: I ask that a schedule entitled, "San Francisco Bay Area Competitive Service Station Report," be marked for identification with Defendants' letter next in order.

The Clerk: Defendants' Y, marked for identification.

The Court: The other one was "V"?

Mr. Hall: Yes, your Honor, "V."

The Court: Just a moment. I think we had better have [fol. 1568] a little discussion here about the technique of marking these. We ought to have a Greek alphabet. It is a long one. Our alphabet isn't going to cover all of these.

The Clerk: We can make it double A or triple A.

The Court: Then you have to mark it three times. Can't you mark if as A-1 or A-2?

Mr. Hall: I don't think it will run into the triple As, your Honor.

The Court: It will not. All right. We have gone as far as KKK several times, and I was just thinking about that. So long as I have that assurance, we will go on.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I show you the document which has been marked Defendants' Exhibit Y, for identification, and ask you if that is the survey that you have prepared for the San Francisco Bay area.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the pattern followed and the methods pursued were substantially the same as you have indicated with respect to the Los Angeles Basin survey?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. On this San Francisco Bay area survey, are these branches in more than one sales district?

A. Yes, sir. It shows for itself. It is practically explanatory here. You see the first station there, and it ends here—one, two, three, four, five, six, seven—the seventh [fol. 1569] column is the end of the Oakland district of the Standard Oil Company; that is, the branches.

Q. Well, to make it short, can you tell us approximately what the geographic area was which was covered by the San Francisco survey?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it?

A. All of the city of Oakland to the boundary line between Oakland and San Leandro, and it also included the small town of El Cerrito and Richmond, California. On the San Francisco side of the Bay it reached down as far and including Palo Alto, as well as covering the entire city of San Francisco and all of the towns between San Francisco and Palo Alto, and the cities of Sausalito and San Rafael in Marin County. And that is all.

Q. When that survey was completed, was it presented by you to the manager of the dealer sales department?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And is it your understanding that it was passed on to the directors of the company?

A. I believe that is correct, yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: Defendants offer in evidence the documents which have been marked, or, the maps which have been marked Defendants' Exhibits W and X, for identification.

Mr. Dixon: Government objection No. 1, your Honor.

[fol. 1570] The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: W and X admitted in evidence.

Mr. Hall: Defendants now offer in evidence the documents which have been marked as Defendants' Exhibits, for identification, V and Y.

Mr. Dixon: Government objection No. 1 is renewed to these exhibits and as to all of the testimony of this witness.

The Court: Before ruling upon these, I desire to add one observation which I did not make yesterday for the very obvious reason that the character of the testimony was not revealed, and many a time the questions themselves do not necessarily disclose the full import of the testimony. However, an examination of the last two exhibits, V and Y, discloses one other reason why they are admissible, and why the testimony is admissible, and that is that they present for the two areas, the Los Angeles Basin and the San Francisco Bay Area Basin, not only actual figures relating to number of service stations owned by the oil companies, the majors and independents,—that is the language we have gotten into the habit of using around here in the various discussions that have been carried on, especially when we were discussing the Sharkey Bill and the other Bills, and it has become rather a pattern and I am going to use it—it not only discloses the number of service stations [fol. 1573] either owned, or—what was that word we used yesterday?

Mr. Dixon: Influenced.

The Court: —influenced by the majors, such as the Standard Oil Company, The Texas Company, Shell Oil, Richfield, General Petroleum, and so forth, and the minors which are grouped under one heading, but we are given percentages of gallonage, both total for the area and for the particular branches. Those figures have a distinct bearing upon the question of the amount of restriction, assuming that these practices result in restriction of competition and restriction of the flow of commerce because, as I said yesterday, the amount of such restriction would show the effect of the practices, and the effect of the practices is material, both under the Sherman Act, in arriving at the conclusion whether the restraint is reasonable or unreasonable, and in arriving at the conclusion under the Clayton Act, whether there is a substantial lessening of competition as a result of them or a tendency to create a monopoly in any line of commerce.

In that respect I want to make this further observation, that "the line of commerce" is a broad and not a narrow term and that it should be interpreted not with relation to a particular outlet, but with relation to the entire picture. I try to get away from that trite expression, but, gentlemen, there is no other word that exactly covers it. There is the word, the German word I previously referred to, Gestalt, [fol. 1572] and the word "configuration," but that is more of an anthropological term used by students of various cultures. The word "picture" is so familiar to us and is meaningful and takes into consideration each circumstance that affects the particular situation. So the determination of a monopoly in any line of commerce cannot be made to depend solely upon the fact that certain outlets are closed, because, without indulging in what I always consider an unfair argument, what we used to call in our days of college and our student days a reductio ad absurdum—if we say interfering with any outlet is in itself is a monopoly, then we find ourselves in the absurd position of contending that, assuming you brought out one outlet, that you have a monopoly as to that particular station. For instance, let us take a merchandising company, and let us illustrate it with one of the large stores here. For instance, we might take the May Company, which I happen to know, or, let's not take the May Company but let's take a more universal organization. Let's take Sears, Roebuck & Company or Montgomery Ward. It is common knowledge that they own establishments all over the country. It is also well known that they control the supplies that go into their branches, which they use as outlets. Of course, they own those branches, but let us assume that they did not own the branches and that they had them under one of these various [fol. 1573] forms, a TBA form, and that the branches were operated on that basis. To my mind it would be absurd to contend that under such circumstances the control of that one outlet would constitute a monopoly in the sense of the law. That is why I take the words "in a line of commerce" to mean a line of activity, not a small segment.

For those reasons, also, I believe that this testimony is material in arriving at the conclusion as to the effect of these practices, assuming for the moment that they are shown by the evidence to have existed, and that both the written contract and the practices which attended them, as testified to orally, showed the effect, then the question still remains whether the effect was an unreasonable restraint or a substantial lessening of the competition or the creation of a monopoly in a particular line of commerce. I feel for that reason also that these percentage figures are material as bearing upon that subject.

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, I assume your Honor will not object if we rise during these discussions?

The Court: No, I don't.

Mr. Dixon: And with comments in trying to help the court.

The Court: No. I am not making them to hear myself talk. I am tired of hearing myself talk after twenty-two years, or almost forty years, because I had seventeen years [fol. 1574] of practice of law before that. So my talking has no particular significance except to clarify my own thoughts and to discuss with counsel my reasons. And that has occurred to me should be added to what I said yesterday.

Mr. Dixon: We appreciate your Honor's remarks, because it does aid counsel in the trial of the case in aiding the court or endeavoring to aid the court with reference to cases we feel may bear upon the point your Honor brings up or for discussion at the time of his comments. In connection with that we would like to refer your Honor to the Signode Steel Strapping Co. case, 132 Fed. (2d) 45, and the language of the court on page 54 of that opinion. It is referred to in our brief, your Honor.

The Court: I don't have that out here. Will you get me 132 Fed. (2d) please.

Mr. Dixon: The language referred to that we want to direct your Honor's attention to is on page 54 of the decision, in which the court discusses what constitutes a substantial lessening of competition, and states as follows, and I am now quoting:

> "There is reason in the position that the substantiality of the lessening of competition is to be judged with reference to the effect of the trade practice upon the volume of business controlled by the person en- [fol. 1575] gaging in it, not with reference to the proportion which that business bears to the entire volume of such business throughout the country."

Then the court cites the Oxford Varnish Corporation case as authority for that proposition, a Supreme Court decision.

The Court: On what page is that, again?

Mr. Dixon: Page 54, your Honor. "That this type of comparison, again to repeat our previous position, is wholly irrelevant and immaterial to the issues raised in this case, since the commerce affected here is the commerce of Standard with these dealers.

The Court: Yes, I am familiar with that case. That is Judge Parker's decision, isn't it?

Mr. Dixon: That is right.

The Court: But, you see, here again you are falling into the error I referred to yesterday, and that is the error of wresting a statement from its context. What follows shows what he is talking about, and he is speaking of the percentage related to the national business. We are not talking about that. Here is what he says, and, this again was a Federal Trade case.

Mr. Dixon: Yes, that is a Clayton Act case.

The Court: It is another Federal Trade Commission case, and the court was dealing with administrative procedure, and so the method is entirely different than when passing [fol. 1576] on facts such as determined by us here. This is the language of the entire paragraph:

> "There is reason in the position that the substantiality of the lessening of competition is to be judged with reference to the effect of the trade practice upon the volume of business controlled by the person engaging in it, not with reference to the proportion which that business bears to the entire volume of such business throughout the country. * * * If a dealer by such unfair trade practice as is here involved restrains competition with respect to his customers, he ought not be permitted to continue it because his portion of the national business is small; and we do not think that such was the intention of Congress in the requirement of the Clayton Act that the lessening of competition be substantial."

Then he cites the National Labor Relations Board v. Fainblatt case.

> "We need not decide this point, however, as we are of opinion that, even though the sales of wire and strapping throughout the country be considered, it cannot be said that the findings of the Commission as to substantial lessening of competition are without support in the record."

[fol. 1577] So we have two things there. He has made a statement arguendo which he says he is not deciding. Then he says he does not need to decide it for another reason, that he is merely reviewing the question after a finding by the court.

Now, in the question before me I am not making a review of anything. The question before me is a primary question of whether it is admissible in evidence.

Incidentally, I may say that personally I do not believe that the Labor Relations cases can be applied to anti-trust cases in interpreting the meaning of the commerce clause, because the Supreme Court, in the case which originated here in this district, the Santa Cruz case, held that percentage does not count; that under the National Labor Relations Act, and the ruling is the same under the Wages and Hours Act, the object of the Congress being to reach any person that could be reached through its legislation, and as I think Mr. Justice Douglas said in respect to wages and hours, to reach the substandard wage group, that the fact that the persons reached are engaged in activities which are an infinitesimal part of commerce is not material. So those cases do not apply. And in the Santa Cruz case, those of us who know the history as it appears from the decision in the Ninth Circuit, remember there was a division of the court and that Judge Wilbur was of the view [fol. 1578] that unless a substantial, and he put it in the form of a majority, portion of the business was in interstate commerce, or a majority of the goods manufactured be transported into interstate commerce that the National Labor Relations Act should not apply. Then certiorari was granted by the Supreme Court solely on that basis, because they had not decided to that time what percentage of interstate commerce must be affected by the particular industry before it can be said to come within the Act. The Supreme Court decided it wouldn't make any difference what the percentage was. And they held in the famous Kirschbaum case that the elevator boys or elevator men working in a flat building in which flats were occupied by garment workers, garment manufacturers, who manufactured garments that went into interstate commerce, they held that the elevator operators and janitors were helping to create goods that went into interstate commerce; that is, those that were keeping the place clean, and, to use an old English expression, those who were lifting the workers from the ground floor into the offices above came under the Act.

I have talked longer than I intended to, but so long as you brought this up I wanted to make this observation. I still believe that substantiality, just as unreasonableness, is a matter to be determined with relation to the particular territory with which we are concerned, and if you are charg- [fol. 1579] ing a practice which affects these eight western states, then it is material—I am not saying it is decisive; I am not deciding the matter—it is material to know the relationship that the stations, the number of stations has to the competitive stations; also, the relationship which the products, whether they are petroleum products or accessories, has to the competitive picture in the field, as shown by the sales of others. With that, I will stop. Now, we will go back. There is nothing before the court.

The Clerk: Are the exhibits admitted?

The Court: Yes, I should admit them.

The Clerk: Exhibits V and Y in evidence.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Did you make any further surveys of this character, Mr. Travis?

A. You mean——

Q. I mean after these were completed, did you make any further surveys?

A. No, sir, no surveys after that.

[fol. 1580] Q. I think you said that you were presently assistant manager of the sales equipment division?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of the home office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I want to ask you just one question about another subject.

This is a little out of order, your Honor.

The Court: Well, that is all right.

Mr. Hall: But this witness is from San Francisco and wants to get back.

Q. There are three accessories warehouses from which tires, tubes, batteries, and accessories are distributed in the State of California, aren't there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There is one in Phoenix, is there not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That Phoenix warehouse makes shipments or makes distribution of tires, tubes, batteries, and accessories to a small area in California, does it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that in the vicinity of Needles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the proportion or relation between the quantity supplied to that Needles area by the Phoenix ware-[fol. 1581] house as compared with the quantity of tires, tubes, batteries, and accessories furnished to other points in California by the three California warehouses?

A. Well, it is so small, Mr. Hall, it would be almost impossible to arrive at a percentage. The easiest way to answer it is that it is infinitesimal; it is just practically nothing.

Mr. Hall: That is all. You may take the witness.

The Court: I think we will take a short recess so as not break up the cross-examination of this witness.

(Short recess.)

The Court: Just one minute, gentlemen.

(Brief discussion by court and counsel as to probable duration of defense.)

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. In describing the area that was covered by your San Francisco survey did you omit the mention of certain cities that were covered by that survey?

A. Yes; I did, Mr. Hall.

Q. What were the additional cities that you have not mentioned that were covered by that survey?

A. Berkeley, Piedmont and Albany.

Mr. Hall: You may take the witness.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Dixon:

[fol. 1582] Q. Mr. Travis, I believe you testified you were directed to prepare this survey, but I do not believe I heard you testify—if I did, I have forgotten—who directed you to prepare it?

A. Mr. E. J. McClanahan.

Q. And what is his position with the Standard Oil Company?

A. Vice-president of the sales.

Q. Did he indicate to you that this survey was to be used in this lawsuit at the time you were requested to prepare it?

A. No, sir. I never even heard of this lawsuit until some few months ago.

Q. What conversation did you have with him about the reasons, if any, for preparing this survey?

Mr. Hall: You are speaking of the Los Angeles survey?

Mr. Dixon: Both of them, Exhibits Y and V.

A. Well, particularly the—I will answer both Y and V.

Q. Was there a difference between the reasons for preparing——

A. Well, only this, inferentially——

Q. —Y as against V?

A. No, sir; only inferentially.

Q. Go ahead.

[fol. 1583] A. Which would you like me to answer, then?

Mr. Dixon: Both of them. Do you have my question now?

The Witness: All right. Read me the question.

Mr. Dixon: Would you read it, Mr. Reporter?

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. No, sir.

Q. What reasons did he give you for preparing both of these surveys?

A. The instructions were very brief. He indicated to me that he thought the competitive situation in the Los Angeles Basin was very severe and that he would like for me to go to Los Angeles and draw on my past experience and lay out a pattern for service station coverage; and in laying out that pattern he had in mind only to show the percentage the competitor had, and that would give them that part.

Q. In other words, with reference to the preparation of the Los Angeles Exhibit V, the reason given you by Mr.

McClanahan was that the competitive situation in that area was severe?

A. That is right.

Q. Was it any different than from any other portion of the seven states in which Standard operates?

A. Not to any great extent, although that was not discussed with me, because they spoke of this large volume involved down here.

[fol. 1584] Q. This was, then, a larger market, was it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Competitivewise?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the competition was, in fact, as you put it, more severe in the Los Angeles area than in the other markets in which Standard operates?

A. He didn't state that to me but I drew that conclusion.

Q. Was that the same reason given for the preparation of the San Francisco Exhibit Y?

A. There was less discussion on that. The instructions were simply to lay out a survey similar to the one made in Los Angeles, to cover the San Francisco Bay area.

Q. But he did not give you any additional reasons for it?

A. No, sir.

Q. So you do not know why these two areas happened to be picked out for the purposes of making this so-called competitive survey?

A. No, sir.

Q. And you have never made any survey of any of the same situations, and by that I mean the so-called competitive situation of Standard with relation to the other companies, in any other part of the seven states in which [fol. 1585] Standard does business, have you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In addition to these?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, when did you make those surveys?

A. Well, as I stated in my testimony earlier, any time that we were preparing a proposal for building a new service station in a particular area.

Q. Just a minute. Maybe you did not understand my question. Were the surveys that you made comparable in scope and character to those that are represented by the surveys that you made in Exhibits V and Y?

A. No, sir.

Q. So that these are the only two surveys of that character and scope that you made for the company, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. It is a fact, is it not, Mr. Travis, that Standard sells more gasoline through retail outlets in the western area than any other company?

A. That I am unable to answer because I am not——

Q. Well, do you know?

A. No; I don't know.

Q. All right. Of course, you couldn't answer unless you knew.

[fol. 1586] A. That is right.

Q. Now directing your attention to Exhibit V—do you have it?

A. No; I haven't. I haven't one. Thank you.

Q. I believe you testified that the only actual figures that you had—by "actual" I mean figures taken from actual sales records—of gasoline were those of gasoline sold to Chevron stations and Standard Stations, Inc., is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. So that all of the other figures that you have in these exhibits of sales purported to be made by these other companies mentioned in Exhibits V and Y are based upon assumptions that you have mentioned, is that correct?

A. Now, wait a minute. I don't know. I would like to have that question again.

Mr. Dixon: Read the question, please.

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. That is correct.

Q. And included in those assumptions are the reports that you say you got from the district managers, the district managers of Standard Oil Company, concerning the competition of other companies in the districts in which they were in charge, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

[fol. 1587] Q. Do you have those records, Mr. Travis, those records?

A. No; I haven't.

Q. Well, who has them? Withdraw that. Did you examine those records or go into those records in preparing this survey?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute, wait a minute. That assumes a fact not in evidence. I don't know that he testified to any records handed in.

Mr. Dixon: I think he did, your Honor.

Mr. Hall: With respect to gallonage, I submit that he did not. And my question was——

The Court: Well, he may ask him if he did, whether he testified to it or not, and get the basis of the figures. All right.

Mr. Dixon: Will you read the question, please?

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. Well, the definite records I went into was the ones showing the number of service stations there.

Q. Well, those were written records, were they, or reports?

A. That is right.

Q. Of the service station managers?

A. No; of the branch managers.

[fol. 1588] Q. I mean of the district managers.

A. No; branch managers.

Q. Of the branch managers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You mean by that a branch manager of, say, the Hollywood branch?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you have those reports and are they available?

A. No. I didn't even take them away. They are possibly still in those particular offices, because they are maintained as a running record. It is a record, as I have testified, I believe, that we have always kept those records.

Q. But you examined those records yourself——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. ——did you, in preparing this survey?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And on the basis of those records you determined the number of stations of these companies that are mentioned and listed on Exhibit V?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you make those records available to the Government, Mr. Travis, on which you based this survey?

A. I have it in my possession.

Q. Well, will you produce them in court so that the Government may examine them?

[fol. 1589] A. Well, I don't know.

Q. From which you made this survey represented by Exhibits V and Y?

Mr. Hall: Well, Mr. Dixon, if you will permit me to make a statement with respect to that?

Mr. Dixon: Yes, surely.

Mr. Hall: Those records, I think there are several thousand of them in that white box over on the table, but I want to tell you this, Mr. Dixon, that those records are prepared in this way: They are on sheets of paper that are changing from time to time, instructions to the branch managers being that they be kept up. So that whether we could give you the records as to the exact period when Mr. Travis was working, I doubt it, because the records themselves, under instructions to the branch managers, must be kept up to date, meaning by that, that they are taking the records and adding and subtracting them all along. Is that correct, Mr. Travis?

The Witness: That is correct.

Mr. Hall: Now, the records, such as they are, I believe that most of them are in the box over on the table and they are available to inspection by anybody.

The Court: They are available to counsel. Those are the records which I noticed have not been removed from court since we began. So Mr. Dixon may look at them.

[fol. 1590] Mr. Hall: Oh, certainly, your Honor.

The Court: And then if he desires some more that are available, why, he may ask for them later on. All right.

[fol. 1591] By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Now, Mr. Travis, do you know how many Chevron Dealer stations the Standard Oil Company sells its gasoline to in the seven western states in which Standard does business?

A. No, I don't know the exact record.

Q. Do you know the number of stations that are company operated, that is, operated by the Standard Oil Company in the seven western states?

A. I think approximately a thousand.

Q. I have noticed by referring to Exhibit V that included in your totals of the stations involved in the exhibit as operated by Standard Stations, Inc. is included the figure 291. Does that represent the number of company-operated stations in the Los Angeles Basin that you considered in making this compilation?

A. That is correct.

Q. I notice that in Exhibit V the figure 228 is listed under the heading of Chevron dealers. Does that represent the number of Chevron dealer outlets that you took into consideration in making this summary in the Los Angeles Basin?

A. Standard Oil dealer outlets, you mean?

Q. Yes, Chevron dealer outlets.

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. By the way, that is what you mean, don't you?

[fol. 1592] A. Yes. I didn't catch your statement there of Chevron dealers.

Q. I am sorry.

A. I mean Chevron dealers.

Q. Yes. So that in the Los Angeles Basin, as represented on Exhibit V, the Standard Oil Company has only 228 dealer outlets; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Directing your attention to Exhibit Y, under the summary of the San Francisco Bay Area I notice that under the Chevron dealer heading you list the figure 135. Does that figure of 135 represent the total Chevron dealer outlets in the San Francisco Bay Area?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I notice that you list under Standard Stations, Inc. in your total the figure 163. Does that represent the total number of company-operated stations in the San Francisco Bay Area?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that by totaling the company-operated stations in Exhibits V and Y, you represent in those surveys, or those exhibits and in your survey you are including 454 company-operated outlets; is that correct?

A. If that is the total of the two, that is correct.

Q. And you are including only 363 Chevron or inde-

[fol. 1593]

A. Well, if you have totaled it there. It is the total of those two.

Q. If I am wrong in my computations, don't hesitate to correct me. I am just taking the figures here.

A. Do you wish that I should add it up before I answer?

Q. That is right.

A. The total of the two dealers is 454.

Q. And do you agree with my addition on the total of Chevron outlets?

A. Well, I might check it. 363.

Q. All right. Now, again referring to Exhibit V, will you tell us what percentage of the total volume of available gallonage as represented by your estimates on Exhibit V, in the Los Angeles Basin is purportedly secured by the seven companies mentioned in that exhibit, including the Standard Oil Company, that is, the Chevron dealers and Standard Stations, Inc.

A. You want the total of the percentage of those two,—of the whole?

Q. Yes. Do you understand my question?

The Court: I think he understands it.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Will you give me the percentage, please?

[fol. 1594] A. The total of those two?

Q. No, I don't want the two. I want the total of the seven companies, including the Standard Oil Company, that are listed in the survey of the Los Angeles Basin, Exhibit V.

A. Well, I would have to add them up. I have them right at the right of that sheet.

Q. Would it be——.

A. I would be glad to do it.

Q. —56.4 per cent?

A. I don't know. I will be glad to add it.

The Court: If it is just a matter of computation here, you can compute it, and I will take your word for it, Mr. Dixon.

The Witness: It is on there.

Mr. Dixon: May the record then show that, according to my addition, it represents 56.4 per cent of the total business done in the area.

The Court: That includes the seven companies?

Mr. Dixon: That is right.

The Court: Including Standard?

Mr. Dixon: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: It excludes the minors?

Mr. Dixon: That is right.

The Court: And, in other words, it includes all the major [fol. 1595] companies?

Mr. Dixon: That is right, your Honor.

The Court: If for any reason that gives you any comfort, all right. I can't see it. We are not trying here a case against any other company. There is none pending so far as I am concerned in my court anyway.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Can you state what the percentage of business of the seven companies mentioned in your Exhibit Y, that is, exclusive of the minor and secondary companies, is of the total gallonage available in the San Francisco Bay Area?

A. That would have to be totaled also.

Mr. Dixon: May the record show that, according to my computation, it is 76.06 per cent of the total volume of estimated gallonage in that area.

That is all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. In referring to the severity of competition experienced in the Los Angeles Area, you didn't mean to indicate that competition was not severe in other areas, so far as Standard Oil Company of California is concerned?

Mr. Dixon: I object to that.

The Court: It calls for a conclusion.

Mr. Dixon: He didn't prepare any surveys on it.

[fol. 1596] The Court: He has already stated the difference between the Los Angeles Area and the others because of what he described as, I believe the most remunerative basin, with the large number of automobiles, and so forth. I will sustain the objection to the question.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Are the figures, the gallonage figures, shown in Exhibits V and Y on an annual basis?

A. No; that is a monthly basis.

Mr. Hall: Thank you. That is all.

Recross-examination.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Well, is this a typical month that you took in making this survey, Mr. Travis, or did you just make this survey at the time because you were told to make it at this time?

A. I was not told except what I told you, just to make the survey.

The Court: I think the witness' testimony indicates it was made over a period, that it related to a period beginning in May and concluding in July, I believe, and was taken as a typical month.

Mr. Dixon: Then may I ask the witness this question——

The Court: Isn't that correct?

The Witness: That is correct.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. What figures did you take,—what particular month? Did you take the month of May?

[fol. 1597] A. I don't recall for sure, but I believe we did. I think we averaged those three months in there, but I am not sure.

Q. What three months, Mr. Travis?

A. It would be the—or two months, rather, because we finished in July.

The Court: May and June?

The Witness: May and June. I believe we took those averages. I think it was basically May, and then there was an average taken.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Did you make any comparison of sales data or figures which you used for the Standard Oil Company for those months, the months of May and June, with the sales of the company for the total year?

A. Of the other companies?

Q. Of a comparable period.

A. Of the other companies?

Q. No, of your own company.

A. Oh, yes, we did.

Q. And what was the figure for the total sales for the year preceding the month, the end of the month of June of 1946, when you made this survey?

A. That I haven't available.

Q. Do you have the information available, and can you furnish it to us?

[fol. 1598] A. I presume that our statistical department can. I haven't it available in my particular office, no.

Q. Do you have it available, or was it available to you when you made this survey?

A. That is correct.

Q. Will you submit to us the information that was available to you when you made your survey, giving us the figures requested? Will you do that, Mr. Travis, please?

Mr. Hall: That isn't clear to me, what is wanted. It isn't clear to me what you want him to produce.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Do you understand what I am asking you to produce, Mr. Travis?

A. I think you want either the June or May figures of the company, for that particular period I used.

Q. As I understood your testimony, Mr. Travis, you said that you compared this with a yearly figure of sales of the Standard Oil Company; is that correct?

A. I compared it with these two months that are under discussion.

Q. In other words, if I now understand your testimony, you did not ascertain whether the two months in question on which your figures are based was representative of the average month of sales for the Standard Oil Company in the areas in which you were making your survey? Is that correct?

A. We did use that as weighting it for the entire year, [fol. 1599] yes, sir.

Q. I still don't understand your answer.

A. Maybe I don't understand the question, then.

Q. I am trying to ascertain, Mr. Travis; and if I am not making myself clear, please say so, whether you determined what the sales were of the Standard Oil Company in these two areas for the year, the entire year; that would be from July 1, 1945, to June 30, 1946, in computing these surveys, Exhibit Y and Exhibit V.

A. As I recall, we considered the more normal time, after the close of the war, and so on, would be not in 1945, and we used this as a weighted average from January 1st until the time we concluded this in 1946.

Q. You mean, then, your took a period from January 1, 1946 through June 30, 1946 in computing these figures; is that correct?

A. Not in computing them, but to see this was a representative month.

The Court: Would the term "weighted average" correctly apply to these figures?

The Witness: Yes, sir, it would.

The Court: These are a weighted average for what?

The Witness: January 1946 until the completion of this, in July of 1946, the six months.

The Court: And the average is for a month?

[fol. 1600] The Witness: That is right.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. In other words, this is a weighted average in this area——

A. That is right.

Q. —for your figures, for the months January 1, 1946 to July 1, 1946?

The Court: Let's add the word "monthly,"—a monthly weighted average.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Can you give us your monthly figures, then, for this area?

A. I assume those are available.

Q. Will you produce them, please?

Mr. Hall: I think those are already presented.

Mr. Dixon: Not for this area, Mr. Hall. I am asking for this area.

Mr. Hall: I would like to examine the witness, then when you are done. Are you?

Mr. Dixon: Yes, I am through.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, have you preserved the pencil notes and other memoranda which you used in compiling this survey?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Hall: We will do our best to get what you want, Mr. Dixon. I still don't understand what it is, but maybe the [fol. 1601] witness does and in consultation with him I may be able to get it.

The Court: You may discuss the matter informally. I have not been asked to make any orders, so if these figures are in some other document, then you may call Mr. Dixon's attention to them.

Mr. Hall: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: And if not, why, you can discuss it further.

Mr. Hall: I have responded to so many requests of the government on figures I am a little confused myself.

Mr. Dixon: Mr. Hall has been very co-operative, your Honor.

The Court: I will give you until 2:00 o'clock.

Mr. Hall: We will not be able to do it by then.

The Court: Not to have the figures. You will have until Tuesday to get the figures. I mean I will give you this time now to discuss the matter, to see if he already has them or if you can supply others.

The Witness: Your Honor, I believe I might clarify this.

The Court: You do?

The Witness: Yes.

The Court: Go ahead and try.

The Witness: We actually used the May figures for compiling this, and we only referred to a total figure to see if that was a typical month. The figures used in here was for [fol. 1602] May, 1946.

The Court: In other words, you didn't average the figures by the month. You took that month and then compared it with the early figures in order to see if that average coincides with what you would have arrived at if you just took the yearly figures and divided them by 12.

The Witness: In this case it was six months which we took.

The Court: Or six months.

The Witness: Yes. But we didn't use those figures in the compilations. We used the May figures in the compilations.

Mr. Dixon: I understand that, but what I want to get is the figures in this area for the six months period.

The Court: You mean the total, or for each month?

Mr. Dixon: By months.

Mr. Hall: I am quite uncertain whether these figures have been preserved.

The Court: We are not getting anywhere just now. I think I will leave that to you.

Mr. Hall: I want to state, your Honor, that this is a segment of an entire area. Now, we keep figures at the company of an entire area by states, and counsel has been furnished the state figures. This is a fraction of a state, and it was undoubtedly segregated at one time, but whether [fol. 1603] we have those now I am not at all certain.

Mr. Dixon: I think your Honor understands why I want the information.

The Court: I don't know. I don't attempt to speculate on your reasons, and I don't want you to speculate on mine, because if I choose to give them to you, I give them to you. I think you gentlemen can get together. At any rate, I have not been asked to make any order, and I have not made any.

Mr. Dixon: I would like the record to show that I asked the witness for those figures.

The Court: Yes, that is all right.

Mr. Dixon: And he will endeavor to produce them, as I understand.

Mr. Hall: May I ask this with all timidity and humility: Do you want this witness to remain away from San Francisco so that he may again appear on the stand next week and give those figures?

Mr. Dixon: No. If you will make the figures available to us, it is entirely possible that he will not have to return.

The Court: He is at the end of a telephone, I presume. We will not keep him here longer than necessary, although so far as the weather is concerned I think it is almost as cold here now as it is in San Francisco, so he couldn't [fol. 1604] complain about the difference in weather. These people from San Francisco always seem to complain about the Los Angeles weather.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Dixon: That is all.

The Court: Very well. You may step down. 2:00 o'clock, gentlemen.

(Whereupon at 12:30 o'clock p. m. a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock p.m. of the same day.)

[fol. 1603] Los Angeles, California, Friday, May 21, 1948.

2:00 P. M.

The Court: All right, gentlemen, proceed.

Mr. Hall: Mr. Dern.

JOHN P. DERN, called as a witness by the defendants, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: John P. Dern, D-e-r-n.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. What is your present occupation, Mr. Dern?

A. An analyst with the economics and statistical department of the Standard Oil Company.

Q. What was your college and collegiate training as it may have related to the subject of economics?

A. I studied in economics, accounting, statistics and allied subjects as an undergraduate at Stanford University, graduating in '37; and then I took a two-year graduate course, leading to the master's business administration degree in 1939.

Q. And that was at the Stanford graduate school of Business Administration?

A. That is correct; that is correct.

Q. Will you tell us what your employment was at graduating from the business school?

[fol. 1606] A. I was associated with Standard Oil, beginning in 1939.

Q. What was the nature of your first employment with them?

A. I was associated with the cost analysis division of the comptroller's department. We were engaged in making studies on a cost basis of operations of the company as related to industry and so on.

Q. And that extended to various operations of the company, did it?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did the time come when you joined any division of the marketing department?

A. Yes. I was connected with the organization in cost control division of the marketing department.

Q. What was your title in that department?

A. Analyst.

Q. Analyst?

A. Correct.

Q. What happened then?

A. I left that for my experience in the military during the war.

Q. What was that experience?

A. I was connected with the ordnance department of the Army Air Forces.

[fol. 1607] Q. What rank did you hold?

A. Major of ordnance.

Q. At the end of the war did you rejoin the Standard Oil Company?

A. I did.

Q. And since rejoining the company what have been your duties in general and your position?

A. I am in charge of the special studies section in the economics department. We are concerned with making statistical studies and analytical surveys connected with business in general, and in particular in regards to the petroleum industry.

Q. In the course of your duties have you made studies from time to time of industry trends in relation to gasoline, lubricating oils and tires, tubes, and batteries?

A. Yes, sir; very definitely.

Q. Was that in connection with problems arising in connection with the marketing of the company's products?

A. That is right.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked for identification with defendants' letter next in order, as one exhibit, the pages which I now hand to the clerk and which are entitled at the head of the page "Gasoline Sales."

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit Z marked for identification.

[fol. 1608] Mr. Hall: I have an extra copy of this that I will hand your Honor if you desire it in order to follow the testimony.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked as defendants' next in order schedules which I now hand the clerk, bearing at the top the notation "Automotive Lubricating Oil Sales."

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit AA marked for identification.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked as defendants' exhibit next in order the sheets which I now hand to the clerk and which are entitled at the top "Tire Replacement Shipments."

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit BB for identification.

Mr. Hall: I now ask that there be marked for identification as defendants' exhibit next in order the sheets which I hand to the clerk and which bear at the top the notation "Replacement Battery Sales."

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit CC marked for identification.

Mr. Hall: I now ask that there be marked for identification as defendants' exhibit next in order the sheet which I hand to the clerk bearing in the upper right-hand corner the word "Gasoline."

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit DD marked for identification.

[fol. 1609] Mr. Dixon: What is the heading?

The Clerk: "Gasoline."

Mr. Dixon: Gasoline?

The Clerk: "Gasoline" in the upper right corner.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked as defendants' exhibit next in order a sheet which I hand to the clerk which bears in the upper right-hand corner the words "Auto Lubricating Oils."

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit EE marked for identification.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked for identification as defendants' exhibit next in order the sheet which I hand to the clerk bearing in the upper right-hand corner the word "Tires."

The Clerk: Defendants' — FF marked for identification.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked for identification as defendants' exhibit next in order the sheet which I hand to the clerk bearing in the upper right-hand corner the word "Batteries."

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit GG marked for identification.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked for identification as defendants' exhibit next in order the sheet which I hand to the clerk bearing at the top of the sheet the words "Retail Sales by Standard's Dealers as Per Cents of Estimated [fol. 1610] State Totals (Seven Western States)."

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit HH marked for identification.

[fol. 1611] Q. Have you prepared certain compilations of figures and certain graphs, Mr. Dern, for the purpose of exhibiting an opinion as to whether Standard's retail sales through dealers have increased or decreased over a period of years in proportion to the industry?

A. Yes, I have.

Mr. Dixon: I am sorry, I didn't get that question. Will you read the question and the answer, please?

(The question and answer were read.)

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, I show you, Mr. Dern, a series of schedules which have been marked Defendants' Exhibit Z, for identification, and ask you if those schedules were prepared in connection with the research to which you have referred, under your direction?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, I notice, taking the first sheet of Exhibit Z, for identification, that after the formal heading appears the word "California." Is this top sheet supposed to depict the California situation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, directing your attention to the column, the vertical column, immediately on the right under the heading of "State Total," I will ask you what those figures are.

A. The figures listed in the column marked "State Total" refer to figures developed from the California State [fol. 1612] Board of Equalization taxable motor fuel sales figures.

Q. Well, those are the taxable motor fuel sales figures, are they not?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, I will ask you to bear this in mind in my questions to you relative to these schedules, for the purpose of simplification, that where I refer to an industry total I am going in each case to refer to what is shown under the column "State Total." Will you bear that in mind?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Now, those figures you have referred to are published, are they not, by the State Board of Equalization of California, showing the gallonage upon which the State gasoline tax is imposed?

A. That is right, in the case of California.

Q. Now, coming to the third vertical column on this top sheet of Defendants' Exhibit Z, for identification, the figure for 1931 being 65,149, I will ask you what is shown in that column.

A. Those figures are measured in thousands of gallons and refer to sales by Standard Stations, Inc.

Q. Now, what is shown in the column, the vertical column, immediately to the right of the column you have just referred to, under the heading of "Dealers"?

A. That is exactly the same figure, although it refers to [fol. 1613] dealer sales as opposed to Standard Stations.

Q. Now we come to a column under the heading "Percent of Total," and from the setup of this sheet, I take it the 4.6 per cent is the proportion which 65,149 bears to 1,401,545; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that the figure 5.1 per cent is the per cent which 71,251 bears to 1,401,545?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, take the second sheet of Defendants' Exhibit Z, for identification, which refers to the State of Oregon. I will ask you where the industry figures shown under the heading "State Total" were taken that are shown on that sheet.

A. These figures are similar to the California figures, but, as we have noted in the source at the bottom, are prepared by the Secretary of State, of Oregon State.

Q. And they represent the total gallonage of the state upon which a gasoline tax was paid; is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. The arrangement of this sheet is the same as the arrangement of the California sheet, is it?

A. That is true.

Q. Now, coming to the third sheet, which bears the heading, "Washington," will you tell us where the industry [fol. 1614] figures shown under the heading "State Total" are derived from on that sheet?

A. The source for those figures is the Department of Licenses, Liquid Fuel Tax Division, State of Washington.

Q. And those are published gasoline figures showing the total gasoline upon which a tax was paid in that state for the years shown; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, correct.

Q. And the pattern followed by that sheet with respect to Washington is the same pattern followed by the other sheets?

A. They are identical.

Q. I call your attention to the sheet that is headed, "Arizona," and ask you where the figures shown in the column headed, "State Total," the industry figures shown in the State Total on that sheet, are derived from.

A. These are published by the Motor Vehicle Division, Arizona State Highway Department.

Q. And there, again, they are the total gallonage figures upon which the tax is paid in that state annually?

A. That is right.

Q. I turn to the sheet headed "Nevada," and ask you where the figures shown under the heading "State Total" are derived from, as shown on that sheet?

A. The Nevada Tax Commission.

[fol. 1615] Q. And there, again, those figures represent the total taxable gallonage for that state for the years shown?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the sheet headed "Idaho" and ask you where the industry figures under the heading "State Total" are derived from, as shown in that column on that page.

A. Our source for these figures was the Pacific Coast Petroleum Industries Committee of the API, American Petroleum Institute, in Los Angeles. They, in turn, get the figures from the tax authority in the State of Idaho. It was merely a matter of convenience; that they were more readily accessible to us.

Q. Those figures, as in the case of the other states, represent the total taxable gallonage for that state for the years shown?

A. That is right.

Q. I turn to the sheet headed "Utah," and ask you where the figures for the industry totals on that sheet under the heading "State Total" were obtained from.

A. These come from the State Tax Commission of Utah.

Q. There, again, those figures represent the total taxable gallonage for the particular years shown on that sheet?

A. Yes, sir?

[fol. 1616] Q. Now I turn to the last sheet, which is headed "Seven Western States," and ask you if that sheet is totalization of the preceding sheets in this exhibit.

A. Yes. You can say that, in fact, the first three columns were totals of the preceding sheets. The last two columns are calculations from those derived totals.

Q. And by the last two columns you are referring to the headings "Percent of Total"?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, I notice on this sheet you have figures for the year 1947 shown, whereas figures were not shown for 1947 on the earlier sheets. Is that because you have available at the present time only the total figures for 1947 and not the segregation by states?

A. No, that was derived from the state total but they were figures that we were able to get after the original tables were prepared.

Q. Now, take, for example, what I call the industry figures shown under the heading "State Total," as they appear on the California sheet, which is a part of Defendants' Exhibit Z, for identification. It is a fact, is it not, that those state totals include gallonage which does not pass through retail outlets?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The gallonage included in those state totals which [fol. 1617] does not pass through retail outlets would be gasoline that went to industrial plants or commercial establishments, or to agriculture or to something of that kind?

A. Provided that is taxable, yes.

Q. Based upon your experience as an analyst in dealing with figures of this character, can you say that the volume of total taxable gasoline, as shown by the official figures of the state, rises and falls in the same proportion as the total of the retail sales of gasoline?

A. That is our opinion, yes.

Q. Now, I direct your attention to Defendants' Exhibit

DD, for identification, and ask you if the graphs shown on that sheet are an attempt to depict in graphic form the percentages shown on the sheets which are a part of Defendants' Exhibit Z, for identification?

A. Yes, the figures that were plotted on these graphs came from the Exhibit Z, that we were just looking at.

Q. Now, the lines that run in a more or less horizontal direction, with ups and downs on these graphs, as shown on Defendants' Exhibit DD, for identification, are those the dealer sales of Standard Oil Company in the particular state indicated?

A. Let us say that it is a relationship between those sales and the industrial total.

Q. And the industrial total. So that, to be perfectly clear [fol. 1615] now, take California, for example. By the way, what do you call in your technical parlance these horizontal lines that we have spoken of? Is there any particular name?

A. No, no particular name. Let's call that the trend line.

Q. The trend line, all right. Now, I call your attention on Defendants' Exhibit DD, for identification, to the trend line for California, which seems to start at the figure 5. That doesn't mean that Standard's dealer sales were 5 per cent of the total dealer sales, does it?

A. Oh, no, very definitely not.

Q. In other words, they were 5 per cent of what you call the industry total?

A. That is the ratio between those two, yes.

Q. Yes. But I think you have said that the industry total rises and falls in proportion with the retail sales total; is that correct?

A. That is our opinion, yes, sir.

Q. On Exhibit DD, for identification, the graph entitled "Seven Western States" is a graphic portrayal of what is shown in the last sheet of Exhibit Z, for identification; is that correct?

A. That is right. Each sheet has a square segment on the chart, the graph.

[fol. 1616] Q. Yes. Now, I notice that in connection with the graph on this Exhibit DD, for identification, there has been a prolongation of the trend line to the right of the margin of the [illegible]. Was that an addition made after this graph was completed, in order to show the 1947 picture?

A. Yes, sir. That is the same figure we were referring to on the last page.

Q. On the last page of Exhibit Z, for identification?

A. Correct.

Q. Now, I invite your attention to Defendants' Exhibit AA, for identification, and ask you if these sheets were prepared under your direction, as a part of this research that we have talked about?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, directing your attention to the columns on the sheets on this page which are headed "A. P. I. Total Taxable Gallons" and which I will, in conformity with my practice with respect to the gasoline tabulations, refer to as Industrial totals. I will ask you what those figures are derived from, as they are shown in all of the sheets of this particular Exhibit AA, for identification.

A. These figures are prepared by the American Petroleum Institute's Economics Division. They are published in the A.P.I. Tax Economic Bulletin.

Q. Are they figures which are published to and are com-
[fol. 1620] monly relied upon by the oil industry?

A. Yes, definitely so.

Q. Is the pattern of these sheets, Defendants' Exhibit AA, for identification, the same pattern followed with respect to Defendants' Exhibit Z, for identification?

A. Yes, sir, the same five columns.

Q. I notice on the last page of this Exhibit AA, for identification, that the figures have been added in pen and ink under the heading "Seven Western States" for the year 1947?

A. That is true, with the exception of the column marked "A. P. I. Total Taxable Gallons." That figure is not yet available. It has not yet been published by the A. P. I. and probably will not be until February of next year.

[fol. 1621] Q. Now, I invite your attention to the page showing the graphs which has been marked Defendants' EE for identification and ask you if that was prepared under your direction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is the purpose of that to illustrate in graphic form the figures which are shown in Defendants' Exhibit AA for identification?

A. Exactly the same as on the gasoline figures; yes, sir.

Q. Except that here, because of your lack of a figure for the industry total, you were not able to extend the——

A. Trend line.

Q. ——the trend line for the year 1947, is that correct?

A. That is right; yes, sir.

Q. I now invite your attention to Defendants' Exhibit BB for identification and ask you if the sheets comprising that exhibit were prepared under your direction as a part of this survey?

A. Yes, sir; they were.

Q. From what source did you obtain the figures which I have called the industry figures under the heading State Total as shown in these sheets?

A. The Rubber Manufacturers' Association, the national [fol. 1622] trade organization, prepares a figure known as the tire replacement shipments. These figures represent geographically the entire United States. We have taken those figures and attempted to divide them onto a state basis on the basis of the number of motor vehicle registrations in the given state that we have shown on the sheets here in relation to the United States total. It is an artificial figure but we are attempting to divide a United States figure on some reasonable basis to get it onto a state total.

Q. Is that an accepted practice in these economic studies?

A. We do it in our work all the time; yes, sir.

Q. Are those figures which are published by the Manufacturers' Association published to and commonly relied upon by the rubber industry?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that pattern followed by these sheets which comprise Defendants' Exhibit BB for identification the same pattern which was followed in Defendants' Exhibit Z for identification?

A. Yes; they are.

Q. On the last sheet comprising this Exhibit BB for identification I see that there have been certain figures added in pen and ink for the year 1947. Were they added after the preparation of this sheet because they were not [fol. 1623] available at the time the sheet was originally prepared?

A. Yes, sir; that is right.

Q. Now, I show you the series of graphs shown on the sheet which has been marked Defendants' Exhibit FF for identification and ask you whether those were prepared by you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are they intended to depict in graphic form the figures which are shown in Defendants' Exhibit BE for identification?

A. That is right.

Q. And here I notice that on Defendants' FF for identification the trend line under the graph entitled Seven Western States has been projected beyond the margin. Was that for the purpose of showing the trend during the year 1947?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I next invite your attention, Mr. Dern, to the sheets which have been marked Defendants' CC for identification and ask you whether those were prepared under your direction as a part of this research which you say you undertook?

A. Yes, sir; they were.

Q. From what source or sources were the industry figures in this sheet which appear under the columns entitled Total [fol. 1624] State derived?

A. The situation here is quite similar to the one we just discussed in relation to tires. We had a United States total figure which was divided on the basis of motor vehicle registrations in the same ratios as those that we were just talking about on tires. The source of the United States figures, as marked here, is the Association of American Battery Manufacturers from the period from 1933 to 1938. In the period subsequent to 1938, beginning in 1939 and through 1946 we have used Dun & Bradstreet's published data.

Q. Did you take the national totals as published by American Battery Manufacturers and Dun & Bradstreets and divide them by motor vehicle registrations by state to obtain the state figure?

A. We worked a ratio in that fashion; yes, sir.

Q. I notice from a notation on this Exhibit CC for identification that the Association of American Battery Manufacturers furnished your with your base figure for the years 1933 to 1938 and that the Dun & Bradstreet's figures were the base figures for the period 1939 to 1946. My question to you now is this: Is it true that those figures published during one period by the American Battery Manufacturers and during the second period by Dun & Bradstreet's Incorporated are figures which were published to and generally [fol. 1625] relied upon by the battery industry?

A. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Q. Does the pattern of this Exhibit CC in general follow the scheme and the pattern followed in Defendants' Exhibit Z for identification?

A. That is right; the same pattern.

Q. Now I show you the series of graphs which have been marked Defendants' GG for identification and ask you if you prepared that sheet?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was that sheet intended to depict in graphic form the figures that appear upon the sheets which are a part of CC for identification?

A. That is right; yes, sir.

Q. I notice that on Exhibit GG for identification the trend line in the graph under the heading Seven Western States has been prolonged beyond the margin of the graph. Was that for the purpose of showing the 1947 figures?

A. Yes, sir; the same as gasoline and tires.

Q. And those 1947 figures came in after the original data was assembled, did they?

A. That is right. Those are also Dun & Bradstreet's source.

Q. And those 1947 figures appear upon the last sheet of Defendants' CC for identification?

[fol. 1626] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now I show you sheet of graphs which has been marked Defendants' HH for identification and ask you if you prepared those graphs?

A. I did.

Q. That is intended simply to be a summary sheet, is it not?

A. Yes, sir. This is a recapitulation of the four exhibits you have shown me marked DD, EE, FF, and GG.

Q. In fact the graphs shown on Exhibit HH for identification are the same graphs which are shown under the heading Seven Western States on Exhibits DD, EE, FF, and GG?

A. Yes; it is the same panel reproduced, as appears in the upper left hand corner.

Q. Yesterday Mr. Daley, a representative of the FBI, when he was on the stand called attention to an increase in sales by Standard dealers or through Standard dealers between 1936 and 1946. Do you recall that testimony? I think he said the increase was 58.8 per cent over that period. Do you recall that testimony?

A. That was in relation to Standard dealers' gasoline sales, am I correct?

Q. Yes; gasoline I am talking about.

A. That is right.

Q. I am correct, am I, in my recollection of that figure? [fol. 1627] A. That is right.

Q. 58.8 per cent?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Taking these industry totals you have referred to, what was the increase in the industry figures of the gasoline, and by that I mean the totals in the seven western states between 1936 and 1946?

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, I assume that Government's objection No. 1 to this whole line of testimony goes straight through?

The Court: That is right.

The Witness: May I ask you again was the period 1936 to 1946?

Mr. Hall: I think I am right about that. Yes.

A. According to the figures that we have just been looking at for the seven western states as a whole our industry figure would show an increase of 64.7 per cent.

Q. It is my recollection that Mr. Daley testified that there was an increase in gasoline sales through Standard stations during the period 1936 to 1947 in the seven western states of 89.4 per cent. Does that conform to your understanding of his testimony?

A. Yes, sir; that is right.

Q. Now, what, during that period 1936 to 1947, was the increase in the industry totals for the seven western states [fol. 1628] on gasoline?

A. 87 per cent; that is 87 even.

Q. It is also my recollection that Mr. Daley in his testimony testified yesterday that between 1936 and 1946 there was an increase in lubricating oil sold through Standard's dealers amounting to 62.9 per cent. Is that correct?

A. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Q. Now, taking the same period, 1936 to 1946, what was the increase in the volume of the industry total of lubricating oil for the seven western states sold?

A. Yes. The API figures for 1936 to 1946 show an increase of 194.8 per cent.

Q. Now, you understand that in my previous questions to you with respect to Mr. Daley's testimony and with respect to gasoline and lubricating oil I have been referring to gallonage volumes or quantity figures?

A. Yes, sir; that is right.

Q. And you have been answering in that vein, have you?

A. That is right; yes, sir.

Q. It is my recollection that Mr. Daley also testified with respect to batteries for the seven western states and that he said that from 1946 to 1947 the dollar volume of Standard's sales of batteries increased 90 per cent. Am I correct in that?

[fol. 1629] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, let us take the unit volume of batteries with respect to 1946 and to 1947, the increase. Can you tell us what increase there was in the units sold through Standard dealers in the seven western states from 1946 to 1947?

A. Using the same figures that he did yesterday, on a unit basis only, that would be an increase of 46.5 per cent.

Q. Now, taking the same period, the increase between 1946 and 1947, and taking the seven western states, what was the increase in the units considering the industry total?

A. Our figures show 41.8 per cent increase.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked as Defendants' Exhibit next in order for identification only, as one exhibit, the three sheets which are headed by the caption COMPANIES MARKETING OVER 1,000,000 TAXABLE GALLONS OF GASOLINE IN SEVEN WESTERN STATES, 1946.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit II for identification.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I show you, Mr. Dern, the sheet which has been marked Defendants' Exhibit II for identification and ask you if that sheet was prepared under your direction?

A. Yes, sir; it was.

Q. I notice that it was captioned COMPANIES MAR-
[fol. 1630] KETING OVER 1,000,000 TAXABLE GALLONS OF GASOLINE IN SEVEN WESTERN STATES, 1946. Will you tell me how you selected the companies which are shown in the first vertical column on the left?

A. This tabulation was made from the same basic state taxable sales figures as published by each of the seven western state governments, which represents by companies the amount of gasoline of a taxable nature which was sold.

Q. You selected only companies which sold more than a million gallons in a year, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. Were there numerous other companies that sold less amounts shown in the tax records?

A. Very definitely; yes.

Q. And the check marks under the vertical columns entitled CALIFORNIA, WASHINGTON, OREGON, ARIZONA, NEVADA, IDAHO, UTAH indicate that the company opposite which the check appears was paying a tax in the state indicated?

A. That is right; it appears on those state reports.

Mr. Hall: Defendants now offer into evidence Exhibits Z, AA, BB, CC, DD, EE, FF, GG, HH, and II heretofore marked for identification.

Mr. Dixon: Before your Honor rules on that, the Government objects on the grounds that they are irrelevant and immaterial, and as to Government's objection No. 1, would [fol. 1631] like to take the witness on voir dire on some of these exhibits.

The Court: As to which part of your motion? Not on the irrelevancy?

Mr. Dixon: Well, Exhibit Z specifically.

The Court: Let me see which is Z. I will not allow examination at the present time. I think as to these figures cross-examination is sufficient to bring out all the Government may desire, and the witness has sufficiently testified as to the sources of the information and the manner in which the computations were made, and that is sufficient for the direct examination. The objection is overruled.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibits Z, AA through II, inclusive, are admitted into evidence.

Mr. Hall: Take the witness.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Directing your attention to Exhibit Z, I will ask you to refer to the portion thereof which relates to purported compilation showing the retail sales of taxable motor fuel gasoline in the State of Oregon for the years 1931 through 1946, inclusive. I direct your attention to the figure under the heading STATE TOTAL FOR THE YEAR 1946 the amount of 376,288,000 gallons, and ask you whether that figure includes only gallonage of gasoline sold and taxed [fol. 1632] at retail outlets in the State of Oregon?

A. Did I hear in the first part of your question reference to the state total retail gallonage?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir; it does not. That——

Q. Will you kindly explain to the court, then, what the figure 376,288 that we have just referred to actually represents in gallonage?

A. That represents the total taxable gasoline sales as made by all companies reporting to the state for the period shown. It includes the tax paid on retail gallonage, as well as the tax paid on certain commercial, agricultural and industrial sales of a taxable nature.

Q. It includes also distillates, does it not, of gasoline?

A. Yes.

Q. Upon which tax is paid?

A. There is a small amount there; yes.

Q. It also includes butane on which tax is paid, does it not?

A. I am not exactly certain without reference to my notes on the specific state. It is a minor amount, if it is included.

Q. Have you made any survey or study of the amount of gasoline that is included as distillate and butane in these [fol. 1633] figures?

A. We have attempted to make estimates on prior occasions; yes, sir.

Q. All right. Have you made any study of the amount of such distillate and butane, for example, that would be sold in the State of Oregon and is taxable?

A. We have made estimates; yes.

Q. Well, I am asking you, Mr. Dern, whether you made a study to determine that, and then we will talk about an estimate afterwards. Did you ever make any study to determine what the actual amount of distillate and butane was in the State of Oregon?

A. Well, let us say, not specifically a study, but in conjunction with other work we have looked at that.

Q. What about the inclusion of propane in these figures for the year 1946 in the State of Oregon?

A. That is similar to butane, LPG, liquified petroleum gas.

Q. Did you make any study to determine how much of the fuel taxed in the State of Oregon was sold in the State of Oregon during, say, the year 1946, or in any of these other years that are referred to in Exhibit Z?

A. I think the same answer would apply as in regards to butane.

Q. And is diesel fuel included also in those figures, taxable gallonage to the State of Oregon?

[fol. 1634]

A. No, sir; they are not.

Q. Is there any fuel oil included in the figures of state totals for the State of Oregon for the year 1946 that you have referred to?

A. No year.

Q. For no year. That is, that is diesel fuel oil on which a state tax is paid?

A. This refers to tax on gasoline or highway use of the gasoline bracket, let us say. Diesel fuel is not included and fuel oil is not included.

Q. So that it is possible, then, that these other types of fuel that I have mentioned other than gasoline, namely, distillate butane and propane, are included in the figures mentioned for 1946?

[fol. 1635]

A. Yes, that is possible.

Q. Now, with reference to the figure for 1940 on Exhibit Z for the State of Oregon, do you know whether in the State of Oregon was included the taxable gallonage of distillate butane and propane sold in the State of Oregon?

A. I cannot say categorically. I could investigate and ascertain.

Q. What about diesel and fuel oil gallonage for the year 1940 as contained in these figures for the State of Oregon in Exhibit Z?

A. What is your question in relation to diesel and fuel oil? Are they included?

Q. Yes.

A. No, they are not.

Q. You say they are not included in this exhibit?

A. That is right.

Q. That is for the year 1940. Now, you say you did make a study to determine what amounts of distillate butane and propane were sold in the State of Oregon?

A. Well, let's put it this way. We are familiar with our own figures. We have no reason to believe that the industry [fol. 1636] as a whole differs from ours.

Q. In other words, you judge the rest of the industry, what they sell, by your own figures?

A. For lack of anything better, yes.

Q. In other words, you don't know what they sell, but you assume they sell the same amount of those items as Standard sells. Is that your answer?

A. That is our opinion.

Q. And you base these compilations on that information. I mean, these other documents that you have prepared and which have been offered in evidence, on that assumption?

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute. I would like to have that question read.

(The question was read.)

The Witness: That isn't very clear to me.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Well, I will withdraw the question, then, Mr. Dern. It is a fact, then, that on the items I have mentioned, you do assume in some of your compilations that the figures of the sales of other companies selling the same products are the same as those of Standard's; is that correct?

A. In reference to these small minor products you are referring to, butane, propane, and so on.

Q. That is right. Did you answer the question?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

[fol. 1637] Q. And does that mean these state figures, for instance, take the State of Oregon, where you have represented the sales of Standard Stations, Inc. are 3.5 per cent of the total sales, and the sales of dealers are 9 per cent of the total sales?

Mr. Hall: Just a moment. I would like to have that question read.

(The question was read.)

Mr. Hall: Now, that is just contrary to the evidence.

Mr. Dixon: Just a moment.

Mr. Hall: May I present my objection, sir, before you argue?

Mr. Dixon: Certainly. Proceed.

Mr. Hall: I am objecting to that on the ground that assumes a fact exactly contrary to what the witness has stated. These were not prepared to show per cent of available. They were prepared to show a trend, and in his question counsel is assuming that the witness has said what he calls the industry total is a retail sales total.

The Court: That is permissible as a part of the cross-examination. He doesn't have to accept the witness' explanation. He may interpret the figures differently and the witness, realizing the import of the question, can give his own interpretation or accept it. I will overrule the objection.

[fol. 1638] The Witness: May I have the question again, please?

Mr. Dixon: Certainly. Will you read it, please?

(The question was read.)

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. I am referring there, Mr. Dorn, to Exhibit Z.

A. I am with you there on that, yes. No, very definitely, what we are trying to show here is a trend through the period we have depicted. We are not attempting to magnify any one individual year, but we want to get the overall picture through the year, to show the trend in relationship to a state total or an industry total figure.

Q. Well, if there was an error in any one of the years which you have submitted these figures for, would that affect your trend, as you call it, for that state?

A. Yes, sir, it would affect the figure that was plotted on the graphs, that is true.

Q. If you had included in the figures for, say, the year 1940 products other than those that were sold at the retail outlets in your state total that would throw off your percentage of the total sales of Standard to the total sales of Standard Stations, Inc. and the Chevron or dealer outlets for that year, wouldn't it?

A. I am afraid I haven't made myself clear as to just what is included in that industry figure.

Q. Well, I don't want to go over that again. I think [fol. 1639] you have answered what was in it.

The Court: If he cannot answer the question in the form in which it was put, I will ask counsel to reframe it.

Mr. Dixon: Do you understand my question?

The Court: If you do, you may answer it, and if you want to give any explanation, you may give it.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Do you understand my question, Mr. Dern?

A. I would like to have it reread.

Q. Will you read the question, please?

(The question was read.)

Q. Is my question clear, Mr. Dern?

A. It is rather involved.

Q. Well, statistics is rather involved, too, isn't it, at times?

A. I want to be sure that we are not referring to a relationship, on the one hand, of Standard dealer sales and total dealer sales for the State of Oregon on the other side. We are not making that comparison. We are comparing the total dealer sales and a total figure for the industry, which includes dealer sales. It also includes other taxable sales.

The Court: What other sales do you include other than dealer sales? You mean made by the company direct to individual companies, or what?

[fol. 1640] The Witness: That is possible. For example, a sale made to agricultural outlets, farmers, or industrial sales, which are taxable. The company must report those as a taxable sale.

The Court: I see.

The Witness: But they also include the retail sales.

The Court: I see. In other words, you include the direct sales which are not through dealers?

The Witness: That is right.

The Court: I see. I think that introduces a new element.

Mr. Dixon: That is right, your Honor. I think perhaps your Honor's question would have been much better than counsel's, to bring out the point.

The Court: Well, I will give you credit for it. You have been on the bench, too. I don't know whether you were on a trial bench. But all I am interested in is to try to clarify the situation, if I can help.

Mr. Dixon: I think it has helped very much, your Honor. I think that is all.

The Court: Any redirect, Mr. Hall?

Mr. Hall: Yes.

Mr. Dixon: Your Honor——

Mr. Hall: I want to make this perfectly clear. I thought [fol. 1641] I had on direct examination.

The Court: Just a moment. I think Mr. Dixon was going to say something. He started to say something.

Mr. Hall: I am sorry.

The Court: He started to say something, but you had your back turned.

Mr. Hall: I am sorry. I thought he was done.

The Court: That is permissible. I might say I noticed a picture in the newspaper the other day which showed that you can turn your back even on the Emperor of Japan at the present time, where you couldn't formerly and you had to retreat facing him. But you are not a good sounding board, and he spoke just as you were passing in front of him.

Mr. Dixon: I wanted to offer in evidence at this time a certain report, but perhaps it is out of order and we can put it in as a part of the government's case in rebuttal.

The Court: Is it in connection with what this witness has brought out?

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

The Court: Then I think you can do it now. Does counsel know what you are referring to?

Mr. Dixon: I will show it to him. We ask that the report for the State of Oregon showing the gallonage of gasoline sold in that state for the years 1930, 1935, 1940, through 1946, inclusive, be marked for identification.

[fol. 1642] The Clerk: Government's Exhibit 104, marked for identification.

Mr. Hall: Shall I proceed with my examination?

Mr. Dixon: I just want to offer that in evidence.

Mr. Hall: Oh, you want to offer it in evidence?

Mr. Dixon: Yes.

The Court: Any objection?

Mr. Hall: No objection.

The Court: It may be received.

The Clerk: 104 in evidence.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, Mr. Dern, referring to this column "State total" in Exhibit Z, it is a fact, is it not, that the figures in that state total include quantities that do not pass through service stations at all?

A. Very definitely, yes, sir.

Q. But it is also true, is it not, that the quantities shown in that column rise and fall in the same proportion as total quantities passing through dealer stations?

A. That is our opinion, yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

The Court. All right. Unless your next witness is a short witness, I will take a recess.

Mr. Hall: I would be very grateful, your Honor.

The Court: We will take a short recess now.

(Short recess.)

[fol. 1643] Mr. Mathews: Mr. Mortensen.

HJALMAR MORTENSEN, called as a witness by the defendants, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Hjalmar, H-j-a-l-m-a-r Mortensen, M-o-r-t-e-n-s-e-n.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. By whom are you employed, Mr. Mortensen?

A. Standard Oil Company of California.

Q. What position do you occupy with that company?

A. Dealer merchandiser.

Q. What is the locality of your work? What area do you cover?

A. I cover three different areas: Reno, Carson City, Susanville territories.

Q. What is the nature of your duties as a dealer merchandiser?

A. Primarily to train service station personnel to efficiently serve the public.

Q. And in doing that what steps do you take?

A. Well, when I visit a dealer I usually get into a pair of coveralls or suntans, get right in and work with the dealers. First, by making an analysis of the station as to the physical [fol. 1644] appearance of the station; and secondly, their operation in handling the customers coming into their place of business.

Q. Mr. Mortensen, I show you Government's Exhibit No. 87. Will you look at this? You will note there is a Standard Oil Chevron service station referred to in that file.

A. Yes.

Q. Are you familiar with that station?

A. Yes; I am.

Q. By whom was this station operated during the year 1946?

A. Orville Musser.

Q. Did you ever visit the station while Mr. Musser was operating it?

A. Yes.

Q. During what periods of time?

A. Usually about every four weeks I would call at his station.

Q. When would you say that commenced?

A. A little over two years ago.

Q. A little over two years ago?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, that would make it about May or June of '45-'46?

[fol. 1645] A. In about May of '46; yes.

Q. What did you do when you visited his station?

A. Well, as I previously said, I made an analysis of the station. I got into some work clothes and worked with Mr. Musser, and I found that he was not operating as efficiently as he could for his best interests. So I made several suggestions as to how he could improve his position with the customers calling at his station, by working with him on the pump block, suggesting correct procedures in the lubrication room to correctly lubricate the cars that came in for service, and also suggested a follow-up system whereby he could have a record of the cars he had lubri-cated and send out follow-up notices for return work of lubrication jobs, bookkeeping systems, and so forth.

Q. What condition did you find at his station with respect to cleanliness?

A. Not very good. It was quite dirty, in fact, generally.

Q. Did you make any suggestions about that?

A. Yes. As a matter of fact I helped him clean the place up. The lube floor was oily, it was cluttered up with empty oil cans, oily rags. The station proper was very untidy, the windows were dirty, stock was not placed on the shelves, and just helter-skelter like. The rest rooms were far from clean.

[fol. 1646] Q. Did you as you continued to visit find that there was improvement?

A. Very little. Periodically, he would—well, he would say, "Yes; I am going to really get after this now," but on my next visit I found practically the same condition to exist.

Q. Did you find that Mr. Musser spent a great deal of time in his station?

A. Not as much time as I felt he should for proper operation of the station.

Q. What did he do with it when he was not there?

A. Well, he had an extra man hired, most of the time quite an old gentleman, to take care of the business when he was not there.

Q. Was the station properly run when he was not there?

A. No.

Q. Did you as you continued your visits to Mr. Musser's station come to any conclusion as to his ability to operate a service station?

A. Yes; I did. For the simple reason, after I had worked with him for, oh, over a year or better than that, a year and a half, I couldn't help but conclude that my efforts had practically been in vain as far as suggesting proper operation, keeping his station clean, and so forth.

Q. What did you do when you came to this conclusion?

[fol. 1647] A. Suggested or recommended to Mr. Hodge, whom I am accountable to when I work in his district, that unless there was a decided improvement soon that we would secure a new operator for the station.

Q. What was the outcome of that recommendation, Mr. Mortensen?

A. Mr. Hodge investigated for himself, and finally the outcome was that we did secure a new operator for the station.

Q. Did you ever object to his having accessories other than those purchased from the Standard Oil Company?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever discuss accessories with him on your visits to his station?

A. Yes; I discussed accessories with him.

Q. What did you say to him?

A. Well, for instance, from time to time I would find several competitive items he had in his station and I would ask——

Mr. Dixon: May I ask that we have specified the time, your Honor? I object on the ground no foundation laid.

The Court: Well, it is all right to give them a general designation without stating what they were.

The Witness: What items?

The Court: Yes.

[fol. 1648] The Witness: Well, there was items of, for instance, auto polishes and flashlights, flashlight cells, and auto fuses. Those were just some of the things that I call to mind right away.

The Court: All right. Now, go ahead and tell us what you did. They were not of a brand that you handled?

The Witness: That is right.

The Court: Do you remember what brand they were?

The Witness: No; I don't.

The Court: You said they were not your goods?

The Witness: Yes; that is right.

The Court: What did you tell him?

The Witness: I pointed out to him that it would be to his advantage to handle our merchandise, for the simple reason that customers coming into Chevron stations were accustomed, as a rule, to find merchandise in the stations that we handled; and also, that the merchandise that we sold to the dealers, the customers coming into his station, trading, could put them on their credit card, whereon the competitive items he could not.

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. Did you suggest anything to him regarding the profit that might accrue to him from handling your line?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you suggest in that respect?

[fol. 1649] A. I pointed out the quality of our product was nearly in every respect superior to competitive products that I have just mentioned, and it would be more profitable to him to handle our merchandise.

[fol. 1650] Q. Did you ever, and I am reading now from page 886 of the transcript, tell him you didn't wish to have any more competitive accessories handled in that station?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever, and I am reading now from page 896 of the transcript, tell him that it looked a little bad, having competitive merchandise?

A. No.

Q. Did you give him any instructions, reading again from page 896, just to purchase Atlas brand products?

A. No.

Q. Referring again to a time before you recommended that thought be given to negotiating the termination of his dealership, did you ever have any complaints?

A. Yes, we had several customer complaints on the station.

Q. Now, will you tell us a little more fully what you mean by "customer complaints"?

A. Well, a customer would come into the station, for instance, and he wouldn't even offer windshield service to the customer.

Mr. Dixon: I object to the question, your Honor, on the ground no foundation has been laid, and it is too general.

The Court: Well, I don't know. What he told him is what we are concerned with, not what the customers told [fol. 1651] him. Overruled.

You are telling us what you told him; isn't that true?

Mr. Dixon: Not as I understand it, your Honor.

The Witness: No, as I understood the question, I was to answer as to what the nature of the complaints, if any, were from customers coming into his station.

The Court: Were you there when the customers made complaints?

The Witness: No, but I was in the station several times when I was just observing as to how he would handle a customer when he came into his station, and very often I would see a customer put air in his own tires, rather than that he should offer that service to the customer, which had been suggested to him to do, to properly serve the public.

The Court: Well, in what city was this?

The Witness: Portola.

The Court: In California, or Nevada?

The Witness: Portola, California.

The Court: That is a small community, isn't it?

The witness: It is a community of about 4,000, your Honor.

The Court: What county is it in?

The Witness: Plumas County, I believe.

The Court: Oh, yes, I remember now.

The Witness: I am quite sure it is.

[fol. 1652] The Court: Go ahead. Or, let me ask you this question: Did the man ask for it, and did he refuse?

The Witness: No. It was just a matter that we suggest to our dealers, in order to properly serve the public, that when a car pulls into his station that we offer a car these free services, such as——

The Court: Yes, I know. The only point I am making, isn't it a fact that sometimes in these neighborhood cities and in small communities men who know the station agent so well will just volunteer to do some of the work, and they will just start while he is putting the gas in, to put air in the tires. That is a part of the small town spirit, isn't it?

The Witness: That is very true. However, the complaints that were called to my attention, your Honor, was from people coming to us, not residents of Portola.

The Court: Did you repeat that to him?

The Witness: Yes.

The Court: You told him?

The Witness: Yes, I told him of the customer complaints.

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, the objection is also directed to the fact, as your Honor previously stated, that service is not involved.

The Court: But this is impeaching testimony.

[fol. 1653] Mr. Dixon: I see. For that purpose only?

The Court: Yes. Mr. Mortensen is being called to impeach the testimony of your witness and that is why these categorical questions are being asked. In other words, he is giving a different reason which may have led to the severance of the relationship between Standard and the particular station.

Mr. Dixon: I quite agree, your Honor, and that was brought out on cross examination, and I have no objection to it if your Honor is interested in it.

The Court: He is not bound by the answers received on cross examination, and he can contradict the man, if he wants to, and that is what he is attempting to do. Proceed.

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. Directing your attention again to the statements made by Mr. Musser that I read to you out of the transcript, you told me that you didn't say any of those things?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you ever say any of those things in substance, in any other words?

A. No.

Mr. Mathews: That is all.

The Court: Cross-examine.

[fol. 1654] Cross-examination.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. I will hand you what is marked Government's Exhibit 87, and ask you to examine that and state whether in any of the documents attached thereto you find any provision in the lease or agreement with Mr. Musser, which requires him to do any of the things that you said he did not do when you were in his station.

Mr. Mathews: Your Honor, I object to that. The documents speak for themselves.

The Court: I think the question really goes as to the person's knowledge. I think he testified on direct examination that he knew what those documents were. I think I will allow it. In effect, I take it, the question merely means if he knew of any specific requirement in the agreement that related to the particular topic. Overruled.

Mr. Mathews: Do you understand the question?

The Witness: Yes, I think I do.

The Court: Go ahead. You may answer.

The Witness: I was looking for a TBA agreement here, but I don't see one.

The Court: A TBA agreement?

The Witness: Is that what you have in mind?

The Court: It is at the end there, isn't it?

The Witness: I don't think it is there.

[fol. 1655] Mr. Mathews: No.

The Witness: I see nothing here other than the gasoline agreement, where the dealer agrees to buy his gasoline requirements from the Standard Oil Company.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. There is nothing in the agreement, then, that you know of, requiring Mr. Musser to take any instructions or orders from any Standard Oil official concerning the manner in which he shall keep his station, whether it is clean or not, or as to the hours in which he will operate it; is that correct?

A. Not to my knowledge, no.

Q. So that you just came in and made those suggestions to Mr. Musser?

A. I tried to help the man, yes.

Q. Did you finally recommend that because he didn't do those things that you mentioned that he be canceled as a Chevron dealer?

A. There were—yes, and by that I mean there were more reasons than that. His personal appearance, for one thing.

Q. You didn't like his personal appearance?

A. Not because I didn't like him. He would appear at the station in the morning ready for work unshaven, with a couple of days' growth of whiskers on his face.

Q. Just when were you there and made that observation?

[fol. 1656] A. I couldn't give you any specific date as to it, but generally that was the appearance I found him in, with his clothes dirty and wearing a pair of old sloppy overalls.

Q. Did Standard furnish him with any uniform to operate his station?

A. No, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, he is supposed to be an independent business man under this contract, is he not?

A. That is right.

Q. And to operate his own business?

A. Yes.

Mr. Dixon: That is all.
The Court: Had you finished?
Mr. Mathews: That is all.
The Court: Step down.
Mr. Mathews: Mr. Hodge.

ARTHUR HODGE, called as a witness by the defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: Take the stand, please, sir. What is your name, please?
The Witness: Arthur Hodge.
The Clerk: And the spelling of your last name, please?
The Witness: H-o-d-g-e.

[fol. 1657] Direct examination.

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. Mr. Hodge, by whom are you employed?
A. Standard Oil Company of California.
Q. What is your position with that company?
A. Branch manager at Reno, Nevada.
Q. Is there included within the territory of your branch the community of Portola, referred to in this Exhibit 87, which I hand you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Are you acquainted with the service station referred to in this exhibit?
A. I am.
Q. Did you ever visit that station?
A. I have.
Q. Upon what occasion?
A. Well, whenever I was in Portola I used to drop in on all the dealers and called on them, and that was on the average of, oh, two or three months apart.
Q. Did you make any of these visits while Mr. Musser was there?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What did you observe with respect to the operation of his station upon those occasions?
A. Well, as a rule, it was very untidy and dirty, and [fol. 1658] usually the attendants were not up to what I would consider a good service station operator.

Q. Now, did Mr. Mortensen make a recommendation to you that consideration be given to negotiating a termination of his dealership?

A. We discussed that several times with Mr. Mortensen in our office, and he finally came to me and wanted to ask if he could secure a termination on the lease of that service station with Mr. Musser. As Mr. Musser was a party that we secured to operate that station during the war, and it was rather hard to keep operators going then because they could make more money in other industries than they could in service stations, I was rather reluctant to tell him it was O. K. to try to secure another operator or to cancel the agreement. So I personally made a trip up there to see the type of operation, the type of service given to the public, and after my trip I instructed Mr. Mortensen it was O. K. to go ahead and secure a mutual termination.

Q. As to the negotiating of a termination of a dealership, does that happen very often——

A. Not very often.

Q. —in your branch?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Dixon: Objected to as wholly irrelevant.

The Court: It may go to the reason why he remembers [fol. 1659] so accurately. How many dealers have you under your supervision?

The Witness: A total of about 75.

Mr. Mathews: Do you want the question read?

The Court: I think he answered it. He had answered it before I asked him a question. Read it, please.

(The record was read.)

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. Did the question of terminating this dealer's relationship with the company come up on some previous occasions?

A. On some previous occasions?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, we had discussed it several times but, as I said before, that we are rather reluctant to cancel any dealer's agreement, and especially one that we had secured during the war, during the time it was hard to secure operators.

Q. Did the owner of the property ever suggest that he be terminated as a dealer?

A. Well, about——

Mr. Dixon: I object to that question, your Honor. It is wholly irrelevant.

The Court: Read the question, please.

(The question was read.)

The Court: I will sustain the objection. We are not [fol. 1660] interested in the friendliness or unfriendliness of the relationship. This is merely impeaching testimony of a particular situation. You have a right to show whether you laid a foundation on cross-examination or not that the termination was not traceable to a dissatisfaction with his handling of the products. It is admitted by Mr. Mortensen that he was handling products, but your relationship or the relationship of this witness to other dealers is not involved here.

Mr. Mathews: Your Honor, the only reason I asked that question, and I agree it is not too important, but the government counsel, when Mr. Musser was here, asked if the landlord didn't object when he ceased being a dealer.

The Court: That isn't the question. That doesn't relate to it. I remember Mr. Musser very well because while he was testifying I remember I got mixed up on my geography of California after all these years. I thought he was in Monterey County, and he said that it was in Plumas County. But I don't think this last question related to Musser.

Mr. Mathews: I meant to relate it to Musser. If I didn't make it so, your Honor, it was an error on my part.

The Court: Well, if it relates to him, you can answer.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: Did he ask to be relieved?

Mr. Dixon: May I have the question again, if the court [fol. 1661] please? May I have it read?

The Court: I have just altered it or asked a substitute question. Now, are you going to give us trouble on it? I wanted to modify it. Now you want to go back to it again. The witness may answer.

The Witness: Well, some six or eight months before

Mr. Musser left the service station, the owner of the property, Jack Schill, wrote a letter to the Sacramento office asking that a former operator that had been in there before the war and had left the service station to go into war activity be put back in the service station, and the letter was referred to me at Reno; and I happened to be at Truckee and in a service station when Mr. Schill drove in to buy some gasoline.

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, I object to all of this. I think, in the first place, it is not responsive to the question. As I recall the record, and it is wholly a minor point, and if your Honor is interested in it, why, I will withdraw my objection.

The Court: The only thing is, did he communicate this fact to Musser?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: All right. Give us the narrative. Give us what you told him.

The Witness: Oh, I am talking about—I was talking [fol. 1662] about the owner of the property, and I tried to point out to him that I wasn't in favor of putting Mr. Musser out due to the fact that he had served a very good purpose when it would have been impossible to find a good operator to go in that service station, so I thought, in justice to Mr. Musser, he should be left in there a while to see if he could improve his operation. But Mr. Schill was working on a rental plus a gallonage rental, and he was interested in the money he could get out of the service station with more gallons.

The Court: To whom did you tell that,—Mr. Mortensen?

The Witness: I told that to Mr. Schill.

The Court: Schill was the owner. Well, I will allow it to stand. The only object was to show that they were tolerant towards him.

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, I should not stress the point, except I do want to point out, your Honor, that in the record at page 899 the government did offer or attempt to open up this subject of a discussion with the landlord concerning complaints, and so forth, and Mr. Hall moved to strike the answer, and the court granted it, and that was the extent of it.

The Court: This is not in relation to the complaint. This merely shows, and, as a matter of fact, it would be permissible to ask this witness to state his motive or lack of [fol. 1663] motive. This merely shows that instead of being anxious to get rid of him, why, they felt because he had filled in during the emergency, the war emergency, that he should not be replaced. In other words, they were following the song, "I Am So Used To You Now," and they were so used to him that they were being tolerant with him.

Mr. Dixon: I realize, your Honor, that this is a court of equity, and if you are interested in his testimony, I have no objection, even if it is wholly irrelevant.

The Court: It is a minor thing.

Mr. Dixon: That is right.

The Court: And it shows the attitude of the representatives according to their theory, that they were not trying to get him out.

All right, proceed.

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. Mr. Hodge, I am reading now from page 886 of the record, and I will ask you, did you ever tell Mr. Musser that you didn't wish to have any more competitive accessories handled in that station?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever say that in substance?

A. No, sir. The only thing I could add, there is that a branch manager or anybody that is a salesman for the company, well, we are always trying to sell our own merchandise rather than the competitors'.

[fol. 1664] The Court: In other words, you didn't use those words, but you tried to use your influence.

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. Mr. Musser testified that upon one occasion there was a discussion regarding a fan belt, and he stated, reading from page 896, that you told him that it looked a little bad, having competitive merchandise. Did you ever say that to him?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever say that in substance?

A. No, sir.

Q. From the same page, he said that you instructed him just to purchase Atlas brand products. Did you ever tell him anything like that?

A. No, sir. Again, it is merely a case that we wanted to sell Atlas merchandise, that we certainly wouldn't try to sell the competitors' merchandise.

Mr. Dixon: Will you read that answer, please?

(The answer was read.)

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. Now, in trying to sell your merchandise, what approach did you take?

A. Well, we tried to point out the fact that our merchandise is as cheap as the competitor's, or better, and, also, we have as complete a line as is needed in the service station; and, also, that usually with the competitor they have to pay the freight or express on any merchandise they buy [fol. 1665] from them, where we lay the merchandise to their door at our cost, which usually brings the merchandise, the Atlas line, cheaper than the competitive line.

Mr. Mathews: That is all.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. You say you laid the merchandise down at cost to Standard Oil?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that Standard Oil Company does not make any money on the tires, tubes, batteries and accessories you sell to the dealer outlets?

A. Our price to the dealer is to his door rather than from our warehouse.

Q. Then what do you mean when you say you laid down the merchandise to the dealer at your cost?

A. We paid the freight from our warehouse.

Q. You don't mean to say that you sell any of this merchandise, this tires, tubes, batteries and accessories to the dealer at the cost to the Standard Oil Company, do you?

A. Well, that is an expression that is used by salesmen, and I think that the merchandise is laid down to their door at the company's cost; in other words, paying the freight from our warehouse, or the express, to their place of business, which is not a policy in all accessory houses.

[fol. 1666] Q. In other words, it is a fact, is it not, that the Standard Oil Company makes a profit on the tires, tubes and batteries, and accessories that it sells and turns over to the dealers at what you call cost?

A. I imagine we do. I don't know what the profit is.

The Court: I think the witness explained clearly what he meant, that he puts it down net at the invoice price, without any freight addition; is that it?

The Witness: That is correct, your Honor.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. And if it should be a fact that the dealer could purchase competitive merchandise with Atlas at a lower cost, as you have used the term, would that be satisfactory to the Standard Oil Company?

A. That is a case of salesmanship, to sell him out of.

Q. And that would include tire, tubes and batteries, would it?

A. That would be accessories that we are talking about.

Q. You say just accessories?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But as to tires, tubes and batteries, the independent dealer operating the station is required to buy all of those from Standard, is he not?

A. Yes, sir, I imagine so. That's right.

Q. And he is not supposed to, under his contract with Standard, handle any other brands of tires, tubes and [fol. 1667] batteries, except those furnished him by the Standard Oil Company?

Q. Well, there is very few that haven't handled some competitive brands.

Mr. Dixon: Will you read my question, please?

(The question was read.)

Mr. Mathews: Just a minute. Your Honor, I believe he is calling for an interpretation of the contract.

The Court: This is cross-examination. This man is a district manager, in charge of others, and it is permissible to ask him, not as to an interpretation of the contract, but as to the practice which flows from the contract. He certainly knows what it is and he has given a forthright answer to the previous question.

Mr. Dixon: Maybe he has already answered my question, your Honor.

The Court: He has answered. It is repetitious.

Mr. Dixon: I don't care to be repetitious.

The Court: He just said that they weren't supposed to, but that they do. Isn't that what you meant to say?

The Witness: That is correct, your Honor.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. It is a fact, is it not, that Mr. Musser was selling some of those products that he wasn't, as you put it, supposed to sell at his station?

A. I wouldn't say tires, and batteries, and tubes,——

[fol. 1668] Q. Yes.

A. But he had the right to sell competitive accessory lines, and it was our job to unsell him on the competitive line.

Q. In other words, he wasn't handling, so far as you know, any other competitive tires, tubes and batteries?

A. That is correct.

Q. But he was handling accessories that were competitive to those which Atlas or the Standard Oil Company felt should be handled by the Chevron dealers at those stations which had this agreement?

A. Well, that is the line of merchandise we were supposed to try to sell to all of our dealers.

Q. Now, this station is in rather a windy part of California, isn't it? Or, do you know?

A. Well, I have been there in very nice weather and windy weather and rainy weather, and snowy weather.

Q. It has all kinds of weather?

A. That is correct.

Q. Is it dusty, or is it clean around there, do you know? I mean the roads and the general territory.

A. Well, this station is on a paved highway, if that is what you mean. This is on the Feather River Canyon Highway.

Q. Is everything paved, or are there any open fields [fol. 1669] there?

A. No open fields. There is a restaurant next door, and a service station on the other side of it, and a grocery store and service station across the street.

The Court: It isn't one of those isolated stations out in the country?

The Witness: No, sir.

The Court: There is a little settlement around there?

The Witness: That is right.

The Court: And, furthermore, you were not complaining about anything the wind might be blowing into the station, because the wind wouldn't be blowing empty oil cans into his lubricating shed? Is that what you mean?

The Witness: That is correct.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. By the way, Mr. Musser wasn't receiving any salary, was he, from the Standard Oil Company or Standard Stations, Inc.?

A. No, sir.

Q. You don't want the court to believe, do you, that he was under any obligation to take orders from you with reference to anything that he did at the station?

A. We never gave him orders.

Q. I understood that you told him about his station being unfidy and dirty.

A. Well, we could still tell him that without giving him [fol. 1670] orders on it.

Q. And you felt that because you told him it was that way, that he should correct it, or you felt he was wrong about the station itself; is that correct?

A. I don't get the question.

Q. Read the question, please.

(The question was read.)

Q. Do you understand my question?

A. He was to serve the public.

Q. No, do you understand my question?

The Court: Let him answer in his own way.

The Witness: To serve the public correctly we felt, or I felt, and after conference with Mr. Mortensen, that he could improve the operation of that station, yes.

[fol. 1671] The Court: Just be frank about it. You made the suggestions with the idea he would follow them?

The Witness: That is correct, your Honor.

The Court: Which was to his interest and to your interest?

The Witness: To the company's interest.

The Court: To the company's interest. By "you," I mean representing the company.

The Witness: That is right.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Mr. Musser was supposed to be an independent business man under this arrangement, wasn't he?

A. He had a service station lease and we had the lease from the property owner.

Q. I say, he was supposed to be an independent business man, wasn't he?

The Court: I think that is already answered. You had an interest in the deal. To use the war time expression, you owned the prime lease?

The Witness: That is right.

The Court: You were the lessee.

The Witness: And we were anxious to sell all the merchandise we could.

The Court: That is right. That is the profit you derive.

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. He was paying you the rental that he was supposed [fol. 1672] to pay for the station, wasn't he?

A. He paid the rental on a gallonage basis.

The Court: I am going to pull some of your allegations of your complaint against you pretty soon if you do not desist from this sort of examination.

Mr. Dixon: All right, your Honor.

The Court: Because you argue in your complaint——

Mr. Dixon: Very well, your Honor. No further questions.

The Court: —or don't approve of the importance of having stations at certain places. I will grant that there is an advantage accruing to the company to have outlets in certain areas. That is disclosed from the very nature of their business, and if they do, they want to observe certain minimum standards.

Mr. Dixon: No further questions.

Mr. Mathews: That is all.

The Court: All right.
Mr. Mathews: Mr. Turner.

CLESSE M. TURNER, called as a witness by the defendants, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?
The Witness: I will have to spell it for you. C-l-e-s-s-e M. Turner.
The Court: That must be a family name, isn't it?
[fol. 1673] The Witness: I don't know where it came from, your Honor.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. Mr. Turner, by whom are you employed?
A. Standard Oil Company of California.
Q. In what capacity?
A. Branch Manager of Las Vegas, Nevada.
Q. I hand you Government's Exhibit No. 43. Will you look at that and tell me whether you are familiar with the service station referred to there?
A. I am.
Q. Are you acquainted with the Russell Stephens mentioned in these documents?
A. I am.
Q. Where did you come to be acquainted with him?
A. Well, I was transferred to Las Vegas—I think the transfer was effective the first of March, 1947, but I was between San Francisco and Bakersfield and Los Angeles for about two weeks there, and I am not certain of just the exact effective date. But I arrived in Las Vegas either the 1st or 2nd of March and, naturally, I wanted to visit my field. I made as rapid a coverage of the field as possible, and that is the first time I met Mr. Stephens.
Q. Did you make subsequent visits to Mr. Stephens at [fol. 1674] the station?
A. Sir?
Q. Did you make subsequent visits to that station?
A. Yes. I made a visit more often than ordinary to that station. Ordinarily I would only visit a station, a service station that is, possibly every two months, but because of the size and importance of that condition, and because of the apparent lack of training which the operator had there, I went there every two weeks for about three to three and one-half months.

Q. What situation did you observe at that station upon your visits?

A. Well, the first visit that I went there the clothing that both Mr. Stephens and—I think he had three employees on at that time in the lubrication rack and the pump block—was soiled, and I believe two of them didn't even have neckties on.

I observe the attorneys laughing down there. We would like to see operators in neckties, to where it looks like they are giving clean service. If the operator is clean it makes a better impression on the customer.

Also, the floor of the lubrication room was a concrete floor, and I am confident that it hadn't been cleaned for several weeks because it was deeply encrusted with dirt and grease, which is—if any of you gentlemen have ever gone into a [fol. 1675] dirty lubrication room and then walked into your house——

Mr. Dixon: If your Honor please, I object to any observations now.

The Court: That is all right; just state what you found.

The Witness: Well, it is an improper condition, Judge——

Mr. Dixon: I object to that, your Honor, as being a conclusion.

The Court: Well, he can state a conclusion. All right; go ahead.

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. Did you call these situations to his attention?

A. Yes; I talked to him about it. I asked him if he didn't think it would be a good idea to correct that condition. And I will say that on my next visit that it was immaculate. He had the lube room very nicely cleaned out and his men were nicely dressed and clean. But two or three weeks later he apparently had not even swept the place out since the last time that he had cleaned it up.

The Court: Maybe he had been in the army, and the army slicks up only for inspection.

The Witness: That is true.

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. Did you always find Mr. Stephens there upon your visits?

[fol. 1676] A. No, sir. I think it was that third visit there that he was not there. I asked the men where he was and they said that he had started a meat business over in the plant at Henderson and he was over at that business. So I went back the next day and he wasn't there again, and at that time I left word that I would like to have them tell Mr. Stephens that I would be there at a certain time the next day; that I wanted to talk to him again.

Q. Was he there then?

A. He was there the next time.

Q. Are you familiar with the arrangements under which your company has possession of this station?

A. I believe so; yes, sir.

Q. Will you state them, please?

A. It is the——

Mr. Dixon: I object to that. The document in evidence is the best evidence of that arrangement, your Honor.

The Court: I am going to allow them to ask the question similar to the one he asked Mr Musser. Go ahead.

A. It was originally a direct lease from the Defense Plants Corporation to the Standard Oil Company of California.

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. On what basis was the rental?

A. Gallonage rental.

Q. Does that mean that the landlord is paid in accordance with the amount of gallons sold from that station?

[fol. 1677] Mr. Dixon: I object to that question, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Dixon: To the form of the question.

The Court: Overruled.

A. The landlord is paid on the amount of gallons which we deliver to that station during any calendar month.

Q. Did you ever have any objections respecting the operations of this station by Mr. Stephens?

A. I don't quite understand your question.

Q. Did any members of the public criticize his operations to you or object?

Mr. Dixon: I object to that question, your honor.

The Court: I will ask that be merely answered yes or no. The only thing I am going to allow is, as I did on the other, if there was any communication of the facts to Stephens. You may answer just yes or no.

A. Yes.

The Court: All right. Did you communicate those to Stephens? Did you talk to him about them?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. Did these conditions in which this station was maintained and the standard of operations improve?

A. No, sir.

Q. During the time you visited it?

A. No, sir. Not only that, but the complaints that we [fol. 1678] had continued to accrue against the station.

Q. As a result of these facts did you come to any conclusion regarding this station?

A. May I go back just a little bit? We and the company feel that we should do everything we can to make a successful dealer. He is an independent merchant but we try to assist him. And in the meantime I had sent in our merchandiser at least once a month to Mr. Stephen's station to work with him for a minimum of one day for a four-months period.

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, I move that all of that testimony be stricken as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: No; I think it is admissible. This, again, is testimony and they want to know why they get these suggestions, because you yourself bring them out by insisting on the fact that he is an independent dealer. They have a right to explain why, despite the fact that they feel that they are warranted in making suggestions and conveyance complaints to them.

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. Do I understand that there was no favorable results from your effort?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you come to a conclusion regarding Mr. Stephens and this station?

A. Yes. I think it was possibly around the first of June, [fol. 1679] due to the fact I didn't seem to be able to bring any improvement and was having—I was afraid it was going to become more serious a complaint from our landlord because the rentals were dropping off——

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, I object to that testimony. There is a limit to it.

The Court: You are rationalizing your answers too much now. You said you came to a conclusion. Let us get down to what you did.

A. I made a recommendation to Mr. Gunnels, who was then my district sales manager at Phoenix, that we terminate our agreement with Mr. Stephens.

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. Was that done?

A. Before the termination was favorably acted upon the branch was transferred under Bakersfield and the district manager at Bakersfield accepted the recommendation, first, that we attempt to get a mutual termination. I believe that was presented to Mr. Stephens sometime in July.

Q. Mr. Stephens testified in this case and during his testimony he stated, the statement appearing on page 521 of the record, that "he found two tires hid back in the back part of my stock room." "He found", that being you in this case. Did any such incident occur?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. He stated, the statement appearing on page 522 of the record, that you asked him what the tire was doing [fol. 1680] in there and he told you he had a chance to purchase them, since the Standard Oil was unable to supply him with them; he had a number of calls for that type of tires, so he purchased them and put them back in the stock room. Did that or any similar statement occur?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was that or any similar statement made?

A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Stephens stated, the statement appearing on page 523 of the record, that you told him to discontinue handling any competitive accessories, as at the present time there was plenty of merchandise available from Standard Oil TBA supply houses. Did you tell him any such thing or anything like that?

A. That is incorrect. Frankly, I never solicited him for any TBA merchandise. I was more concerned with the appearance of the station.

The Court: Well, the question is, did you ever——

The Witness: No, sir.

The Court: Did you ever complain to him?

The Witness: No, sir.

The Court: About his handling competitive merchandise?

The Witness: No, Judge; I didn't.

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. Were you ever aware whether or not he had competitive merchandise?

[fol. 1681] A. You are going to force me to say no; I don't remember whether he did or not. Mr. Thompson might not like that.

The Court: Did you see any about on the shelves for oil?

The Witness: No. Frankly, Judge, I was not paying any attention to his merchandise.

The Court: You were not. All right.

Mr. Mathews: That is all.

Cross-examination

By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Mr. Turner, does the Standard Oil Company furnish Mr. Musser or any of the people at his station—I mean Mr. Stephens, with any uniform to be worn by him while operating or running the station?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did they furnish him with any neckties that you feel should be worn by the dealer operating the station?

A. No, sir.

Q. You do furnish them, though, to your company operated station employees at cost, don't you?

A. I am unable to answer that.

Q. You don't know that?

A. I don't know that? I have nothing to do with Standard stations.

[fol. 1682] Q. Now, is the dealer operating a station notified as to when you are going to come around to visit him?

A. No, sir.

Q. So that if he was not there when you came, why you would not feel that that was anything to hold against him, would you?

A. No, sir. But the service station business is so highly competitive at the present time that if a man is going to stay in the business, make a profit in such a business, he better be there.

Q. Oh, you feel that he should be there all the time?

A. He should be there a great portion of the time for his own protection. That man is an independent business man but he has got to make a profit.

Q. I see. And the more he makes, you mean the more Standard makes, it that correct?

A. Oh, naturally.

Q. Yes. And it is a fact, is it not, that this station increased its gallonage considerably while Mr. Stephens was operating it? Isn't that a fact?

A. I couldn't say. That is prior to my time.

Q. You don't know what the records were, then, with reference to the increase in gallonage of this station by Mr. Stephens, do you?

A. I do know that he went up and then he started down.

[fol. 1683] Q. And do you know what the reason was, if any, for the decrease?

A. I know that there were other competitive stations entered into the picture.

Q. It is a fact that there were about five additional stations that opened in the immediate vicinity of Mr. Stephens' station, isn't that true?

A. What would you call the immediate vicinity?

Q. Well, in the immediate vicinity.

A. How many miles, how many miles?

Q. Well, just answer my question if you can.

The Court: No, no. He is entitled to find out. You are an easterner, but you can go 60 miles in either direction to find a farm house in that section. I know I was invited once when I was holding a court in Carson City, I was asked by a former Californian if I would join him for dinner.

Mrs. Yankwich and I were there. We said yes. I said, "Where?" He said, "At my folks' ranch." We went to Falon, 70 miles straight. Distances mean nothing in that state.

Mr. Dixon: We won't make it that bad, your Honor, since the witness seems to want to ask the lawyers a question rather than to answer. I will say five miles then, from Mr. Stephens.

The Court: All right.

[fol. 1684] By Mr. Dixon:

Q. Do you know of any stations within five miles of this station?

A. I think there were three opened after the time that he opened that station.

Q. And when were those stations opened, Mr. Turner?

A. Well, they were opened prior to my time.

Q. When did you take over this territory?

A. March the 1st, 1947.

Q. Oh, I see. So that all of your knowledge about how dirty and how untidy Mr. Stephens was, and so on, was that which was acquired subsequent to that date?

A. Subsequent to that date; yes, sir.

Q. Did you take into consideration, as a good Standard Oil official, the fact that he did serve and increase the gallonage at this station considerably before the time that you came around?

A. Naturally.

Q. But you did not inquire as to whether he had, did you?

A. I have the records, what we call the S-6 book.

Q. Will you then state from those records what the gallonage increase was that was effected by Mr. Stephens up to the time that you became director of this area under which Mr. Stephens was operating?

A. I don't recall the figures exactly because I haven't [fol. 1685] got them with me. I think that at one point, according to his testimony, he reached 41,000 gallons, which, I think is of a substantial character.

Q. Is that a small station?

A. That is a very nice station.

Q. And do you know whether Mr. Stephens was paying the Standard Oil any minimum rent for the use of this property each month?

A. Mr. Stephens was paying $100.00 a month plus whatever the signs were. $102.75, I think, was the rental, wasn't it? Does the lease show? Plus three-quarters of a cent a gallon.

Q. And that was the amount that he was bound to pay?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I mean minimum rental?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to refer to Exhibit 43 and particularly paragraph 10 of that document, and ask you if you find anything in that document which gives to the Standard Oil Company any right to direct the affairs or conduct of Mr. Stephens at that station?

A. No, sir.

Q. And that expresses, does it, the entire arrangement between Mr. Stephens and the Standard Oil Company in connection with the operation of those premises insofar as [fol. 1686] the right to control his activities is concerned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By the way, who succeeded Mr. Stephens in operating the station, do you know?

A. Mr. Earl C. Turner.

Q. And is he a relative of yours?

A. He is.

Q. What relationship?

A. He is my brother, half-brother.

Mr. Dixon: That is all.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Mathews: Just a question or so, your Honor.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Mathews:

Q. Referring to the agreements with Mr. Turner, I note they are dated in 1945.

A. '45 is it?

Q. Did you have possession of this station before that?

A. I don't know.

Mr. Mathews: That is all.

The Court: All right, step down, Mr. Turner. Call your next witness.

Mr. Hall: Defendants at this time, if the court please, desire to offer into evidence the depositions of Francis S.

[fol. 1687] Olaine, L. M. Bussert, and Harry T. Hays, taken at San Francisco on March 9, 1948 by the Government. And annexed to the depositions are certain exhibits and there are two exhibits loose which were marked at the time of the deposition.

The Court: Will you hand them to me and I will examine them before they are marked?

Mr. Hall: The offer of the deposition is intended to include the offer into evidence of all of the exhibits which were identified in connection with the taking of the depositions and marked and submitted therewith.

Mr. Dixon: The Government objects to the use of the depositions in evidence on the grounds that the witnesses may be available.

Mr. Hall: I will be glad to put a witness on the stand, if the court please, if the court desires a showing, that each one of these witnesses is a resident of the Bay area near San Francisco, either San Francisco or some place in the Bay area, and therefore within the Rule.

The Court: The 100-mile rule.

Mr. Hall: I beg pardon?

The Court: It is the 100-mile rule, isn't it? If they are farther than 100 miles, that you may use the depositions.

Mr. Dixon: That is right, your Honor. There is such provision. It is discretionary, as we understand, with the [fol. 1688] court, and certainly in this instance, when these people whose depositions are offered are employees of the Standard Oil Company, the defendant in this action, we submit that they can be presented in court for their examination.

The Court: I know. They may derive an advantage from the fact, also, that you examined them and did not use them, and they may have given testimony under your examination which may be stronger in its effect than if they were examined directly.

One other thing. Let me say this, gentlemen: Are there any objections to any of the questions? If so, I want them waived, because my rule in taking these depositions when I try a case without the jury is to order them transcribed, and I read them in between time, rather than have counsel read them into the record again.

Mr. Hall: Yes, sir.

The Court: That is where we gain time. But I cannot do it unless all objections are waived, if there are objections in them.

Mr. Hall: All my objections are waived.

The Court: I do not suppose you have any objections unless there are objections on cross examination. Was there any cross examination?

Mr. Hall: Yes; there was in this case, your Honor.

Mr. Dixon: I believe there are objections, but of course this is a court of equity and your Honor certainly can, in [fol. 1689] reading the depositions, determine what is effective one way or the other.

The Court: The only thing is I would prefer that. I do not like—what is the expression—to buy a pig in a poke. I do not want to take a record which may contain a very important objection that might trouble us. If not, we can go through the record and I can rule on the objections you have now.

Mr. Dixon: We do not have the record here, your Honor. I don't know——

The Court: Do you have copies?

Mr. Dixon: We have copies of it; yes.

The Court: Supposing you do this: Deem that all objections are waived, assuming there are some, and you reserve the right on examination, if you find one you want to preserve, to call it to the attention of the court. Is that all right?

Mr. Hall: That is agreeable with us.

Mr. Dixon: Except that we object to the use of the depositions, as I said, under the rule, and ask that the witnesses be produced.

The Court: Yes. I will overrule that objection and the testimony will be received.

I think the depositions will be given a number and I will order them transcribed in any record to be prepared in [fol. 1690] this court. Then I shall read it, and when I have read it I will state for the record what I have read.

Mr. Hall: Will you Honor order also that the exhibits which are a part of the depositions be also copied into the record, with the exception of the large maps?

The Court: No. You are going too fast for me this time. Just a minute. I am going to do better than that, you see. I am going to take the exhibits and give them new numbers in sequence.

Mr. Hall: Very well.

The Court: Now, let me see what they are.

Mr. Hall: There are three exhibits annexed to the depositions.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Hall: And then there are two separate.

The Court: All right, I have got them now.

The exhibit attached to the depositions which is designated as Plaintiff's Exhibit A-1 for identification and which bears the legend Bulk Distribution Map Exhibit 'A' (See Note) will be marked as what?

The Clerk: I have not given the deposition a number yet, your Honor.

The Court: Oh, I beg pardon.

The Clerk: The deposition is Defendants' JJ.

The Court: Mark the exhibit and then I will mark the [fol. 1691] others with a pencil.

Mr. Hall: Might I offer a suggestion, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hall: One of the large maps here is Exhibit A and one of the sheets annexed to the deposition is A-1, which explains the map. Then another map is B and then there is B-1.

The Court: All right; I will take them in that order. "Plaintiff's Exhibit A" for identification attached to the deposition will be received into evidence as——

The Clerk: KK.

The Court: KK.

[fol. 1692] Mr. Dixon: May the record show here an objection to the admission of it on the ground it is irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: I agree that you may have been fishing, and that sometimes by deposition you can fish, but I am not going to let you cut bait that fast and get away with it.

I think there must have been something, and I can't tell in advance what it is, but I will take a chance on it being material because you saw the depositions.

The objection is overruled.

Plaintiff's Exhibit A-1, for identification, attached to the group of depositions, which is entitled "Bulk Distribution Map, Exhibit A" will be received as——

The Clerk: Exhibit LL.

The Court: —Exhibit LL.

Then that brings up this one, Plaintiff's Exhibit B, for identification, attached to the deposition, being a map, and which will be received as——

The Clerk: Exhibit MM.

The Court: —Exhibit MM.

Plaintiff's Exhibit B-1, for identification, consisting of two sheets, and entitled "Package Goods Distribution," will be received as——

The Clerk: Exhibit NN.

The Court: Exhibit NN.

[fol. 1693] Mr. Dixon: And may the record show our objection?

The Court: Subject to the same objection, which is overruled.

Then Plaintiff's Exhibit C, for identification, attached to the depositions, which bears the legend of "Accessory Warehouses," giving the cities and the area, will be received in evidence, subject to the same objection, which is overruled, as——

The Clerk: Exhibit OO.

The Court: Exhibit OO. Are there any more exhibits?

Mr. Hall: I believe that is all. I think they have all been covered.

[fol. 1694] (The depositions of Francis S. Olaine, L. M. Bussert, and Harry T. Hays—marked herein as Defendants' Exhibit JJ—are in the words and figures following, to-wit:)

(Note: In copying these depositions the reporters have corrected the spelling of Mr. Thody's name from "Thrody".)

[fol. 1695] In the District Court of the United States

[Title omitted]

Stipulation Regarding the Taking of Depositions

It is hereby stipulated by and between plaintiff and defendants, by their respective attorneys, that depositions of the herein named deponents shall be taken before Edith Gosney, Notary Public for the County of San Francisco, State of California, and that such depositions shall be taken down stenographically and then transcribed. The taking of such testimony shall begin at 2:00 P. M. on the 9th day of March, 1948, at Room 1712 of the Standard Oil Building, 225 Bush Street, San Francisco, California, and shall continue until completed within the time allowed for the taking of testimony.

[fols. 1696-1697] Names of Deponents: Francis Olaine, L. M. Bussert, Harry T. Hays.

Dated March 2, 1948.

William C. Dixon, W. Alan Thody, Lawrence W. Somerville, Attorneys for Plaintiff. By (Signed) W. Alan Thody. Lawler, Felix & Hall, Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, John M. Hall, Attorneys for Defendants. By (Signed) John M. Hall.

[fol. 1698] In the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of California, Central Division

[Title omitted]

Be It Remembered, that on Tuesday, the 9th day of March, 1948, at 2:00 p. m. and Wednesday, the 10th day of March, 1948, at 9:00 o'clock a.m., pursuant to stipulation between counsel for the respective parties, at Room 1712, Standard Oil Building, 225 Bush Street, San Francisco, California, personally appeared before me, Edith Goewey, a Notary Public in and for the City and County of San Francisco, State of California,

Francis S. Olaine, L. M. Bussert, and Harry T. Hays, witnesses called on behalf of the plaintiffs herein.

W. A. Thody, Esquire, and Lawrence W. Somerville, Esquire, Special Assistants to The Attorney General, appeared as attorneys for the plaintiffs.

Messrs. Lawler, Felix & Hall, represented by John M. [fol. 1699] Hall, Esquire, and Messrs. Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, represented by Henry G. Hayes, Esquire, appeared at attorneys for the defendants.

The said witnesses, having been by me first duly cautioned and sworn to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, in the above-entitled cause, did thereupon depose and say as hereinafter set forth.

It was stipulated between counsel for the respective parties that the Notary Public, after administering the oath to the witnesses, need not remain further during the taking of these depositions.

It was further stipulated that the said depositions should be recorded stenographically by Harry A. Cannon, a competent official shorthand reporter and a disinterested person, and thereafter transcribed by him into longhand typewriting, to be read to or by the said witnesses, who, after making such corrections therein as may be necessary will subscribe the same.

It was further stipulated that all objections to questions propounded to the said witnesses shall be reserved by each of the parties, save and except any objections as to the form of the questions propounded.

It was further stipulated that if the witnesses should be instructed not to answer questions propounded by counsel, in the absence of the Notary Public, it shall be deemed [fol. 1700] that the Notary Public has so instructed the witnesses to answer, but that the witnesses still refuse to answer.

FRANCIS S. OLAINE, a witness called on behalf of the plaintiffs, being first duly cautioned and sworn by the Notary Public to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

Mr. Thody:

Q. Will you state your name?
A. Francis S. Olaine.
Q. Your address?
A. 225 Bush Street, San Francisco.
Q. Your present position?
A. Analyst, Distribution Department.
Q. What is the nature of your duties in connection with that position?
A. Well, the basic function of the Distribution Department is to arrange for the distribution of Petroleum products to points where they are required and when they are required and at the lowest practicable distribution costs.
Q. How long have you held that position?
A. Six years in the analyst capacity, and—

Q. Have you served in other capacities previously?
[fol. 1701] A. Yes. In distribution work I have been with the Company twenty-five years.

Q. You are acquainted, of course, with the distribution system of Standard Oil in the states generally known as the Western Area? I refer to the states of California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Nevada, and Arizona, and also New Mexico.

Mr. Hall: Well, pardon me a minute, Mr. Thody. As disclosed by our Answer in this case, the Standard Oil Company of California does not distribute in the State of New Mexico and has no dealers in the State of New Mexico. So, I think that is out. I am sure it is out as far as this witness is concerned.

Mr. Thody:

Q. With the exception of the State of New Mexico then, you are acquainted with the distribution setup of Standard?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In these other states I have mentioned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where are the various refineries located?

A. There are three of them in California: at Richmond, at Bakersfield, and at El Segundo.

Q. Do these refineries provide the source of gasoline for those States referred to in the Western Area, with the exception of New Mexico?

[fol. 1702] A. Not entirely. We also obtain gasoline from a refinery at Salt Lake City and from a refinery at El Paso, Texas.

Q. The crude oil which is used in the three refineries you have referred to, which are owned by Standard, could you tell us where said crude originates from with respect to each of those?

A. No. I am not qualified to answer that question.

Q. Well, I understand your knowledge begins after the refinery?

A. Yes. Generally speaking, when the products are in finished form and in distribution for our bulk plants.

Q. Now, in the marketing area that is referred to in these seven states is there any general pattern of distribution which is followed—do you have certain distribution areas?

A. Yes. As indicated on the map, we have approximately twenty-four.

Q. Twenty-four?

A. Twenty-three that are numbered, and there are two carrying the same number because they are from the same source.

Q. I think you better refer to the map. Will the Reporter mark this map for identification?

(The said map was marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit A for [fol. 1703] Identification.)

Q. Could you tell us who prepared this map (referring to Exhibit A.)?

A. I prepared it.

Q. And it does represent the various distributing areas of the seven western states?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you indicate to us the distributive areas?

A. There are twenty-three marked—.

Q. You said there are twenty-four.

A. The reason for the twenty-four is that these two areas here (indicating) are supplied direct from Richmond by tank car and truck, and we use the same number because——

Mr. Hall: The witness has just been referring on Exhibit A for Identification to the areas which are marked "2".

Mr. Thody: That is correct.

Q. Could you indicate to us, Mr. Olaine, the distributive areas that are supplied by your Richmond refinery?

A. Well, I can. I will refer to them by the source of their supply. For instance, this area here as indicated on these accompanying sheets here (indicating).

Q. I think for the record it might be better to refer to the number.

A. Distributive Area No. 11 is supplied from terminals [fol. 1704] at Sacramento, Napa and San Rafael.

Q. Now, each of these terminals you refer to in Distributive Area No. 11 receive their gasoline from the refinery——

A. By barge.

Q. —by barge?

A. Each of these three marine terminals, and they in turn redistribute by tank car and by tank truck into the area marked No. 11.

Mr. Hall: I think you can shorten this a great deal, Mr. Thody, if I may make a suggestion.

Mr. Thody: Please do so.

Mr. Hall: By reference to the explanatory sheets that the witness has provided which with respect to each of the numbered districts shows the point from which the products originate and how they pass to the bulk plants.

Mr. Thody: Yes. I see. With respect to No. 11, that is precisely the information we developed.

Q. All right. Can you generalize with the statement you have before you, Mr. Olaine, on the distribution outlets of these various distributive areas; is there any common uniform pattern as far as the general procedure of distribution in each distributive area, or are the problems of distribution peculiar to each area?

A. —

[fol. 1705] Mr. Hall: Now, that isn't clear to me, that question, Mr. Thody. I will interpose an objection to the form of the question.

Mr. Thody: I will withdraw the question.

Mr. Hall: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Thody:

Q. Mr. Olaine, with respect to Distributive Areas Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4, you have indicated they are supplied from the Richmond refinery, is that correct?

A. 1 and 2 are the Richmond refinery,——

Q. Oh.

A. —and 3 is the Bakersfield refinery, and 4 is the El Segundo refinery.

Q. And in those cases do I understand the supply is directly from the refinery itself?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, the means of transporting from the refinery, in the instance of Area No. 1, you have indicated by barge, tank cars and or tank trucks?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who owns those tank cars and those barges and tank trucks for Area No. 1, or for all distribution from the refineries?

A. We do not, as I understand it, own the tank cars. They are a lease arrangement with which I am not entirely [fol. 1706] familiar.

Q. You have them under lease from the——

A. From the tank car company.

Q. But they are under your direction and control?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You dispatch those cars and so on?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How is the gasoline, and so, distributed from the refineries picked up at the—is there some section, some particular division of the refinery that dispenses the gasoline?

A. Well, in each case the—there are loading racks for the tank cars and loading racks for the tank trucks, and, of course, the barges at Richmond are loaded over the wharf.

Q. Now, are these tank cars and these tank trucks—are they manned by personnel of Standard?

A. Well, in speaking of tank cars manned, how is the term used?

Q. By the personnel.

A. We simply load the tank cars—our personnel load them, and also the tank trucks and also the barges.

Q. The tank cars, and they are handled by the railroad, they also like any other shipment of goods?

A. That is right.

Q. And the tank trucks, do you have your own fleet of [fol. 1707] tank trucks?

A. We hire commercial tank trucks, and we also have our own motor tank trucks.

Q. At all times though the tank trucks are under your jurisdiction and control—you dispatch them and you know at the time the approximate time of departure and the approximate time of arrival?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They leave the loading tank rack, and they are conveyed where in each area? You say in connection with the group here, No. 1——

Mr. Hall: If you are going to use that, hadn't it better be marked as an exhibit—marked Exhibit A-1 for Identification?

Mr. Thody: Yes. Will you mark this?

(The document entitled "Bulk Distribution Map Exhibit 'A'" was marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit A-1 for Identification" and is attached hereto.)

Q. After they leave the loading rack of the refineries, they are conveyed by these various methods to what points—what will be the ultimate destination in these areas be? First, destination from the refinery, and then the ultimate destination.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. What do you mean by "they"?

Mr. Thody: I am referring to the tank cars and tank trucks. They are dispatched from the refinery to—where [fol. 1708] would they go in these various areas?

A. They will go to the bulk plants as marked on the map; those individual small dots—to our individual small stations.

Mr. Hall: So as to avoid confusion, you are, of course, referring to the districts which have been marked on Exhibit A for Identification as 1, 2, 3, 4, is that right?

Mr. Thody: Yes. They go from——

Mr. Hall: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Thody: Exhibit A-1 for Identification, can you tell me under whose—who prepared it?

A. I prepared this exhibit.

Q. In your official capacity as Analyst under the——

A. Distribution Department.

Q. Distribution Department?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you address yourself, Mr. Olaine, to the first group of distributive areas, Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4, again, and tell us the steps in the distribution of gasoline from the refineries to the ultimate service stations in those particular areas? Now, you indicate here that the gasoline leaves the refinery by tank cars. Can you trace it through the various steps from the refinery to the service stations?

A. Well, I can only trace it as far as the bulk plants

[fol. 1709] as indicated on this explanation here (Referring to Exhibit A-1.).

Q. After the tank trucks and tank cars referred to there —after they leave the refinery, they place the gasoline in bulk——

A. Plants.

Q. —plants?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are these bulk plants owned by Standard Oil?

A. Well, I don't know that I am qualified technically to answer that question. We speak of all of these points shown as our bulk plants, but whether they are actually owned, I don't know that I am qualified to——

Mr. Hall: They all belong to Standard Oil Company of California, if you want that stipulation.

Mr. Thody: Fine.

Q. How are the orders placed by the bulk plant operators? Do you receive the orders from them or do you give them a ready supply?

A. Well, there are two systems; where bulk plants are supplied directly from the refineries, the bulk plants——

Q. I am referring only to that group.

A. Yes. The bulk plants place their orders directly on the refineries. We have a distribution department office at the Richmond refinery and at the El Segundo refinery, and [fol. 1710] these orders are sent directly to them and they arrange for the shipment from the refineries.

Q. From the bulk plants, how is the gasoline placed into the distribution channels, the movement of the stock from the bulk plants?

A. Well, that is beyond our jurisdiction.

Q. How is the gasoline sold? What are these various bulk plant operators; are they employees of Standard?

A. Well, there again I am not fully qualified on that. They may be or they may not. I am not familiar with just what——

Q. Do they buy the gasoline on consignment or do they buy or is it all Standard—does Standard have title to that gasoline in the bulk plants?

Mr. Hall: That is a legal conclusion. We will object on that ground.

A. I am sorry: I am not qualified to answer that. We arrange to see that these bulk products are supplied to these bulk plants, but I am not qualified to say just what the selling and——

Mr. Hall: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Thody:

Q. Then as I understand, Mr. Olaine, then it is your testimony on this first group that the gasoline is shipped directly from the refineries to the various bulk plants?

[fol. 1711] Mr. Hall: And, if I may first interrupt, you are referring to Exhibit A-1 and to the Distributive Areas Nos. 1 to 4, inclusive, is that correct?

Mr. Thody: That is correct.

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell us how many bulk plants are located in each of these distributive areas?

A. No, sir, I cannot. I would have to determine that.

Q. Are the dots on Plaintiff's Exhibit A for Identification—the dots in each of these areas, black dots, do they refer to the location of the various bulk plants?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They——

A. Now, I might qualify that. That map was issued back in July and there may be some stations there that have been closed or there may have been a few that may have been opened, but otherwise they are approximately the marketing plants throughout these various states.

Q. Is there any set delivery time for gasoline from the refineries to the bulk plants, to each of the bulk plants? Do you have a regular pattern, a regular schedule?

A. Well, from Richmond to these points they are supplied in Distributive Area No. 1 by barge. Barges operate on a twenty-four hour basis, and in some cases they may [fol. 1712] make delivery at one time at night and at other times during the day. In connection with delivery by tank car and tank trucks, generally speaking that would be a day time delivery. I mean, the cars might be put in at any time but they will be unloaded during the day time.

Q. On the barges, where it is indicated the barges are used, that is continuous shipments from the refinery—you say, it is over a twenty-four hour period?

A. In Distributive Area No. 1 those barges operate in San Francisco Bay here on a twenty-four hour basis.

Q. Then the movement and flow of gasoline through barges is continuous over the twenty-four hour period each day?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: Well, now, wait a minute. That was with respect to Area No. 1 only.

Mr. Thody: That is the only one that refers to barges?

Mr. Hall: Oh, no.

A. There is a considerable number of them wherein there are barges.

Mr. Hall: Barges on the Columbia River,——

Mr. Thody:

Q. But only as far as the barges on No. 1,——

A. Distributive Area No. 1.

Q. And then what is the time of loading for tank cars on Areas Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4? Is that continuous or is that just during certain hours of the day?

[fol. 1713] A. That is during the normal working hours of the day at the refineries.

Q. Now, that is so with respect to each of these areas referred to in the first category, Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4?

A. With respect to tank cars.

Q. Tank cars, that is what I understand. You mean by that that the deliveries are made every day to——

A. (Interposing) The loading of tank cars. We have a five day work week at the refineries. In other words, there is no loading, generally speaking, on Saturday, and, of course, none on Sunday or on holidays. But during the normal working hours, why, tank cars are loaded every day.

Q. So, for five days each week then tank cars will be leaving for these various bulk plants?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that correct—somewhere in these various area, in the areas to which you have referred, 1, 2, 3, and 4?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the schedule for loading of tank trucks?

A. I am not familiar with the tank trucks loading schedule because I believe in some cases they operate beyond the normal eight hour working day and they may operate until later on in the evening. I am not familiar with just what those schedules are.

Q. Would they load every day?

[fol. 1714] Mr. Hall: Whereabouts, Mr. Thody?

Mr. Thody: I am referring to the particular four distributive areas, 1, 2, 3, and 4.

Mr. Hall: Where generally the products are coming directly from the refineries to?

Mr. Thody: That is all.

Q. The testimony you have given refers only to this category?

A. Yes.

Q. Every day then tank trucks will be——

A. (Interposing) Dispatched, yes.

Q. Those tank trucks and tank cars will go directly to the bulk plants in each of those areas referred to?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Each day?

A. Yes, sir, substation bulk plants in those areas.

Q. Is there any established routine or delivery schedule for each bulk plant? By that I mean, for instance, every Thursday does "Bulk Plant X" receive a delivery of gasoline, or is it only in pursuance of the orders placed by them?

A. That is right, in pursuance of the orders placed by them. There is no specific day or time that these orders are to arrive.

Q. So, each bulk plant would not necessarily receive a [fol. 1715] daily shipment?

A. Oh, no, sir—no, sir.

Q. Do you know of the capacity of each of—the gasoline capacity of each—refining capacity of each of the refineries?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Do you have a breakdown on the types of petroleum products, the classifications of various types of petroleum products distributed by you? In the industry is there any general recognized classification of petroleum products?

A. Well, I don't know just exactly how to answer that question. Petroleum products will cover a very considerable number.

Q. Are they referred to sometimes as package goods and sometimes as bulk goods?

A. Oh, yes, sir. That is what we have in this sheet.

Q. This refers to—only to——

A. (Interposing) Bulk products.

Q. And by bulk products——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute. When counsel said "this", he was referring to document which has been marked Plaintiff's Exhibit A-1 for Identification.

Mr. Thody:

Q. In preparing Exhibit A-1 for Identification, you used the term "bulk distribution". What is meant by that term?

A. Bulk distribution is meant to apply on those products [fol. 1716] that are moved from the refineries in tank cars, tank trucks, and barges, and in tankers. Now, we are referring to the entire sheet there, I presume?

Q. Yes.

A. That covers all of those types of transportation handling what we refer to as bulk products.

Q. Does the term "bulk products"—or "bulk distribution" also refer to products other than gasoline?

A. Yes, sir. Refers to gas oils or other products that would be handled by these means of transportation, handling them in bulk form.

Q. Could you list them? What is embraced by "gas oil"?

A. Well, in our company we have products known as Standard diesel fuel, Standard stove oil, Standard furnace oil.

Q. Now, in—do all of the items go to the bulk plants?

Mr. Hall: You mean, all of the items he referred to in his previous answer?

Mr. Thody: All the items referred to in the previous answer.

A. Not necessarily. There will be some bulk plants that will carry one or two grades of motor gasolines, possibly one grade of these gas oils I have just mentioned. Other plants will carry all grades of these various products.

Q. In respect to those classifications referred to in your previous answer, will the bulk plants have facilities for [fol. 1717] segregation in individual tanks, or will they have separate tanks for it?

A. They will have separate tanks. For example, a bulk plant that handles two grades of motor gasoline and one grade of gas oil, there will be three tanks, one for each grade of motor gasoline and one for the gas oil.

Q. Are lubricating oils included in the bulk distribution group?

A. Well, there are very few of these bulk plants that have bulk storage facilities for handling lubricating oils. Generally speaking, these bulk plants receive their lubricating oils in package goods. That is generally speaking, of course, in this entire area (indicating) with all of these various bulk plants.

Q. And by "package goods" you are referring to—I would like to introduce or have marked for identification the discussion marked "Package Goods Distribution—Map Exhibit 'B' ". Will you mark this "B-1 for Identification"?

(The statement entitled "Package Goods Distribution—Map Exhibit 'B' " was marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit B-1 for Identification.")

Q. Did you prepare this?

A. Yes, sir, I prepared this statement with respect to the map.

Mr. Thody: Will you mark this map for identification?

[fol. 1718] (The map relating to Exhibit B-1 was marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit B for Identification.")

Q. Will you tell what this represents?

Mr. Hall: Counsel refers to the document just marked for Identification "Plaintiff's Exhibit B".

A. There are four identified distributive areas that are marked "A", "B", "C", and "D", which show the approximate areas that are served by the Richmond refinery, the El Segundo refinery, and the Willbridge and Point Wells Distribution Terminals.

Mr. Thody:

Q. You prepared these?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In your official capacity as Analyst in the Distribution Section?

Mr. Hall: He prepared them at our request, Mr. Thody. I don't think that falls within his official duties, but they were prepared by him because of his knowledge of the subject matter.

Mr. Thody:

Q. In reference to your testimony to the Distributive Areas 1, 2, 3, and 4 referred to in Exhibit A-1, in every instances does the gasoline go from the refinery only to bulk plants or in some instances does it go to marine terminals?

A. In some instances it goes to marine terminals insofar as District No. 1 is concerned, and in District—no, [fol. 1719] that is all—District No. 1.

Q. Could you tell us what a marine terminal is?

A. That is a bulk plant that has facilities to receive bulk stock by barges and/or tankers, and also has facilities for redistributing that stock by tank cars and/or tank trucks.

Q. It is not necessarily a larger storage facility than a regular bulk plant?

A. Yes, sir, they would have larger facilities than the so-called bulk plants which are located at inland destinations and receive stocks by tank cars and/or tank trucks only.

Q. Do you know the capacity of this marine terminal which is supplied in Distributive Area No. 1 referred to in Exhibit A-1?

A. No, I do not have the information available here with respect to the tankage facilities at the various marine terminals in Distributive Area No. 1.

Q. Is there a standard size for the capacity of the various bulk plants? Is there any uniform standard as to size? I assume there are large bulk plants and small bulk plants?

A. Yes, there are. Very definitely it varies with the size of the communities, the area which the bulk plant serves. I am not qualified to say there is a uniform measure for those plants. I know that in a great many of them [fol. 1720] there are certain size tanks that are of a certain capacity that generally are used, but they will vary from bulk plant to bulk plant.

Q. In Distributive Area No. 1, referred to in Exhibit A-1, do you know of the size of any of the bulk plants in that area?

A. Well, the number of points that are located in Distributive Area No. 1, I can presume from my—just my experience in handling shipments to those places that there are bulk plants that have tanks that are approximately 463 barrels capacity. That is known as a 10½ by 30 foot tank. We have a great many of those throughout our entire distributive areas, so I am quite certain there are tanks of that size in these bulk plants.

Q. What are these bulk tanks used for?

A. They are used to receive bulk products in large quantities for redistributing, over which we have no jurisdiction, in small quantities to their particular marketing area.

Q. Are they used for storage purposes?

A. Well, yes. That is why they are there, for storage purposes, so they can stock from those tanks.

Q. On a permanent basis?

A. Yes, sir, on a permanent basis.

Q. Or is it storage for—in connection with the distribution and the subdistribution?

[fol. 1721] Mr. Hall: Your question is not clear, Counsel. I am going to object to if on the ground it is vague and uncertain, it calls for a conclusion of the witness, speculation and conjecture.

Mr. Thody: In the placing of these bulk plants, was there any study made as to the particular advantages of one location over another?

Mr. Hall: Referring to the number of plants generally or in any particular?

Mr. Thody: In general—in, well, in general.

A. Well, the bulk plants are not under the jurisdiction of the Distribution Department, and we do not determine their location, but no doubt the department that handles that puts in adequate study in determining the geographical location of a bulk plant, for example, to serve their particular trade that is available in that area.

Q. I understand from your testimony then its principal function is for redistribution?

A. The bulk plants?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. I refer to now in exhibit marked for identification A-1 to the second category of distributive areas, Area No. 5, and Area No. 6. I notice that you have indicated that these areas are supplied by tank cars and/or tank trucks from [fol. 1722] the Salt Lake City refinery—Salt Lake City refinery of the Utah Oil Refining Company, is that correct?

Mr. Hall: No, that is not correct, Counsel. If you will read the question.

(The record was read.)

Mr. Hall: That is not what A-1 shows. A-1 shows that Distributive Area No. 5 is supplied from the Salt Lake City refinery of the Utah Oil Refining Company. And that Distributive Area No. 6 is supplied from the El Paso refinery of the Standard Oil Company of Texas.

Mr. Thody: That is correct.

Q. Referring to Distributive Area No. 5, can you describe the manner in which the bulk goods are supplied from the Utah Oil Refining Company to the bulk plants indicated on the map in that particular area?

A. We set up standing instructions, standing order instructions at the Salt Lake refinery and the stations that are shown in that area marked "No. 5" are instructed to send their orders to Salt Lake for filling, and upon receipt of those orders then the Salt Lake refinery ships the bulk stocks back to the bulk plants.

Q. In Area No. 5 referred to will the tank cars and tank trucks load at the Utah Oil refinery at Salt Lake City or are there sub-terminal points?

A. Well, I don't know that I am fully qualified to answer [fol. 1723] that. My understanding is that they load at the Utah Oil Refining Company. Now—and that is at Salt Lake City, and they have tank truck loading and tank car loading facilities, and are shipped directly from the refineries, I understand, but I am—I have never been to Salt Lake City and I can't say I am fully qualified technically to say just exactly what the layout is there.

Q. Is that gasoline received from the Utah Oil Refining Company purchased by Standard?

A. I am not fully qualified to answer that. We are informed as to the quantity that is available to us there for reshipment into this distributive area and we arrange to see that that quantity is not over-shipped over any given period of time.

Q. Is that pursuant to a contract?

A. Well, there again I am not familiar with just what the arrangement is with the Utah Oil Refining Company. As the Distribution Department, we receive information indicating that volume that is available for shipping.

Q. Is there a guaranteed volume available to you, a guaranteed supply?

Mr. Hall: I think that calls for the conclusion of the witness—is objected to on that ground.

Mr. Thody: What is the volume?

A. I am sorry, I am not in a position to say just exactly [fol. 1724] what that is at this time. I don't know. But it is sufficient to take care of the distribution.

Q. What determines the volume?

Mr. Hall: You mean, that is the volume that is shipped out of the refinery at Salt Lake?

Mr. Thody:

Q. What determines the volume of gasoline made available to you for shipment through Distributive Area No. 5?

A. Well, that is determined by orders from—whatever arrangement it is—contract—or such as it is. I'm not familiar with just what that is.

Q. You do not know—do I understand your testimony to be that you do not know whether the—strike that.

Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Q. Are each of the dots referred to in Exhibit A in Distributive Area No. 5 bulk plant locations?

A. Yes, as far as I know. I might make this qualification. There may be an occasional one in this district, in Distributive District No. 5, and in others, other districts that happen to be shown there that may just receive package stocks. That is a marketing plant map.

Q. Well, confine——

A. Generally speaking, those are bulk plants, all of those points in District No. 5.

[fol. 1725] Mr. Thody: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Q. In Area No. 5 do you know how the bulk plants are operated, either by Standard personnel or by some other arrangement?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Do you know how often shipments are made out of the Utah Oil refinery in, first, tank cars to the various bulk plants?

A. No, sir, I do not. There are quite a number of stations in there, and I would presume that——

Q. By "stations" you refer to bulk plants?

A. I mean bulk plants — that deliveries—shipments, rather, out of Salt Lake refinery are possibly made daily.

Q. But you cannot say?

A. I cannot state that definitely, no, sir.

Q. What is the situation with respect to tank trucks?

A. That would be the same situation as far as I am concerned. I cannot definitely state that it is done daily.

Q. Do you know how shipments are made? Are they made pursuant to orders from the various bulk plants?

A. Yes, sir. The orders are placed by the bulk plants with the Salt Lake refinery and they are shipped.

Q. Are they placed directly with the Utah Oil Refining Company or are they placed with a Standard representative?

[fol. 1726] A. Our standing order instructions are placed directly with Utah Oil Refining Company. I might have to double check that to be absolutely certain, but I believe that to be the procedure.

Q. Are all types of bulk goods distributed from the Utah Oil Refining Company to these various bulk plants?

Mr. Hall: You mean—May I have the question, please?

(The record was read.)

Mr. Hall: You mean, Mr. Thody, the category that he previously referred to as gasoline, stove oil, diesel oil, furnace oil?

Mr. Thody: That is right.

A. They have, I believe—I would have to double check this—both grades of motor gasoline and certain grades of the gas oils, but I can't state definitely.

Q. Are there any lubricating oils?

A. No, sir.

Q. Will you address your remarks now, Mr. Olaine, to Distributive Area No. 6 as referred to in Exhibit A-1 for identification; do you know what arrangements have been made by Standard Oil Company of California with the Standard Oil Company of Texas for the supply of bulk goods for Distributive Area No. 6?

A. We are informed as to the volume that is available to us at El Paso and we gauge our distribution accordingly. [fol. 1727] We don't enter into the arrangements as to the volume that is to be available there at El Paso. We are told as to what is going to be available to us, but we gear our distribution accordingly.

Q. Is that a fixed amount quarterly or annually or——

A. Well, it is a fixed amount, but it may vary from month to month or quarter to quarter. That depends on their production activities at El Paso.

Q. Do you know what determines that other than——

A. (Interposing) No, I don't. No.

Q. Will the demand of the various bulk plant operators in the bulk plants located in Distributive Area No. 6 have any relationship to that volume?

Mr. Hall: He said already he doesn't know, Mr. Thody, what does regulate that amount that is available. I don't object to you asking him questions within his province. I don't think he should be called upon to speculate.

Mr. Thody:

Q. Is it within your knowledge that Standard of Texas is able to supply all of your needs?

A. No, I am sorry, I couldn't say as to that.

Q. Do you know whether or not the supply arrangement with respect to Area No. 6 is worked out pursuant to a contract?

A. No, I am not familiar with that.

Q. Are the tank cars referred to in your discussion of [fol. 1728] Area No. 6 tank cars under the jurisdiction and control of Standard of California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is the same situation true with respect to fuel trucks?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have any knowledge as to a schedule of deliveries made from the El Paso refinery to the bulk plants in Area No. 6?

Mr. Hall: That is not clear to me.

Mr. Thody: Strike the question.

Q. Are tank cars loaded regularly from the El Paso refinery to supply the bulk plants?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many days per week?

A. Well, I can't definitely state. The tank cars are loaded every working day, but—well, I just can't make that definite statement. The shipments are regularly made from El Paso into District No. 6.

Q. What do you mean by "regularly made"?

A. Well, these stations have their instructions to place their orders for bulk products on the El Paso refinery, and the El Paso refinery has instructions from us to supply these stations. So, depending on the volume of the orders going in there will indicate how much is being shipped from [fol. 1729] the El Paso refinery.

Mr. Hall: In referring to—may I ask the witness this?

Mr. Thody: Yes.

Mr. Hall: In referring to "stations", do you mean "bulk plants"?

A. Bulk plants, pardon me.

Mr. Thody:

Q. Are there any instructions to the bulk plants that they should place their orders on regular intervals, on a weekly basis, on a monthly basis, or pursuant to any set period?

A. The bulk plants have instructions to place their orders for bulk stocks on the El Paso refinery as they require replenishment of bulk stocks.

Q. Is it customary not only with respect to bulk plant operators, generally, that they place orders for replenishment of bulk goods when their supplies reach any, their reserves reach any particular level; that is, is it customary for them to wait until they are half empty or third empty or quarter empty?

A. Well, I can't say that there are any specific instructions as to exactly when they are to place their orders in relation to the inventory that they have on hand in their tanks. That will be governed by their volume that is moving through those tanks which will vary from time to time, and——

Q. Is there any recognized established dealing in the [fol. 1730] industry with respect to replenishing their reserves after it reaches a particular level?

A. I can't say as to that. That will be governed to some extent on the location of the bulk plant and the length of time that it takes their bulk stocks to come from their supply source or refinery source.

Q. Insofar as Area No. 6 is concerned, do I understand your testimony here again to be that you have no knowledge as to the distribution methods employed after the bulk plant?

A. That is correct. Until the stock arrives at the bulk plant only.

Q. I should like now to direct your attention, Mr. Olaine, to the third category of your breakdown on Exhibit A-1 for Identification entitled "Bulk Distributive Areas Supply by Distribution Terminals of the Standard Oil Company of California." You have referred there, Mr. Olaine, to distribution terminals. What do you mean by that designation?

A. Those are terminals that receive bulk products from the refineries by barge and/or tanker and have facilities to receive these products, store them, and reship them by tank car and/or tank trucks to bulk plants.

Q. Well, how is the gasoline distributed from the distribution terminals to these bulk plants? Is there any general way or does that vary?

Mr. Hall: Pardon me, just a moment, Mr. Thody. Doesn't [fol. 1731] that appear from Exhibit A-1 for Identification?

Mr. Thody: I think that only refers to the distribution terminals, or is this—off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Q. Mr. Olaine, I refer you to your—the third category under Exhibit A-1 and ask—and specifically as to Distributive Area No. 8—Distributive Area No. 8 you have indicated is supplied by tank trucks from Moss Landing. What do you mean by that statement?

A. I mean, the bulk plants in Distributive Area No. 8 are supplied.

Q. Are supplied from the distribution terminal?

A. At Moss Landing.

Q. At Moss Landing?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Thank you. In your discussion of the other distributive areas under this category, namely, Distributive Areas Nos. 7 to 23, inclusively, do you indicate that the gasoline is supplied from the refinery to the particular distribution terminals referred to under the discussion of each of those areas and then in turn supplied by each or by such distributive area to bulk plants?

A. Disfribution terminals to bulk plants by tank trucks and/or tank cars in the respective distributive areas.

Q. In some instances you have discussed transportation [fol. 1732] by tanker. I refer specifically to your discussion, "Distributive Area No. 20" in Exhibit A-1. Point Wells, I assume, is the distributive area—is the distributive center or distributive terminal?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that particular distribution terminal is supplied by barge from the refinery, is that correct?

A. It is supplied by tanker from the refinery.

Q. No—or barge.

A. Well, the area—the bulk plants in Area No. 20 are supplied from Point Wells by tank cars, tank trucks and/or barges from Point Wells, but——

Q. By that you mean the terminal plants—the bulk plants.

A. Are supplied, but Point Wells is supplied by tanker from Richmond and/or El Segundo.

Q. Are those tankers operated by Standard?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Referring generally, Mr. Olaine, to the general distribution of bulk products throughout the area indicated or area set forth by you in your Exhibit A for Identification, do you have any—to your knowledge do you know fo the number of tank trucks either owned, operated, or leased by you?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Do you know of the number of tankers used by you in [fol. 1733] your general distribution in this area?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Is there a fleet of tankers used exclusively for coastal distribution?

A. In your tanker fleet there are various tankers that are used in supplying these various bulk terminals up and down the Pacific Coast.

Q. They are used exclusively for that distribution—strike that.

Mr. Hall: Pardon me—off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Thody:

Q. Can you state, Mr. Olaine, approximately how many tankers are used constantly for distribution of bulk products in the Pacific Coastal trade for the United States markets?

Mr. Hall: You mean, say, during the year 1946, or something like that, because—?

Mr. Thody: Continuously.

Mr. Hall: It differed during—the situation was entirely different during the war, you know.

Mr. Thody: Presently used.

Mr. Hall: Well, I don't want him to state presently. This case takes only up to '46. Well, that is all right. You can answer the question.

A. No, I cannot. I am not in a position to answer that [fol. 1734] question specifically, because I don't know just how many tankers are in that particular trade.

Mr. Thody:

Q. In the area referred, covered by Exhibit A, do you know of the total number of bulk plants used for the distribution of bulk products?

Mr. Hall: Well, pardon me. That would be a counting of all the dots on Exhibit A, wouldn't it? I have no objection.

A. Offhand I can't answer that question, because——

Mr. Thody:

Q. If we were to count the dots on this map, would that give us an accurate portrayal of the number of bulk plants?

A. No, sir. There may be some points on there where plants have been closed, and I did notice one there—in connection with war activities there was some Camp so-and-so indicated there. We may have had temporarily a plant, but it has now been closed.

Q. Was this accurate as of July 1947, at the time of its preparation.

A. Well, I don't know the exact reason for the preparation of that particular map at that time. So, I can't say that that accurately portrays the number of bulk plants that we have under discussion here.

Q. This is substantially accurate, your would say, with the minor exceptions that you have referred to?

A. Yes, I would say that is substantially accurate, [fol. 1735] but——

Mr. Hall: And the map you have been referring to in the last preceding questions and answer is, of course, Exhibit A for Identification, is that correct?

Mr. Thody: That is correct.

A. Yes.

Q. I direct your attention now, Mr. Olaine, to the map prepared by you and marked for identification Plaintiff's Exhibit B, and the statement prepared by you and previously identified by you as Exhibit B-1. Mr. Olaine, what goods are embraced in your designation "Package Goods Distribution" as referred to in Exhibit B-1 for Identification?

A. Well, they would be the products that these bulk plants do not have in bulk storage and therefore must receive these particular products in what we refer to as package form, that is, in iron barrels or cans and cases or other types of containers.

Q. What are those products?

A. Well, they could be at some one—at an individual bulk plant, for example, that does not have a sufficient volume of one grade of motor gasoline business to warrant a bulk tank, it could receive that particular product in iron barrels.

Q. What is the product—what are the products?

A. That would vary from bulk plant to bulk plant. I [fol. 1736] mean, I couldn't give you a list of products.

Q. Of those package goods, which types are normally sold through service station dealer outlets?

A. I am not in position to answer that one.

Q. Is RPM can oil generally known as a package goods?

A. It is generally known as a package goods.

Mr. Thody: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Q. Do you have a breakdown of the types of products covered under the term "package goods"? Are lubricating oils considered package goods?

A. Generally speaking, they are considered package goods. The only places where they would not be considered package goods would be a few exceptionally large bulk plants where there is sufficient business to warrant that these bulk plants receive lubricating oils by tank cars and/or tank trucks.

[fol. 1737] A. Are lubricating oils packaged in large drum containers considered package goods?

A. Large drum containers? I presume——

Q. Twenty gallon or forty-two gallon.

A. Fifty-three gallon barrels are, generally speaking, the general size of the lubricating barrels.

Q. Is there any fixed limit on what is a package goods; for instance, is over fifty-three gallons considered bulk and under fifty-three gallons considered package goods?

A. Well, under fifty-three gallons would be the barrels and the cans and the smaller types of containers. But containers that would be over fifty-three gallons, I'm not familiar with that.

Q. Well, under fifty-three, is that considered package goods?

A. That would be considered package goods, yes, sir.

Q. I refer you, Mr. Olaine, to the first group in Plaintiffs' Exhibit B-1 for identification entitled "Package Goods—Supplied by California Refineries—." Is there a packaging plant at Richmond refinery?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there another packaging plant at the El Segundo refinery?

A. El Segundo?

Q. El Segundo refinery.

[fol. 1738] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do they package lubricating oils?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And greases?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: Where are you referring to now?

Mr. Thody: The first group.

Mr. Hall: Both Richmond and El Segundo?

Mr. Thody: Yes.

Mr. Hall: Your last two questions weren't clear as to whether you were talking about El Segundo or Richmond. Were you talking about both?

Mr. Thody: I was talking about both.

Q. Do they package at Richmond?

A. They package both the lubricating oils and greases at Richmond, and the lubricating oils at El Segundo, and I am not too certain as to the greases at El Segundo. That is something I cannot make a definite statement on.

Q. Now, on Distributive Area No. A—I am referring to Exhibit B for Identification—you state that this area is supplied by box cars or package trucks from the Richmond refinery. What are the destinations of those shipments from the Richmond refinery? Do they go directly to the bulk plant operators?

A. Yes, sir. They go directly to the bulk plants.

[fol. 1739] Q. Are shipments made pursuant to orders placed by those bulk plant operators?

A. The orders are placed by the bulk plants.

Q. Are box cars loaded daily at the Richmond refinery for package goods for shipment into Area A?

A. They are loaded during the regular working week, and I presume that there is enough business in the way of package goods to say definitely they are loaded daily. But there could be days when no package cars might be shipped.

Q. Are package goods of this character ever sent to the accessory warehouses in this area?

A. I cannot answer that. I am not familiar with that phase of it.

Q. You do not know whether the bulk plant operators——

Mr. Hall: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Thody:

Q. Coming to Distributive Area No. B in Exhibit B-1 for Identification, do I understand from your previous statement that all types of lubricating oils, with the exception of minor greases are packaged at El Segundo refinery?

Mr. Hall: Well, I think his previous statement was that he was uncertain about the packaging of greases at El Segundo. So, I don't think—I think the question should be reframed.

[fol. 1740] A. May I ask this, too? I would like to qualify that. When you said all brands or all grades of lubricating oil, there may be some particular types of lubricating oil that may not be filled at the El Segundo refinery. I am not qualified to say definitely on every one of the lubricating oils.

Mr. Thody:

Q. Do you know what types are packaged at El Segundo?
A. No, sir, I do not.

Mr. Hall: You mean, types of lubricating oil?
Mr. Thody: Types of lubricating oil.

A. No, I do not.

Q. Are shipments made from the El Segundo refinery of lubricating oils to all of the bulk plants within Distributive Area No. B, as reflected by Exhibit B for identification, from the El Segundo packaging plant?

A. Yes. There may be a few of the bulk plants that do not have warehouses and do not handle package goods. They only handle bulk stocks. There are a few of those scattered through our entire area as shown on this exhibit.

Mr. Hall: Exhibit B?

A. Exhibit B.

Mr. Thody:

Q. Are all the dots indicated on Exhibit B in Marketing Area or Distributive Area B designations for bulk plants?
[fol. 1741] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is this an accurate designation of such bulk plants; have there been any changes since you——?

A. There may have been some changes and some of those plants may have closed down; there may have been some, a few, where a new plant opened.

Q. But this is substantially accurate?
A. This is substantially accurate, yes, sir.

Q. Coming up to Distributive Area No. C, as referred to in Exhibit B-1 and as represented by Exhibit B, is there a packaging plant located at Willbridge—

A. (Interposing) Certain of the——,

Q. —or is that just a distribution terminal?

A. That is a terminal and they fill certain of their bulk products in packages. Certain bulk products are filled in iron barrels and shipped out with other package goods to these bulk plants in Distributive Area C.

Q. What is the source of the products from—what is the source of the products at Willbridge—the source of the merchandise?

A. The bulk products are received at Willbridge by tanker from the refineries and then at the Willbridge terminal they are filled into iron barrels. Now,——

Q Of all sizes?

A. No. Just into iron barrels.

[fol. 1742] Q. What size?

A. Well, generally they are fifty-three gallon barrels, fifty-two gallon or fifty-five gallon barrels.

Q. Is there any smaller packaging done at Willbridge?

A. No, they do not do any of the small packaging at Willbridge. The small package goods for Willbridge and also used by Willbridge for redistribution to these bulk plants in Distributive Area C are received from Richmond in box car lots.

Q. Are they sent directly from Willbridge to the bulk plant location? Directly to the bulk plant locations shown in Distributive Area C?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I refer your attention to Distributive Area D, as indicated in Exhibit B-1 and as reflected by Exhibit B. Will you explain the nature of the operation conducted at Point Wells?

A. Bulk products are transported from the refineries by tanker to Point Wells, and at Point Wells they have facilities for filling iron barrels of these various bulk products; and with regard to the lubricating oils, they have a lube blending plant there which receives the bulk stocks from the refinery by tanker. These are base lubricating oils and they are blended there in the lube blending plant, and various grades of luricating oils are made at Point Wells and [fol. 1743] they are also packaged at Point Wells.

Q. Is all the packaging at Point Wells—strike that.

A. Possibly I could clarify that.

Q. Just a second. Are the lubricating oils received from the refinery by barge kept separate from the lubricating oils which are blended?

A. The lubricating oils are received from the refinery by tanker rather than by barge, as you just mentioned, and these are base lubricating oil stocks and are segregated at Point Wells and then put in their mixing packaging operation up there and placed into barrels and other packages. Now, other package stocks are also received directly from Richmond in box car lots at Point Wells, greases and various other package stocks that are only manufactured at Richmond, and these are warehoused at Point Wells and then are sent out to these bulk plants in Distributive Area D along with packages that are packaged at Point Wells from bulk products at that point and lubricating oils at that point.

Q. Is there any particular size container—strike that. Are all sizes of packaging—is the packaging performed at Point Wells done in all types of containers or is just a certain limited size?

A. I cannot answer that question, because I am not familiar with the entire packaging setup with respect to [fol. 1744] lubricating oil packaging done at that point and I don't know that it applies on all grades of lubricating oils referred in Distribute Area D. Certain of the lubricating oils no doubt come from Richmond in box car lots in packages.

Q. When you refer to box car lots, does that mean large containers or——

A. No, I mean barrels or in smaller containers than barrels which are in boxes or cases, or, that is, cans and other smaller types of containers.

Q. Directing your attention now, Mr. Olaine, to the small lubricating RPM containers as used in automobiles, small quart containers, do you know where the packaging of that small goods is performed?

A. No, I cannot state that that is performed at Point Wells. I don't know to the extent that that lube blending plant has been completed for its packaging operations.

Q. Point Wells does package small containers, small RPM containers?

A. Well, I can't definitely state that. I know they package the barrels and I believe they handle the smaller containers but I cannot state definitely on that.

Q. Do you know whether or not Willbridge packages small containers?

A. Definitely not. Willbridge does not.

Q. Do you know whether or not Richmond packages small [fol. 1745] containers?

A. Yes, sir, Richmond does.

Q. On these box car lots which emanate from the Richmond refinery to Point Wells by tanker—is that what it is, tanker box car lots, too?

A. No. They go by rail.

Q. By rail?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that also include small RPM containers?

A. It would include the small RPM containers if Point Wells does not handle that type of packaging. That is what I am not clear on. If they do, they would not be shipped from Richmond. They could come up from Richmond by tanker in the base stocks and the lube blending plant would handle the packaging in the small container. I am not certain about the small containers. I am not familiar with that detail of the operation with that lube blending plant at Point Wells.

Q. You state, Mr. Olaine, you are employed in the Distribution Division?

A. Distribution Department.

Q. Distribution Department of Standard Oil of California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you tell me approximately how many personnel are employed in that division?

[fol. 1746] Mr. Hall: In that department, you mean?

Mr. Thody: In that department.

A. I believe at the present time there are twenty-nine. I are not absolutely certain as to that exact number.

Q. What is the area covered by—the area of distribution covered by the Department? Do you handle international shipments, distribution of international shipments or solely domestic shipments that you are concerned with?

A. We are concerned with domestic shipments. We do not handle the distribution on international—or foreign shipments, I presume? We have a Foreign Trade Department that handles that foreign trade phase of it.

Q. The states indicated in Exhibit A, that covers the total area of your distribution?

A. No, it does not cover the total area. We handle the distribution of the entire area in that exhibit.

Q. In addition what other area?

A. The Territory of Alaska, and Hawaii, is a part of our domestic distribution.

Q. The principal function of the Department is the distribution of bulk goods from the refiners to the bulk plants?

Mr. Hall: No. That is not what he said, Mr. Thody.

Mr. Thody:

Q. What is its principal function?

A. The distribution of petroleum products in the quan- [fol. 1747] tities desired and at the points desired from our refineries and other sources of supply, and at the lowest practicable distribution cost. Now, that would cover bulk products and package products.

Q. Does the function of the Department cease at the bulk plant level?

A. Yes, sir. We arrange to see that the bulk products and the package products get to the bulk plants, and that is the extent of our jurisdiction.

Q. What department would handle the distribution after, from the bulk plant level to the consumer level?

A. That would be the Marketing Department.

Q. Are there any peculiar problems of the Standard Stations, Inc., aside from the Standard of California, which you would handle?

A. We have in our distribution activities—we don't handle the distribution with respect to the Standard Stations. That is all beyond the bulk plant. Our own operations take up to this bulk plant and from there on out it is Marketing.

Q. Do you have any figures on the overall capacity of all of the bulk plants?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Mr. Thody: Off the record.

Mr. Hall: Is that all with this witness?

Mr. Thody: Yes.

[fol. 1748] Cross-examination.

Mr. Hall:

Q. It is true, is it not, Mr. Olaine, that the Distribution Department is responsible for the efficient and economical overall distribution of the Company's petroleum products, both bulk and package?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And to that end it is the duty of the department, is it not, to see that supplies of products will be placed economically where and when they are needed for ultimate distribution?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is true, is it not, that Standard Oil Company of California has no refineries outside the State of California—none that you know of?

A. Yes, sir, that is true.

Q. That is true?

A. That is correct.

Q. The only refineries that Standard Oil Company of California has are located in the State of California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And those refineries are located at Richmond, Bakersfield, and El Segundo?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1749] Q. No, in preparing the maps which have been marked Plaintiff's Exhibits A and B for Identification you had in mind a distinction between bulk and package goods, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, take the map which is marked Plaintiff's Exhibit A for Identification. Will you tell us what the bulk ones are, the transit of which that map was designed to illustrate.

A. The products?

Q. The bulk products.

A. The bulk products—the names of the particular bulk products?

Q. Which that map was designed to illustrate the transit of.

A. Well, that covers Chevron Gasoline, Standard Diesel Fuel, Standard Furnace Oil, and Standard Stove Oil.

Q. There is a further qualification with respect to that map, is there not; namely, that it was designed to show the transit of those products in a fluid state by either tanker or barge or tank car or truck and trailer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was not designed, was it, to show the transit of lubricating oil in drums, was it?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 1750] Q. When one of the fluids that you have described is put in some kind of a container, like a drum, then it becomes package goods, the transit of which is designed to be illustrated by the map which is marked Plaintiff's Exhibit B for Identification?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, directing your attention to package goods for a moment and directing your attention to the point on Exhibit B for Identification which is marked "Willbridge" near the City of Portland in Oregon, from what source does Willbridge get the package goods which are sent out to the bulk plants from Willbridge?

A. Certain of the products move by tanker from the refineries to Willbridge, and they are packaged at Willbridge, and other package goods are received by Willbridge by box car lots.

Q. I see. Now, the stock that comes to Willbridge from a refinery by water would come from both Richmond and El Segundo, or just Richmond?

A. No, it would be Richmond and El Segundo.

Q. Now, directing your attention to Point Wells, which is near Seattle and is shown on the map which is Exhibit B for Identification, will you tell us again the source of the package goods that are sent out to the bulk plants from [fol. 1751] Point Wells?

A. Certain of the products are received from the refineries by tankers and are filled in containers at Point Wells, and other package goods are received from Richmond in box car lots.

Q. Do any of the package goods go to either Willbridge or Point Wells in box cars from El Segundo?

A. No, sir, not to my knowledge.

Q. Do any of the package goods to Willbridge or Point Wells go to those points from the refinery at Bakersfield?

A. No, sir. There are no shipments of package goods out of Bakersfield refinery. They have no packaging facilities at that point.

Q. Is it true that commodities that come to Point Wells and are there packaged, which you have described as coming from the refineries, would come from both El Segundo and Richmond?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Thody: That is all, Mr. Olaine.

(Signed) Francis S. Olaine.

[fol. 1752] 9:00 O'clock A. M., March 10, 1948, 1712 Standard Oil Bldg., San Francisco, California

L. M. Bussert, a witness called on behalf of the plaintiffs, being first duly cautioned and sworn by the Notary Public to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

Mr. Thody:

Q. Will you state your full name for the record?

A. Leonardo Money Bussert.

Q. What position do you occupy with Standard Oil of California?

A. Manager, Operations Department, Marketing.

Q. How long have you held this position? Under this specific title.

A. Four days.

Q. In what capacity——

A. (Interposing) Prior to that Assistant General Manager, Marketing Operations.

Q. Previous to that?

A. Well, that position was held for four years, that title.

Mr. Thody: Off the record.

[fol. 1753] (Discussion off the record.)

Q. How long have you been associated with the Company?

A. Thirty and a half years.

Q. In what capacities?

A. Various capacities, from the present backwards, being Assistant District Manager, Assistant District Sales Manager, Superintendent of Sales, Special Agent.

Q. That is sufficient. Could you tell us what the function of the Marketing Division is or the Marketing Department?

A. Could I go off the record for an explanation, first?

(Off the record.)

A. As I understand it, the function of the Marketing Department is to market or take to the points of retailer and consumer usage the products to be offered for sale.

Q. Does the Marketing Department have various component divisions?

A. It does.

Q. Could you name some of them?

A. Wholesale Division, Retail, Standard Stations, Operations.

Q. Could you tell me what the function of the Operations Division is within the Marketing Department?

A. To supervise functionally all bulk plants and directly [fol. 1754] certain other bulk plants; supervise functionally certain accessory warehouses and directly operate other warehouses; to operate directly certain terminal operations and functionally supervise others; to take care of the required engineering pertaining to the Marketing Department's operations; to take care of the classification of labor; to establish proper wage scales.

Q. That is sufficient. We are primarily interested here in distribution, marketing problems, rather than engineering problems. Approximately how many people are employed in the Marketing Department?

A. Something over 3,000.

Q. And approximately how many people are employed in the Operations Division?

A. Well, just generally speaking, 500 in Operations.

Q. Do those 500 people operate out of San Francisco, or are you decentralized?

A. We are decentralized.

Q. Do you have divisions, or is the area broken down, the Marketing Area for Standard, broken down geographically or functionally?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute, let me have that question back.

(The record was read.)

Mr. Hall: That still isn't clear to me. Maybe it is to the witness. Are you talking about the whole company or the Marketing Department or the Operations Division of the [fol. 1755] Marketing Department?

Mr. Thody: I will rephrase the question.

Q. Is the Operations Division—you say it is decentralized—is it divided to handle problems, to handle its assignment on a geographical basis or is it decentralized functionally? Do I make myself clear?

A. No, sir, you do not.

Q. Administratively how is the Operations Division set up?

A. It is set up into areas so that supervision can be given adequately and competently to an area that is best served from a certain location. I'd call it geographically and functionally, both.

Q. Do you have the personnel assigned through the territory, the Marketing Area, covered by Standard Oil or covered by the Operations Division?

A. I do not understand your question.

Q. Well, for the various localities you say you have this broken up?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have men assigned in charge of a particular area—are you broken down into districts?

A. Yes.

Q. Into zones?

A. Yes.

[fol. 1756] Q. Could you describe just briefly how that is broken up; what is it, on a state basis?

A. It is not on a state basis. It is on areas considered the easiest for supervision from the central location.

Q. How many such areas do you have for supervisory purpose?

A. I think it is divided differently for Operations than it is for Sales. Which do you wish?

Q. For Operations.

A. Eleven areas.

Mr. Hall: How many was that?

A. Eleven.

Mr. Thody:

Q. Could you describe briefly the administrative setup for each or for a single area? Do you have an area manager?

A. With respect to San Francisco and operations there, we have a superintendent whose headquarters are in Oakland. He has suitable assistants on the staff. They are responsible for the direct operation of two loading racks and one plant in Oakland, one plant in San Francisco, and functionally responsible for the engineering and operations of an area from King City to the Oregon line, from the Pacific Ocean to a meandering line, generally speaking, coming down about 150 miles east of the Ocean.

[fol. 1757] Q. Is that a typical setup for each of the eleven districts?

A. There is no typical setup. They are divided in areas consistent with the best administration.

Q. And the problems with respect to each area would be peculiar to that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you say the Operations Division is charged with the functional distribution—or functional marketing——

A. Function operations.

Q. —functional operations——

A. Of the engineering.

Q. —does that refer to marketing or is that——

A. To marketing only.

Q. Could you describe what you mean by the functional operation?

A. In addition to the previous organization there are two managers within the area served by this operational office. They are primarily interested in the sales of products. All plants except those previously mentioned are under their personal direction. When they want repairs to the plants or to facilities of the Company, they make a request on the operational superintendent that he do such repairs.

Q. When you refer to "plants", you mean the bulk [fol. 1758] plants?

A. I do.

Q. Do you have any figures on the total number of bulk plants?

A. Exactly, no, but it is something in the order of 700.

Q. 700?

A. Scattered in the seven Western States, Alaska, Hawaii, and the Mid-Pacific area.

Q. Does that 700 include that outside——

A. Yes.

Q. How many of the 700?

Mr. Hall: Let the witness answer.

Mr Thody: I'll finish the question.

Q. Does the 700 figure include also the bulk plants located outside of the confines of the United States, those located within the territory?

A. Yes.

Q. Approximately how many of that 700 are located outside of the United States?

Mr. Hall: You mean, Continental United States?

Mr. Thody: Continental United States.

Mr. Hall: Just a minute; is this Continental in your phraseology Alaska, which is the northern part of the Continent, or is Alaska, Honolulu, Hawaii, considered Con- [fol. 1759] tinental? Why don't you reframe your question?

Mr. Thory:

Q. How many are located in Alaska, Hawaii, and Mid-Pacific?

A. About 28 in Alaska, 16 or 18 in Hawaiian Islands, and three other points in the Pacific. I might mention the three in the Mid-Pacific are not owned by the Company. They are only operated.

Q. Is there—those bulk plants located within the Continental United States, is there any classification made by you as to size?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute, please. Speaking of Continental United States, are you including Alaska?

Mr. Thody: Yes, including Alaska.

Q. Of the remaining 651 within the seven states enumerated by you is there any classification as to size of those bulk plants?

A. No. In the sense that they are graded one to the other with respect to size, you mean? Is that what you are after?

Q. Do you have large bulk plants and small bulk plants located in those seven states?

A. We do.

Q. In the industry and in your experience what is the capacity of what you consider a large bulk plant?

A. Capacity meaning what?

[fol. 1760] Q. The storage capacity.

Mr. Hall: You mean, storage capacity for bulk products?

Mr. Thody: For bulk products.

A. Would you restate your original question again?

Mr. Thody: Will you read it, please?

(The record was read.)

A. We have one over a million and a third barrels of storage, which is large.

Q. And what would be the capacity of some of your smaller?

A. 800, 1200, 1600 barrels bulk storage.

Q. For the purposes of the record, what is a barrel?

A. 42 gallons.

Q. The bulk plants located within the seven states which you have referred to, are all of these owned by Standard Oil?

A. Yes.

Q. Are they all operated by Standard Oil?

A. No.

Q. Could you describe the various methods of operation of these bulk plants?

A. Company operation and wholesale distributor operation.

Q. Could you differentiate the two types?

A. The company operation is conducted entirely by personnel on Company payroll.

[fol. 1761] Mr. Hall: Pardon me a moment. You mentioned the word "Standard." You referred, of course, to Standard Oil Company of California, did you not?

Mr. Thody: That is correct. Would you read the question and answer?

(The record was read.)

A. Wholesale distributor plants are operated by an individual appointed to operate that plant wherein he supplies all labor. Title to the plant remains with the company.

Q. Are any bulk plants owned by Standard Stations, Inc.?

A. No.

Q. Approximately how many of the bulk plants located within the seven states are Company operated?

A. I haven't looked at the records for some time, and the answer is completely a guess—probably 200 to 250.

Q. Then the remaining portion would be wholesale?

A. Distributor.

Q. Wholesale distributor?

A. Yes.

Q. Of the latter type, the wholesale distributors, are there various ways of operating those plants or do they all fit into the common pattern?

A. They fit into a common pattern.

[fol. 1762] Q. And the wholesale operator——

Mr. Hall: Wholesale distributor.

Mr. Thody:

Q. —wholesale distributor, you indicated that title to the physical properties belongs to the company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who owns the gasoline?

A. The Company.

Q. The Company. How is the gasoline furnished to such wholesale distributors, on a consignment basis?

A. No, sir. Title remains with the Company.

Q. Could you describe to us what the function of each of these bulks plants is?

A. To receive and store bulk and package petroleum merchandise, warehouse same, which is then redistributed to its ultimate consumer or proximate ultimate consumer from those plants.

Q. Can you describe how the bulk goods are redistributed from the bulk plants to the ultimate consumer?

A. By means of bulk tank trucks, iron barrels, and customers who may call at the plant to have their containers filled or they picking up petroleum merchandise which is not bulk.

Q. What types of bulk products are handled from bulk plants?

[fol. 1763] A. Small and large, are you speaking about?

Q. I am referring to products, gasoline, lubricating oils.

A. Gasolines, kerosenes, thinners, solvents, gas oils, heating oils——

Q. Which of such products——

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute; let him finish.

Mr. Thody:

Q. Is that all?

A. —and in some exceptional cases, other products that might be stored in the bulk, exceptional meaning only in the sense that a demand for that particular product is such that it would be handled in bulk.

Mr. Hall: Did your question call simply for bulk products?

Mr. Thody: Yes.

Q. Are there other products other than bulk products, that are marketed through the bulk plants?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute; that calls for the conclusion of the witness. You said marketed through—it is my understanding that the bulk plants do not market anything.

Mr. Thody:

Q. That are redistributed from the bulk plants.

A. As previous indicated, petroleum merchandise—products.

[fol. 1764] Q. Do you mean in addition to those products—do you mean there are products in addition to those enumerated by you in your previous answer—are there other products other than the ones that you have listed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are they?

A. Petroleum merchandise which is in the category that we call greases and lubricants.

Q. Is there any general classification for those?

A. I have given it. Petroleum merchandise.

Q. Would the term "package goods"?

A. Synonymous to a large degree.

Q. Which of these products that you have just listed are redistributed ultimately to service stations?

A. Gasolines, thinners, solvents, kerosenes, diesel oils, and petroleum merchandise.

Q. What is the manner in which bulk products and petroleum products are redistributed from the bulk plants to the ultimate consumers?

A. I previously answered that. Repeating——

Q. (Interposing:) I do not mean—your answer referred to truck, iron barrels, and so on. Are they distributed directly to service stations from bulk plants or is there some intermediate step?

A. Directly to them.

[fol. 1765] Q. Directly to service stations?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What service stations do you supply from bulk plants? Do you supply service stations of all types? May anyone place an order?

A. We deliver to Standard Stations, Chevron dealers, and other accounts regularly handling our merchandise.

Q. May other accounts——

A. (Interposing:) —and to such other orders as may come to us.

Q. On the other accounts referred to in your previous answer, can you indicate to us the type of accounts you refer to?

A. Agricultural, industrial, commercial and private.

Q. Are those orders placed pursuant to a contract, or——

A. (Interposing:) No, sir.

Q. —or would they be spot sales.

A. Usually spot sales.

Q. May anyone come to a bulk plant and purchase—any service station come to a bulk plant and purchase its requirements of the products normally sold by you to service stations?

A. Limited. The service station not handling our gaso-lines would not come to us for gasoline because he would not have the designation of the gasoline that he purchased [fol. 1766] from us on his pumps. So, he could not resell it under the State law without having some designation on his pumps as having that brand of product in them. He could come and get thinners if he wanted.

Q. Are the bulk plant operators accountable to any particular person within the Marketing Department?

A. They are to a branch manager who is their supervisor.

Q. Is the branch organization you refer to the same type of organization you referred to in your earlier testimony with respect to the eleven districts?

A. No. It is a subsidiary supervisory force under the district manager.

Q. You have mentioned both branch managers and district managers. How many district managers are there?

A. 14.

Q. 14?

A. Yes.

Q. Are these marketing districts?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: Did you confine that question to Continental United States?

Mr. Thody: The seven states.

A. The seven states—13 then.

Q. These are marketing districts?

[fol. 1767] A. Yes, sir, in our nomenclature.

Q. Are they synonymous with the sales districts?

A. I thought that is what you meant by marketing.

Q. Is the word marketing district and sales district synonymous, the designation—the Company's designation?

A. We do not districtize the field. We have areas for which they supervise, but it is not put out as an absolute district; and we call them a sales district, but there is no specific delineation through rigid things that pertain constantly. They can be changed as conditions may require.

Mr. Thody: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Q. You indicate, Mr. Bussert, that these sales districts or marketing districts are broken down into various component branches?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Approximately how many branches are there in each sales district?

A. It varies in accordance with the size of the sales district, the supervision required.

Q. What is the largest number of branches in the 13 sales districts, approximately?

[fol. 1768] A. The answer is from memory and approximately 12.

Q. And approximately the smallest number of branches in a particular sales district?

A. 6.

Q. Now, as I understand your testimony, each of the bulk plant operators is accountable to a branch manager?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the branch manager in turn accountable to some central officer or authority?

A. The district manager.

Q. For the activities of the bulk plant operations?

A. The district manager.

Q. And the district manager in turn would make reports concerning the operations of these bulk plants to whom?

A. To the centralized officials in San Francisco.

Q. In the Marketing Department?

A. In the Marketing Department.

Q. What division of them?

A. Pertaining to the subject at hand, either to the General Manager of Marketing Wholesale or Retail or to the Manager of Marketing Operations.

Q. Now, each individual bulk plant service a particular area within each branch, I suppose—is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1769] Q. Is there any accepted number of accounts which each bulk plant will service or do they vary from bulk plant to bulk plant?

A. They vary.

Q. What determines the location of a bulk plant?

A. The density of business in an area that can best be served when it is sufficient to maintain bulk storage at a centralized location or an effective location.

Q. Do I understand from your testimony that the demand placed upon the individual bulk plant would govern its location or relocation?

A. Plus the effects of transportation.

Q. You mean, Mr. Bussert, that the transportation problems would also be a factor in the location of the various bulk plants, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who determines the area of supply for each bulk plant—would that be the branch manager?

A. Is "supply" the word you meant or distribution?

Q. The area of distribution for each bulk plant.

A. Surveys conducted by branch manager, district manager, and home office would determine the areas to be served.

Q. Would the branch manager be empowered to readjust a zone or an area of servicing of a particular bulk plant?

[fol. 1770] A. No, sir.

Q. Under whose authority would such a change be made?

A. Joint authority, usually vested in the manager of Operations.

Q. On the adjustment of the number of accounts to be supplied by a bulk plant, would that likewise have to ——

A. (Interposing) There is no adjustment made for the number of accounts.

Q. Is each bulk plant operator empowered with the authority to serve as many accounts in his geographical area as he may supply within the limits of his supply?

A. Yes.

Q. How are the orders placed with the bulk plants?

A. Mail form and personal contact.

Q. How are deliveries made? You have indicated by trucks, iron barrels and containers in your previous answer. Are those trucks owned by the bulk plant operator or by the—strike the question. Under whose authority are deliveries made from the bulk plant or by whom are deliveries made.

Mr. Hall: Now, there are two—I think you should reframe your question.

Mr. Thody: I am sorry. Strike it.

Q. How are deliveries made from the bulk plants?

[fol. 1771] A. As previously indicated, by trucks, iron barrels and containers.

Q. With respect to the trucks, which you have referred to in your previous answer, would they be the trucks of the bulk plant or the trucks of the dealer or recipient of the merchandise?

A. By it, and the wholesale distributor plant—by the trucks owned by the wholesale distributor.

Q. On the company operated bulk plants do they have a fleet of trucks which are part of it, which are owned by the Company and by—as a part of the bulk plant?

A. One or more as required.

Q. In your answer you have distinguished the delivery services for wholesale distributors. Do I understand your testimony to be that the trucks in those instances are owned by the individual appointed by the company to operate the bulk plant?

A. I did,—that is correct.

Q. What remuneration does the wholesale distributor receive?

A. Commission rates.

Q. Commission rates?

A. Applicable to the product delivered.

Q. Based upon, generally, on gallonage as far as gasoline and lubricating oils are concerned?

[fol. 1772] A. Yes, sir.

Q. With respect to the greases and other package goods, how would that commission——

A. (Interposing) By weight or unit.

Q. By weight or unit?

Mr. Hall: That isn't clear to me, Mr. Thody, whether you are referring to both the operators of the Company operated plants and to wholesale distributors in your previous question.

Mr. Thody: This question, I think the record will indicate, will refer solely to wholesale distributors who are individually appointed operators as distinguished from Company operated bulk plants.

Mr. Hall: You so understood, Mr. Bussert?

A. I did.

Mr. Thody: Is there any other distinction between the operators of the Company operated bulk plant and the wholesale distributor bulk plant which occurs to you as being significant at this time insofar as the distribution of their products to the consumer are concerned?

A. No, sir.

Q. How are the orders from Chevron Stations placed with the bulk plant operators?

A. In the same manner as anybody else places an order.

[fol. 1773] Q. Are separate records maintained for Chevron Stations—for sales to Chevron Stations?

A. All records are maintained of the purchases individually by every person.

Q. Those records are maintained by the bulk plant operator?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are those records in turn transmitted, either to the district office or to the central office, or copies thereof, transmitted in such a manner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which, copies or the originals?

A. Copies.

Q. To whom are they transmitted?

A. To the Company accounting officers for accounting purposes.

Q. In San Francisco?

A. No, in the district.

Q. In the district?

A. Yes.

Q. Are such records or compilations from such records in turn forwarded to San Francisco?

A. Summarizations of the records are transmitted.

Q. Which would indicate volumes for separate stations?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1774] Q. Does the Operations Division or, to your knowledge, the Marketing Department negotiate the lease agreements and contract agreements with Chevron Stations?

A. Operations do not; Marketing, Wholesale, Retail, does.

Q. Marketing, Retail Department, does?

A. Yes.

Q. In negotiating a new Chevron contract or lease for a new Chevron station, does the retail branch confer with the Operations Division?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is made solely upon their own volition?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What, then, is the relationship between the Chevron station and the bulk plant operator?

A. That of a customer.

Q. Are you acquainted with the types of agreements signed by the Chevron operators?

A. I am not.

Q. Do the Chevron operators look to the bulk plant operators for ready source of supply?

A. They do.

Q. Who determines whether the bulk plant operators have a ready source of supply?

A. Distribution clerk.

[fol. 1775] Q. When the supply in a bulk plant becomes dangerously low, what steps would be taken or are taken to correct such a situation?

A. Stocks are automatically—bulk stocks are automatically kept up to an operating level by the Distribution Department.

Q. Could you describe what you mean by an operating level?

A. To the best of our ability, not less than half a tankful is maintained at any time.

Q. Are orders for replenishment from the bulk plants placed by the operators themselves?

A. They are.

Q. Orders are received by them in response to their specific request for——

A. (Interposing) Yes,——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute; let the witness answer.

A. —they are advices as to the amount of product on hand. They are not orders. They are advices to the Distribution Department of the amount of stock that they have on hand, and the Distribution Department noting that automatically replaces the supply to keep it up.

Q. When are orders made? Are they made on a regular schedule?

A. Advice is sent once a week.

[fol. 1776] Q. On any particular day in the week?

A. It varies in certain sales districts so as to take advantage of load distribution at central supply points and make distribution.

Q. And then, as I understand your testimony, after the advice is received, then the orders—strike that. To whom are the advices sent by the individual bulk plant operator?

A. The centralized distribution offices.

Q. What is the relationship of the centralized distribution offices to the districts and branches you have previously referred to?

A. Solely for the matter of maintaining supply.

Q. Then actually the operator, the bulk operator merely advises of the supply on hand and based upon such information the merchandise is sent to him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you say that applies to all types of products which ultimately are used in service stations of the list you referred to—petroleum products?

A. Yes.

Q. In your previous testimony you referred to the fact that gasoline, kerosenes, thinners, and greases were ultimately used by service stations?

A. Yes.

[fol. 1777] Q. Then the supply of each of those products as maintained by the bulk plant operators is handled in similar manner with the use of advices?

A. Yes. That is, the supplies are maintained by means of advices to the Distribution Department of his stock on hand and his requirements.

Q. Now, are the requests—the orders of all Chevron stations handled in the same manner?

A. Identical.

Q. To your knowledge are there any Chevron stations who have not signed formal agreement with the Company?

A. I have no knowledge of that.

Q. Are you acquainted with the bulk plant operations in the State of Utah and in the southeastern portion of the State of Idaho?

A. To a limited degree.

Q. Are the operations of the bulk plants in those areas peculiar in any way insofar as redistribution of products generally is concerned?

A. Not to my knowledge any different from any other bulk plant.

Q. Are you acquainted with the operations of the bulk plant operators in the eastern portion of the State of Arizona?

A. To the same degree that I am with all others:

[fol. 1778] Q. Is there anything peculiar insofar as the redistribution operations——

A. (Interposing) Not to my knowledge.

Q. —in that portion or in that area? With respect to the first area I have mentioned, in the State of Utah, and in the southwestern portion of Idaho, is there a ready source of supply for gasoline for the bulk plants?

A. Yes.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Thody:

Q. Mr. Bussert, are you acquainted with the packaging operations performed at Point Wells in the State of Washington?

A. I am.

Q. Will you briefly describe the products which are packaged at that operation?

A. Any products handled in bulk at that point will upon order be packaged into iron barrels.

Q. What is the size of iron barrels you refer to?

A. Approximately 53 gallons.

Q. Is there any packaging performed at that point for smaller goods; specifically, the RPM lubricating oil in quart cans?

A. There is not.

Q. Are there any other points, other than the Richmond [fol. 1779] packaging plant, which packages RPM in quart cans?

A. There are no points under the supervision of Marketing Operations Department that packages RPM in other than five gallon cans or iron barrels.

Q. Other than Richmond?

A. I specifically do not know the conditions at El Segundo. They may package them down there. You limit to Richmond, and I didn't know El Segundo.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

Cross-examination:

By Mr. Hall:

Q. It is a fact, is it not, Mr. Bussert, that there are very few bulk plants located outside of California but near the border of California that makes deliveries inside of California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And those bulk plants are located at Cave Junction, Oregon, Lakeview, Oregon, Reno, Nevada, Minden, Nevada, Tonopah, Nevada, Parker, Arizona, and Yuma, Arizona?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What would be the proportion of the distribution from those seven bulk plants into California compared with the total distribution by the Marketing Department in California?

[fol. 1780] A. Practically infinitesimal. I would say a very small fraction of one per cent.

Q. It is true, is it not, that certain bulk plants located in California but near the borders of the State distribute products to small areas outside of California in other states?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And those bulk plants are located at Crescent City, California, Cedarville, California, Litchfield, California, Tahoe City, California, Tallac, California, Laws, California, Shoshone, California, and Blythe, California; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What would be the proportion of products distributed from those eight bulk plants outside of California compared with the distribution of all bulk plants in California?

A. Likewise I would say that is an exceptionally small amount.

Q. Would you say that likewise was a fraction of one per cent?

A. I would. This is not from specific study, but I know as a fact that it is a very small portion of one per cent, or of a per cent.

[fol. 1781] Q. Well, you would say it is then a small fraction of one per cent, is that your answer?

A. Yes.

Q. You were asked by Mr. Thody if the gasoline was furnished to the bulk plants, and I believe he was referring to the wholesale distributor plants, on consignment, and your answer was that "the title remained in the company": do you recall that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now, it is correct that the title remains in the Company, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But is that not characteristic of a sale on consignment that the title to the product remains in the consignor anyway?

A. I think it is.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Thody: I would like permission to ask two questions on the subject you brought out.

Mr. Hall: Oh, sure.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Thody:

Q. Mr. Bussert, is it not a fact that administratively you are set up to redistribute gasoline according to districts and branches?

[fol. 1782] Mr. Hall: I think that has already been asked and answered, Mr. Thody, in his previous answer as indicated.

Mr. Thody: Is that not your testimony?

A. Distribution is effected to keep all plants supplied with products. Administratively, in districts, as far as being able to designate where it went.

Q. My question is on your administrative setup, your overall organization pattern—it is based upon districts and branches within districts; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, that is correct.

Q. And those districts in many instances would overlap state lines, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Then in your distribution of these products from bulk plants, you are primarily concerned with the districts rather than state sales areas, is that correct?

A. The question is a little confusing to me.

Q. The sales districts you have referred to in many instances, will overlap state lines, is that correct?

A. In some instances.

Q. Do the sales districts covering the State of California overlap state lines?

A. Slightly.

Q. Do you know the volume of gasoline and other bulk goods handled by the bulk plant at Reno?

[fol. 1783] A. I do not.

Q. Is it a large bulk plant or a small bulk plant?

A. Medium size—mediumly small.

Q. Approximately what size?

A. Size being indicated by what, the amount of bulk storage they had there?

Q. Yes, capacity.

A. Relatively small.

Q. Approximately what would it be?

A. Probably of 1600 barrels there.

Q. What is the approximate capacity at Minden?

A. Probably 1200 or 800 barrels.

Q. At Parker?

A. Let's see, they're 800 or 1200 barrels.

Q. And the other four bulk plants that ship into California?

A. Relatively—approximately the same size.

Q. Which was—approximately?

A. 1200 to 1600 barrels.

Q. In your testimony that this—the combined distribution of the seven bulk plants located along the borders, in Nevada, which ship into California——

Mr Hall: Wait a minute; two are in Oregon, three in Nevada, and two in Arizona.

Mr. Thody: —the eight bulk plants located outside the [fol. 1784] State of California which ship into the State of California, in your testimony that the amount or the volume is infinitesimally small?

Mr. Hall: Well—just a minute, now—all right.

Mr. Thody: I am just interested with respect to what——

A. Yes.

Q. You mean "small" as compared to what?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute; that has been asked and answered because he has compared that volume with the entire volume distributed in California.

Mr. Thody: In California?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: From both inside California and outside California.

Mr. Thody:

Q. Now, with respect to your testimony on the operations of the bulk plant at Crescent, can you give us an approximation of the size——

Mr. Hall: That was Crescent City.

Mr. Thody: Yes, Crescent City—the size of that bulk plant?

A. Either 1200 or 1600 barrels.

Q. And Cedarville?

A. Either 800 or 1200 barrels.

Q. Blythe?

[fol. 1785] A. I think 1200 barrels.

Q. Tallac?

A. Either 800 or 1200 barrels.

Q. Laws?

A. I think 1200 barrels there.

Q. And likewise when you say this was small you are referring to a comparison with the total sales within the State of California?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: Well, now, wait a minute. My question related to total distribution.

Mr. Thody: I am sorry.

Mr. Hall: Total distribution from bulk plants inside of California. You so understood?

A. Yes.

Mr. Thody: I am sorry.

A. Having in mind you asked the same question.

Mr. Thody: I am sorry. May the record read as compared with the total distribution within the State of California from bulk plants located within the State of California, is that correct.

A. Yes.

Mr. Thody: That is all.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

(Signed) L. M. Bussert"

[fol. 1786] HARRY T. HAYS, a witness called on behalf of the plaintiffs, being first duly cautioned and sworn by the Notary Public to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Somerville:

Q. Will you state your name for the record?

A. Harry T. Hays.

Q. What is your address, please?

A. My home address or——?

Q. Your business address?

A. 225 Bush Street, San Francisco.

Q. What is your present position?

A. Manager of Sales Equipment Division, Marketing Department, Standard Oil.

Mr. Hall: This is Standard Oil Company of California?

A. Of California.

Mr. Somerville:

Q. How long have you held that position, Mr. Hays?

A. It will be three years in July.

Q. Have your had any previous experience in the Standard Oil organization, the Marketing Department, prior to that?

A. Thirty-two years.

[fol. 1787] Q. Now, with respect to the Sales and Equipment Division of the Marketing Department, what are its functions?

A. The function of the Sales Equipment Division is to pass on operating equipment used in the operations of the Wholesale and Retail Departments of the Company, as to its value. In other words, to keep up with all of the new equipment coming on the market.

Q. By equipment, what do you mean?

A. Operating equipment, machinery, pumps, compressors; all of those, in addition to the operation of so-called accessory warehouses.

Q. What are your duties in connection with that?

A. The procurement, warehousing, and distribution.

Q. Does the scope of your duties include supervision over all of the accessory warehouses?

A. Functional supervision.

Q. You are familiar with the operations generally of all of the accessory warehouses?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Hays, referring to what has been marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit C for identification," can you tell us whether this sheet was prepared under your direction by you?

A. It was.

Q. Does it represent an accurate account of the location of the accessory warehouses?

[fol. 1788] A. It does.

Q. That includes all of the warehouses under the jurisdiction of Standard Oil Company, Standard Stations, Inc.?

Mr. Hall: That is all the accessory warehouses.

A. This is accessory warehouses only.

Mr. Somerville: Yes.

Mr. Hall: Don't you want to ask him if it accurately describes the areas as served by each of the accessory warehouses?

Mr. Somerville: Yes.

Q. Does this accurately describe the areas served by each of the warehouses?

A. Yes.

Q. This list?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Coming now to the staff of your Sales and Equipment Division, how many employees are in charge of the warehouse operations—are employed in the operations?

A. In the operation of the warehouses?

Q. Yes.

A. Not including my office?

Q. Not including your office.

A. Actually in the warehouses?

Q. Yes.

A. As of our last payroll, I believe it was 72.

[fol. 1789] Q. 72?

A. Directly.

Q. Are those employees centrally located here in San Francisco?

A. No.

Mr. Hall: Didn't he say it was 72 exclusive of the central office location?

A. Exclusive of my office.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Somerville:

Q. To what extent are Standard Oil of California and Standard Stations, Inc., engaged in the sale and distribution of automotive accessories?

Mr. Hall: Well, now, I want to reserve an exception with respect to automotive accessories, the objection to testimony with reference to automotive accessories being that such testimony is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial. May it be deemed, Mr. Somerville, that that exception and objection shall stand to all questions that you may put relating to automotive accessories as distinguished from tires, tubes, batteries? It will be so stipulated?

Mr. Somerville: It will be so stipulated. Would you like the question read back?

A. Yes.

(The record was read.)

A. They handle the same line of accessories. In other [fol. 1790] words, the Standard Oil dealer has remarketed through the dealer the same line that is marketed through the Standard Stations.

Q. Is there a separate organization to handle the marketing of Standard Stations, Inc., than the organization for Standard Oil Company of California?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute, now; with respect to tires, tubes and batteries and accessories?

Mr. Somerville: Yes.

Mr. Hall: The question is not intelligible to me. Maybe it is to the witness.

Mr. Somerville: Let me reframe my question.

Q. Does Standard Oil Company of California supply Chevron Stations with tires, tubes and batteries?

A. Yes.

Q. Does Standard Oil Company of California act as a distributor of automotive accessories to Chevron dealers?

A. It does.

Q. Does Standard Oil Company of California act as a distributor of tires, tubes and batteries to Standard Stations, Inc.?

A. From our accessory warehouses, yes.

Q. Does Standard Oil Company of California act as a distributor of automotive accessories to Standard Stations, Inc.?

[fol. 1791] A. It does.

Q. Does the Sales and Equipment Division of Standard Oil Company of California maintain an organization with respect to Standard Stations, Inc., and to the Standard Oil Company of California?

Mr. Hall: Well, now, just a minute; that is not intelligible. Read the question, please.

Mr. Somerville: Let's reframe that.

Q. On sales of automotive accessories, that is, inclusive of tires, tubes, batteries, and other accessories, is there a separate organization handling that separate from the Standard Oil Company of California?

A. No.

Q. Sales to Standard Stations, Inc., then would be under your jurisdiction?

A. That is right.

Q. And the staff to which you have testified——

Mr. Hall: Just a minute; may I have the last question read?

(The record was read.)

Mr. Somerville:

Q. Does Standard Oil Company of California sell to all types of Chevron dealers irrespective of the—I will re-frame that. Does Standard Oil Company of California sell the full line of accessories, including tires, tubes, batteries, to Chevron operators irrespective of the type of contract [fol. 1792] which they have with Standard Oil Company?

A. I am not in a position to answer that.

Q. Can you say——

Mr. Hall: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Somerville:

Q. Is it your understanding that all Chevron dealers to whom you distribute automotive accessories are under TBA contract?

A. That is correct.

Q. What is meant by TBA contract?

Mr. Hall: Well, now—just a minute. That calls for a conclusion of the witness and calls for that which is not the best evidence. It is objected to as irrelevant, incompetent and immaterial. The contract speaks for itself. The government has contracts, forms of contracts, and also forms of TBA contract.

Mr. Somerville:

Q. Under the TBA contracts you supply Chevron operators with accessories in addition to tires, tubes and batteries, do you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Under the sales arrangements made with the Chevron dealers, is it true that volume—discounts are—discounts for volume are granted?

Mr. Hall: Well, now, discount for volume of what?

[fol. 1793] Mr. Somerville: Of automotive accessories.

A. May I clarify that? My work, my department is to distribute on orders from a dealer when authorized by the Marketing Sales Department. I am not familiar with the agreements between the Sales Department and the dealers.

Q. Mr. Hays, how are orders placed by Chevron operators on accessory warehouses?

A. They have a form 629—I think it is—two forms, one for tires, tubes and batteries, and another form for so-called automotive accessories—that is mailed to the accessory warehouse within the territory served, and the shipment is made from that order directly to the dealer.

Q. Is the procedure the same with respect to orders originating from Standard Stations, Inc.?

A. It is.

Q. How is the merchandise sent to the dealers, Chevron dealers?

A. (No response.)

Q. That is, method of transportation. How are the orders billed?

A. The orders, when they are received, they are shipped whichever is the fastest and most economical method, all through common carrier.

Q. How is the billing done with such merchandise purchases?

[fol. 1594] A. The warehouse receiving the order makes out in turn the 800A. That is a billing invoice.

Q. Are any sales of automotive accessories made on consignment to Chevron operators?

Mr. Hall: Are you distinguishing between tires, tubes and batteries on the one hand, and accessories on the other?

Mr. Somerville: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Q. Are tires and tubes sold to Chevron operators or are they distributed on consignment?

A. On consignment.

Q. Are batteries distributed to Chevron operators on consignment?

A. On consignment.

Q. With respect to tires, tubes and batteries, has that policy of consignment been in effect for a period of time, or——

A. (Interposing) It was in effect prior to the war, and at the time that the manufacturer of those products was restricted consignment was eliminated because we did not have anything to put out on consignment. We were operating on a very—what we called an allocation, so, we had to distribute the best we could, and the dealer bought them on his regular purchases.

Q. Are automotive accessories, other than tires, tubes,

[fol. 1795] and batteries, distributed to Chevron operators on consignment?

A. No.

Q. With respect to tires, and tubes, sold on consignment to the Chevron dealers, are shipments sent without specific orders from the dealers?

A. No.

Q. In every event then an order must originate from the Chevron dealer?

A. That is correct.

Q. There is no policy with respect to keeping a minimum stock on hand in Chevron stations?

A. A minimum stock?

Q. Yes. Of tires, and tubes.

A. Yes. When the dealer sells, he is supposed to replace his consignment, place an order for replacement of the consigned stock which he has sold.

Q. Is that true with respect to the batteries also?

A. Yes.

Q. Referring now to the eight accessory warehouses listed in Exhibit C, are these warehouses utilized for distribution of products other than automotive accessories?

A. There are only two which—not—no—let me correct that. It is only automotive accessories. I was thinking you were referring to petroleum products or something of that nature?

[fol. 1796] Q. What is the arrangement of the distribution covered by each warehouse?

Mr. Hall: May I have that read, please?

(The record was read.)

Mr. Somerville: I think the exhibit covers that. I would like to go on to another question.

Mr. Hall: You withdraw the question?

Mr. Somerville: I withdraw the question.

Q. What is the nature of the inventories of tires and tubes in each of these warehouses?

Mr. Hall: Well, now that isn't—I just object to that as unintelligible and too vague to call for any definite answer.

Mr. Somerville:

Q. Mr. Hays, is there not a fixed policy to keep certain stocks of tires and tubes on hand in accessory warehouses?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is that policy?

A. Well, I would say the same as any other business, when your stock is depleted you replace it. You maintain a given stock.

Q. How many days supply of tires, tubes, are normally kept on hand?

A. That depends on our supply. We are given—we [fol. 1797] order monthly and maintain our stocks.

Q. During the period of wartime shortages tires and tubes had been moving in and out of the warehouse?

A. In one door and out the other.

Q. What is your policy with respect to inventories of batteries?

Mr. Hall: Policy with respect to what?

Mr. Somerville: To inventories or to supplies which will be kept on hand in warehouses.

A. Well, the batteries is something that cannot be stored for any length of time, so we try to keep in one month's supply mostly.

Q. Is there a company policy for keeping on hand any minimum supplies of automobile accessories other than tires, tubes and batteries?

A. We endeavor to maintain not to exceed a three months stock.

Mr. Hall: You meant warehouses, counsel?

Mr. Somerville: That is correct, at the warehouses.

Q. Who determines the size of the supplies that are kept on hand?

Mr. Hall: At the warehouses?

Mr. Somerville: At the warehouses.

A. From the projected marketing movement.

Q. Is the determination of the stock of accessories deter- [fol. 1798] mined by each warehouse manager or by a centralized authority?

A. That varies. Certain things are ordered from my office here.

Q. What are those things?

A. At the present time it is tires and tubes and batteries and a few accessory items which are, you might say, on quota.

Q. What are those items?

A. Well, there is tires and tubes and batteries; seasonal items such as antifreeze, tire chains, car heaters and coolers. Well, those are the principal things. I couldn't enumerate them all here, but there are probably not over fifteen to twenty items.

Q. With respect to automotive accessories other than tires, tubes, and batteries, is this merchandise retained in the original packages received from suppliers at the warehouses?

A. Well, some we break the package and place in bins, because it's shipped in broken packages, less than full packages. Everything else is retained in the full package, where a full package can be shipped.

Q. What are some items that might be placed in bins?

A. Well, we have some, let's say, miniature lamps, spark plugs, battery cables, small accessories.

[fol. 1799] Q. How are tires received in the accessory warehouses?

A. Either through—mostly through railway carload; some points highway truck transportation.

Q. How are batteries received in the accessory warehouses?

A. The same.

Q. How are tires stocked in the accessory warehouses?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute; what do you mean by stocked?

Mr. Somerville: I was going to add—that is, are they kept on sidings in the railroad tracks, are they actually placed in warehouses, or are they immediately moved out to the——

A. (Interposing) They are immediately unloaded from the cars when they are received and are stored in the warehouses.

Q. With respect to tires, would the movement out of the warehouse be immediate after receiving a shipment?

Mr. Hall: That question is not clear. I don't know what you mean by that. I object to it; it is unintelligible.

Mr. Somerville: I will withdraw that.

Q. What is the average turnover of those tires received in carload lots?

Mr. Hall: What do you mean by turnover?

Mr. Somerville: After a carload of tires is received at [fol. 1800] an accessory warehouse, how long is it before that carload lot moved out of the warehouse to fulfill the orders of your dealers?

Mr. Hall: Now you are referring to tires and tubes?

Mr. Somerville: Yes.

A. Well, up until the last few months they had gone out probably within a week because we had been on allocation and we hadn't been able to procure tires enough to meet the demand, and so they had gone right out.

Q. Has there been a similar situation with respect to batteries?

A. The same, yes.

Q. Has there been any analogous situation with respect to any other automotive accessories?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you name some of the principal items of that situation?

A. The principal thing—lamps, fuses, battery cables, fan belts—many of those things which were on allocation all during the war, and they were all back ordered and shipped immediately as they were received.

Q. Frequent delays then have been encountered in fulfilling orders on all of these items?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Does Standard Oil Company of California, own and [fol. 1801] operate each of these warehouses?

A. Yes.

Q. And the personnel employed in each of these warehouses is under the supervision of the Sales and Equipment Division of——

A. (Interposing) No. I said my function was directing it, but it comes under the location organizations. For instance, Los Angeles, the actual operation is directed by our manager in Los Angeles and different places.

Q. He would be an employee of Standard Oil Company of California?

A. Yes.

Q. And the warehouse employees would be employees of Standard Oil Company of California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In ordering supplies of tires and tubes for these warehouses, am I correct in my understanding that you are responsible for placing orders on the Atlas Supply Company or manufacturers?

A. That is right.

Mr. Hall: Wait a minute—"Atlas Supply Company or Manufacturers"?

A. On Atlas Supply Company.

Mr. Hall: Then as I understand it, the witness has answered your question that with respect to Atlas Supply [fol. 1802] Company and not with respect to manufacturers.

Mr. Somerville: That is right.

Q. Mr. Hays, who decides on the type of the amount of merchandise to be stocked in each of these warehouses?

A. That is decided by a committee, of which I am a member, together with the merchandising departments.

Q. By "merchandising departments"——

A. (Interposing) Those responsible for the actual selling.

Q. The warehousing manager in each of these districts, here, would he be a member of that committee?

A. No.

Q. What are the various brands of merchandise stocked in the warehouses, accessory warehouses?

Mr. Hall: You are calling for the brands and not for the description of the merchandise itself, is that correct?

Mr. Somerville: That is right.

A. Mostly Atlas, although the merchandise which we procure through Atlas, it comes under its own brand. For instance, head lamps, spark plugs.

Q. Do accessory warehouses handle other than Atlas tires and tubes?

A. No.

Q. Do accessory warehouses handle other than Atlas batteries?

[fol. 1803] A. Not at the present.

Q. Do accessory warehouses handle other than Atlas fan belts?

A. We have some which we were unable to get from Atlas during the restricted period and we bought from other sources, yes.

Q. Whenever supplies are available from Atlas Supply Company would other brands be stocked?

A. Not of the same merchandise.

Q. How is the merchandise received into the warehouses?

Mr. Hall: The question isn't——

Mr. Somerville: (Interposing) Well, let's put it this way.

Q. Do shipments of tires and tubes come directly from the manufacturer?

A. They are shipped directly from the manufacturer, yes.

Q. Do shipments of batteries come directly from the manufacturer?

A. They do.

Q. Do shipments of the principal other items of automotive accessories come directly from the manufacturers?

A. From the manufacturer.

Q. Are there ever interwarehouse shipments made?

[fol. 1804] A. May I ask, do you mean between the manufacturer and our warehouses?

Q. No, I mean——

Mr. Hall: He means, from one accessory warehouse to another accessory warehouse.

A. Oh, yes. Adjustment of stocks at times.

Mr. Somerville: What determines the necessity for interwarehouse transfer?

A. Well, it may be that they—one fellow would overestimate their requirements and another under-estimate it, and it would be just balancing our stock. They would be running short and one would take from this warehouse over to another district.

Q. Are orders of the warehouses for supplies of Atlas tires placed directly with the manufacturers of those tires or through Atlas Supply Company?

A. Through Atlas Supply Company.

Q. Is that true with respect to batteries?

A. It is.

Q. Is that true with respect to the principal other items of automobile accessories?

A. That is right.

Mr. Hall: You meant, of course, the other accessories that are procured through Atlas? He has testified that some of the accessories, other than tires, tubes and batteries, come [fol. 1805] from other manufacturers than Atlas.

Mr. Somerville: That is my understanding.

Q. Have manufacturers of accessories, automotive accessories, negotiated directly with you or with anyone in your division concerning distribution through your warehouses?

A. Yes. We have—there are manufacturers calling on us to interest us in their lines and things like that.

Q. Have you accepted their lines in some instances?

A. We have.

Q. Have you accepted their lines, the lines of any manufacturers, covering accessories that might be supplied by Atlas?

A. They may be a similar line but it isn't identically the same product.

Q. Have you required manufacturers of any automotive accessories to make arrangements for distributing their product through your warehouses under the Atlas brands?

Mr. Hall: May I have the question read, please?

(The record was read.)

A. Well, I have to answer that this way. We naturally wish to feature the Atlas brand; and, for instance, Champion Spark Plugs are now placing their plugs in an Atlas trademark carton.

Q. Why do you seek to mark it under the Atlas brand?

[fol. 1806] Mr. Hall: That is objected to as calling for a conclusion of the witness, and incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Somerville: The witness stated that naturally they wished to feature the Atlas brand.

Mr. Hall: You are calling for the conclusion of the witness nevertheless. The objection is also predicated upon the thought that it is quite immaterial as to their reasons. The question is what they do, not why they do it.

Mr. Somerville:

Q. Do you distribute automotive accessories under the Atlas brand? Now, I am referring to accessories other than tires, tubes and batteries. —pursuant to any agreement with Atlas Supply Company?

A. Oh, yes. Not under Atlas brand.

Mr. Hall: What was the answer? Did I get that right? Will you read the question back, Mr. Reporter?

(The record was read.)

A. It would be "No" then, because we are not in a position to market anything under Atlas brand that doesn't come from Atlas. That is Atlas' trademark.

Mr. Somerville: Well, what I mean to say is that do——

Mr. Hall: Why don't you ask him if he has a contract with Atlas?

Mr. Somerville:

Q. You have a contract with Atlas Supply Company covering automotive accessories?

[fol. 1807] Mr. Hall: Not "covering" because if there is a contract the contract speaks for itself. Now, as a part of your demand for production under Rule 34 in this case you have requested, as I recall it, the Atlas contract. That is going to be furnished to you. Now, the contract speaks for itself. So, don't ask this witness as to conclusions as to what the contract contains or his interpretation of the contract.

Mr. Somerville: I will be satisfied with another question here.

Q. Are there any conferences held with representatives of Atlas Supply Company concerning distribution of automotive accessories other than tires, tubes and batteries under the Atlas brand name?

Mr. Hall: Would you read that question, please?

(The record was read.)

Mr. Hall: Are you inquiring as to the practice, Mr. Somerville?

Mr. Somerville: Yes.

A. The only thing we would consult with Atlas on, if we decided we would like to market a certain thing that is presented to us, would be to ask Atlas if they will be interested in marketing this product under their name, telling them who the people are. They would make any arrangements or anything of that nature.

[fol. 1808] Q. What is the relationship of the Atlas Supply Company to the Standard Oil of California?

Mr. Hall: What do you mean by "what is the relationship"?

Mr. Somerville:

Q. Does Standard Oil Company have any ownership in the stock of Atlas Supply Company?

Mr. Hall: Is that your question?

Mr. Somerville: Yes.

A. I only from hearsay understand that.

Mr. Hall: I don't want you to give any hearsay.

Mr. Somerville: We don't want any hearsay. Can you state of your own knowledge?

A. To my knowledge I have never seen an agreement.

Q. Are there any officers of the Atlas Supply Company who are also officers of Standard Oil?

Mr. Hall: I have no objection if the witness knows. Do you know the answer to that question?

A. Yes. One of our officers is an officer of the Atlas Supply Company.

Mr. Somerville: Who is that officer?

A. That is Mr. E. J. McClanahan, Vice President in charge of Marketing.

Q. Are any employees of Atlas Supply Company on the payroll of Standard Oil Company within your knowledge?

A. Not to my knowledge.

[fol. 1809] Q. Do you know what position Mr. McClanahan has with Atlas?

Mr. Hall: That is objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Somerville: It shows integration between the operations, between the Atlas Supply Company and Standard Oil Company.

Mr. Hall: That is not within the pleadings.

Mr. Somerville: May he be permitted to answer subject to objection?

Mr. Hall: Subject to objection, yes.

A. He is a director.

Mr. Somerville: Do you know what period of time the present contract between Atlas Supply Company and Standard Oil Company of California covers?

Mr. Hall: Just a minute; the contract will speak for itself. You're calling for the terms of a contract.

Mr. Somerville:

Q. Is Standard Oil Company of California the sole distributor for Atlas Supply Company?

Mr. Hall: That is objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, immaterial, and not within the pleadings.

Mr. Somerville: I would like that answer subject to that objection.

Mr. Hall: I don't think you are entitled to go into that. It has no possible relation to anything which you com-[fol. 1810] plained of in this case.

Mr. Somerville: I think that has a bearing upon the interstate character of the arrangement in question. It shows control from start to finish over the automotive accessories in question; control from the common source.

Mr. Hall: I don't think it shows any such thing. It can't possibly show any such thing. In the second place, you haven't pleaded it.

Mr. Somerville: It has a bearing upon the interstate commerce it pleaded it had. If Atlas Supply Company——

Mr. Thody: And the motive.

Mr. Hall: Motive for what?

Mr. Thody: For the whole observation in this thing.

Mr. Somerville: If Atlas Supply Company——

Mr. Hall: Read the question to the witness. If the witness can answer, it can go in under my objection.

(The record was read.)

Mr. Hall: Subject to my objection.

A. Within our marketing territory.

Mr. Somerville:

Q. By that you mean the seven western states, California, Washington, Oregon, Arizona, Nevada, Idaho, and Utah?

A. With the exception of Utah and Idaho, in which Atlas supplies are marketed by the Utah Oil Company.

Mr. Hall: Utah Oil Refining Company?

[fol. 1811] A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Somerville:

Q. Mr. Hays, who manufactures Atlas tires and tubes and from what factories do you receive shipments?

Mr. Hall: Well, now, wait a minute; that question is double barrel. Why don't you spread it out?

Mr. Somerville: O. K.

Q. Who manufactures Atlas tires and tubes?

Mr. Hall: You mean——

Mr. Somerville: Distributed through your accessory warehouses?

A. Through our accessory warehouses—United States Rubber Company.

Q. From what factories do your accessory warehouses receive shipments?

Mr. Hall: Tires and tubes, you mean?

Mr. Somerville: Of tires and tubes.

A. Los Angeles.

Q. Are shipments received from any other factories of tires and tubes?

Mr. Hall: At the accessory warehouses?

Mr. Somerville: At the accessory warehouses.

A. Only when there might be something, that they're ordered through Los Angeles but might come from some other source, through the many cities, through the other [fol. 1812] factories. That may be the case where they couldn't fill it there.

Q. Who manufactures Atlas batteries distributed through your accessory warehouses?

A. There are several; Auto-Lite, Solar and others.

Q. Where is that located?

A. Oakland. Solar, Los Angeles, and—it slipped my mind for a moment—one of the major battery companies here.

Q. Are any——

A. It just slipped my mind for a moment. It's a major company.

Q. Let me ask an additional question. Are any Atlas batteries distributed through your accessory warehouses received from factories located outside of the State of California?

A. Only at times, which would apply the same as the factory, the local factory, and they might have to ship that which they were unable to obtain, but that is exceptional.

Q. Who manufactures Atlas spark plugs distributed through accessory warehouses?

A. Champion Spark Plug.

Q. From what factories do you receive shipments of those spark plugs?

A. They come from the eastern states. I believe it's [fol. 1813] Jersey; come from various factories—we don't know where—when we place an order where they would be shipped from. It's an eastern shipment.

Q. What manufacturer or manufacturers manufacture battery cables distributed through accessory warehouses?

A. Well, there have been several. When we place an order to Atlas, they may come from different manufacturers.

Q. Located outside the State of California?

A. Outside the State of California, yes.

Q. What manufacturers manufacture fan belts distributed through your accessory warehouses?

A. That would be the same thing.

Q. What manufacturers produce oil filters distributed through your accessory warehouses?

A. They come from the east also. Some manufacturers are the same as Atlas are not tied up with any one manufacturer.

Q. From what manufacturers are shipments of waxes, polishes, and other chemicals received by your accessory warehouses?

A. Various manufacturers.

Q. Located throughout the United States?

A. Throughout the United States.

Q. Is that true also of radiator caps?

A. Yes.

[fol. 1814] Q. Oil filter elements?

A. Yes.

Q. And automotive accessories we have not named specifically?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you receive Atlas tires and tubes into the accessory warehouses on consignment?

A. No.

Mr. Hall: You mean, on consignment from Atlas?

Mr. Somerville: Yes.

Mr. Hall: Or from manufacturers?

Mr. Somerville: No.

Q. How are orders placed on Atlas Supply Company by accessory warehouses?

A. Through a regular ordering form which we have.

Q. Does title to automotive accessories supplied by Atlas Supply Company to your accessory warehouses pass at the time shipment is made to those warehouses?

A. Passes to Standard Oil.

Q. To Standard Oil Company?

A. Yes.

Q. That you know?

A. Well, I would say it does when they are received in the warehouse, yes.

Q. Do you have any knowledge of whether or not title [fol. 1815] vests in Atlas Supply Company from the manufacturer?

Mr. Hall: That is objected to as calling for a conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Somerville: I agree.

Q. With respect to the forms on which this merchandise is ordered, are they placed directly with Atlas?

A. With the local representative of Atlas here in San Francisco.

Q. And is a copy of that—does a copy of that form go to the central office of Standard Oil Company of California?

A. Goes to the accounting office for the billing.

Q. Are records maintained with respect to the amount of accessories, merchandise, including tires and tubes and batteries, by each Chevron station, Chevron dealer?

Mr. Hall: Will you read that, please?

(The record was read.)

Mr. Hall: You mean inventory records?

Mr. Somerville: No. Records of sales, purchases by Chevron dealers.

Mr. Hall: You mean, does each dealer that buys tires, tubes and batteries and accessories keep a record of what he buys?

Mr. Somevrille: No. Records of sales, purchases by sales made to Chevron dealers of automotive accessories, [fol. 1816] including tires, tubes and batteries?

A. Well, yes, for billing purposes.

Q. Are records kept for the purpose of granting discounts for volume sales?

A. For volume sales, yes.

Q. Do you know what those discounts are?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Going back, Mr. Hays, you stated that at times manufacturers will approach you or other representatives of the Company concerning your distributing their automotive accessories, and you testified sometimes—that you sometimes accepted their line and that it might be a similar line to the Atlas line. Could you clarify that further? What do you mean by similar line?

A. Well, I would say this, that it may be a car polish. Now, each motorist has his preference to a certain type of car polish that he might need. Car-Nu people, they have another one; and for certain types of polishing the public wants a soft polish, or a harsh polish, or some other kind, liquid wax or hard wax, or something like that.

Q. Do you stock polishes other than Atlas polishes in accessory warehouses?

A. Yes.

Q. In those instances in which these polishes are [fol. 1817] stocked there would be some peculiar appeal to the customer over the Atlas brand?

A. That is right.

Q. Referring now to Exhibit C for identification, you indicated here that the San Francisco warehouse services dealers in Northwestern Nevada, also the Lakeview District in Southern Oregon. Can you state approximately the amounts that are sold in those districts outside of California?

Mr. Hall: Amounts of what over what period?

Mr. Somerville: Amounts of tires and tubes.

A. No.

Q. Accessories?

A. No.

Mr. Somerville: I think that is all, Mr. Hays. Thank you very much.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Is it correct that substantially all the requirements of tires and tubes furnished to the eight accessory warehouses listed in Exhibit C are furnished from factories in California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it correct that substantially 100 per cent of the batteries furnished to the accessory warehouses shown in Exhibit C are furnished from California factories?

[fol. 1818] A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I think you said that the practice, except for the war period, had been to consign tires and tubes to the dealers that took the tires and tubes from the accessory warehouses?

A. That is right.

Q. Is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. And is the same thing true with respect to the batteries?

A. With respect to the batteries.

Q. You said that the distribution from the accessory warehouses to the dealers would be entirely by common carrier, is that right?

A. Entirely, yes, sir.

Q. And the methods of transport by the common carrier would be parcel post or Railway Express or freight, is that correct?

A. Would be either by railway freight, highway transport freight, parcel post, or American Railway Express.

Q. When the tires and tubes arrive at an accessory warehouse, they are sorted out and records made of the types and sizes?

A. Oh, yes, and checked against the shipping—bills of lading and stacked separately by sizes.

[fol. 1819] Q. Is the same thing true with respect to batteries?

A. Yes.

Mr. Hall: That is all.

Mr. Somerville: That is all.

(Signed) Harry T. Hays"

[fol. 1820] UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Northern District of California,
City and County of San Francisco, ss:

I hereby certify that on the 9th day of March, 1948, at 2:00 o'clock p. m., and on the 10th day of March, 1948, at 9:00 o'clock a.m., before me, EDITH GOEWEY, a Notary Public in and for the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, at Room 1712, Standard Oil Building, 225 Bush Street, San Francisco, California, personally appeared, pursuant to stipulation between counsel for the respective parties, FRANCIS S. OLAINE, L. M. BUSSERT, and HARRY T. HAYS, witnesses called on behalf of the plaintiffs herein; and W. A. THODY, Esquire, and LAWRENCE W. SOMERVILLE, Esquire, Special Assistants to The Attorney General, appeared as attorneys for the plaintiffs; and Messrs. LAWLER, FELIX & HALL, represented by JOHN M. HALL, Esquire, and Messrs. PILLSBURY, MADISON & SUTRO, represented by HENRY G. HAYES, Esquire, appeared as attorneys for the defendants; and the said FRANCIS S. OLAINE, L. M. BUSSERT, and

HARRY T. HAYS being by me first duly cautioned and sworn to testify the whole truth, and being carefully examined, deposed and said as appears by their depositions hereto annexed.

And I further certify that the said depositions were then and there recorded stenographically by HARRY A. CANNON, a competent official and disinterested shorthand re-[fol. 1821] porter, appointed by me for that purpose and acting under my direction and personal supervision, and were transcribed by him; that the depositions are a true record of the testimony given by the said witnesses.

And I further certify that the exhibits hereto attached and marked for identification "Plaintiff's Exhibit A-1," "Plaintiff's Exhibit B-1," and "Plaintiff's Exhibit C," and the exhibits accompanying the depositions and marked for identification "Plaintiff's Exhibit A," and "Plaintiff's Exhibit B," are the exhibits referred to and used in connection with the depositions of said witnesses.

And I further certify that the said depositions have been retained by me for the purpose of securely sealing them in an envelope and directing the same to the Clerk of the Court as required by law.

And I further certify that I am not of counsel or attorney for either or any of the parties, nor am I interested in the event of the cause; I further certify that I am not a relative or employee of or attorney or counsel for either or any of the parties, nor a relative or employee of such attorney or counsel, nor financially interested in the action.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and official seal at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 25th day of March, A. D. 1948.

(Signed) Edith Goewey
Notary Public in and for the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

[fol. 1822] Mr. Hall: Now, for lack of further ammunition, your Honor,——

The Court: That is all right. We have done pretty well today. One thing, gentlemen, that occurred to me, and that is, I indicated that I wouldn't make you work on Monday, but since this morning I have signed three stipulations con-timing all of the important motions, one a pre-trial in a very important case, and interrogatories relating to a law suit that is set for trial, and which has been settled, and another one, which has reduced my Monday calendar considerably, and while I can use the time to advantage, in the interest of economy it occurred to me that if it wouldn't inconvenience you too much I might give you until 2:00 o'clock and we might proceed in this case in the afternoon of Monday. But if you have made commitments, on your assurance that you feel you can conclude next week, I am not inclined to insist on it.

Mr. Hall: I certainly do, your Honor. I think I can guarantee that our evidence will be in before the end of the week even if we begin on Tuesday.

The Court: This is not for the record.

(Discussion between court and counsel outside the record.)

The Court: Then the further proceedings in the case will be continued to Tuesday morning, May 25th, 10:00 o'clock, [fols. 1823-1824] and court will stand adjourned until the usual time.

(Whereupon, at 5:00 o'clock p. m., May 21, 1948, an adjournment was taken until 10:00 o'clock a. m., Tuesday, May 25, 1948.)

[fols. 1825-1826] IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, CENTRAL DIVISION

HONORABLE LEON R. YANKWICH, Judge Presiding

No. 6159-Y Civil

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff

vs.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA and STANDARD STATIONS, INC., Defendants

Reporters' Transcript of Proceedings
Los Angeles, California,
May 25, 1948.

Appearances:
(As heretofore noted.)

[fol. 1827] Los Angeles, California, Tuesday, May 25, 1948.
10:00 A. M.

The Court: Cause on trial.

The Clerk: 6159 Civil, United States of America v. Standard Oil Company of California, et al., for further trial.

The Court: Before we proceed with today's proceedings, I want the record to show that since our adjournment last Friday I have read the depositions of Francis S. Olaine—incidentally, the name seems to be misspelled throughout, the "i" being eliminated except in the signature; as Mr. Thody's name seems to be misspelled throughout, he being called Thrody for some reason or other. I don't know who started it, but I think even Mr. Hall got into the habit of calling him Thrody—and L. M. Bussert, and Harry T. Hays, taken in the city of San Francisco and relating to the manner of storing and distributing the various petroleum products and accessories in the Western Area, including the location of refineries and warehouses, and relating to the manner of moving petroleum products and accessories into these distribution centers, and warehouses and tanks, and then the method of supplying from them the various needs of the retail outlets of the defendant. I think that is a general statement of the nature of the controversy covered. It isn't supposed to be all-inclusive. I merely [fol. 1828] wanted to indicate what the testimony related to.

I may also state that I have had access over the weekend and yesterday to the box of exhibits, and have examined them more carefully than I have had an opportunity to do during the course of the proceedings; that is, the exhibits which are in the record.

With that, gentlemen, we will proceed. Call your next witness.

Mr. Hall: At the morning session of May 21st, when Mr. Ward Travis was on the stand, a request was made for monthly figures of gallonage for the months January to June, 1946. I ask that the sheet which I now present to the clerk be marked, for identification only, as Defendants' Exhibit next in order.

The Clerk: That will be Defendants' Exhibit PP, marked for identification.

Mr. Hall: May I say this with respect to Defendants' Exhibit PP, for identification, that as I indicated in the record —I will hand one of these sheets to your Honor——

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Hall: —as I indicated last week, there is great difficulty in reconstructing the figures for the area which Mr. Travis was describing.

Your Honor will recall that his survey covered the Los Angeles district, but only a portion of the Long Beach [fol. 1829] district. We have supplied in Defendants' Exhibit PP, for identification, the figures for the entire districts, but I understand that it would take several weeks to break down those figures in an accurate manner, to cover the exact area which was covered by Mr. Travis' survey. I may say also to your Honor, that it seems to me entirely immaterial to suggest such further breakdown for this reason, that the schedules which Mr. Travis identified were for the purpose of comparing Standard's outlets and operations with the operations and outlets of other oil companies, and that, therefore, it is quite immaterial what month was taken because the comparison is between companies, and whether the month was a high month or a low month for Standard, it was presumably a high month or a low month for the companies with which it was compared.

The Court: I think the only object of the inquiry was to see if a fair basis was used, upon which the figures were grounded.

Mr. Hall: Well, we have done our best in response to the government's inquiry.

The Court: All right.

[fol. 1830] Mr. Thompson, will you take the stand, please?

Erskine D. Thompson, called as a witness by defendants, being first sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Clerk: What is your name, please?

The Witness: Erskine, E-r-s-k-i-n-e D. Thompson, T-h-o-m-p-s-o-n.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. You are the Mr. E. D. Thompson who has testified previously as a witness called by the Government in this case?

A. That is correct.

Q. Is it or is it not a fact that petroleum products and tires, tubes, and batteries that are handled by Standard's dealers are handled also at company operated stations known as Standard Stations?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, take for the first the Standard Stations: Those are a system of outlet which is entirely operated by employees of the company, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it or is it not a fact that many of those stations are now operating in locations where they have been operating for many years?

[fol. 1831] A. That is quite true.

Q. Now, still speaking of the Standard Stations, is it true that those stations have a particular color scheme insofar as the painting of the station and the facilities is concerned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is that color scheme uniformly employed with respect to Standard Stations; what are the colors used?

A. Red, white, and blue.

Q. And is it true that those colors have been employed on Standard Stations for many years?

A. That was the color used when I went to work for the company in 1916.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked for identification as defendants' exhibit next in order the colored photograph which I now hand to the clerk.

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit QQ for identification.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked for identification with Defendants' letters next in order the photograph I now hand to the clerk.

The Clerk: RR, Defendants' RR for identification.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I show you, Mr. Thompson, the colored photograph which has been marked Defendants' QQ for identification and ask you if that is a fairly typical station operated as a company-employee station and typical of what we call the [fol. 1832] Standard Stations?

A. That is quite typical. There are two types of stations, of course, the single and double-driveway, but the appearance would be the same.

Q. And I show you now, coming to stations that are not Standard Stations but dealer stations, do you in the company classify those stations in any way as types?

A. You have reference to the——

Q. The type 1 and the type 2.

A. —the difference between character? Yes. In our operation we classify Chevron dealers in two general classifications: Type 1 and type 2, type 1 being a station which is equipped and properly manned to serve general public and the needs of the motoring public, whereas the type 2 are units that are attached to some other type of business, usually the gasoline being handled as a matter of convenience; such as a small grocery store in a remote area, where complete facilities are not available to extend a complete service to the motoring public.

Q. Well, for illustration, I think there has been one witness called by the name of Musser who operated, it seems to me it was a grocery store, in connection with a service station. Would that be typical of a type 2 operation?

A. I believe Mr. Musser operated a type 1 station. I think it was a Mr. Smith who operated in Everett that was [fol. 1833] on the stand the other day, who had a grocery store with a couple of pumps in front. That would be a type 2 type of outlet because it does not have the necessary facilities to properly serve motorist for their full requirements.

Q. You have spoken of Chevron stations. Are they painted, the stations and the facilities painted, in a color scheme which differs from that of the company operated stations?

A. Yes; they are quite different in color treatment.

Q. What are the colors used in the Chevron stations?

A. Cream, green, and burgundy.

Q. I show you the photograph which has been marked Defendants' Exhibit RR for identification and ask you if that is a typical example of a Chevron station?

A. Yes; that is correct.

Mr. Hall: I offer into evidence the photographs which have been marked for identification as Defendants' Exhibits QQ and RR.

Mr. Dixon: No objection.

The Clerk: Admitted, your Honor?

The Court: They may be received.

The Clerk: Defendants' QQ and RR admitted into evidence.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. You have spoken of Chevron stations. Those are the dealer stations and not the Standard Stations, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

[fol. 1834] Q. When did this system of Chevron stations—and I mean by that the stations with the color scheme that you have identified in connection with Chevron stations—become a practice with the company?

A. That program was started early in 1945 on a trial basis. Station colors were changed in the entire city of Palo Alto and at approximately 60 other units throughout the seven western states. That trial market program extended until the close of the war, when materials became more available and it was possible to expand it. From that time on until the middle of 1946 we converted the balance of the 6,000, approximately 6,000, dealer stations.

Q. Would you say that the change-over had been pretty well completed by the middle of 1946?

A. Pretty well completed. There were a few odds and ends of points where weather or some other conditions slowed down.

Q. Is it a fact that there were many former employees who, when that change-over occurred, were set up as independent dealers in Chevron stations?

A. That is correct.

[fol. 1835] Q. It is true now, isn't it, speaking generally, that there are many outlets which are in the first instance created by Standard? I mean by that dealer outlets?

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. Where the station is constructed by Standard, in the first instance?

A. Brought into being on that location, yes, sir.

Q. And a dealer is put in charge?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Now, in that connection is there a term used in the company "a two-party deal" as distinguished from a "three-party deal"?

A. That is right.

Q. Those terms are used?

A. That's right.

Q. Will you tell us, first, what a two-party deal is in that parlance?

A. A two-party deal is where the dealer has possession of the premises either through ownership or a basic lease. The company takes a lease from the dealer and leases it back to the dealer. That would be a two-party deal.

Q. Now, what is a three-party deal?

A. A three-party deal is where the company leases property from the property owner, generally installs a station, and subleases to a third party, the dealer. That also [fol. 1836] would include a relatively small number of properties where the company owns the land in fee. They are included in a three-party deal, for simplification of our records.

Q. Can you give us the approximate number of three-party deals?

A. There are approximately 1200 three-party deals in the seven western states.

Q. Can you tell us approximately the percentage that would be of the total dealer accounts?

A. About twenty per cent.

Q. Now, is it or is it not a feature of the Chevron stations that the dealer's name is featured in any way?

A. That is right. His name occupies a most prominent space on the station.

Q. It is painted in a prominent way over the entrance, or on the canopy of the station, or something of that sort?

A. It is usually on the sides of the canopy, or on a fin on the canopy in porcelain enamel.

Q. Now, I show you, Mr. Thompson, the documents which have been collectively marked as Government's Exhibit 13, for identification, and I call your attention to the fact that the first page of that exhibit refers to certain forms designated as S-500-2 and S-500-3. Do you notice that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, have those forms been in use by the company [fol. 1837] in the regular course of its business for many years?

A. I would say since about 1944, at least. Forms of similar character have been in use for many years, but this particular form I think was put in in about 1944.

Q. Now, is it or is it not a fact that these forms, S-500-2 and S-500-3, are kept currently up to date by changes made on the face of the form from time to time?

A. That is right. They are supposed to be maintained up to date at all times.

Q. Those forms are maintained by the branches in the various sales districts?

A. That's right.

Q. And those forms are compiled by the branches by personal observation in the area of the branch?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, was the telegram which is shown on the first page of Government's Exhibit 13, for identification, sent out to the various district managers under your authority and by your direction?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, is it a fact that the subsequent pages of this exhibit, not including the last page, represent the reports from the districts stating the total number of stations, as indicated in forms S-500-2 and S-500-3 within their area? [fol. 1838] A. That is the total number of stations other than those supplied by the Standard Oil Company.

Q. Yes. Now, you have caused to be brought into court those forms S-500-2 and S-500-3, which formed the basis for these reports from the sales districts which are included in Government's Exhibit 13, for identification?

A. That is right.

Q. And they are in that large wooden box over there?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, I call your attention to the final sheet of Exhibit 13, for identification, and ask you if that is a summary showing the number of competitive stations, or the number of retail outlets in the various sales districts, included within the seven western states?

A. That is right.

Q. Is that also a correct summary of the so-called split pump accounts, which were shown by these sheets S-500-2 and S-500-3 to be in existence in those seven western states?

A. That is correct.

Q. If we should assume that Standard Oil Company of California in the seven western states has approximately 1,000 Standard stations, and approximately 6,000 dealer stations, and we added those figures to the figures shown on the last sheet of Government's Exhibit 13, for identifica- [fol. 1839] tion, what would be the figure for the total number of retail gasoline outlets in the seven states as of the date of this survey?

A. Roughly, 36,500.

Q. And what would be the number of split pump stations in that entire area?

A. 577.

Q. Can you give us the percentage that the split pumps would bear to the other total?

A. The split pumps would represent 1.6 per cent of the total number of retail outlets in the seven western states.

Q. And that is the total number of retail outlets of all suppliers?

A. That is right, including the Standard Oil Company.

Mr Hall: I offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 13, for identification.

Mr. Dixon: Objected to, your Honor, on the ground it is immaterial and irrelevant.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Dixon: Furthermore, your Honor, I might say this, that we also wish to raise the question of competency. Unless I am incorrect in this, Mr. Hall, I now understand that the records on which that summary is supposed to have been made are available to the government.

[fol. 1840] Mr. Hall: Oh, yes.

Mr. Dixon: And are they contained in the documents over there?

Mr. Hall: Oh, yes, they are in this wooden box, with this exception, which has already been brought out in the evidence, that these forms, S-500-2 and S-500-3 are kept constantly up to date by stations being stricken out and other stations added, so that, that change having gone on since the date of this survey, these documents in the wooden box may show some change from the basis reflected in the exhibit offered.

Mr. Dixon: In other words, it would depend upon the date upon which the particular survey was made as to what results you would get, and that result would not appear from the records which are available to the government in your box over here?

Mr. Hall: But all the original records are available to the government, so far as they are in existence.

Mr. Dixon: That is my point, if the court please.

The Court: Just a minute.

Mr. Dixon: Yes, certainly.

The Clerk: Then this would have to be Exhibit SS.

The Court: Go ahead.

Mr. Dixon: Pardon, your Honor. I was rising to object to the competency of it on all of the grounds stated, in [fol. 1841] that the records which were made available to the government on examination failed to disclose the number of stations from the records submitted as of the date of the survey, and, therefore, there is no way in which the government can check and determine from the records submitted whether these records are correct, from the summaries that have been submitted. As a matter of fact, we endeavored to do that yesterday and just couldn't make the figures submitted appear anywhere from the documents that were submitted to us for examination.

Mr. Hall: If there is any doubt in the court's mind, I would like to be heard on it.

The Court: The only question in my mind is the one just suggested, and that is, as to the summaries submitted, if the material on which they are based is available.

Mr. Hall: This survey, as your Honor knows, was made early in 1947. It was made from new sheets which are in the wooden box. These sheets list the location of service stations and designations of service stations. Now, as Mr. Thompson has testified, those sheets maintained in the branches of the company are, of course, subject to change on the face of the sheets themselves as time goes on; that is, you may find a station over here has gone out of business, and that a new one has come in somewhere else. There has been very little of that change, I think, proportionately [fol. 1842] since early in 1947 when these figures were compiled, but, at least, the entire original supporting data for the sheets which your Honor has before you are in the wooden box.

The Court: I see. The objections are overruled and Government's Exhibit 13, for identification, will be received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibit SS.

[fol. 1843] Q. Since June 1st of 1944 has Standard Stations, Inc., confined its activities to the management and operation of the company's employee-operated stations?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I mean by that Standard Stations?

A. That is correct.

The Court: What was the date?

Mr. Hall: June 1st of 1944.

The Court: June 1st.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, has Standard Oil Company of California——

Mr. Dixon: Pardon me, Mr. Hall. May I have the answer to the last question?

(Record read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Does Standard Oil Company of California in connection with the products and merchandise that is sold by dealers at Chevron stations employ certain registered trade names and trademarks?

A. That is right.

Mr. Hall: I ask that seven sheets which I now present to the clerk be marked collectively with defendants' letters next in order for identification.

The Clerk: That is Defendants' TT for identification.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I show you the sheets which have now been marked Defendants' Exhibit TT for identification and ask you if those portray the trademarks and trade names which are [fol. 1844] now and, for a number of years last past, have been currently and commonly employed in connection with the products and merchandise sold through Standard Chevron stations?

A. That is right.

Mr. Hall: I offer Defendants' Exhibit TT into evidence.

Mr. Dixon: No objection, your Honor.

The Court: It may be received.

The Clerk: TT in evidence.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Do other companies compete with Standard Oil Company of California in the sale of petroleum products, tires, tubes, batteries, and accessories?

A. Very aggressively.

Mr. Dixon: I object to that as immaterial, your Honor, and irrelevant.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Hall: What was the answer, Mr. Reporter?

(Answer read by the reporter.)

Q. Do those competitors compete with Standard Oil Company of California for the purpose of obtaining sites for service stations?

A. Yes; they do.

Mr. Dixon: I object to that, your Honor, as immaterial and irrelevant.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Hall: I ask that there be marked for identification [fol. 1845] three sheets which I now hand to the clerk.

The Clerk: That is Defendants' UU for identification.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I show you, Mr. Thompson, the document which has been marked Defendants' UU for identification and ask you if that report was made to you in the regular course of business?

A. That is right.

Q. Did it come to you at about the date that it bears, July 15, 1947?

A. Yes; that is the date.

Q. From whom did you receive it?

A. I received it from our district manager in Long Beach.

Q. Was that a voluntary act on his part or did you request it of him?

A. We did not request it. It was a voluntary account that he had made and submitted to us for our information.

Q. The heading indicates LIST OF COMPETITIVE SERVICE STATION CONSTRUCTION ACTIVITIES SHOWING WORK IN PROGRESS AS OF JULY 15, 1947—LONG BEACH DISTRICT. Does the first column indicate the company that was putting up a competitive service station?

A. That is right.

Q. Then under the heading LOCATION that is the location of the station, is that correct?

[fol. 1846] A. Location of the construction; yes, sir.

Q. Then under the heading "APPROXIMATE DATE OF CONSTRUCTION STARTED" that was the date the construction started?

A. That is approximately the date.

Q. Under that heading TYPE OF STATION—REMARKS is there a description of the number of pumps at the station and other matters?

A. That is right.

Q. That indicates and is intended to indicate the construction activity by competitors of Standard Oil Company of California in that particular district as of that date, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. At that time how many dealer stations were under construction in the Long Beach district by Standard Oil Company of California?

A. None.

Q. Were there any Standard Stations under construction in that district as of that time?

A. There was one unit which was being relocated from one site to another because of the loss of a lease.

Q. And do you know how many competitive stations are shown to be under construction by this exhibit?

A. There are 48 on that list, representing quite a large number of competitors.

[fol. 1847] Mr. Hall: I offer into evidence the document heretofore marked for identification as Defendants' UU.

Mr. Dixon: Objected to as irrelevant and immaterial, and not representative of the conditions throughout the western area.

The Court: Overruled.

The Clerk: Defendants' UU in evidence.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Do these competitors that you have referred to compete with the Standard Oil Company of California also in the matter of making arrangements with dealers of existing stations?

A. That is right.

Mr. Dixon: I am sorry. I did not get the question, Mr. Hall. Will you repeat it, Mr. Reporter?

(Question and answer read by the reporter.)

Mr. Dixon: Thank you.

A. That is correct; they endeavor to take over the entire station operation subject, of course, generally to agreements we may have in effect.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Well, they do not ordinarily try to induce the dealer to break the agreement with Standard, do they?

A. No; they do not.

Mr. Dixon: I object to that question, your Honor.

The Court: Yes; I will sustain that objection.

[fol. 1848] By Mr. Hall:

Q. Then do I understand by your last answer that your competitors wait until your contracts have expired and then attempt to move in?

A. That is right.

Mr. Dixon: I object to that question, your Honor, on the ground that it calls for a conclusion.

The Court: Yes; it does call for a conclusion. You might ask him to describe, if he knows, any of the instances, to illustrate by any instances the methods which they use in trying to put in stations formerly operated by the Standard dealers.

Mr. Hall: Very well, your Honor.

Q. Based on your experience——

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, may the answer of the witness be stricken?

The Court: Yes; it may be stricken.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Based upon your experience in the marketing department of Standard Oil Company, what can you tell us as to the methods that competitors of Standard employ for the purpose of getting one of the Standard's dealers?

A. That is the methods employed by the competitors?

Q. Yes.

A. They install facilities, absorb rentals, loan money, and a variety of ways to interest the dealer in switching to other products.

[fol. 1849] Q. And have there been a number of occasions in which those methods were successful?

A. A considerable number; yes.

Q. The dealers that handle the products of the competitors you have referred to handle gasoline and other petroleum products and, in cases, they handle tires, tubes, batteries, and accessories, don't they?

A. That is right.

Q. Is competition a factor in promoting the selection of the dealer by Standard?

A. It is one of the most important factors in our development of new outlets.

Q. I have referred to dealer stations handling the products of Standard's competitors. What can you tell us as to the relative desirability of the location of the dealers of those competitors as compared with the locations of the dealers handling Standard Oil's products?

A. From the location standpoint I would say that they are entirely comparable.

Q. From your observation and experience is it generally true that dealer stations which handle the gasoline of Standard's principal competitors handle the lubricating oil put out by the company whose gasoline is sold at the station?

A. They do.

Mr. Dixon: I object to that question, your Honor, as [fol. 1850] irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

A. They do.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Is it generally true that competitive companies selling brands of gasoline in competition with the Standard promote the sale of tires, tubes, and batteries through their dealers?

Mr. Dixon: I object to that on the ground that it is irrelevant and immaterial, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

A. They do. In fact a recent check we made of competitive practices indicated that there were 27 lines of tires and 28 lines of batteries promoted by our competitors to retail outlets.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. That was, as I understood you, 27 separate brands of tires?

A. 27 separate brands of tires and 28 separate brands of batteries.

Mr. Hall: I ask that the pages that I now hand the clerk be marked collectively exhibit for identification with the defendants' letters next in order.

The Clerk: Defendants' VV for identification.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I think in your previous testimony, Mr. Thompson, you indicated—and I may be wrong about it; you correct me if I am—that prior to 1934 there was an agency under [fol. 1851] a lease and agency system employed by Standard, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. In 1934 did a new agreement come into the picture?

A. Yes; the authorized distributor agreement.

Q. Is that an agreement substantially like Exhibit 2 in evidence?

A. That is right.

Q. Then, is it true that after 1934 you had not only the agency and the lease and agency system but you had this authorized distributor agreement?

A. That is right.

Q. Approximately when was it that the dealer agreements came into use?

A. In 1938 the dealer agreement superseded the agency agreement.

Q. I show you the documents which have been marked in evidence as Defendants' VV for identification, being prints of dealer agreement bearing the dates: May, 1938; June, 1940; August, 1941; November, 1941; January, 1942; February, 1942; October, 1943; and February, 1944, and ask you if those are forms of dealer agreements, there being comparatively, perhaps, little change in those forms, which have been used by the company over the years that I have indicated in describing the documents?

[fol. 1852] A. That is correct.

Mr. Hall: I offer the documents which have been marked VV for identification into evidence.

Mr. Dixon: No objection.

The Clerk: Admitted, your Honor?

The Court: They may be received.

The Clerk: That is VV in evidence.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Then, is it correct to say that after 1938 there were dealer agreements, the authorized distributor agreements being used by the company?

A. That is right.

Q. I believe it already appears in evidence from a Government exhibit that in September, 1944, the dealer agreements TBA superseded the distributor agreements, is that correct?

A. That is right.

The Court: What year was that?

Mr. Hall: September, 1944. And that fact is stated, your Honor, in one of the Government's exhibits, I believe it is Exhibit 6.

[fol. 1853] Yes, that is correct, your Honor, Exhibit 6.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. By a distributor agreement, you understand that I am referring to the document which is Government's Exhibit 2 in evidence; is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, when did the petroleum products and equipment agreements come into use by the company?

A. In the middle of 1944.

Q. Then is it fair to say that since 1944 the agreements in use by the company have been the dealer agreements, the dealer agreements TBA, and the petroleum products and equipment agreements?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, I want to call your attention to Government's Exhibit 4, and to paragraph 2, to the sentence in paragraph 2, reading in this way:

> "Company will deliver to dealer such other merchandise currently sold by company that dealer wishes to handle hereunder in quantities necessary in opinion of company to meet dealer's requirements at said premises."

Now, my question to you is this: In the practice of the company, has it been the practice of the company to determine the quantity of accessories, other than tires, tubes and batteries—well, let me reframe that question, please.

[fol. 1854] I will ask you to understand now, for the purpose of this question, that when I refer to accessories, I mean something other than tires, tubes and batteries. Do you understand that?

A. I understand that.

Q. Now, then, my question to you is this: Does the company, as a matter of practice, and has it ever, as a matter of practice, determined the quantities of accessories which should be taken by a dealer?

A. No, that is entirely up to the dealer, as to their quantities; subject to stocks available, we would possibly have to hold shipments down in cases of shortages of certain items, but the orders are all placed by the dealer and he determines the quantity.

Q. So that the only thing that the company ever does would be to say to the dealer if he asks for too many accessories, "We don't have the accessories to give you"?

A. Yes, and that condition prevailed generally during the war. We had to exercise that provision.

The Court: What would be included under that designation of accessories?

The Witness: Oh, spark plugs and fan belts, and windshield wipers; practically everything in automotive accessories, except tires, tubes and batteries. It would be pol- [fol. 1855] ishes and, oh, sun visors. I mentioned fan belts, and hub caps; anything that is a part of an automobile, used generally as an accessory for an automobile other than tires, tubes and batteries.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, suppose that a dealer is a dealer under a dealer agreement TBA, which is Government's Exhibit 4, and suppose that dealer wanted to handle accessories, and I am not talking now about tires, tubes and batteries, would he be perfectly free, and have dealers been permitted to handles accessories freely?

A. That's right.

Mr. Dixon: I object to the form of the question, your Honor. It calls for a conclusion and assumes a lot of things.

The Court: It does call for a conclusion. This witness is not in the same position as some of the witnesses of whom the questions were asked, because they were the person concerned, and it went to their interpretation of the contract. Therefore, the form in which the question is put is objectionable, so far as this witness is concerned. He may testify, however, if he knows, what the practice was regarding any accessories such as he has named which could be supplied; whether the dealer could supply himself from other sources in the line of accessories which he has given.

Mr. Hall: Yes, your Honor, I will ask him.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Mr. Thompson, speaking now of dealers with a dealer [fol. 1856] agreement TBA, what has been the practice of the company when such a dealer wanted to take on and stock other accessories, other than tires, tubes and batteries?

A. We would first try to sell him our own line of accessories, but failing in that, he would be permitted to handle anyone's accessories.

Q. Is there a term used in the merchandising field, as it affects these dealers,—the term "pie wagon"?

A. Yes.

Q. What is a pie wagon?

A. Well, in recent years the method of distribution has come into rather prominent use. What it is primarily is peddlers who have a little truck with compartments in it for carrying accessories, who call around, drive up and down the highways, and call on all the dealers selling and delivering off the truck. They buy their products from various sources, and sell them to all types of dealers, wherever they can.

Mr. Hall: Would your Honor entertain a motion for a recess?

The Court: Yes. I thought you were reaching the end of your examination and I did not want to break in.

Mr. Hall: I haven't come to that yet, but I have reached a convenient stopping place.

The Court: All right. We will take a short recess.

(A short recess was taken.)

[fol. 1857] Mr. Hall: It has been called to my attention, your Honor, that there is a little confusion in the exhibits to the depositions that you referred to this morning. This is not the fault of the court clerk but is the fault of the notary, Mr. Thody?

Mr. Thody: That is correct.

The Court: I thought we corrected that by putting in the exhibits independently the other day, Friday.

Mr. Hall: They have got the second page of one exhibit tacked onto the first page of the wrong exhibit.

The Court: Oh.

Mr. Hall: If I may make this suggestion, the error will be corrected.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hall: At present Exhibit NN appears to be two pages. As a matter of fact Exhibit NN was only one page.

I therefore ask that the second page be taken out and removed, and I will go on with the other correction then.

The Court: All right; that may be done.

Mr. Hall: That is agreeable, Mr. Thody?

Mr. Thody: Yes.

The Court: That may be done.

Mr. Hall: Then this is the page that goes out. You (the clerk) can just tear it right out.

Now, with respect to Exhibit LL, it now appears as only [fol. 1858] one page. It should be two pages, and I ask that the two pages that I now hand to the clerk be substituted in place of Exhibit LL.

The Court: All right; that will be done.

Mr. Hall: That is agreeable, Mr. Thody?

Mr. Thody: Yes; it is.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, Mr. Thompson, it appears from Exhibit 6 in evidence that there were as of March 12, 1947, 742 open accounts, an open account being described as an account where Standard does not own nor have any lease on the property, and there is no contract or sublease of any kind between Standard and the independent dealer. You have in mind these accounts that we refer to as open accounts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has it been the practice of Standard to sell gasoline to open accounts where the open account handled other competitive petroleum products?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has it been the practice of Standard to sell gasoline to open accounts where the open account handled tires, tubes, and batteries that were not obtained from Standard?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Still speaking of these open accounts, has it been the practice of Standard to sell the open account Standard's lubricating oil where the open account was handling com- [fol. 1859] petitive gasoline?

A. Yes; we do. However, those numbers are not included in that 740. Those were open accounts to whom we supplied our gasoline.

Q. Has it been the practice of Standard to sell its lubricating oil to an open account where the open account was handling tires, tubes, and batteries that had not been obtained through Standard?

A. Yes; that is the practice.

Q. Have these practices that we have been talking about, involving the open accounts, been practices engaged in for a number of years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Take the case of a dealer handling Standard gasoline, has it been the practice of those dealers where they were operating under a dealer agreement only to handle competitive tires, tubes, and batteries?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think the testimony already shows that it is not the practice of Standard Oil Company, or has not been the practice up until recently, to sell tires, tubes, and batteries to a dealer unless the dealer had an agreement TBA; am I right about that?

A. That is correct.

Q. And has that practice recently been changed?

[fol. 1860] A. On tires, tubes, and batteries a dealer must operate under a dealer agreement TBA, but accessories other than tires, tubes, and batteries, recently a policy was established whereby those accessories could be sold to any dealer handling our gasoline.

The Court: That is not the question you asked, is it? You want to know if the policy had been abandoned as to tires, tubes, and batteries.

The Witness: It has not been abandoned.

Mr. Hall: I was mistaken in putting the question.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Then, if I get the situation, it is this: The practice that has been abandoned related to accessories other than tires, tubes, and batteries?

A. That is correct.

Q. But previously a dealer had to have a dealer agreement TBA in order to get the accessories other than tires, tubes, and batteries?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, Standard will sell the accessories other than tires, tubes, and batteries without a dealer agreement TBA?

A. Providing he handles our gasoline.

Q. Yes. In the last few questions I have asked you what the situation was with respect to a dealer agreement, a dealer having a dealer agreement. Is the same thing true [fol. 1861] with respect to a dealer with a petroleum products and equipment agreement?

A. Yes; the policy is exactly the same.

Q. Now I want to invite your attention to accessories and by "accessories" in the questions I am now going to ask you I am not talking about tires, tubes and batteries; I am talking about the other miscellaneous accessories. I think you said that the new practice was to sell those accessories to a dealer even though he did not have a dealer agreement TBA?

A. That is right.

Q. Formerly he was required to have a dealer agreement TBA before he could handle those accessories?

A. That is correct.

Q. If the dealer handles Standard gasoline will Standard, as a matter of practice, sell the dealer accessories even though the dealer handles competitive tires, tubes, batteries, and accessories?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the same thing true even though the dealer handles competitive lube oils and greases?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It has always been true, hasn't it, that as a matter of practice a dealer, whether he was under a dealer agreement or a dealer agreement TBA or a petroleum products and equipment agreement, was free to handle competitive accessories?

[fol. 1862] A. That is right.

Q. And that practice extended so far that a dealer under a dealer agreement TBA could handle competitive accessories 100 per cent if he wanted to, couldn't he?

A. That is correct.

[fol. 1863] Q. Now, either in your previous testimony or that of Mr. McClanahan, reference has been made, I think, to a policy of the company with respect to the number of stations that you would have in a given area or a given locality. What do you call that policy in the company?

A. Well, that's our primary representation objective.

Q. Representation objective?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the, or what has been the cardinal principle of that object? Would you call it balanced distribution?

A. Balanced distribution, to cover our market with the fewest possible number of outlets.

Q. Can you tell us what the reason is that you desire and attempt to cover the market with the fewest possible outlets?

A. The more concentration of business we can get through one outlet, the greater economy results in our distribution solicitation, and other items of expense in selling through the dealer trade. Besides that, there is the type of dealers that are attracted to our stations. They are more representative when the station has a substantial following and is not diluted by a large number of stations handling the company's products in competition. The only variance in the matter of economy is because of this balanced distribution we are also required to supply outlets in quite re-[fol. 1864] mote areas as a service to the public. People traveling out of the metropolitan areas into back country have requirements for our products, and we are obliged to make those available to them, and, naturally, those types of deliveries are more expensive than normally.

Q. Well, is it your opinion, based upon your experience, that an unbalanced distribution would result in higher costs of distribution?

A. It would quite definitely, because we would have more outlets than necessary in one area, requiring all of the expense attendant to supplying them, and in other areas, where our advertising had created a demand for the company's products, we would have no outlet to serve them.

Q. Now, can you mention some of the factors that have a bearing upon determining a distribution of your dealers?

A. Primarily, it is a matter of competition. If we can get along with one station in a given community and attract business to that one outlet, that is most desired. If competitors offset that station and build in the vicinity, we are required to expand our distribution to meet that competition. Matters of highway changes and street relocations is another factor, and the shifts of population, particularly during the last few years, has become an important factor in determining the distribution pattern.

[fol. 1865] Q. As a matter of practice, to what extent are these various agreements necessary in carrying out this balanced distribution?

Mr. Dixon: Just a moment. I object to that question, your Honor, as calling for a conclusion, and as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Read the question, please. I think that goes too much into the question of economic advantage, which, as I view it, is not a matter subject to inquiry. There was no objection, and I think properly so, to the previous questions, which merely explained the method of controlling the distribution. But I think the present question relates to details dealing with economic advantages. However, I will have it read back to see if my impression is correct. Will you read it, please?

(The question was read.)

The Court: I think, if it is limited to what I think it applies to and it does not call for an answer which might go into the field which I have already mentioned, I will overrule the objection and allow the answer. If it goes too far, I will strike it. You may answer.

The Witness: May I have the question read, please?

The Court: We will have it read for your benefit.

The Witness: I got interested in listening to you, your Honor.

[fol. 1866] (The question was read.)

The Witness: As the community is equipped with a station handling our products, to secure this balanced distribution it is essential that that unit represent our company in that given area. Otherwise, we would be continuously going to the expense of solicitation, and painting, and other matters that are involved in switching around from one unit to another, and our distribution would not be——

The Court: In other words, what you mean, as I gather it, when you speak of necessity that that unit represent your company, you mean that it is your custom to bear down on your representations to that unit to the extent of having them represent all your products?

The Witness: That is right.

The Court: Those on the open list, as well as those on the restricted list?

The Witness: That is correct.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, between 1931 and 1941 can you tell us what the proportion of stations were, devoted to the sale of Standard's products which represented new construction as compared with the total new construction of all stations?

Mr. Dixon: Object to that, your Honor, as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

[fol. 1867] The Witness: It is my understanding that during that period '31 to '41, Standard Oil Company constructed eight per cent of the new outlets that were constructed by all companies during that period.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Do you know what proportion constructed by Standard was between 1942 and 1947?

A. That figure, I believe, was 8.7 per cent of all the outlets constructed.

Q. What is Standard's capital investment in its dealer stations today?

A. Roughly, 16½ million dollars.

Q. That is——

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, I object to that. That is going into purely the economic profit motive here, in justification, so-called justification, of these contracts, and I believe it comes clearly within the objection that it is attempting to set up an economic defense to these contracts.

The Court: No, in view of the fact that you have gone into the question of assistance and other methods of securing particular outlets, I think that the money interest is relevant. In view of the allegations of the complaint and the proof—not all of the allegations of the complaint, but the subject of the proof is the matter of consideration in cases of this character. This particular phase has been [fol. 1868] the subject of proof, and it may lead to inferences either way. On the one hand, a large amount of money invested may be the basis for an argument that through the money investment they secured control which, regardless of the meaning of written contracts, placed the particular dealers under such obligations or control that they hesitate to deal with others. Then it can lead, also, to the argument that because of their interest, it is a proprietary interest which might warrant suggestions, as they were called by some witnesses Friday, as to what product should and should not be handled, for the common interest of both the operator and the company. So I think that because of that, and without in any way departing from the thought I expressed before, this inquiry is proper, limited to merely showing the amount of financial interest.

It will be overruled and the answer already given may remain.

Mr. Dixon: May I have the answer, your Honor?

The Court: It was: just about 16½ million dollars.

Mr. Dixon: Thank you.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Does that include solely depreciable equipment and land?

A. That is correct; capital investment items.

Mr. Hall: Would your Honor entertain a motion for adjournment?

[fol. 1869] The Court: When you begin to watch the clock,—I was going to say we do not watch the clock here.

Mr. Hall: Well, your Honor, I am proceeding pretty rapidly, and I feel I can conclude this before the afternoon has gone very far. We are making very good progress indeed, and my predictions as to conclusion are getting more and more favorable, from the standpoint of the court, every minute.

Mr. Dixon: Off the record.

(Discussion between court and counsel as to adjournment.)

The Court: All right. 2:00 o'clock, gentlemen.

(Whereupon, at 12:15 o'clock p. m., a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock p. m., of the same day.)

[fol. 1870]

Los Angeles, California,
Tuesday, May 25, 1948,
2:00 o'clock P. M.

ERSKINE D. THOMPSON (Recalled)

Direct examination (resumed).

By Mr. Hall:

Q. This morning, Mr. Thompson, you spoke of a three-party deal and, as I recollect your testimony, it was a case where Standard either owned the property or Standard leased the property as lessee from some third party and then made some arrangement with the dealer to occupy the property as its dealer, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. In those types of deals is it common practice of the company to provide, either in a sublease to the dealer, or in some other form of agreement made to the dealer, that the dealer shall pay for his tenure of property at the rate of so much per gallon on the gasoline delivered by Standard Oil Company of California to the dealer?

A. That is right. That is generally prevailing in all the three-party deals.

Q. Is there a distinction which may be drawn, and speaking generally now between the locations of stations that are operated by employees of the company, on the one hand, and Chevron stations, on the other?

A. Yes. the stations that are operated by company em-
[fol. 1871] ployees are usually those in areas where they are exposed to considerable transient travel, whereas with the dealer, they are generally in neighborhood locations.

Q. Generally speaking, are the Chevron stations in locations where it would be easier for a competitor to obtain a comparable site than would be the case with employee-operated stations?

A. Yes, sir; very definitely.

Q. I take it that there are locations for service stations where, because of municipal regulations or ordinances, it may be difficult to obtain a new location. Are there such areas?

A. There are relatively few such locations, but there are a few.

Q. In those few locations, are those locations in which Standard has dealer stations as distinguished from company-operated stations?

A. No. I would say that to my knowledge there are no dealer stations located in that type of area.

Q. Is it true, then, that there are no areas where Standard has dealer stations where you can't find comparable locations from the standpoint of the location itself?

A. I would say that is correct.

Q. Based upon your experience over these years and your observations, has it been shown by experience; in your [fol. 1872] opinion, that a purchasing motorist does not necessarily select the dealer nearest his home or place of business?

A. I would say that he does not. The business enjoyed by service stations is, generally speaking, a mobile business. The motorist is driving around in his automobile and has access to a wide selection of different brands and different stations from which to buy. He is in his car and he does not have to park it to make his purchase. He has a wide selection, I would say.

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, I object to this line of testimony. I do not see that it has any relevancy or materiality to the issues of this case. I have not objected up to this point, but I think the——

The Court: I think the inquiry should be discontinued here. I do not think it is material to the issues as they stand now. It may well be that Mr. Hall prepared this testimony in view of some of the allegations of your complaint, such as, for instance, that they monopolize corners; but you have offered no testimony at all connected with geography, as well as to good corners or bad corners or anything else; so that that issue is not before the court.

Mr. Hall: Very well.

The Court: And this might bear upon that issue by showing that it is not the corner, but the customer who determines where he is going to go, depending upon where he finds himself.

[fol. 1873] Mr. Hall: That was exactly my question, your Honor.

The Court: We are not concerned any more with the complaint. The complaint has disappeared in the proof. A lot of that complaint was not made the subject of any proof.

Mr. Hall: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: So you do not have to disprove what they did not prove.

Mr. Hall: Very well.

The Court: I make that statement because I have been checking for my own benefit the complaint to see what the evidence relates to, and that one paragraph is the one as to which this could possibly relate. But no proof has been directed to it and there is nothing from which to argue that they got the choice station or did not get the choice station.

Mr. Hall: Very well.

The Court: Because they did not offer to prove that they are better located than Texaco or anyone else. If you have traveled as much as I have over this coast, up and down, holding court everywhere from Portland down to Las Vegas, why, you can find that certain companies have certain habits. The Texaco, you always find a Texaco outside of town when you approach a large city, and you do not necessarily find others.

[fol. 1874] But we are not concerned with this because no proof was offered.

Mr. Hall: Yes, sir.

The Court: The proof is limited. This has simmered down to a very simple proposition, and that is the proposition that both of you cited in your trial brief, and it has been narrowed more than proven, and that is just this: Is this agreement illegal per se as the Government contends? If it is, then that ends it; if it is not, then the next question is: Does it unreasonably restrict competition under the Sherman Act, or does it result in monopoly or tend to substantially affect commerce under the Clayton Act. And that latter question is the question you propound, whether these activities, because of the way these products move in and out of the warehouses and tanks and others maintained, whether their activities are legal or the other. That is all there is to the lawsuit.

[fol. 1875] Mr. Hall: Very well, your Honor.

The Court: So let's keep it that way. The government at the present time cannot depart from the line laid down and they cannot reopen. I wouldn't allow them to reopen.

They have laid down the line of attack. Your answer to the attack must follow that line. Any other things that they have complained of as to which no evidence was produced is out of the case to all intents and purposes.

Mr. Hall: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: I realize, of course, in preparing the case you cannot know exactly how tightly the lines might be drawn, but now we know. So I don't think that the present inquiry should be pursued.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Now, Mr. Thompson, reference has been made previously to competitors and competition. Does Standard, in order to meet that competition, offer to do anything for its independent dealers?

Mr. Dixon: I object to that question, your Honor, as to the form: Does Standard do anything in order to meet competition? I think that is a matter for the court to decide.

The Court: I will overrule the objection.

The Witness: Yes, we do.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. They install facilities?

A. That is correct.

[fol. 1876] Q. What do they install? Give us some example.

A. Well, we install modern pumps; we install tankage; we put in air compressors, hoists, restrooms; build buildings, canopies; install lubricating oil equipment, such as tanks and grease guns; pave driveways and approaches; paint and sign the stations.

Q. May I interrupt you there: Do you know approximately how much the company spent in 1947 in the painting of stations?

A. Something in excess of——

Mr. Dixon: We object to that, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled. I will allow it on the same ground I did this morning, to show the actual investment involved.

The Witness: In the year 1947 we spent in excess of $1,000,000 in just paint alone, in painting stations, not counting the signs.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Do they install air and water wells in the stations?
A. Yes, sir; drinking fountains.
Q. And special lighting?
A. Special lighting.
Q. Now, is it or is it not a fact that this matter of clean restrooms is an important factor with the company in meeting competition?
[fol. 1877] Mr. Dixon: I object to that, your Honor, clearly.

The Court: There we are getting into operations. I don't want to go into that, Mr. Hall. I don't think it is necessary. We are concerned with the merits only.

Mr. Hall: This is a part of the competitive picture, your Honor, in the things we do.

The Court: I know, but it isn't necessary for the determination of this case. The only—well, I think the reasons I have stated are sufficient.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Does the company commonly make to its independent dealers an allowance for the maintenance of clean restrooms?
A. Yes, we do.

Mr. Dixon: I object to that, your Honor, for the same reason.

The Court: No, that is different. That goes to your own proof here, as to the inducements that are offered. You know, you made mention of the fact that they offer certain inducements, and I remember the first week of the trial when you talked so much about what, in the light of the exploration here, was "chicken-feed"; the fact that they forgave $6,000 out of a $10,000 loan. That I presume was material because it showed the inducements that were given to secure these outlets.

Mr. Dixon: Perhaps I misunderstood the question, your [fol. 1878] Honor, but I thought he said something about clean restrooms.

The Court: No, he said: Do they make any allowance for keeping up the clean restrooms? In other words, do they give them something, give them credit on the rent or the time they may take to maintain the restrooms.

Mr. Dixon: Oh, maybe I misunderstood the question. Could I have it read, please? If so, I am sorry.

(The question and answer were read.)

The Witness: (Continuing) Because we feel that the deterioration of one dealer's premises has an overall effect on the entire group, and recognizing that there is some aspect attached to keeping a uniformity of service, we make an allowance of a quarter of a cent a gallon on our regular grade gasoline to these type 1 accounts I referred to earlier, for the purpose of a restroom and maintenance allowance.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. Does the company issue to its dealers a book called "Lubriguide"?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hall: I am not going to offer this in evidence, but I want him to describe it.

The Court: That isn't that big book that has every imaginary automobile shown in it, is it?

Mr. Hall: Oh, your Honor, I am not going to offer this in evidence.

[fol. 1879] The Court: I have seen one of those.

Mr. Hall: I just want him to describe it and I want to put in one or two sample pages.

By Mr. Hall:

Q. I hand you a rather large volume and ask you if that is the "Lubriguide" you refer to?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, for the record, will you just briefly describe what is in that volume?

A. In the first place, this record is provided all Chevron dealers who are equipped to give lubrication service, and it comprises about 150 pages of general instructions and detailed instructions, as to how to take bearings apart and reassemble them without getting them on in a way that would prove hazardous. It includes charts for all makes and models of various automobiles for several years back, including light delivery trucks, and the book is prepared by our research organization in collaboration with the automobile manufacturer, who specifically recommends lubricants manufactured by our company with the service periods that our research people have determined upon as being the most accurate for the best lubrication of the automobile. It is felt that an automobile is a costly and intricate piece of mechanism, and any oversight in the lubrication procedure could prove very costly and even dangerous in some instances to the motorist. That is all provided without [fol. 1880] charge to all dealers having lubrication facilities.

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, I don't want to again object to this line of testimony if your Honor feels you want to hear it or it is competent. But, as I understood your Honor's previous ruling, you felt that this type of testimony, although this is much broader apparently than the previous question, was perhaps relevant under paragraph 33 of our complaint. We suggest that it is in no way connected with those allegations, and if I may inquire just what the purpose of the testimony is, perhaps I can withdraw my objection. But on that basis I am objecting to it, on the ground it is irrelevant and immaterial even under paragraph 33 of the complaint.

Mr. Hall: Well, I think that under the decision in the Pick case, for example——

The Court: Pardon?

Mr. Hall: I think under the decision in the Pick case we have a right to show what the company does for its dealers in order to maintain its competitive position, and as far as this "Lubriguide" goes, the matter goes further than that. I can't develop it all by one question, of course, but I expect to show that these lubrication instructions, so elaborately furnished to the dealers, are geared and designed specifically for the handling of Standard Oil lubricants, and [fol. 1881] I think that has a very material bearing upon the issues.

Mr. Dixon: If the court please, I don't think there is any evidence in the record to prove that at all. Certainly this is no Pick case. There is no complex mechanism that requires the use of Standard greases only in order to make it work, and that was the basis, as I understand it, that the Circuit Court affirmed the ruling of the District Court in the Pick case. I frankly do not see any basis under the issues and evidence introduced in this case to date for the relevancy or materiality of this type of evidence. But, again, this is a court of equity, and if your Honor is interested in it, we can go along with it.

The Court: I do not want to encumber the record with a lot of irrelevant testimony. I do not think, or, I will put it positively: I think that any inducement that the company makes is material, but any advantages which result to the dealer and indirectly to the public from the arrangement between the company and the dealers is not a proper subject of inquiry, because we are going back again to the question of economic advantage. We are not here to determine whether the facilities and the quality of oil, and the other things, were such inducement that even in the absence of such an agreement the same people might prefer to deal with Standard instead of another company. That is not our problem at all, because we are concerned only with the [fol. 1882] result of this understanding. It is agreed on both sides that as to dealer agreements, the purport of them, and the forms, even the latest version of 1944, as this witness testified this morning, contained that restrictive clause which bound the dealer to have his requirements supplied by the company, both as to the petroleum products and as to tires, tubes and batteries, leaving free choice, as Mr. Thompson testified this morning, as to other accessories other than those three mentioned. That is our fundamental problem. If the agreement doesn't have that effect, then the inquiry is immaterial. And if it has that effect, the inquiry is equally immaterial, but if this were the kind of a proceeding where there were no contracts in the case and some person had testified that their understanding of the conditions upon which they could obtain Standard Oil products were that they shouldn't buy from anyone else, then it would be material. It would be material to show, in contradiction of specific testimony, that generally there was an inducement other than that, to make them use these products rather than others. But we are bound here by not only the allegations of the complaint, but by the proof, and in checking the complaint at noon today, and that is what I was doing during the entire noon hour—I haven't left my chambers since you gentlemen left the court room—I noticed that while the evidence relates to certain practices, the complaint throughout speaks of contracts, and that the [fol. 1883] prayer of the complaint, especially No. 3, which has the three subdivisions, doesn't use the words "artifices" or "acts," but uses "contracts" and seeks to forbid the company from executing or enforcing any contracts the object of which was to curtail dealing in products and, more specifically, giving the subdivisions (a), (b) and (c). They are clear in my mind because I have been working on them to check things. I am getting ready, and I always try to be ahead of you gentlemen, for your arguments. That being the case, I cannot see that any discussion of this character would be helpful at all because we don't want in this controversy to go into a discussion of the merits or demerits of the products or any inducements or any advantage that might accrue from dealing with one rather than another. And I fear that this inquiry is leading us into that.

Mr. Hall: I think that perhaps the difficulty now presented is a difficulty that goes deeper than that, if I may be heard briefly, your Honor.

The Court: I haven't said anything. All these lay people will get the impression that I am an awfully tough man to get along with. I hope I haven't given that impression, gentlemen. I may at times be emphatic, but this is not Friday, you know. On Friday my voice may sound more commanding than I mean to make it. This is only Tuesday. So I do not want to give the impression that I am prevent- [fol. 1884] ing you from arguing or discussing matters. As I have gone through portions of the transcript I have noticed that everybody has felt free to talk.

Mr. Hall: No, your Honor, I didn't mean to indicate you had been cutting me off.

The Court: In some instances I noticed that some of counsel even kept on talking after I got through ruling, and, of course, all good advocates do that. It is a hard habit to get over.

Mr. Hall: A part of this inquiry, your Honor, may raise a question which is a question which I would prefer to argue at the end of the case, but since it has come up, I might as well do what I can to clarify it here. When we were confronted with the plaintiff's complaint charging a violation of section 3 of the Clayton Act, in my own mind I had a great deal of difficulty in answering the question what is meant by "substantial"—"substantial lessening of competition" or creation of a monopoly. What was meant by that? What factual inquiry does that permit? I thought I had found the answer to that that is set out on page 57 of the printed brief.

I don't want to interrupt, your Honor,——

The Court: Go ahead. I am just making notes. Don't pay any attention to me. I can hear you very well.

Mr. Hall: I find that section 7 of the Clayton Act, which [fol. 1885] forbids a corporation engaged in commerce from acquiring the stock of another corporation, uses exactly this language which section 3 uses,—this language, that the effect of such competition may be to substantially lessen competition or to restrain commerce in any section or community. In other words, Congress used the identical language in Section 7 of the Clayton Act that is used in Section 3 of the Clayton Act, and Section 3 is the one we are concerned with here.

Then I find this case of International Shoe Company, reported in 280 U. S., 291. It was a case decided in 1930, and I recall attention——

The Court: That is the Shoe Machinery case?

Mr. Hall: Yes, it is one of those Shoe Machinery cases. It is set out on page 57 of my brief, your Honor.

The Court: Yes, I remember the case.

Mr. Hall: Now, the court in that case said:

> "Section 7 of the Clayton Act, as its terms and the nature of the remedy prescribed plainly suggests, was intended for the protection of the public against the evils which were supposed to flow from the undue lessening of competition.
>
> * * * * * *
>
